Jury recommends that Rains' share of $12.87 million lottery gets even smaller

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

If a 118th District Court jury's recommendations are adopted, Carol Rains' share of a nearly $13 million lottery prize will get even smaller.

Rains, who seemingly has been embroiled in controversy since winning $12.87 million in the state lottery two years ago, faced further legal proceedings this week when she faced off against husband Gregory Turner in divorce proceedings at district court.

The jury returned a recommendation Wednesday that gives Turner a substantial share of the Lotto winnings, said local attorney John Rheinscheld, who, along with Lanny Hamby, represented Turner.

The jury presented an "advisory opinion" to District Judge Bob Moore concerning division of community property, Rheinscheld said. In that, the jury formed opinions on three points of contention.

First, the jury found Rains had unfairly conveyed some property to third parties, and that amount should be figured into the total community property settlement.

Secondly, the jury recommended she should get 60 percent of the couple's existing community property, with 40 percent going to Turner.

And finally, the jury recommended that division of future Lotto payments, which will continue for about 15 years, should be split evenly between Rains and Turner.

Rheinscheld cautioned, however, that the jury's recommendations were not final, and that Judge Moore could modify the judgments as he sees fit.

This is the latest round of legal wrangling Rains has undergone since cashing a winning Lotto ticket in June 1995. At that time, the former waitress at Herman's Restaurant was one of three people to claim a share of a $51.5 million jackpot.

Her troubles started when Big Spring resident R.C. Mills sued for $17.15 million, saying she reneged on an agreement to split winnings 50-50.

Mills claimed he purchased two tickets on May 29, 1995, retaining one ticket while giving her what proved to be the winning ducat. He further claimed that the pair agreed to split winnings.

Six months later, Rains and Mills reached a settlement agreeing to split evenly the remaining 19 Lotto payments of $643,521 each.

Commissioners positive about county's shape

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The Howard County Commissioners' Court is made up of five members consisting of County Judge Ben Lockhart and four commissioners.

Commissioners include Emma Brown, Precinct 1; Jerry Kilgore, Precinct 2; Bill Crooker, Precinct 3; and Sonny Choate, Precinct 4.

Each commissioner took part in a recent Herald survey and gave their opinions to the following series of questions regarding the state of Howard County:

What is your opinion of how Howard County is faring? Do you feel as if Howard County is on the right track for the future?

Brown: In my opinion, Howard County is growing both economically and financially. I do believe the county is on the right track for the future.

Kilgore: I feel the Howard County is in excellent condition with the courthouse renovation bond as our only debt. I feel that all of our buildings and equipment are in excellent shape.

This commissioners' court has worked diligently toward attracting business, industry and jobs to assure our future economy and tax base. I think we need to continue to work to enlarge the tax base of Howard County to offset the loss of oil depletion (mineral values).

Crooker: With all economic factors considered, Howard County is in a good position. The court has acted responsibly in establishing priorities and working within reasonable restraints to maintain an effective budget.

I have not doubts about Howard County being on the right track for the future. We have continued to maintain a sound financial position and we recently reduced our tax rate by approximately 10 percent. We are optimistic about the future.

Big Spring and Howard County's elective and appointed leaders take an in-depth look at the community. FRIDAY: City council feedback.

Choate: Howard County is on the right track for the future. Our community has taken some very positive steps in the last few years to improve itself. Some of those steps include Moore Development, the community's master plan and road and street improvements.

What are the positive

BROWN KILGORE CROOKER CHOATE
aspects of the county you currently see? Are they beneficial to the future of the county?

Brown: Howard County officials are working together with other elected officials for the growth of the community.

Kilgore: The positive aspect I see is that we are debt free. We have been successful in attracting jobs, and if we continue to attract jobs and increase the tax base, our future looks great.

Crooker: A positive aspect of the county is the county offering tax abatements (to prospective businesses). This lures industrial development for new businesses as well as encouraging the expansion of existing facilities.

We have a new library and are looking forward to renovating the old (library) building to house the District Court and beautifying the courthouse and surrounding downtown area.

Choate: I see the increase in oil field activity, employment and community involvement as the most recent positive aspects in the county.

As a representative of the county, what do you see as the county's most pressing issue?

Brown: Bringing new business to the community, which would help produce new jobs for our citizens.

Kilgore: As a county commissioner, I want to continue to keep the tax rate as low as possible but allow the county to still function. I want to continue to work in partnership with

Showcase

Chamber offers local businesses opportunity to show wares

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Earlier this summer, nationally-acclaimed consultant Kent Burnes was in Big Spring to address the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce's Industry Appreciation Luncheon and to conduct two business seminars aimed at helping local retailers improve several aspects of their businesses.

On Nov. 13, area residents will get to take advantage of what retailers learned during the chamber's Business Showcase, scheduled from 5:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the Dora Roberts Community Center.

The showcase will include shopping opportunities, door prizes, demonstrations and samples.

According to Amber Rich, director of business development at Scenic Mountain Medical Center and a member of the chamber's retail development committee, the showcase can be tied to the earlier seminars with Burnes.

In Burnes' "When Customers Count" seminar, business owners learned how to build a customer service program that will work for their particular business as well as pay for itself.

According to Burnes' research customers feel that 77 percent of U.S. businesses suffer from poor customer service.

Business owners also learned the definition of good customer service; the top 10 rules to implementing a service program; added value services that work; programs that make employees want to be customer friendly; how to spot and fix customer service breakdowns; and services that customers will want to pay for.

Burnes' "Sharpening Your Competitive Edge" seminar taught Big Spring's small business owners how to use simple research methods to tune the critical elements of their businesses.

The seminar also showed business owners how to use research as a tool in business; what some research tools and techniques are; and gave an introduction to the platform elements of small business and how each should work in a business.

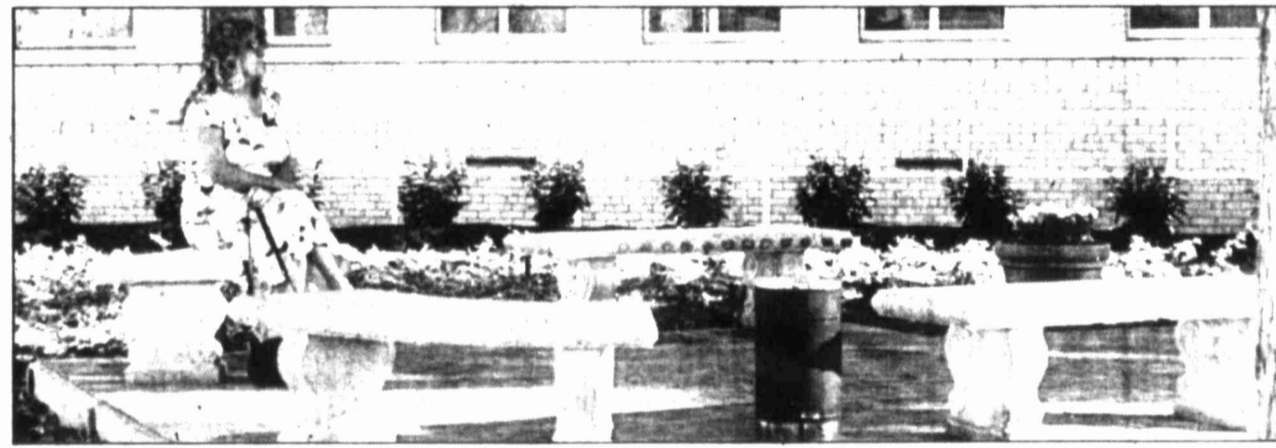

"With the seminars, we were trying to prepare the retailers for the Christmas season," Rich said. "The showcase is in place of a fourth Business After Hours function because not everyone (businesses) is big enough to participate in Business After Hours."

More than 40 area merchants have signed up to have booths at the showcase, which will feature hundreds of gift ideas.

Some of the items at the showcase will include clothes, guns, sports gifts, electronics, cellular phones, computers, Coca-Cola items, food gift baskets, gift certificates, skin care products, and bed and bath items.

Because the bulk of the Christmas shopping season is just around the corner, area residents will have a chance to find out more about this year's Shop Big Spring Campaign.

"Home for the Holidays," is the theme for this year's Shop Big Spring campaign and we will have a table set up at showcase for people to preview this event," Rich said.

Area eighth graders participate in Rotary's Next Generation Day at HC

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Eighth grade is not usually the time when people start making firm plans about their future, but Rotary Club wants those students to at least start thinking about what they'll be when they grow up.

Local Rotarians hosted eighth-graders from around this area Wednesday at their annual Next Generation Day career awareness seminar at Howard College.

Students from Coahoma, Forsan, Grady Stanton Sands, Garden City and Sterling City attended the workshop, which was held at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Big Spring eighth-graders will attend a similar workshop in the near future.

During the workshop, the students learned about careers available in five job areas — agriculture, law enforcement, medical, industrial and education. Rotary members enlisted the aid of several community officials to help in the presentation.

Howard College Dean of Students Amy Burchett said its main purpose was to serve as a sort of wake-up call.

"We tried to get them thinking about the choices they'll make through high school, so they'll prepare for the future," Burchett said. "The workshop showed them how much it costs out in the real world. I think they were really surprised how much it will take."

Sands Principal Billy Barnett, who accompanied his students on the trip, agreed with the workshop's goal.

