Parent Involvement Day set for Thursday

Parent Involvement Day Thursday offers an opportunity for children to invite the parents to school, and various campuses within Howard County have planned activities for the day.

Parents of students at Marcy Elementary may visit the school and take part in various classroom activities, as well as visiting a resource classroom and the IPP laboratory.

Marcy parents may also check out and take home library books and video tapes of class work their Title I first or second grader is doing in school.

Bauer Magnet School has planned a reception for Title I students. College Heights is offering parents an opportunity to have lunch with their child and teacher. Parents are urged to bring their lunch.

Coahoma Elementary has planned an open house and all parents are invited.

Other Big Spring campuses have individual opportunities for parents to be involved, under the direction of the classroom teacher. Check with your child's teacher to see what activities have been planned.

Council OKs antenna negotiations

By T.E. JENKINS

The highly visible Settles building that towers over downtown Big Spring may be getting just a touch taller, as Big Spring City Council members gave City Attorney Jim Finley first approval to begin contract negotiations with a cellular service provider that wishes to locate an antenna on the top of the landmark.

"Poka Lambro PCS, Inc. has requested a communications lease agreement with the city to place a cellular relay antenna on the roof of the Settles," said Finley during Tuesday's proceedings. "They are also asking permission to locate a small area in the building for their equipment."

Finley said Poka Lambro has offered to pay the lease in cash, or offer a trade-off that would allow the city so many free minutes for the use of the building.

"We are trying to reach an agreement with them right now on the room available for their equipment. There are a lot of different ways we can work out payment of a lease, but from what the council said tonight, I expect it will be a cash deal."

"They have been really easy to work with on this project, and we're pretty excited about the whole thing. It would be a good

Court will not request contributions from clients

By T.E. JENKINS
Staff Writer

Howard County commissioners have decided not to go with a plan to request contributions from indigent health care clients has been shelved.

Howard County Indigent Health Care Director Irene Dominguez, who had previously asked the court to authorize her office to request the contributions, withdrew that request during Tuesday's meeting of the court.

"After looking more closely at the numbers, as well as the financial situations of the clients we serve, I believe it would not be in anyone's best interest to request contributions," said Dominguez. "It goes to say that if they could afford to contribute back to the agency, they wouldn't need our help in the first place."

Commissioners agreed with Dominguez's determination after looking over the numbers and income of the agency's various clients.

"Welfare reform has really played a large role in this shift," said Dominguez. "The new requirements that have been placed on those who are physically and mentally capable of working have caused a serious drop in our overall case load. The people who are eligible for our services really are the poorest of the poor."

Dominguez presented the commissioners with a list of her clients for the 1997-98 fiscal year, showing how many of those in the program have any income at all.

"Only four of the people who are currently receiving aid from our offices have any income at all," said Dominguez. "The highest paid one of these makes right at $452 each month. That isn't enough to live on, much less make a contribution to the system."

Dominguez said that although the request seemed reasonable when she made it, she felt it would be a lost point with the numbers in place.

Anderson guilty plea brings five years in the state prison

By T.E. JENKINS
Staff Writer

Colorado City resident Randall Lee Anderson pleaded guilty to charges of intoxicated assault with a vehicle Tuesday morning, and awaits transport to a Texas Department of Criminal Justice facility to begin his prescribed five year sentence.

Howard County District Attorney's office accepted the five year plea bargain from Anderson in connection with the April 23 car crash near the intersection of Eighth and Gregg St. that damaged four vehicles and sent two people to Scenic Mountain Medical Center.

Wilkerson said he believes the sentence fits the crime, and is satisfied with the proceedings.

"Anderson plead guilty to charges of intoxicated assault, and received a five year sentence in a TDCJ facility," said Wilkerson. "At least one of his victims in the crash was present for the hearing, and she was able to observe the agreement."

According to witnesses and police reports, Anderson careened across the turning lane on April 23 while traveling south on Gregg St. in a 1986 model pickup. Eyewitnesses report he hit a car at the corner of Fourth and Gregg before causing the crash four blocks later.

Almost a month lapse took place between the accident and Anderson's arrest, as the Big Spring Police Department awaited confirmation of the blood alcohol tests administered

Reception planned Thursday to honor long-time educator

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

A reception honoring Helen Gladden, who has dedicated 38 years to educating children, is planned from 3 until 4:30 p.m. Thursday in the Big Spring High School library.

"My 35 years with Big Spring ISD has been a joy, a pure joy. We should never change our focus, but keep our eyes on the student. When we know what's best for the student and channel our energies and keep our goals on students K-12, that makes for an effective school district," Gladden said.

