

U.S. and Britain push for tougher Iraq resolution

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — It's a blunt warning to Iraq, perhaps too blunt to win broad support: Keep your promise to open sensitive sites to arms inspection or face the "severest consequences."

Britain and the United States were pressing other permanent members of the Security Council on Thursday to back such a resolution, but China, France and Russia are wary of words that could lead to war. Any of the five permanent members could veto it.

The council was scheduled to meet today, but final consensus on what to do if Iraq violates an accord reached last weekend by Secretary-General Kofi Annan wasn't expected until next week. On Thursday night, Annan canceled a scheduled trip to Washington on Monday to remain close to U.N. headquarters while the council does its work.

Republicans in Congress have criticized Annan's agreement with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, with Sen. Jesse Helms saying Thursday that Annan "gave away the store." But the U.N. chief defended the deal.

"The alternative to the agreement would have ended (U.N. inspectors') work. The memo of understanding has strengthened it," Annan said in a letter thanking U.N. colleagues for their support. "It is the council, not a few critics who will have the last word."

Chief weapons inspector Richard Butler rejected speculation that his authority would be undermined by the deal, which calls for diplomats to accompany inspectors on their visits.

Butler said the U.N. Special Commission, or UNSCOM, would remain in charge of the inspections and the scientific analysis.

"What's different? We'll have some diplomatic observers with us to make sure that both sides — not just UNSCOM but Iraq, too — behave in an appropriate manner in these special sites," Butler said. "I think that's fine."

U.S. Ambassador Bill Richardson said he was pleased Butler's team would remain in charge, a key U.S. concern. The leader of the diplomatic team — the U.N.'s top disarmament official, Jayantha Dhanapala — will report to Butler. Butler will continue to report to the Security Council through the secretary-general.

U.N. officials announced Dhanapala's appointment Thursday. Butler said he has known the former Sri Lankan ambassador to the United States for almost 30 years, and was "utterly delighted" by his appointment.

The diplomats will accompany U.N. inspectors into the eight presidential palaces at the heart of the latest crisis. Iraq had refused to allow inspectors into the sites, claiming it would violate Iraq's sovereignty.

Under the terms of surrender after its defeat in the 1991 Persian Gulf War, Iraq is required to eliminate all its weapons of mass destruction. UNSCOM must certify the elimination before the Security Council will lift tough economic sanctions it imposed on Baghdad after it invaded Kuwait in 1990, triggering the war.

Any Iraqi failure to provide weapons experts "immediate, unconditional and unrestricted" access to the sites they wish to inspect would, according to the draft Security Council resolution, "have the severest consequences for Iraq."

The resolution, still being crafted, doesn't spell out the use of military force.

Richardson said the United States "will support a British effort which sends an unmistakable message to Iraq that they will pay if they don't comply with this agreement."

Russian Ambassador Sergey Lavrov suggested a simpler resolution would be appropriate: "We got the deal, which everybody has signed."

The French also is reluctant to threaten though President Chirac warned Iraq that "the most severe consequences" would be imposed if Baghdad violates U.N. agreement on inspections. Chirac told the daily Le Monde was opposed to any U.N. resolution that would trigger automatic military action.

Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz told the Broadcasting Corp. language service British-American press Security Council showed a lack of respect for Annan's authority.

Agency says transplant system is abused, unfair

WASHINGTON (AP) — It took an $8,000 flight to get Cleo Gilmore his new liver. Fearing he would die before reaching the top of the local waiting list, the Philadelphia man signed up in Miami. Two months later, he had a liver.

"The system is grossly unfair," Gilmore said, noting that not everyone can afford to charter a midnight plane ride.

Responding to similar complaints, the government said Thursday it would change the controversial system that gives local patients first crack at locally donated organs. The system should help the sickest patients first regardless of where they live, said Donna Shalala, secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services.

"We have not achieved equitable distribution to those with greatest medical need," Shalala said in a letter Thursday to 89 members of Congress who have expressed interest in the issue. When the final rules are eventually issued, she said, they will put patients with the greatest medical need "at the head of the list."

Still, after more than three years of debate, HHS still hasn't issued formal regulations that would force a new system.