"I hope (the students) wake up and realize that it's never too early to start planning a career," Barnett said. "It's the same old things — you need to get an education, and you need to plan ahead."

Barnett hopes the message got through to his charges.

Board chosen for area boll weevil eradication zone

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The groundwork has been completed for the Permian Basin Boll Weevil Eradication Zone following the election of officers at Tuesday's producers meeting in Ackerly, but the final say rests with Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry.

Officers elected include chairman Eddie Herm, Ackerly; vice chairmen Foy O'Brien, Dawson County; Gene Herndon, Dawson County; and treasurer Brad Vaughn, Martin County.

If current plans to form the Permian Basin Eradication Zone are successful for producers in Howard, Martin, Midland and Dawson (southern part) counties, future boll weevil eradication efforts could be voted on as early as March 1998.

Because of a failed vote in August, the 29-county Texas High Plains region is unprotected from the effects of unchecked weevil overwintering for the first time in 34 years.

For the time being, following ginning operations, one step both producers and ginners are encouraged to take to diminish boll weevil overwintering is to clean up fields and gin yards by scattering (burning where conditions permit) green boll piles, burns and other harvest residues after they have been processed.

"If an when the Permian Basin Eradication Zone is established, a vote of all producers within the zone will determine the type of program is put into place," Howard County Extension Agent David Kight said.

"They (board) will develop a letter as well as a formal proposal to be submitted to Commissioner Perry probably on Friday," Kight said. "After then, the decision is in his hands."

"The group anticipates he (Perry) will open a 30-day comment period followed by a period in which he is expected to make a decision on whether the zone can be formed and what the exact boundaries of the zone will be," Kight added.

"If the zone is established, the board will oversee its operation," Kight said.

Escapee arrested in Presidio

By STEVE REAGAN Staff Writer

A man who escaped from the Big Spring Federal Correctional Institute is back in custody, authorities announced Wednesday.

Jesus Sandoval, who walked away from the Big Spring FCI on April 24, 1994, was arrested by U.S. Marshals Service agents while attempting to visit family members in Presidio.

He was serving an 87-month incarceration for possession with intent to distribute heroin at the time of his escape. Following his walk-away, he apparently fled to Mexico and remained there until his recent return to the United States.

Marshals arrested Sandoval without incident, and he is being held in federal custody pending further court appearances.

Big Spring FCI camp administrator Mike Morris said it is unknown where Sandoval will be sent, but it is unlikely he will return to Big Spring.

What generally occurs at this point, Morris said, is that the U.S. attorney assigned to the case will decide whether to file escape charges against Sandoval.

If that is the case, and Sandoval is convicted of that additional charge, he will serve that sentence plus the unexpired term of his old sentence. In all likelihood, he will be sent to a higher-security federal prison than Big Spring, Morris said.

Herald publisher warns public about scam

HERALD Staff Report

Local residents and business operators are being warned that a person falsely claiming to be an employee of the Big Spring Herald is attempting to collect for subscriptions to the newspaper.

"The person described to us is a young, white male driving a white van," said newspaper publisher Chuck Williams. "We don't have anyone fitting that description involved in our circulation department."

The first incident reported to the Herald was by a woman who said the individual came to her home and attempted to collect for a newspaper subscription. The woman said she didn't subscribe to the paper and he left.

The second incident occurred at Rip Griffin's.

Williams said subscribers can protect themselves from fraud by either paying their bill by mail or in person at the Herald office.

"If you know your carrier and pay them, pay them with a check made out to the Herald," he said. "Don't pay anyone in cash unless you make the payment at the Herald and are given a receipt for your money."

Williams asked persons contacted by the white male to call Herald circulation manager Carlos Gonzales at 263-7331.

"All we have is a description of the person and the van ... we'd really like to get a license number if possible," Williams added.

BIG SPRING AROUND THE TOWN

and Forsan. Crooker: A pressing issue I see is to have all of the county roads in good condition. We also need to work on the basement of the new library building. With donated funds, we will now be able to work with the architect to add room for the literacy program, genealogy room and children's summer program.

Choate: In our perpetual search for new industry, we tend to forget just how important existing industry is to our economy. The situation with the rail spur serving the airport is a prime example.

For almost a year, we have been fooling around with repair of this line which supports Western Container, a very important asset.

Another concern is the tendency of all our taxing agencies to constantly and incrementally raise their revenue without even a mention of how to economize.

What is the most pressing issue in the precinct you represent?

Brown: The road conditions! We have to make sure roads are maintained and upgraded. The road supervisor is organizing a construction crew that will rotate through the different precincts.

Kilgore: I have the good fortune to have some good roads in my precinct. The biggest problem is water erosion and hopefully we can address this as we rebuild all of the roads with the new construction crew we have funded, not only this precinct but for the entire county.

Crooker: I do not have any pressing problems in my precinct. Over the years, I have tried to maintain control of the roads and respond to any complaint I might receive from my constituents.

Choate: The most pressing issue in Precinct 4 is the quality and continuing maintenance of our roadways. Roads, like any structure, need a solid foundation, and then frequent maintenance.

The roads in the north part of the county, Precincts 1 and 4, have a base of sand, and therefore, a poor foundation. During wet weather some roads are impassable. Our taxpayers are not getting what they pay for.

What is your assessment of the budget recently approved by the commissioners' court?

Brown: I feel like the budget was a good and justified budget.

Kilgore: I think that it is a bare-bones budget, but it gives each department in the county funding to adequately serve the people of Howard County.

Crooker: I believe our new budget fairly represents the needs of the county in keeping with our conservative style.

Choate: The county budget reflects the majority philosophy of government of the commissioners' court. It increases the size and expense of government, without a corresponding increase in service to the taxpayer.

What would you propose as a solution to the county's struggle with voter apathy?

Brown: Publicize the election, times, voting places and issues as much as possible.

Kilgore: I do not have a solution for this problem, and it concerns me a great deal. I know that in the last constitutional amendment election we had less than 10 percent participation. Until the voting population of Howard County realizes what a privilege voting is, and that this is their way of having a voice in their local government, we will always have a problem with voter apathy.

Crooker: Voter apathy is not just a problem in Howard County, it is all over the United States. It is hoped by placing constant attention on this matter by all media that voter participation will increase. At an early age, our schools should stress to the students the importance of voicing themselves through their votes.

Choate: Voter apathy is a reflection of a number of factors. Some citizens feel their voice is never heard anyway, so why bother. Others want government to do government's job and leave them alone. The duty, not the privilege, to vote, needs to be constantly stressed, both in the schools and the news media.

Your failure to cast an informed vote has elevated some real incompetents.

Could missing Whitewater documents really have been found in junk auto hit by tornado?

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Coming into a treasure-trove of documents that included a cashier's check payable to Bill Clinton, Whitewater prosecutors have pieced together previously unknown transactions at an Arkansas savings and loan, people familiar with the probe say.

Thousands of pages of documents pulled from a tornado-damaged car last March have taken the investigation in "new and interesting directions," according to one source, a grand jury witness who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

A featured exhibit at several grand jury sessions was a cashier's check for more than $20,000 to Clinton, witnesses say.

The discovery of the 1982 Clinton check and other documents missing for a decade has opened a new line of inquiry by prosecutors into whether Clinton testified accurately about his relationship with James and Susan McDougal and their failed Arkansas savings and loan, witnesses said.

The president swore under oath last year that he "never borrowed any money" from the McDougals' failing Madison Guaranty

S&L. The president's Whitewater lawyer, David Kendall, questioned the authenticity of the documents Wednesday, saying they may have the credibility of a "freshly written Elvis autobiography" and that it's time for "a wrap-up" of the "interminable, leak-ridden" investigation being conducted by independent counsel Kenneth Starr.

Deborah Gershman, a spokeswoman for Starr's office, declined to comment.

Kendall suggested the Clinton check appeared to have been used for a repayment of a loan taken out by James McDougal at another of his banks for the Whitewater land development. "Neither the president nor Mrs. Clinton had signed for this loan," he said.

Kendall's statement, however, offered no explanation why a check for such a loan would have been made out to Clinton.

Witnesses said markings on the cashier's check, which bore no Clinton endorsement, suggested that the proceeds may have been deposited in one of two Arkansas institutions where Clinton and his wife, Hillary, did business — Madison Bank & Trust Co., owned by the McDougals, or Union National Bank.

The loan that Kendall cited as the possible reason for the check payable to Clinton also came from Madison Bank & Trust.

The documents were found by a car repair shop operator in the trunk of an old Mercury Marquis — its paint peeled and windows blown out — that was damaged when tornadoes swept across Arkansas in March.

The documents had been given a decade ago to Madison Guaranty S&L employee Henry Floyd to be delivered to a warehouse for storage, but Floyd's car — bought for him by Jim McDougal's mother — broke down.

Floyd never retrieved the auto from the repair shop and "I just forgot the Madison documents were in the trunk," Floyd explained in an interview.

Saying he "kind of lost interest in the car and never picked it up," Floyd's vehicle sat unnoticed in a storage yard for old cars until the stunning discovery.

Barney sues famous Chicken

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Barney may love you and he may love me, but he doesn't love The Famous San Diego Chicken.

The purple dinosaur's owners have filed a copyright and trademark infringement lawsuit against The Chicken for ridiculing and assaulting a Barneylike character during performances at baseball and basketball games across the country.