This reception celebrates Gladden's retirement as curriculum director of the Big Spring Independent School District, and is open to the public, former students and coworkers.

Gladden started teaching in Louisiana and came to BSISD in 1960 as a third grade teacher. She taught at College Heights and Cedar Crest ele-mentaries, and became an administrator in 1974, she said.

"I find curriculum fascinating and I love curriculum. Curriculum is academic instruction, and I believe academic instruction is the most important thing we do. If academic instruction is sound, then the student achieves," she said.

Gladden's duties as curriculum director have been to provide the district with the necessary materials to implement several different areas of instruction.

These areas include a gifted and talented program that was recognized statewide, as well as resource course work and dyslexia programs, which also received state recognition.

She is quick to point out that none of her work has been accomplished singlehanded. She credits her secretary Terri Martin, along with her administrators, coworkers, teachers and paraprofessionals with helping make her career a personal success.

"I want to thank the Lord for His blessings to me and for the opportunity to serve, and then my strong Christian parents who always set the example, and my husband" Gladden said.

She modestly declines listing her achievements, but said one honor she cherishes is the lifetime Parents and Teachers Association membership. "Anything we've accomplished we've done together. Some of the state mandates would require that we have curriculum in place practically overnight, and I have called teachers and asked for their help. They have written curriculum at night, which was not paid and had no funds. Big Spring is so fortunate to have the caliber of teachers we have."

"I wish more people in Big Spring realized the high percentage of high moral Christian persons we have in Big Spring schools. I wish they would

Much larger force an option on Iraq, officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon planners have drafted orders that could put tens of thousands of U.S. ground troops, a hundred more warplanes and additional ships into the Persian Gulf area should President Clinton order sustained attacks against Iraq, officials said.

Defense Secretary William Cohen has not yet signed the deployment orders, which, if approved, lay out a "fairly steady" flow of forces into the region, the official said Tuesday.

And Clinton has not decided how he will respond to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's defiance of U.N. weapons inspections.

"A decision has not been made as to the use of force," Gen. Hugh Shelton, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said this morning on NBC's "Today." "I think Saddam clearly understands, as we have said publicly, that all options are on the table."

Saddam's defiance of the United Nations "poses a threat to an area that is a vital national interest to the United States, and... he poses a threat not only to his neighbors but to the 20,000 men and women of the United States that serve in that region," Shelton said.

One military option is a short-notice attack that would not require a big new U.S. buildup in the Gulf, U.S. officials say. Hundreds of cruise missiles already are in the region for just such a strike.

Against that backdrop, 11 buses and other vehicles carrying more than 100 U.N. arms inspectors and other workers pulled out of Baghdad today, headed for Jordan.

Eric Falt, spokesman for U.N. humanitarian programs in Iraq, told reporters in Baghdad that the move was "precautionary" and taken "solely with the safety of U.N. staff in mind."

At present, there are 23,500 U.S. troops in the Gulf region. The new orders could double that number, returning the Gulf force to the size it was in February during the most recent standoff over weapons inspections.

There also are 23 ships and 173 aircraft in the area. Eight Navy ships are loaded with long-range Tomahawk cruise missiles, believed to be a top choice for hitting potential Iraqi targets, should a strike be ordered.

Clinton met Tuesday on Iraq with his national security team, and should he opt for additional forces, the ground troops would be flown into Kuwait to defend that country against a potential threat from Iraqi army units. There are some 2,000 Army soldiers there on an exercise.

TEXAS BRIEFS

Conservative Baptists hold their first, separate convention

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Baptist conventions were under way today after a group of conservative Southern Baptists broke away from the more moderate Baptist General Convention of Texas.

The breakaway group opposes a more tolerant view of homosexuality and abortion. They severed ties with the organization Tuesday and opened their own convention at Woodforest Baptist Church.

The group, called the Southern Baptists of Texas, included about 700 people, including 499 delegates.

"I think we've got to get away from this thing of getting away from God's word," said Miles Seaborn, president of the group.

Tension between the conservatives and moderates has been growing for nearly two decades. Conservatives claim the convention's stands against abortion and homosexuality were not strong enough.

The larger group approved a new representation formula on Monday that further angered conservatives.

The plan links the number of future convention delegates, or messengers, to church membership and contributions to state causes. Previously the number was based solely on membership.

Churches get at least two messengers whether or not they contribute, but additional delegates will depend on the amount of money a church gives.

Police dive team will scour Martin Lake for missing boy

AMARILLO (AP) — A police dive team will scour the murky bottom of a small lake for a boy missing since he rode away from home on his bicycle more than two weeks ago.