"It doesn't mean anything until she signs them and gets them out," said Craig Irwin, president of the National Transplant Action Committee.

The dilemma is how to distribute 4,000 livers each year among 7,000 waiting patients.

On one side is the United Network for Organ Sharing, which runs the transplant program and established the current policy. Organs first are offered to all patients locally, no matter how sick they are. Then they are available regionally, and then nationally. The network is controlled by transplant centers, most of which benefit from the policy that assures small programs will be offered organs donated locally.

But because donors and patients are not evenly distributed across the country, the waiting time is five times longer in some parts of the country than in others.

On the other side of the debate are the relatively few larger centers that care for the sickest patients and have the largest number of people waiting. Led by the University of Pittsburgh, they have lobbied for a system based on medical need.

Joel Newman, spokesman for the organ network, did not defend the substance of the current program but said it was created by a consensus of transplant professionals.

Patients and advocates including Gilmore demonstrated outside HHS Thursday, urging Shalala to issue the formal rules. They delivered 1,000 daffodils to symbolize each of the patients who has died waiting for a liver in the past three years.

HHS officials, who sent the flowers to patients at the National Institutes of Health, said the letter's release on the same day as the rally was coincidental.

The United Network for Organ Sharing runs the transplant program under a federal contract. Legislation establishing the system was signed in 1984.

Nanny who kidnapped baby sentenced to 12 years in prison

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — An undocumented Mexican nanny convicted of kidnapping a 10-month-old baby she was caring for has been sentenced to 12 years in prison.

Lanely Santos Rivera, 19, of Oaxaca, Mexico, also was ordered to undergo psychological tests.

Ms. Santos was convicted in December on one count of hostage-taking.

She had faced a maximum life sentence and a fine of up to $250,000.

She was accused of kidnapping the baby in September from a house where she worked as a live-in maid and nanny. The child was found unharmed a few hours later behind the house.

During the trial, Ms. Santos testified that she was forced to take part in the kidnapping by a man who threatened to steal her own unborn child if she didn't write a ransom note demanding $7,000.

But prosecutors insisted she acted alone, noting she changed her story several times.

At Thursday's sentencing, Ms. Santos continued to insist that she was put up to the kidnapping plot by a man she met at a Brownsville grocery store.

"(The jury) never really saw that there was someone else involved," she told U.S.

District Judge Filemon. "I did everything as I will."

But Vela seemed to still failing to accept responsibility for her actions, he told Ms. Santos. He ordered her to pay $280 in restitution to the family and suggest Santos suffers from mental problems.

"Somebody's going to help you address the fact that you obviously have told Ms. Santos."

He reminded the woman that although the baby was unharmed, the child had died "within the day because of intense

Veggies, not drugs, greet narc officers

LONE STAR (AP) — East Texas narcotics officers who hauled in an 18-wheeler for a drug inspection ended up with a big bust, alright: 41,000 pounds of frozen broccoli.

Agents of the Ark-La-Tex Narcotic Task Force ordered the truck unloaded Wednesday.

Driver Jesse Avalos of Alamo in South Texas said the ordeal began when he was pulled over for driving too close to the edge of his lane.

"They asked for my driver's license, asked if I was carrying any drugs or weapons and I said, 'No,'" he told the Longview News-Journal. "Then they told me they were going to bring in a drug-sniffing dog."