"Specifically, Giannoulas would punch, flip, stand on and otherwise assault the putative 'Barney,'" the lawsuit alleges. "Despite such notice, Lyons received subsequent reports of 'Barney' appearing with The Famous Chicken at games of the Detroit Pistons, Chicago Cubs, Seattle Mariners and others."

The company wants a permanent injunction against use of the dinosaur costume and a minimum $100,000 for each time Giannoulas has performed a skit with the dinosaur in it.

The complaint said that, because Barney consumers are young children, they aren't likely to know the difference between the real Barney and the one getting knocked around by San Diego's infamous fowl.

Kenneth Fitzgerald, an attorney for The Chicken, said the act is a parody protected under the Copyright Act, trademark laws and the First Amendment.

"By engaging in slapstick physical comedy with a break-dancing 'Barney,' The Famous San Diego Chicken humorously portrays the real Barney as naive, gullible, clumsy and just plain goofy," Fitzgerald said in a statement.

"I used to think that Barney was a lovable character, but now I think he's just the biggest bully on the block," Giannoulas said.

UN arms investigators try again

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. investigators made more fruitless attempts to examine suspected arms sites in Iraq today, while U.N. envoys to Iraq made apparently equally vain attempts to resolve the increasingly volatile standoff.

For the fourth day in a row, Iraqis turned back U.N. inspectors trying to get into suspected weapons plants. The chief weapons inspector, Richard Butler, hoped to get his experts in today, saying Iraq had been tampering with surveillance cameras at the sites and removing sensitive equipment.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Mohammed Saeed al-Sahhaf confirmed in a letter to the Security Council that Iraq moved some equipment, but said Baghdad took the action only because it feared a U.S. air strike was imminent.

Addressing Butler's complaint that Iraqis had disabled surveillance cameras, the Iraqi foreign minister said one U.N. surveillance camera was damaged when the engine for a short-range missile exploded during a test.

Emphasizing the gravity of the situation, Butler noted Wednesday in his own letter to the Security Council that it would take only a few hours to adapt some of the equipment involved "to produce seed stocks of biological warfare agent."

Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz lashed out at Butler on today, accusing him of trying to "mislead the Security Council and to escalate the situation with the aim of misleading international public opinion." Aziz's statement was carried by the Iraqi News Agency.

Butler suspended U.N. weapons inspections in Iraq last week after President Saddam Hussein's government ordered American members of the inspection teams out of the country, calling them spies.

The U.N. teams tried to resume inspections Monday, then each day since, but were turned back each time after Iraqis refused to let Americans on the teams into the sites.

The inspections are meant to check whether Iraq has destroyed all long-range missiles and weapons of mass destruction, including poison gas and lethal biological toxins.

That is the key requirement for lifting strict U.N. sanctions imposed after Iraq invaded Kuwait in 1990, touching off the Persian Gulf War.

Taking advantage of the two-week halt in arms inspections, Iraqis have moved key machinery out of range of U.N. cameras, including gyroscope rotor balancing equipment that could be used for missiles, Butler told the Security Council.

Death row inmate gets new trial after AG's office misses appeal deadline

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who spent 15 years on death row will get a new trial because the AG's office missed by one day the deadline to appeal a federal judge's ruling.

The missed deadline angered prosecutors and the victim's aunt.

Last summer, the late U.S. District Judge Norman Black overturned the capital murder conviction of Danny Dean Thomas, now 41, who was convicted in 1982 for the abduction and shooting death of Sylvia Elaine Harrison, a 19-year-old secretary.

The AG's office had 30 days to appeal the decision.

William Zapalac, an assistant attorney general, missed the Aug. 28 deadline by one day, and the appeal was dismissed on Oct. 16, says Roe Wilson, a chief prosecutor in Harris County's appellate division.

Wilson said it wasn't until Monday that she was informed of the mistake or the dismissal. "It makes me extremely angry," she said. "It's tremendously frustrating. We have put a lot of work into it."

Abilene trying to raise money for giraffe

ABILENE (AP) — The longest neck in Abilene's city zoo also has a long face, and one civic organization wants to do something about it.

Bart, the sole giraffe in the zoo, has been inconsolable since his female counterpart died on Oct. 12.

Leadership Abilene is mounting a campaign to purchase another giraffe. The group plans to sell honorary "ownership" of the giraffe to help pay for it.

The giraffe will cost the zoo $15,000, plus another $5,000 for transportation charges.

Let's make certain no one goes hungry in our community

Many of us take our meals for granted. Breakfast, lunch, dinner: We can have our favorite foods, and a second helping if we want it.

For most of us, there is always plenty. Some families, however, are not so lucky. Due to circumstances, crisis situations or hardship, food runs short. Sometimes keeping a roof over the heads of a family is all they can manage.

Many of those without enough food are children — whose lives are completely out of their own control. Imagine going to bed hungry, or relying on the school meals as your only nutrition for an entire day.

But some local groups have a plan to beat hunger, especially for the holiday season. A community-wide canned food drive, started by Carriage Inn, is continuing through the end of this month.

Boxes and containers are all over town — banks to hospitals and restaurants, waiting rooms and lobbies. Some businesses offer a discount to those who bring a can.

Friday and Saturday, at the Howard College Hawk Classic, a can of food will get you into the game for free as Coach Tommy Collins and the Hawks join the fight again this year.

Also, the Boy Scouts are conducting their annual Good Turn Drive on Saturday. H-E-B donated the bags for local residents to fill with food and leave by the front door.

Scouts will pick up the bags in Big Spring, Coahoma and Sand Springs before 1 p.m. Saturday.

Both drives will benefit the Northside Community Center and Salvation Army, which will distribute food baskets for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

With help from the community, both agencies will fill their pantries. Then they can fill baskets for the needy.

Let's make sure there's enough food collected to last through the holiday and into the new year.

YOUR VIEWS
To the Editor:
I would like to thank the area merchants of Big Spring and Forsan for their full support of the 14th Annual Fall Festival at Elbow Elementary. We had a successful festival with great prizes, fun games, good food, and a lot of fun in a safe environment.

The proceeds from our fall festival are used to supplement the wonderful school we have. We have purchased books for our Accelerated Reading program, playground equipment, science equipment and much more.

Without the donations we receive from the generous merchants of Big Spring and Forsan, we would not be able to have such a great fall festival. We thank you again.

To the Editor:
I believe I have found an honest man and he lives in your town. My pickup broke down as I was checking into a motel in your city on a Sunday night. I was on my way from the Balloon Fiesta in Albuquerque to my home here in San Miguel de Allende in Mexico. I knew it was electrical, but starter, alternator or solenoid? I didn't know what I had the truck hauled to Big Spring Auto Electric and he had me going in 20 minutes with a $6 charge. It was a bad connection on the battery ground. He could have gotten to me for hundreds and I would have never known the difference. This was an honest man.

To the Editor:
A town has many things that keep it together like businesses, friendly people, the police, family and many other things. But there's a small unit of trained professionals that never get the credit they truly deserve and that's our fire department and EMS Unit. If it weren't for their caring and expertise in saving lives our community would not hold together. I hope that everyone realizes that the day may come when you may need them to be there, so give them the praise they truly deserve and don't take them for granted. It takes a very special person to do the job they do. I personally want to thank them all for their dedication and hard work. May God be with you all.

Conservatives have no solutions for America's woes

Political conservatism in America is impotent. It has lost its soul and become a pale imitation of liberalism.

There is no problem finding out what conservatives don't like, but what has killed it as a political movement is that they don't know what they do like. They have no vision. They have no answers. They cannot explain, in coherent language, what kind of society they would like to see or what kind of government people ought to have.

An indicator of this is how often conservatives speak in relative and comparative terms. They say they want less government regulation or lower taxes or less control in Washington. All of those expressions concede the liberal point — that government has the right to regulate, tax and control any and all aspects of our lives. Conservatives have reduced themselves to quibbling over the details of limitation, centralized government power.

Americans are worried about uncontrolled immigration and its economic and cultural impacts. What's the conservative answer? Nothing. Americans are concerned about the poor to nonexistent education too many children receive in government schools. What's the conservative answer? Let the federal government subsidize the middle class with vouchers.

How far do they think they can go with a policy that asks one class of people to go on the government dole while abandoning another class of people to a bad fate? And is their self-centered voucher constituency so dumb that it doesn't realize that citizens will be taxed to pay for the vouchers and taxed to pay for the schools they don't want their children to attend?

Americans are concerned about the growth of public debts. What's the conservative answer? Vote for more government spending than even Bill Clinton asked for.

Americans are annoyed by an overly complex tax code? What was the conservative answer? Make it more complex.

Americans are worried about the hemorrhaging of jobs to overseas sweatshops? What's the conservative answer? To advocate trade and corporate subsidy policies that would cost more jobs and to pretend to the American people that China and other countries aren't practicing protectionism.

Americans are worried about agriculture, and what is the conservative answer? Nothing. Conservatives open the borders to foreign imports, which further drive down farm prices, and they refuse to address the unfair practices of middlemen in the food chain whose actions result in the farmer being paid a low price and the consumer being forced to pay a high price.

I could go on with a long list of problems that conservatives have no solutions for. The only difference between them and liberals is, who gets to distribute the patronage.

Conservatives have become office seekers, not leaders.

They are interested in making points in an increasingly self-absorbed partisan gotcha game, but they seem to have no interest at all in offering the American people real solutions for real problems and a different vision of the future.