Police Chief Jerry Neal, desperate for clues in the Oct. 26 disappearance of Dorian Thomas, decided Tuesday to allow the department's diving team search the bottom of Martin Road Lake.

"I made that decision based on some of the information we've heard about him spending time around there, and you just never know," Neal said.

Dorian's family said the boy often played at the lake while riding his bike in the area. The Bivins Elementary School student was reported missing more than 24 hours after he vanished near his apartment.

Prominent criminal defense attorney killed in his home

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A prominent criminal defense lawyer was shot to death as he slept in his home in northwestern Bexar County, police say.

Police said Leslie Vaughn, 44, was shot in the back of the head about 1:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Sheriff's Detective Al Damiani said Vaughn was found in his bed.

"It wouldn't surprise me if he didn't even awaken when this happened," the detective said. No arrests had been made in the case late Tuesday.

Officers questioned Vaughn's two sons, ages 16 and 12, who were at home during the attack. The youngest boy said he slept through the incident, but the older son, Brian, said he heard a "loud pop" and ran to his father's bedroom.

Vaughn's wife, a registered nurse at Methodist Hospital, was "in no condition to talk," Brian Vaughn said.

FEMA proposes disaster readiness, insurance limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Americans insist on building their homes in disaster-prone areas, they will have to begin accepting the consequences, the director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency says.

James Lee Witt recommended on Tuesday that federally subsidized flood insurance be limited and, in some cases, eliminated.

Flood insurance should no longer be provided to homeowners who have filed two or more claims that total more than the value of their home and who refuse to either elevate the home or accept a buyout, Witt told a National Press Club audience.

In addition, he said, the agency should charge people who live in high-risk areas the fair market rates for flood insurance, instead of the lower subsidized prices currently available.

"People need to accept the responsibility and the consequences of their choice to live in high-risk areas," Witt said during a discussion of Project Impact, the agency's program to encourage local communities to take disaster prevention measures.

"We know there will always be another disaster," he said. "Hurricanes, tornadoes, droughts, earthquakes, fires and floods won't stop coming."

"The truth is, we see too many families suffering from damages that could have been prevented. ... We mourn the lives that could have been saved and despair at the devastation of communities that could have been protected."

Witt's comments came just a few days after a team of Princeton University researchers reported that the costs of natural catastrophes affecting America have skyrocketed even though the number of disasters hasn't increased significantly. Their report did not include this year's sharp increase in hurricanes.

The problem: People and their wealth are increasingly concentrated in vulnerable areas and government policies like subsidized flood insurance seem to make the problem worse.

Richard Allen, who took part in the study published in Eos, a weekly geophysics journal of the American Geophysical Union, said not only is the population migrating to areas of natural hazard, but it's the wealthiest who are moving there.

Largest increases in population and tax revenue — an indication of wealth — have been occurring in states most affected by the costs of hurricanes — Florida, Maryland, North Carolina and Texas — and earthquakes — California and Washington — researchers note.

Veterans' wall of names moves to the World Wide Web

WASHINGTON (AP) — The names of the more than 58,000 Americans who died in the Vietnam War are being posted at their own Web site, an electronic memorial that includes the spoken memories of families and friends.

The Web site, its arrival timed to coincide with Veterans Day, is directly inspired by the names engraved on the polished black-granite Vietnam memorial wall here, which attracts 2.5 million visitors a year.

"For 15 years, people have come to the Vietnam Wall to run their hands across the names and remember those who never came home," Vice President Al Gore said Tuesday.

"Now, anybody who can run their hands across a computer keyboard will be able to make contact with those names and learn that they belong to brothers and sons, husbands and wives, mothers and daughters."

The vice president, a Vietnam veteran himself, addressed a group of veterans in the Roosevelt Room of the White House.

The new Web site, a joint project of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund and WinStar Communications Inc., will become available in two stages.

Beginning now, users can call up the Web site, click onto a deceased veteran's name and in many cases hear audio remembrances from family members or friends.

In January, Web site visitors will be able to experience a "virtual wall," a recreation of the look of the Vietnam Memorial wall at its location near the national mall. The audio memories will be preserved and expanded.

"The Web site is expected to become the largest single depository of oral history about individual Vietnam veterans," WinStar said in a statement.

Kiosks will be set up as part of the smaller, traveling Vietnam Wall for people to record their memories about the war itself and those who died there. The traveling wall is to be displayed in about 30 U.S. cities over the next year.

