Closed for repairs: City to shut down Moss Lake over winter months

By BILL MCCLELLAN
News Editor

Moss Creek Lake will be closed to the public for four to five months — time enough, officials say, to make some key improvements to the facility. "We regret this has been a bit of a controversy for you," Big Spring Assistant Manager Emma Bogard told the city council Tuesday. "But our reason for wanting to close the lake during those months is so we can upgrade it. We want to see it used and enjoyed by the public. But we don't feel like it is in the state right now where we can promote it." Bogard outlined some projects she hopes can be accomplished in the months the lake is closed. Those include:

- construction of a dump station,
- installing playground equipment near the swimming area,
- bringing in sand to make a beach at the swimming area,
- repairing docks, bathrooms and pavilions,
- planting trees,
- looking into getting the lake restocked with fish,
- sealcoating the road.

To help fund those improvements, Bogard had recommended closing the lake from November through March, saving some $11,000. She said it might be possible to find a source for another $10,000, giving the city $20,000 or so to use to fund the upgrades. "This is probably what we've got to do," said Councilman Chuck Cawthon. Closing the lake had its opponents, including Gail Earls, wife of lake overseer Floyd Earls, who stands to lose about $10,000 in income from the closure. "I was on the council when we closed Moss Lake the last time and the vandalism was unreal," she told the council. "When something is not maintained, you are going to have vandalism. In fact, we have vandalism even when we are living out there." Officials have said the couple can continue to live in the city-owned house at the lake, but would have to pay their own utilities. Earls said the lake is in the best condition it has ever been in because people who frequent

State hospital set for annual parade

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

The Halloween weekend kicks off Thursday with an annual Big Spring State Hospital parade that will feature decorated floats, people clad in costume and even a Chinese dragon.

"The patients and staff really look forward to this all year long. It's one of those fun days for everyone. We encourage everyone to dress up in their Halloween costume and come watch the parade," said Shane Forrest, BSSH therapy program supervisor and an organizer of the parade.

The parade begins at 10 a.m., and will feature the king and queen of the event, chosen through nominations from each unit at the hospital. A costume judging contest begins at 9:30 a.m.

"By attending the parade the public can show their support for Big Spring State Hospital and the patients served here. We certainly invite the community as well as anyone interested in volunteering to assist with this event or future patient activities," Forrest said.

And many community organizations will participate in the event, he said.

Marching band, who will travel to Mesquite to compete for the top state marching band on Monday, are expected to join the parade.

Also the Howard College cheerleaders, rodeo clown Quail Dobbs, Big Spring Fire Department, Suez Shriners, bagpipe player Flynn Long and country and western singer Jody Nix are also expected to participate.

The parade begins near the Activities Therapy Building, then moves north on Midland

City council rejects passing water rate increase to customers

By BILL MCCLELLAN
News Editor

City of Big Spring water customers won't be hit with an anticipated water rate hike — that's because the proposal was defeated in a 4-3 vote Tuesday night by city council members.

The council also approved steps toward demolition of the Permian Building, made one board appointment and gave consent to a city holiday schedule for the next couple of months.

With no comment, Councilman Stephanie Horton quickly made a motion not to approve a water rate increase from $1.95 to $1.99 per thousand gallons for city water users. Oscar Garcia immediately seconded.

The only discussion on the matter, after City Manager Gary Fuqua had outlined the proposal, was how much the hike would impact customers.

"Probably 25 to 30 cents a month for the average household," he told the council.

Voting against the increase were Horton, Garcia, Greg Biddison and Joann Smoot. Voting for the increase were Chuck Cawthon, Tommy Tune and Mayor Tim Blackshear.

Earlier, Fuqua had explained that the increase had come about because the Colorado River Municipal Water District was increasing its rate to the city, and because chemicals to treat the water were going to cost more than anticipated.

The water district increased the fee from 26.9 cents per thousand gallons to 33.19 cents. According to the city calculations based on the new rates and past water usage, the city will have to pay $45,000 more than it did in 1998-99.

Officials had estimated a 1-cent increase would generate $15,400 and a 4-cent increase would generate approximately $61,600.

Kenny Scott, water and wastewater treatment superintendent, had also informed the council that the city is expecting some $81,000 in increased costs for treatment chemicals at the water treatment plant. The calculations reflect high turbidity levels from Lake Thomas water, he said. "We didn't pass all those costs on, but we felt like we couldn't keep subsidizing it anymore," said Fuqua.

After the meeting, Todd Darden, director of public works, said the city would have to absorb the cost.

"I am not sure where it will come from, but the city manager and I will sit down and figure out what projects we can cut back," he said.

In a move already made by Howard County commissioners and soon to be addressed by Big Spring ISD and Howard College trustees, councilmembers approved resolutions that paved the way for demolition of the Permian Building.