The more I've thought about it, the more I've come to realize that public apathy should not be condemned. It is a sign that the public is intelligent enough to realize that the political parties offer nothing that would warrant any excitement or interest. Politicians in both parties today, with rare exceptions, do not even communicate to the American people. They just propagandize them.

The socialism of liberals and the abject corporatism of conservatives are creating a political vacuum in a time of discontent when the perception is growing that the kind of life Americans traditionally believe they and their children are entitled to have is being destroyed.

Vacuum, in such circumstances, can be dangerous.

OTHER VIEWS

Medicare is a prime source of income for physicians and a great pillar of support for 37 million Americans. It would be a mistake for Congress to approve a bill that would fragment the system by making it easier for physicians to demand out-of-pocket payments that are higher than the Medicare rates for their services.

Senate Jon Kyl, an Arizona Republican, is pushing for this bill on the ground that every American ought to have the right to opt out of Medicare for a particular medical procedure.

Medicare recipients were not allowed to make such private deals until this summer, when the balanced-budget law permitted them to pay out of their own pocket so long as their doctors agreed to forgo payments under Medicare for the next two years. This compromise was intended to give patients the option of paying privately, presumably at a higher rate, without encouraging doctors to swing back and forth between Medicare and private arrangements. Kyl's plan would end the two-year exclusion. Congress should not tamper with the compromise so soon after approving it.

—THE BOSTON GLOBE

Is there a community without a non-profit organization that encourages children to become fund-raisers?

Candy, Cookies, Popcorn. Wrapping paper. Even cheese and sausage. You name it, it seems, and some kids in the neighborhood are peddling it.

Youngsters, offered prizes for sales achievements, are encouraged to sell to family, friends and neighbors — all in the name of supporting the particular organization.

These sales efforts often encourage door-to-door sales — occasionally with tragic consequences.

A chilling case was that of 11-year-old Eddie Werner, who recently went door-to-door to sell candy and wrapping paper for his New Jersey school's Parent Teacher Association. Eddie knocked on the wrong door. It was answered by a 15-year-old neighbor boy with a violent history, and Eddie's body was found in the woods near his home.

If anything good can come out of Eddie's tragedy, it should be that non-profit groups reconsider their use of children to raise money. They should evaluate how they motivate, reward and educate their young fund-raisers.

A store jammed full of 'not for sale'

CERRO GORDO, Tenn. — It is a store with nothing for sale. "Are you open?" I holler out. You have to avoid a waist-high stack of plastic pop bottles to push into the dark interior of the Harbour-Pitts Store. It is a huge, warehouse-style general store perched on the Tennessee River, its red brick supporting an admirable crop of poison ivy.

The building's 86 years of constant community use are carved into a step made of stone at the entrance. It takes a lot of feet, a lot of customers, to make a dimple in a rock.

"The sign says 'Open,' don't it?" Connie Beth Hill answers in a sardonic tone. (Connie Beth was a Pitts before she married.)

I spot her in the middle of a small mountain of trash — flattened cardboard and sardine cans and yellow newspapers and 1973 church bulletins and bowling-league score sheets and plastic funeral flowers — a small figure in the cavernous store, its inventory spanning the decades and arranged by A-bomb. She wears a severe gray bob and a bemused look. "Help yourself," Connie Beth says. "I came here a while back," I say by way of introduction. "Oh, it's been at least 10 years ago. A bunch of you were in here playing canasta."

"I remember you," says Connie Beth. "We don't play cards anymore. Lots of family died since then...."

She tells me about losing her mother, her aunt and several other family members in close succession, rapid-fire blows to the heart. She says her grandchildren keep the place torn up now. And, in truth, it is a real wreck. Before it was The Old Curiosity Shop, now it is part landfill.

There are buckets to catch the rain where the roof leaks, and the old wooden floor is rotting in places. The ancient sprinkler system — "Number One in Hardin County, Number 215 in the State of Tennessee," Connie Beth proudly says — looks like it could be called up on active duty any moment.

The Cerro Gordo post office once operated from the corner of the store, and I wade through the flotsam to get to it and a fine collection of arrowheads.

The arrowheads are not for sale, Connie Beth says. Family pieces. And neither is any part of the antique post office. Store fixtures.

The old scales for weighing meat? Not for sale. The spice showcase? Not for sale. The broken clock? Not for sale. The Hoosier cabinet in the very back? Not for sale.

The old hat boxes? "Those are not for sale," Connie Beth says, her record stuck. "We just have them here to give the customers something to look at."

She says they sell mostly guns and hunting supplies now, and I recall there used to be a gun-swap night at the old store. It no longer happens, but the hunters file in one by one, heading to the back of the store where Connie Beth Hill and her father keep the guns.

"What you looking for, Joe?" she asks a customer. "A sight."

"What you going to put it on, Joe?"

She talks brands and barrel sizes and what's coming in and what's not. Then she remembers me. I'm over in a dark corner going through the shoe styles of the last century. There are high-top babies' shoes with buttons, saddle oxfords from the 1950s, clunky heels from the 1960s, hunting boots.

"There's a used coffin in the basement," Connie Beth says. The grieving family asked the store if a return was possible in case the corpse didn't fit. The departed was a big man. There was a return.

Nobody wanted a used coffin, no matter how briefly it had been used. "It's had puppies and kittens and you name it living in it over the years," Connie Beth says.

I buy an old French book for $4.50 and a broken mirror for $5 — what is for sale here is not given away — and reluctantly leave Connie Beth to the hunters. The store is red as a Christmas apple against a blue sky. And open for business.

New scholarship honoring Mays to benefit HC student

By DEBBIE L. JENSEN
Features Editor

The Howard County Historical Commission has honored historian and community leader Polly Mays by naming a Howard College scholarship for her.

Mays, who died July 7 after a two-year battle with cancer, was a supporter of many community historical projects. She had been chair of the Historical Commission more than 20 years, and worked with the Heritage Museum as well.

In addition, she was involved in many community improvement projects, and had been the first woman to serve on the City Council.

"Polly wasn't the type that wanted a plaque on the wall," said Ozella Long, of the commission. "We thought this scholarship was a way to honor her and all she's done for this community."

A Polly Mays Memorial Scholarship fund has been established, and donations are now being taken. The commission started it off with $2,500, but they hope to achieve $5,000 so that they scholarship can become an endowment, continuing year after year.

The first student will be able to take advantage of the scholarship in September 1998. Although qualifications are still being defined, Long said students earning the scholarship will probably need to show some community involvement and leadership.

Applicants will need to submit a short essay for the award. Only those from Howard County or adjoining counties will be eligible to apply.

The amount of money received by the fund will determine how many students can be served by it, and how much money each will receive. Applications can be picked up in the financial office at Howard College after the first of the year.

Donations to support the fund may be sent to: Howard College, Financial Aids Officer.

New scholarships serving students

Several new scholarships are in place this year, already serving students with various needs and interests. They include:

•The Diana Currie Nichols scholarship for vocational nursing, given to Leslie Kuykendall this year.

•The Mary Johnson Scholarship, for a student from Mitchell County, went to Natalia Mays this year.

•The Howard County Graduate Scholarship, which went to Daniel Higginbotham of Forsan this year.

1001 Birdwell Lane, Big Spring, TX 79720. The college will notify the Mays family of each memorial gift.

Money donated by Mays and others, along with proceeds from the sale of the book, "Howard County, 1882-1982" makes up the commission's part of the scholarship fund.

Long said the commission believes the scholarship will serve Mays' memory well.

"She was very interested in history, in a broad view," Long said. "We want to honor her work and her commitment to this community."

SCHOOL NEWS

Bauer Magnet

At Bauer Magnet Elementary School there were 201 students that made perfect attendance for the first six weeks. Way to Go Bauer Students! H-E-B gave our school ice cream treats for perfect attendance. Thank you H-E-B!

Every Monday at Bauer Elementary we have Just Say No T-shirt day and every Friday at Bauer we have Bauer Steer Spirit T-shirt day. Also, every Wednesday we have brown envelopes to take home. The brown envelopes have the students' papers from the week before. Every Tuesday and Thursday is S.W.A.T. and that means Students Working At TAAS.

October was a busy month for Bauer Magnet School. On the 5th of October it was Fire Prevention Week. We had some fire people come out to our school. They also, brought an extra visitor with them. It was a very smart female dog named Sadie.

During the week of October 27, 1997 Bauer had a wacky, Just Say No To Drugs week. Thursday it was crazy sock day. On Friday we had an Accelerated Reading Rally program. Special guests and Bauer teachers read AR book. Some even dressed as the character in the book they read. On Friday the students were treated to a Drug Free Program.

At Bauer Magnet Elementary School 109 students are on the Accelerated Reader Wall of Honor. The students have to get 10 points to get on the wall of Honor, when they reach a certain amount of points they get prizes.

October 8 and October 9 the students at Bauer went to the High School to see "Ananse the Dancing Spider."

Also in October, we had what we call "Mickey Mouse Breakfast." That is where you buy breakfast in the cafeteria and you get a number on your tray, and after everybody gets finished eating, the lunch ladies draw a number. These are the students that won: Alyssa Phipps (a Mickey Mouse hat), Patrick Rios (a Mickey Mouse Watch), Joanna Lozano (a Mickey Mouse coloring

College Heights

Two trees talk to twin tortoise turtles. Can you say that without getting your tongue tied? Mrs. Tate's fifth grade class wrote alliteration sentences to go with the tongue twister aliens we created. We also had fun making spooky spiders from pom poms, pipe cleaners, and made fake spider webs. We wrote poems about spiders in our cooperative groups.