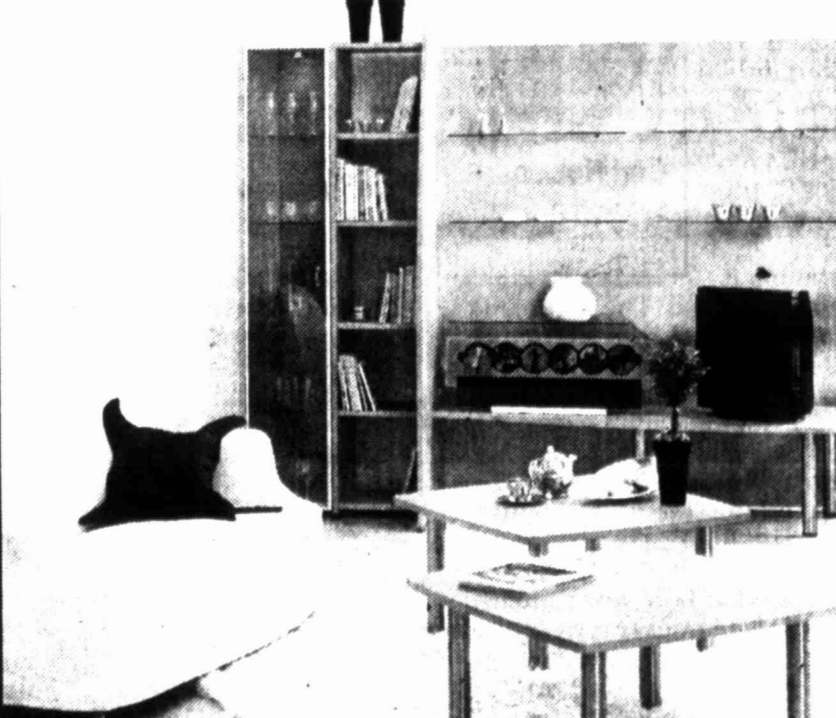

But Avalos, who drives for the KTB Trucking Co. of Pharr, said he was ordered to pull off the interstate.

After a two-hour search, officers said the "dog had detected something." But they found that the truck contained 16-ounce packages of frozen broccoli.

After the truck's trailer was unloaded with a fork lift and no drugs were found, Avalos said the Maryland-bound broccoli would be inspected at its destination to determine whether it had thawed and spoiled during the search.

back up, and turn corners. If I stop for a while to ponder which way to go, and the easiest way to get there, someone stops and asks me if I need help. I'm sure that I do, but I think it's remarkable that they are aware of it, too. Guess everyone believes in self-preservation.

At 80-ish, we're somewhat informed about things. I'm sure we've come through some things the younger generation have never — or would ever — want to experience, such as, the depression in the '30s. We did learn to conserve, such as using outhouses, and the Sears and Roebuck catalogues.

We really conserved on electricity. We used coal oil lamps, then later, through much progress, the aladdin lamps made an appearance. If we were very frugal, we could save our money to buy mantles for them.

Believe me, being 80-ish gives us the knowledge of making do — or making do without. We've survived and "come a long way baby" since those good old days. There was time in those days to greet a new neighbor with a batch of home made goodies, and there was always food and hospitality to share. God provided!

Now in the hectic rush of "get there and get back, so we can get there again", it's hard to find time to get our thoughts collected.

It's not that I want to change today for yesterday. I'm sure if I were going down Gregg Street today in a horse drawn buggy, I'd be totally demolished!

I'm enjoying today. This is the day God has given me to rejoice and be glad in, at the same time remembering the past, and holding on to the things that were, and still are, precious to me. The main thing is to "keep the main thing the main thing" — each day to thank our Lord for His great love and mercy to us, in the past, the present, and the future.

Tears blurred Diana's eyes as Danae then happily hopped down to go play with the other children before the rains came. Her daughter's words confirmed what Diana and all the members of the extended Blessing family had known, at least in their hearts all along.

During those long days and nights of her first two months of her life when her nerves were too sensitive for them to touch her, God was holding Danae on His chest — and it is His loving scent that she remembers so well.

Have you taken time lately to lay your head back on God and smell the fragrance of His presence?

We all know that God is everywhere, but have you taken time to let Him manifest His presence in your life?

Like the smell of an approaching thunderstorm, His

Take the time today to slow down and enter His healing, and cleansing presence.

night, the Utes are looking forward to Saturday's showdown with New Mexico, with one of the top seeds in the WAC tournament on the line.

"It's probably the best thing that's happened to me since I've been at Utah," Utah's Andre Miller said of the Lobos' stunning loss.

In other games involving Top 25 teams, it was No. 2 Arizona 76, California 73; No. 5 Utah 71, Texas El-Paso 49; No. 8 Stanford 86, Arizona St. 73; No. 15 Texas Christian 57, Tulsa 54; No. 17 Cincinnati 68, N.C. Charlotte 67; No. 18 UCLA 78, Washington St. 75; and No. 23 Syracuse 76, Pittsburgh 61.