The Web site is part of an education program aimed at young people, especially those born after the war ended. The young Americans Vietnam War Era Studies Projects will supply class material about the war, its politics and those who served to all 25,700 U.S. high schools.

Stanley Karnow, who has written extensively about the war, said the project will help answer the questions, "How did we get involved in Vietnam? What went wrong? What did we learn?"

Veterans...

We salute you because you served in uniform at home and abroad. Many of you fought on foreign shores in Desert Storm, Panama, Grenada, Lebanon, Bosnia, Vietnam, Korea or in World Wars I and II.

We salute you because you unselfishly answered your country's call to make certain that world freedom and the American way of life would remain strong.

We salute you because even in peacetime you continue to serve your country - to fill a lifelong need to serve which you share with veterans everywhere. Many of you continue to serve through service to your community as members of The American Legion.

We must remember your sacrifices today and everyday.

Entertaining with a budget

HOUSTON (AP) — Parties are more casual and informal than they used to be, but they still require planning. If hiring a caterer is not an option, take some tips from expert party-givers. Make lists, budget your time and have fun.

The best advice we've heard in years came from chef, restaurateur and cookbook author Hugh Carpenter: Simplify. Focus on enjoying your friends. Don't obsess about the house or the food.

Several years ago, Carpenter and his wife, food photographer Teri Sandison, downsized their routine for entertaining. They give relaxed Saturday or Sunday morning breakfasts, brunches or early (5 p.m.) dinner parties. They request that guests bring a prepared dish — appetizer, salad, bread or dessert — to supplement the entree. Guests can make something at home or pick up a specialty item at a deli or supermarket; it should require no more than a brief reheating.

If you are preparing the food, shop early, prepare as much as possible the day before and make it easy on yourself any way you can. Strive for what Martha Gill calls "casual elegance" in her new book, "Modern Parties."

You'll know you've succeeded if you've had as good a time as your guests and you feel encouraged to throw another party.

Sources:
"Modern Parties" by Martha Gill (Longstreet, $18.95).
"Simplify Entertaining" by Mary Corpening Barber and Sara Corpening (Reader's Digest, $17.95). Good advice and lists to aid scheduling, cooking and decorating. The authors are identical twins and co-owners of a San Francisco catering company.

Cranberry Fizz
From "Keeping Entertaining Simple" by Martha Storey (Storey Books, $9.95).

1 quart each: cranberry juice, orange juice and club soda, chilled

1-1/2 cups vodka (optional)
Combine juices and vodka in a serving bowl; serve.

Variation: Use a combination of pineapple juice and orange juice, or try a mixture of grapefruit juice and orange juice. Add fresh cranberries and orange slices to water and freeze in a tube cake pan to make an ice ring; float the ice ring in the punch bowl to keep punch cold. Makes 16 servings.

Chutney Cheese Pate

From Chronicle files. A past winner of the weekly Favorite Recipe contest.

2 (3-ounce) packages cream cheese, softened

1 cup (4 ounces) shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
4 teaspoons dry cocktail sherry

1/2 teaspoon curry powder
1/4 teaspoon salt (optional)

1 (8-ounce) jar mango chutney, finely chopped

1 or 2 green onions with tops, finely chopped

Sesame or wheat crackers
Beat cream cheese with Cheddar, sherry, curry powder and salt. (If using food processor, shred Cheddar first before combining with other ingredients.) Spread mixture on serving platter, shaping a layer about 1/2 inch thick. Chill until firm. At serving time, spread chutney over top and sprinkle with chopped green onion. Spread on crackers.

Researchers try treating hypertension with more than drugs

BALTIMORE (AP) — A little compassion may go a long way in treating hypertension.

Three hundred black men from a blighted area surrounding Johns Hopkins Hospital were given medication for their high blood pressure, along with support from outreach workers, who offered practical help, inquired about their welfare and generally became friends and helpers.

During a two-year study, about half the men got their blood pressure under control and their emergency room visits dropped by 75 percent, according to The (Baltimore) Sun.

Since many blood pressure patients may not stay on medication for long, workers following up on the men is critical to reducing rates, said Dr. Wallace Johnson Jr., an assistant clinical professor at medicine at the University of Maryland School of Medicine.

The idea of sending outreach workers into the community isn't new, but experts say the concept has rarely been tried in a population of hypertensive black men ranging from age 18 to 54.

It's important: Although women should get an initial mammogram by age 40, it's especially crucial for older women to have regular screenings because the risk of developing breast cancer increases with age. Women ages 40 or above should have annual screenings, because early detection is a key factor in successful treatment.

Medicare will pay for an annual mammogram for eligible women.