Mrs. Conley's fourth grade students have their sights set high. Every student has his name on the wall. Each time he masters a multiplication table, he puts an arrow above his name. By the looks of the wall, the students are studying hard.

They are making paper jack-o-lanterns to celebrate Halloween.

Mrs. Hauss's first graders have gone batty! They read about bats and then made bats from construction paper. Each student then named one fact and one nonfact about bats. They are going to be learning about spiders next.

If you walk by Mrs.

Froneberger's fifth grade class you will see a lot of strange creatures on the hallway wall. They are learning about invertebrates and are doing written reports using Safari and Wildlife fact file cards. In Language Arts and reading, they are using newspapers to find articles of interest in the areas of local, national, and world news as well as sports.

Mrs. Gonzales has the best behaved student in the school! The new third grader's name is Loui Barbee. We think he is probably so well behaved because he is a scarecrow. They will be making turkeys and writing poems about turkeys for Thanksgiving.

Article written by: Mark Ancho, Tiffany Emerson, Amber Scott, James Clark, and Julie Caden head from Mrs. Tate's Fifth Grade Class at College Heights Elementary.

Kentwood Elementary

The students at Kentwood do more at school than academics. They are involved in many extra curricular activities.

Jump Rope for Heart is one activity for the students. They participate in this activity every other year and raise money for the American Heart Association. The students obtain pledges from sponsors based on how many times the student jumps a rope. The students will do their jumping during their PE class.

Cultural Arts (the Reflections contest) is sponsored by the PTA. It is a contest for the visual, literary, and performing arts. It was started by the PTA in order to let students show their many different talents. It works by the students writing poems, short stories, take photographs, paint, or write music.

The Accelerated Reader program is run through the Kentwood Library. Students will read a book and take a test over the book. The test is computer based. If the student makes a grade of 70 or better, the student earns points toward their library goal.

The President's Physical Fitness award recognizes students for outstanding physical fitness.

PTA programs are a big part of Kentwood. These programs are performed by the students at Kentwood for the PTA meetings. These musical programs are an extension of the music program at Kentwood.

Other areas in which Kentwood students will participate are: The St. Jude's Mathathon (every other year), and they will attend plays, assemblies, orchestral performances, and many other activities. School is not just for academics.

Attention deficit disorder can be successfully treated

QUESTION: What kind of treatment is available for attention deficit disorder?

Dr. James Dobson
Columnist

DR. DOBSON: Treatment involves a range of factors, beginning with education. The adult with attention deficit disorder (ADD) is often greatly relieved to learn that he or she has an identifiable, treatable condition.

Dr. Robert Reid from the University of Nebraska calls it the "label of forgiveness." He said, "The kid's problems are not his parents' fault, not the teacher's fault, not the kid's fault." That is good news to the person who has been told all his life that he's dumb, stupid, lazy, obnoxious and disruptive.

The first step in rebuilding the self-concept of an adult, then, is to get an understanding of the forces operating within. My advice to that individual and to his or her family is to read, read, read! One helpful book for laymen is "Driven to Distraction" by Edward Hallowell, M.D., and John Ratey, M.D.

An excellent set of cassette tapes by these authors is also available. Another well-written book by a Christian psychologist is entitled "The Hyperactive Child," by Grant Martin, Ph.D.

The second step is to teach the ADD person, especially those who are adults, to minimize his or her distractibility and impulsivity. They can learn to use "to-do" lists, daily calendars, schedules and written plans. "It ain't easy," as they say, but it can be done.

The third step is to secure the assistance of what Hallowell and Ratey call "a coach." A knowledgeable friend is needed to stand nearby with a whistle-

-offering encouragement, pointing out mistakes, teaching and modifying behavior. If a wise instructor can teach a novice to play tennis or golf, a caring coach can help a person with ADD learn to behave in more successful ways.

In regard to children, a knowledgeable professional is needed to advise and encourage parents, who are often bewildered and frustrated by behavior they neither control nor understand.

Finally, there are the considerable benefits to the use of prescription drugs for both children and adults. Approximately 70 percent of ADD patients benefit from appropriate medication. Surprisingly, certain stimulants are often effective in helping ADD children - including those who are hyperactive.

No one knows exactly how they work, but they probably affect the electrochemical processes in the frontal lobes of the brain, which regulate behavior. The most commonly prescribed drug is Ritalin, although some patients do better on Dexedrine or Cylert. In some instances, these substances have a remarkably positive effect.

QUESTION: What can we as parents do to improve the public schools in our area?

DR. DOBSON: Most educators know that parental involvement is absolutely critical to what public schools are trying to do. Others (fortunately not the majority) see themselves as the professionals, and they resent parental interference.

We should never accede to that idea. Parents are ultimately responsible for the education of their kids and they should not surrender that authority. Educators are their employees, paid with tax dollars, and are accountable to the school board members whom parents elect. The best schools are those with the greatest parental involvement and support.

With that understanding, let me urge you to visit your child's school to answer questions of interest to you. Does the staff understand the necessity for structure, respect and discipline in the classroom? If so, why don't you call your child's teacher and the principal and express your appreciation to them?

They could use a pat on the back. Tell them you stand ready to assist in carrying out their important mission.

If your school system is not so oriented, get involved to help turn the tide. Meet with parent groups.

Join the PTA. Review the textbooks. Work for the election of school board members who believe in traditional values and academic excellence.

More than just a title involved in Grady, Sands showdown

By JOHN A. MOSELEY
Sports Editor

ACKERLY — It's come down to exactly what Grady's Roger Smith and Sands' Billy Barnett suspected, even if they weren't willing to go on record with a prediction — the District 7 six-man championship has come down to the final game with Barnett's Mustangs playing host to Smith's Wildcats.

While both coaches went with the smart play at the start of the season, calling Wellman the team to beat, they in the next breath admitted having designs on the championship and predicted a challenge from the other.

"I kind of had a feeling it would come down to this," Barnett admitted, "and as the season's progressed, my suspicions got stronger and stronger. You could just see Grady getting better and better every week.

"They've made the big plays when it counted," he added. "Whatever it took to win, they've found a way to get it done. We're not at all surprised that it's come to this."

Smith's respect for the Mustangs is almost a mirrored image.

"I said all along that they've got too many good athletes and too good a tradition to be down two years in a row," Smith noted. "They had problems last year, but you knew Billy was going to bring them back and here we are.

"In fact, they (Mustangs) probably had more talent last year, but this team plays together better than any Sands team I've ever seen," Smith added. "They don't just load up behind one player, they make the most of everyone they've got. That means you can't get ready to defend against one or two kids, you've got to be ready for anybody that gets his hands on the ball."

Smith explained that the Mustangs leading rusher, Jerrod Beall, doesn't have that many more carries or yards than three of four other Sands players.

"Anyone of their kids can hurt you ... Beall, (Anthony) Cantu, the Cisneros kids (Robert and Robin) or (Coby) Floyd ... it's kind of scary," Smith added.

While both the Wildcats and Mustangs are assured a playoff berth,

Friday's game has more significance than just the district championship because the loser will wind up facing No. 1-ranked Grandfalls in the opening round of postseason play.

"That's a terribly big factor, because Grandfalls is just outstanding," admitted Barnett, whose team has already had its taste of the top-ranked team in the state — a 66-38 loss in the season's opener. "You wind up on that path of the playoffs ... even if you get past Grandfalls the first week, you've got Borden County (the No. 2-ranked team) the next ... it's a pretty tough row to hoe."

While the Mustangs seem to spread around their offensive production, to date Sands has rushed for more than 2,500 yards but none of it's four or five running backs have reached the 1,000-yard mark, Grady's ground game is primarily fueled by running backs Frankie Garza and Jed Hinojosa.

Garza is the Wildcats primary ball carrier, averaging almost 200 yards per game, and Barnett expects him to be an even bigger part of Grady's offense this week.

The Wildcats lost the services of quarterback Brady Peugh to a knee injury last week and Smith says he may be lost for the remainder of the season.

"We'll just have to wait and see what happens," Smith explained. "He dislocated the knee cap and all we know for sure is that we won't have him

Lady Hawks familiar with foe

Open tourney at South Plains this afternoon

By JOHN H. WALKER
Managing Editor

Howard College's Lady Hawks (2-0) face a known foe when they open the South Plains College Lady Texan Tournament against Northland Pioneer College (1-0) of Holbrook, Ariz. at 2 p.m. today in Levelland.

While Matt Corkery's team doesn't see Northland Pioneer as often, as say, South Plains or Midland, the Lady Hawks did play the Golden Eagles in last year's Lady Texan Tournament, winning 106-65.

In game two, Angelina plays Northern Oklahoma at 4, followed by Panola and Salt Lake (Utah) College at 6. The final game of the night features homestanding South Plains and Rose (Okla.) College at 8.

"They're a veteran team, Corkery said of Northland as his team concluded a spirited workout Wednesday afternoon. "They've got 10 sophomores and just two freshmen, so we expect them to be pretty patient and experienced."

Northland opened its season with a resounding 112-64 win over a team from the Twenty-Nine Palms (Calif.) Marine Corps Air Station.

The Golden Eagles are coached by first-year head coach Jack Olds and return two starters from last year's 12-18 team including 5-6 guard Chips Begay and 5-9 swing player Mary Freddie.