New Mexico, which lost by 31 points to Texas Christian on Saturday, played without guard Royce Olney, out for the remainder of the season with an injured right knee. Olney, averaging 15 points and the team's leading 3-point shooter, tore the anterior cruciate ligament on his right knee in the loss to TCU.

"We've been a good team because of our parts, and now one of them is missing," New Mexico coach Dave Bliss said. "We got caught in a jam. We played against a team that played smart, aggressive and made the right plays. We never got out of the hole."

The Cougars (8-20, 3-10 WAC) had lost 11 of 13 games to New Mexico, including a 72-54 blowout in Provo a month ago. But BYU hit a season-high 12 3-pointers and took control with a 25-12 run late in the first half.

BYU, 1-25 last season, pulled off one of the biggest upsets of the season and ended the second-longest home winning streak in the country. No. 4 Kansas has won 60 straight at Allen Fieldhouse.

The Lobos had not lost in Albuquerque since Jan. 27, 1996, when Utah won 82-64. The end of the winning streak was virtually assured after BYU hit its final six 3-pointers of the first half for a 46-28 lead.

Arizona 76, California 73 Michael Dickerson scored 21 of his 23 points in the second half, helping Arizona extend the nation's longest winning streak to 18 games.

Dickerson's 3-pointer gave the Wildcats (25-3, 15-0 Pac-10) a 74-69 lead with 3:02 left, and they held on to remain undefeated at home this season.

Geno Carlisle made a free throw with 14 seconds left to cut Arizona's lead to one, but he missed his second attempt and California (11-13, 7-8) got no closer.

Miles Simon scored 22 points and Mike Bibby had 15 for Arizona, which won despite missing 14 of 29 free throws.

"My goal is to be able to win the regional and state meets," Britton continued. "Every meet we go to, our goal is going to have kids turn in times that will get them to regional and then to state."

Mitchell, who as a sophomore turned in the state's second best clocking in the 100 meters (10.05 seconds) and the best time in the 200 meters (20.6 seconds), headlines the Steers' track roster.

"Tory needs the kind of competition we're going to face at Converse Judson and Jesuit," Britton noted. "We saw that at the state meet last year. He needs to be at meets where there are still people right there with him at 30 meters and still there at 60 meters and 90 meters."

"He didn't run against that kind of competition until we got to the state meet last year and I think that hurt him," the Steers coach added.

A number of young, less experienced athletes will join Mitchell in the Steers' sprinting corps. Jimmy Hawkins, Doug White, Kurt Miranda, Kyle Britton and Colby Ford.

That group will be working toward bettering the 43.0 clocking the Steers posted in the 4x100-meter relay a year ago and the 3:29 time Big Spring posted in the 4x400 relay.

Mitchell figures to anchor both relays. He is teamed with Kyle Britton, Miranda and White in the 4x100, while Ford, Hawkins and White join him in the 4x400.

Torres, who has heretofore specialized in the longer distance races, the 1,600 meters and 3,200 meters, will be entered at somewhat shorter distances this season.

"We're still going to enter him in the mile (1,600), but I think we're going to take him out of the 3,200 and have him run the 800 meters," Britton said, noting that Torres turned in a 2:20 clocking at a practice meet last weekend, despite being continually fouled by a competitor.

The Dallas Cowboys have added a new wide receiver who is not new to the team, signing Ernie Mills.

The 35-year-old Pittsburgher signed a one-year, $325,000 contract, returning him to the field. He is also a kick returner.

Mills' college teammate of South at Florida was drafted by the team after running 100-yard dashes at the University Valley Ranch headquarter to determine the best player surgically repaired left knee.

The 192-pound Mills did not play a game last season, but could earn up to $200,000 in incentives once he reaches 20 receptions.

Mills was a bargain for the Cowboys, who have some free agency needs and financial wiggle room under the $52.4 million salary cap.

"I grew up a Cowboy fan, so this is an exciting day for me," said Mills, who has 136 catches for 2,130 yards and 15 touchdowns in his NFL career. "In my mind, there's no doubt about the talent on this team."

Gayley, who was Mills' position coach and offensive coordinator for three years with the Steelers before joining the Cowboys, decided to bring the veteran in for a visit Thursday morning.