Colleen Washington, a 5-7 swing player led Northland with 20 points, followed by Otellie Honanie's 19. Elisa Tsosie added 17 points, while Howard College guard Ricka McKee applies defensive pressure on a Wayland Baptist player during the Lady Hawks home opener Saturday. The Lady Hawks face Northland Pioneer's Golden Eagles today in the opening round of the South Plains Lady Texan Tournament.

Steffi Kinney had 16 and Amanda Bob 11.

Begay didn't play against Twenty-Nine Palms because of an injury.

Tsosie, a 6-0 swing player, transferred to Northland after playing at Division I University of Denver a year ago.

While it is hard to judge the level at which the Lady Hawks are presently playing — opening with a 30-plus point win at Western Texas before ripping Wayland Baptist's jayvee squad by 105 points on Saturday — Corkery said the team has had good workouts and knows that things will get tougher.

"They understand the competition will get a lot better in a hurry," he said.

He added that while the possibility of playing rival South

Plains in Saturday night's title game could be a motivational factor for the Lady Hawks, he didn't think it was cause to look past Northland Pioneer.

The right combination of wins would result in the two Western Junior College Athletic Conference foes meeting in the title game Saturday night.

He cited the offensive play of sophomore Shawnta Johnson (5-11, soph., Fresno, Calif.) and the play of the freshmen as a whole as bright spots after the first two games.

"We got a lot of good production out of our freshmen — Karlita Washington (5-8, Washington, D.C.) at the point and Ricka McKee (5-8, Coleman) at guard," he said.

Corkery also pointed out the improvement in the Lady

Hawks' post play.

"We needed to have a stronger post game than last year, he said. "That's been an emphasis for us since we started working out."

Freshman Jennifer Vinum (6-1, McKinleyville, Calif.) had 20 points against Wayland on Saturday to lead all scorers. Jeanine Brown chipped in 18 while Washington and Latraica Spencer added 17 apiece, Donelle Jones 15 and Latasha Moore 14 as six Lady Hawks finished in double figures.

Johnson, McKee, Washington, Horton and Spencer are expected to start against Northland.

Following this weekend's tournament, the Lady Hawks return home on Monday to play host to Ranger College.

Steers control their own fate facing Andrews

By JOHN A. MOSELEY
Sports Editor

Big Spring's Steers have their backs to the wall. There's no tomorrow. They must beat Andrews' Mustangs or their season comes to an end.

In a way, however, it's just the situation Dwight Butler and his staff hoped for when two-day workouts started in August.

Sure, had the Steers not stumbled on the road with a 33-22 loss to Fort Stockton, they'd already have a lock on a playoff berth, but that's no longer a point to be pondered.

"We really can't complain about anything," Butler said as he prepared his team for Friday's 7:30 p.m. kickoff at Memorial Stadium. "We've got our future in our own hands. We don't have to worry about somebody beating someone else or who scored how many points ... we just have to win the game."

"When we started the season, our goals were to come back from a 2-8 season to be a winning football team and we've done that," Butler added. "Next was to get to this point ... to be playing for a spot in the playoffs at the end of the season. We've got that chance, so we really can't ask for much more than to be where we are."

And what a chance! Not only do the Steers have playoff implications for motivation, but will be facing an opponent that is a traditional rival.

"This ought to be a great football game," Butler noted. "We've got a good rivalry with Andrews. It used to be a nasty rivalry but not anymore. It's just a good hard-nosed, toe-to-toe, hard-hitting rivalry."

There's little question that Mike Leppy's Mustangs will attempt to do most of their damage running the ball out of the I-formation and that stellar tailback Shaud Williams will be Andrews' primary weapon.

A 175-pound junior who gained more than 1,000 yards last season and again eclipsed that mark two weeks ago, Williams is arguably the best running back in District 4-4A and possibly West Texas. Both fast and quick, Williams is coming off a 186-yard, two-touchdown performance in last week's 21-7 win over Fort Stockton.

There's no question that he's

Longtime friends, Butler and Leppy tough opponents

By JOHN A. MOSELEY
Sports Editor

For Dwight Butler, Friday's showdown between his Big Spring Steers and Andrews carries more significance than a playoff berth, it's a head-to-head confrontation with one of his best friends, Mustangs' coach Mike Leppy.

Butler and Leppy were college roommates at Eastern New Mexico University.

"It's really kind of a strange that we'd be coaching against each other every year," Butler explained of his relationship with Leppy. "Of course, it's kind of a long story of how we wound up as roommates at Eastern New Mexico. I'd played football at TCU but been through seven knee surgeries. My career was over and he'd just decided to quit playing at New Mexico."

"We'd even played against one another ... in the New Mexico High School All-Star Game," Butler added. "He was an offensive guard from Los Alamos, I played linebacker. Of course, we beat them ... it was 7-0."

See FRIENDS, page 2B

a great running back," Butler said of Williams. "He's just a superbly talented athlete ... plays five sports. Of course, we feel like (Steers fullback) Antwone (Edwards) is the same quality. They do things differently, but both are great runners."

While Williams is the Mustangs' primary offensive weapon, the Andrews attack is diverse. Fullback Jeremy Woods, a 205-pound sophomore, is certainly capable. He's the player called on to fill the tailback's spot whenever Williams leaves the field.

In addition, Butler said he expects Mustang quarterback Jeremy Pitkin to put the ball in the air against the Steers.

"They've gotten a lot better at throwing the ball," the Steers boss noted. "They've had to do that to keep people from load-

Hornets deal Mavericks their first loss of season

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Charlotte's Glen Rice and Dell Curry are two of the best shooters in the NBA, and when they get hot on the same night, it translates into a worst-case scenario for opponents.

"It makes us dangerous — probably one of the most dangerous teams in the league," Rice said after he scored 28 points and Curry added 23 to power the Hornets to a 110-103 victory over Dallas on Wednesday night.

Rice, who averaged 33 points in two games against the Mavericks last season, hit 12 of 21 field-goal attempts this time. Curry made his first five shots on the way to an 8-of-13 night, helping the Hornets to 51 percent shooting.

"We have the range and we have the confidence," Curry said. "When the defense doesn't know where we'll shoot and we're moving the ball without them getting set, we're real dangerous."

Khalid Reeves scored 24 and Michael Finley had 20 for Dallas, which fell to 3-1 and failed to match its' best start ever. The 1995-96 Mavericks won their first four games.

"This was a good team, a possible playoff team, that we lost to," Reeves said. "This shows how far Dallas has come."

Dallas, coming off a victory over Vancouver one night earlier, lost steam in the second half against Charlotte after shooting 57 percent in the first two quarters. The Mavericks shot 30 percent in the third quarter and wound up at 47 percent.

"They're difficult to play with that many shooters," Dallas coach Jim Clemons said. "They won 54 games last year, and they showed why because they kept their composure and we just couldn't get over the hump. It seemed like every loose ball rolled to them and they would find Curry or Rice."

The Hornets made 23 of 29 foul shots, but the Mavericks did even better, sinking their first 22 on the way to a 24-of-26 performance.

"The importance of making free throws really came out tonight," Charlotte coach Dave Cowens said. "If you don't make your free throws in this game, you go home a loser."

Rice, the NBA's most accurate 3-point shooter last season, opened this year with an 0-for-7 skid that ended when he hit one late in the third quarter.

The basket started a 14-7 run that gave Charlotte its biggest lead to that stage, 93-83 with 8:12 remaining.

Switzer is still Cowboys' coach, getting another vote of confidence

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

IRVING — What would the running soap opera at Valley Ranch be without a good Barry Switzer is going to be fired rumor?

Players and owner Jerry Jones scoffed Wednesday at a report Switzer was going to be ousted next week.

"We're always under the microscope," veteran Bill Bates said. "We're pretty much used to it."

"We need a good distraction," guard Nate Newton said. "Distractions get us going. We thrive on them."

Jones shot down the latest report concerning Switzer, who according to The Washington Post likely will be replaced by director of scouting Larry Lacewell next week.

"It shows you how bad sources can be," Jones said Wednesday while the Cowboys, 4-5 and off to their worst start since 1990, tried to prepare for Sunday's game against Arizona in Texas Stadium.

"Barry's job is secure. There's no truth to that. It's not going to happen. We're going to ride through these rough times and we're going to ride with Barry Switzer," Jones said.

The Dallas Morning News reported today that a source said Switzer was almost fired after a loss to the Washington Redskins three weeks ago.

The source told the newspaper that Jones considered firing Switzer after the Washington game and replacing him on an interim basis with special teams coach Joe Avezzano.

Neither Jones nor Switzer could be reached Wednesday night, the newspaper reported.

Avezzano expressed surprise when told of the source's statement.

"I don't know anything about that," he said. "I know nothing. No one has mentioned anything to me."

The reports come on the heels of a heated discussion after Sunday's 17-10 loss to San Francisco between Switzer and quarterback Troy Aikman, and a New York Times report last week that the Dallas coach stayed up until 4 a.m. partying before a game and bragged about it.

Public relations director Rich Dairymple said of the reports of Switzer's dismissal:

"That would be taking a difficult situation, turning it upside down, and then turning it upside down again. It's not something Jerry is going to do."

Lacewell, a former assistant under Switzer and also a head coach at Arkansas State, laughed.

"That's crazy," Lacewell said. "I'm trying to find players, not coach them. It's ridiculous. I'd be shocked if something like that happened."

Jones said he would study the coaching situation after the season. Switzer has won one Super Bowl in his four years as head coach.

The players tried to ignore the sideshow and get ready for a team that upset them in the second game of the season.

"We feel we can win Sunday and get back in the race," said running back Emmitt Smith, who is listed as questionable with a groin pull.

"We've got to hang in there, and we can't let the media drive a wedge between us. When Jerry sees fit to make a coaching change, he will. Until that time, Barry has his job and the players need to do their job and try to win."

Switzer acknowledged that his late night out happened the Tuesday after a loss to the New York Giants, not the night before the game, as had been reported. He said he stayed up late drinking wine worrying about the loss.

Switzer said it was a "total lie" for anyone to say he partied the night before the game.

Jordan still doing it all for Chicago

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

With Scottie Pippen recovering from foot surgery and Dennis Rodman still getting into shape after missing the exhibition season, Michael Jordan is shouldering an even bigger load than usual for the Chicago Bulls.

Jordan had 29 points and 17 rebounds, one shy of his career high, as the Bulls beat the Orlando Magic 94-81 Wednesday night.

"That's just part of my leadership role, part of my responsibility," Jordan said. "I play like I know how, and help out in a lot of areas."

Jordan's rebounding helped the Bulls dominate the boards 45-38.

"Dennis is not starting, so I make a concentrated effort to go to the boards," he said. "We as a team have to take that same approach and not rely on him to do all the rebounding. You can't score without the ball, so rebounding is still important."

Jordan, who played 48 minutes in a double-overtime victory over San Antonio two nights earlier, was on the court for all but seven minutes as the Bulls beat the Magic for the 11th straight time.

"It's a method of getting me into game shape, playing these minutes," Jordan said. "I feel really good. I'm not worried about getting tired. When Scottie comes back, that'll relieve my duties and I'll get some rest."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Miami 90, Boston 74; Indiana 99, Detroit 87; New Jersey 112, Golden State 96; Atlanta 93, Philadelphia 88; Charlotte 110, Dallas 103; San Antonio 87, Vancouver 79; and Houston 124, Los Angeles Clippers 110.

points, including 10 straight in the fourth quarter, as Miami won at Boston. Antoine Walker had 20 points and 13 rebounds for the Celtics, who have lost three in a row since upsetting Chicago.

Hawks 93

76ers 88

Dikembe Mutombo had 20 points, 16 rebounds and eight blocks as visiting Atlanta improved to 4-0, its best start since 1986. Allen Iverson had 21 points and 11 assists for Philadelphia, which dropped to 0-3. Dee Kantner became the second female to referee a regular-season NBA game.

Pacers 99

Pistons 87

Rik Smits scored 12 of his 25 points in the fourth quarter to lead Indiana at Detroit. Grant Hill had 29 points, eight assists and eight rebounds for the Pistons.

Nets 112

Warriors 96

New Jersey improved to 3-0 for the first time in franchise history and Golden State fell to 0-4, matching the team's worst start ever. Chris Gatling had 21 points and Sam Cassell 19 for the Nets, who won only 26 games last season. Donyell Marshall led the visiting Warriors with 21 points.

Spurs 87

Grizzlies 79

David Robinson had 22 points and 17 rebounds as San Antonio downed visiting Vancouver. The Grizzlies, who won three of four against the Spurs last season, were led by Anthony Peeler's 19 points.

"Defensively, they're very experienced... most of them are seniors. I imagine they're going to crowd the line of scrimmage with six to eight people."

The Steers, however, will again change their offensive lineup — returning Tory Mitchell to the tailback's position he surrendered to Jacob Rios last week.

"We depend too much on Jacob's contribution on defense to leave him in the offensive backfield," Butler explained. "We're basically going back to the lineup that got us here. There's no reason to try and do something different, because it's worked for us to this point."

ing up to stop Shaud. I wouldn't be a bit surprised if they try to hurt us throwing the ball."

Defensively, Butler is virtually certain Andrews will attack the line of scrimmage in an attempt to disrupt the Steers' wing-T running attack.

"That's what they like to do... penetrate the line with their defensive linemen and disrupt things before you ever get things started," he explained, noting that the Steers' passing attack in last week's loss to Sweetwater did little to keep opponents honest about concentrating on the run.

FRIENDS

"Anyway, we wind up together there at Eastern New Mexico as roommates, but that's just a part of our history. Both of our wives went to the same high school in Albuquerque and they're both named Cathy... they were roommates. In fact, he's actually the one who introduced me to my wife."

While all that will not be forgotten when Friday's game begins with a 7:30 p.m. kickoff, Butler says there's no way his close friend will be offering any quarter.

"He's a great friend... probably as good a friend as I've got, but we're going to try to beat his brains out Friday night," Butler added. "And you can bet he'll be trying to do the same."

Friday night. But Trey Harrell moved in there and threw the game winning touchdown pass against Wellman last week, and he'll have a week of working out as the starter this time.

While Barnett says he's sure Peugh's loss will make it difficult for the Wildcats in some respects, it doesn't lessen the Mustangs' concerns.

"The problem is that Frankie (Garza) throws the ball just about as well as Peugh does," Barnett explained. "That makes him a big threat, because he can always pull up and throw the ball."

"But the thing that impresses me the most about them is their defense," he added. "Defensively, they're probably the most aggressive team we've faced since that first game against Grandfalls. It's won them some ball games."

The Anniversary of a Great Discovery
King Tut's Tomb

Howard Carter (1873-1939), who discovered King Tut's tomb, had to open the stone sarcophagus (see K-O-P-uh-gus), or coffin, and three other coffins, one within the other, before reaching King Tut's mummy.

Howard Carter

Unlike most archaeologists, Howard Carter did not graduate from college. Like his father, he became an artist. At age 18, he was sent to Egypt to trace the art in Egyptian tombs.

He became an assistant to a famous archaeologist. After discovering King Tut's tomb, he became famous, too.

While Howard Carter did not get to keep any of the King Tut treasures he found, his writings and lectures made him rich.

Valley of the Kings

King Tut died around 1337 B.C., about 1,000 years after the great pyramids were built. These pyramids were such an easy target for robbers that later rulers decided to go underground. They preferred to hide their graves deep in the desert rock and sand.

King Tut's tomb, along with as many as 63 other tombs, was discovered in a deserted desert area known as the Valley of the Kings.

Finding the tomb

There is an old saying that "you can't take it with you." This means that you can't take your riches to the grave when you die.

The pharaohs, or rulers, in ancient Egypt did not believe in this. They took their treasures with them when they were buried. The Egyptians believed they would be reborn and able to use these grand things.

This week we will celebrate the 75th anniversary of the discovery of the richest tomb ever found. King Tut's tomb was discovered on Nov. 4, 1922. The treasures had been buried for more than 3,000 years.

This discovery was called the greatest find in the history of archaeology (AR-kee-OL-uh-gee), the study of the remains of people who lived before us.

The famous curse

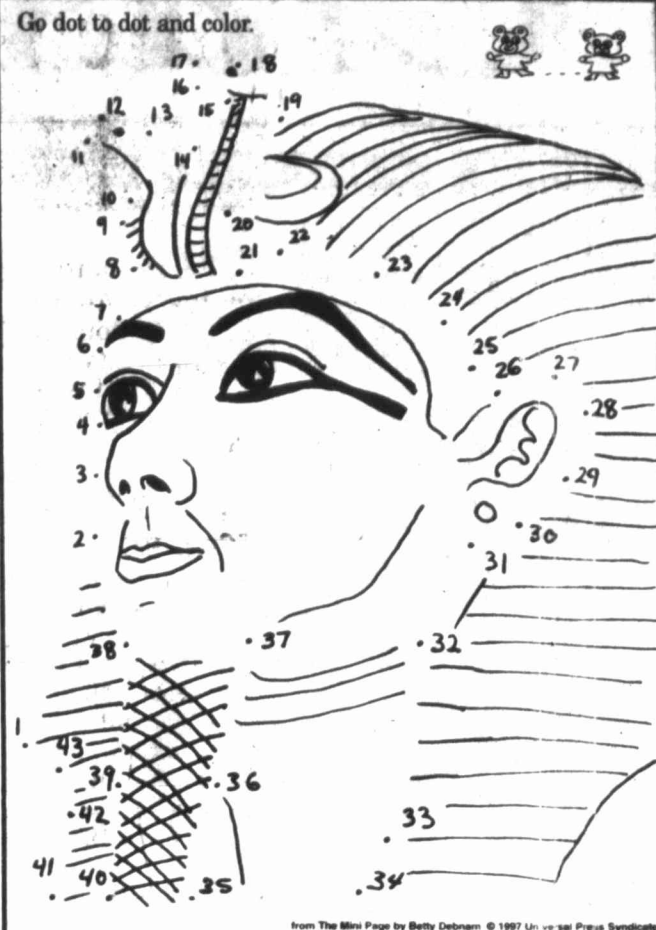

Some people believed that there was a curse on the people who opened King Tut's tomb.

The idea started when Howard Carter bought a new canary shortly before the tomb was discovered. Carter's workers thought the little yellow bird would bring good luck.

When the canary was killed by a cobra, the symbol of the Egyptian pharaohs, some believed that its death was revenge against the men who tampered with a pharaoh's grave.

While some of these men did die unexpectedly, most of them, including Howard Carter, lived to old age.

What King Tut Took

Who was King Tut?
There is an old Egyptian saying: To speak someone's name is to bring him or her back to life. Because of the discovery of his treasure-filled tomb, King Tut's name has been spoken time and time again.

For Tut's happy afterlife
As Howard Carter peered through a tiny hole in the door of one of the rooms in the tomb, someone asked, "Can you see anything?" His answer was, "Yes, wonderful things." These included a basket of fruit, feathered fans, statues of servants, knives and even two chariots. Here are just a few of the items. We can tell something about King Tut by what he took with him to guarantee a happy life after death. These are on display at the Egyptian Museum in Cairo.

Something to do
This small statue shows King Tut as a boy going on a mythical hippopotamus hunt. It is a symbol of overthrowing evil.

King Tut's mummy
A solid gold mask covered the shoulders of King Tut's mummy. It weighs about 20 pounds and is decorated with precious stones. A false platted beard was placed on his chin. Tut's mummy was inside a stone sarcophagus and three coffins that fit inside one another. The one holding the mummy was of solid gold.

Furniture
Tut probably used this chair when he was young. He came to the tomb when he was only about 8 years old.

Makeup
Both men and women wore makeup and perfume. Keeping clean and smelling good were important. The lion on top of this cosmetic jar stood for strong character.

A mirror
Ancient Egyptians paid a lot of attention to their looks. Tut's mirror case was designed in the shape of the symbol of life. Mirrors were often placed in Egyptian tombs.

Tut's cartouche
In Egyptian writing (called hieroglyphs), each symbol stood for a sound or an object. The names of pharaohs were enclosed in oval shapes. The scribes, or writers, felt that the oval would protect the ruler's name. These royal ovals are called "cartouches" (car-TUSH-es).

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR FRIDAY, NOV. 7:

Priorities are a major focus this year; domestic life is highlighted. You might add a roommate, new lover or pet, or purchase property. The quality of your personal life is subject to dramatic improvement. You might feel pushed by work; consider setting up a home office. Think carefully about how it could affect your home life. If you are single, you meet potential partners easily. But it might not be until 1998 that you find someone who knocks your socks off. If attached, love flourishes. Whatever key project you get into together makes you feel close and loved. AQUARIUS is a pal.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You gain perspective through news. Optimism surrounds friendship and a long-term desire. You get what you want through endurance. A partner gives you key feedback. Make time for a meeting that allows you to network. Tonight: Have a good time!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A partner reveals another side of the coin. Listen to his opinion. An opportunity demands your attention. Be willing to take a risk and make a leap of faith. Intuition is correct with a boss. Be careful whom you put on a pedestal. Tonight: Stay in the spotlight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be willing to take off at the drop of a hat. Carefully think through a decision. A partner gives you more than adequate feedback. The pace is hectic. Information suddenly comes forward. A positive attitude invites a special offer. Tonight: Let the music lead you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Closeness is key in a partnership. Emotions are effective in a work-related matter. Be open to new technology. A boss wants to confide in you. Listen to him, and respond accordingly. Money flows in from another source. Tonight: Get cozy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Dynamic action makes a big difference. Others respond to your wit. You are happiest with friends, associates and loved ones; that is where you shine. A serious conversation is overdue. News from a distance forces talks. Tonight: You are a force on the social scene.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You have a key project on your docket. Getting into it shouldn't isolate you from others; just ask someone to pitch in. Socializing, shopping and running errands all mix. You receive news from a family member. Tonight: Do what you like!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You become childlike and full of fun. Curb your tendency to behave like there is no tomorrow. Communications are active; you might be on overload. A difficult partner responds to your chatty mood. Financial pressure is high. Tonight: Do what you do best — flirt!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Take a look at what is going on with a family member. You decide to join forces and investigate a new look for the home. Two minds work better than one; also, you want the help. Be careful about funds; wait until they are in before spending. Tonight: Be happy at home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

You are playful, frisky and energetic. Reach out for others; optimism surrounds the moment. You come from a solid point of view, though a talk brings in another slant. You might be harder on a neighbor or relative than is necessary. Clear off your desk. Tonight: Hang out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Finally, good luck comes your way. A special offer presents itself. Stay on solid ground, though you might be tempted to spend to make a family member happy. Quietly sort through an idea; you don't need a public forum. Listen to instincts. Tonight: Be self-indulgent!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You are personality-plus. Flow with the moment, and let spontaneity and enthusiasm take the lead. Follow-through counts. Make a phone call, even if you are a bit uncomfortable. News comes forth that is important. Listen to a friend with care. Tonight: Find the action!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

Much is going on behind the scenes that is significant. Listen better. Financial instincts are right on. Share feelings, and be open. You need to honor news from someone in power. Changes are happening. Tonight: Vanish happily.

Wife's game plan for in-law requires husband on her side

DEAR ABBY: After reading her letter about her mother-in-law, I have heartfelt sympathy for "Charlotte in North Carolina." However, I think that your advice that she should start looking for another man for her mother-in-law was unrealistic. The chances of her finding a man who would put up with a witch like her mother-in-law are pretty slim. I have the same mother-in-law problem, so here's my advice to Charlotte:

Abigail Van Buren Columnist

Your mother-in-law will never accept you, understand you or listen to you, so don't hold your breath waiting for her to see the light. If she's anything like mine, she uses guilt like a master manipulator. She'll turn on the tears or spout outright lies to get her way.

Tearing your family apart for her own selfish needs is heartless. However, as much as you want to blame your mother-in-law, your husband is the one to blame. Only he can put "Mommie Dearest" in her place.

At first, my husband thought I was too sensitive to his mother's indirect insults. However, once he took notice of them, he began to understand my feelings.

Charlotte, discuss your mother-in-law's comments with your husband while they're still fresh. Point out situations where she's interfering with family time. Always remember that she's his mother and the children's grandmother, and she deserves respect even when you don't get hers in return. You can learn to play the game. Granted, you'll never get rid of the old battle-ax, but it helps if your husband is on your side to counter her attacks. Perhaps one day she'll get the hint and get a life of her own. — KEEPING THE PEACE, TERRE HAUTE, IND.

DEAR KEEPING THE PEACE: I am printing your letter in its entirety with the hope that it will provide a blueprint for "Charlotte" to follow. I can think of few relationships as emotionally charged as those between daughters-in-law and mothers-in-law.

P.S. I'm one of the lucky ones. I love my mother-in-law! Rose Phillips, take a bow.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend took me to a party where I felt really out of place. A woman he knew was there, and my boyfriend sat and talked to her for hours. I sat by myself. Fortunately, my brother-in-law was also a guest, so when he saw I had been deserted, he more or less entertained me. When food was served, I looked up and saw my boyfriend leading this woman to a porch where they could sit and talk some more, while I again sat by myself.

Later that night, I told him he was rude and inconsiderate. Was I wrong? — PARTY BLUES IN RICHMOND, VA.

DEAR PARTY BLUES: No, you were not wrong. Your boyfriend was rude and inconsiderate — and if you are still with him, you are foolish. You can do better.

Next time around, try to find a boyfriend as sensitive and considerate as your brother-in-law, and you'll have yourself a winner.

DEAR READERS: A man went into a fortune-teller's shop and waited for a reading. The fortune-teller gazed into the crystal ball and said, "You will be poor and unhappy until you are 45 years old."

"Then what will happen?" asked the man.

The fortune-teller replied, "Then you'll get used to it."

Thank you, Anonymous Reader, for sending this to me. I think it's a hoot.

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Greg," and I dated five years before we married two years ago. Greg is Catholic and I am Southern Baptist. His family was aware of our religious differences from the beginning.

We were completely candid that neither of us would convert from our religions, and that our children would be raised Baptist until they were old enough to decide otherwise.

On our wedding day, no one from Greg's family showed up, and I watched tears stream down my husband's face on what should have been the happiest day of his life. It has been very difficult ever since. His parents christened our child at their home without Greg's or my consent. There have been other problems — too numerous to mention.

The last straw came three months ago. Greg's older sibling was also married in a non-Catholic church. This time, the entire family, including us, attended.

The problem with Greg's parents has caused a major strain on our marriage. We have invited them over on numerous occasions to hash out our differences, but they have never showed up. After our last attempt, they said they had nothing else to talk to us about.

Abby, I feel no love lost because of their absence, and my toddler really doesn't know them anyway. However, I am concerned about my husband's feelings. He and my child mean the world to me. I don't want my marriage to suffer. I'm worried that if this continues much longer, I'll lose my temper with the situation. Can you help us? — LOSING MY COOL IN GEORGIA

DEAR LOSING MY COOL: For your in-laws to have baptized your baby behind your

DEAR ABBY: Our next-door neighbors moved in a little over a year ago, and we've developed a friendship with them. We were invited to a dinner party for Mrs. Next-Door-Neighbor at a nice restaurant. We accepted.

The party was scheduled for a Saturday night. On the Thursday before the party, we were given four tickets to a pre-season football game for the same Saturday night. We don't get to attend many games, and we are big fans of the team. The tickets are very hard to come by and are quite expensive.

We decided to go to the game and forgo the party. I called Mr. Next-Door-Neighbor explaining our situation and apologized. My husband also apologized. After the party and game, I sent Mrs. Next-Door-Neighbor a nice plant and some jewelry for her birthday, and apologized to her.

They still seem to be upset by our dinner cancellation. What should we have done? —