Each of the entities will be taking up the measures, which call for the approval of:

- the acceptance of a deed from owner Al Moore in lieu of a tax foreclosure,
- conveyance of the property by Big Spring ISD (as the entity owed the most taxes) to the City of Big Spring,
- demolition of the property.

Chamber membership drive Thursday

Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce members and volunteers will take to the streets Thursday as a membership drive gets underway.

"Our people, board members and those involved with chamber will contact two or three prospective chamber members to explain the benefits of joining the chamber of commerce," said executive vice president Terri Newton.

The event will begin about 11:30 a.m. at the chamber office with a luncheon and orientation for members and volunteers. About 12:30 p.m. volunteers, board members and officers, and staff members will hit the streets, contacting business owners about chamber of commerce membership.

"There are a lot of benefits to joining the chamber of commerce, the most obvious being community support. Being a member of the chamber of commerce is an investment in the community and supports the efforts of the community as a whole," Newton said.

The chamber of commerce organizes many different activities each year for the community, and for chamber members. Just a few of those activities that receive a large amount of community participation are Leadership Big Spring, Business After Hours and the annual Business Showcase.

"We also welcome newcomers to the area, as well as tourists. And we have a web site with a

Salvation Army extends deadline application for Angel Tree participants

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

Salvation Army Angel Tree application deadlines have been extended until Nov. 10, to allow families an opportunity to seek assistance for the holidays.

"We have people coming in every day, and that continues throughout the season. We want to give everyone who qualifies a chance to apply for the program," said Danelle Castillo, Salvation Army social services director.

Thus far the corps has received 170 applications, representing nearly 400 children and 48 elderly in the community whose Christmas gifts will depend on the program.

"We really only started one day earlier this year, but with the layoffs the community has experienced recently, we need to stay on our toes to assist those families who need help during the holidays," she said.

The Salvation Army actually has three separate holiday efforts under the umbrella of the Christmas Cheer program, she said.

"We have Toys For Tots, which provides toys for children, and the Salvation Army Angel Tree program, which allows children to be "adopted" by families and organizations within the community. The Christmas Cheer program itself is a food program for the holidays, but all these come under the heading of Christmas Cheer, because that's what we're trying to do," Castillo said.

Many of the families who have applied and been accepted for the program so far are families who suffered economic hardship due to layoffs, she said.

"At least 50 of these applica-

The festival is a fundraising activity for the hospital, and will have food booths of Frito pie, hot dogs and drinks. Games such as ring toss and a cake walk will be available for a small donation.

A karaoke machine will also be offered for anyone who wishes to sing.

"Throughout the year, the hospital has numerous social interaction events. It's definitely fun therapy for all those involved, and these activities provide a venue for the patients to practice some of the skill they acquire through various rehabilitation programming," Forrest said.

Community relations director Billie Russworm encouraged community support of the event. Russworm is also an organizer of the event.

"It shows the support for the Big Spring State Hospital, and that the community cares about the patients," Russworm said.

Indeed, business referrals are one of the greatest benefits a company receives for their chamber membership, she said.

Business contacts and networking efforts are rewards of membership as well as attending one of the chamber-sponsored activities, Newton said.

Volunteers Thursday will come from many branches of the business community, she said. Leadership Big Spring classmates, as well as city and Howard College employees will join with chamber members as they travel around town and knock on doors.

Currently the chamber has about 420 members, and Newton says she would like to see that grow to 500 members.

"We do a lot in the community and we really need the community's support," she said.

Each year the Salvation Army provides needy children with Christmas presents, dubbed the Salvation Army Angel Tree program. The name of a child accepted for the program appears on a card that is placed on a Christmas tree.

Each card contains the child's first name, their age and clothing and shoe sizes, as well as three items they have asked for Christmas. These trees with the cards as ornaments are then placed in retail and public locations throughout the city. "We've had a good referral for this year, and we'll have a couple of new spots where the trees will be available, because companies have called me and requested to have an angel tree," Castillo said.

All Salvation Army Angel Tree applicants must furnish proof of income, including food stamps, housing assistance, Social Security or temporary assistance for needy families.

Also, applicants must provide proof of all expenses such as rent, all utilities and car payments.

Social Security cards must be provided for all member of the household, and the applicant must have a photo identification.

Castillo also suggests that an applicant provide sizes of clothes and shoes for each child younger than 12, and a list of three items the child wants for Christmas.

"A lot of families in the community are looking at a dark Christmas, and if ever there was a Christmas where we need a generous community, I hope this year the community will dig deep in their pockets and search their souls for the spirit of giving," she said.

Funding for the project is through the combined efforts of the city, Moore Development for Big Spring, Cornell Corrections and Big Spring Main Street.

Andi Andrews-York was named to fill one of two seats on the Animal Control Board. A second seat on that board remains unfilled, pending nomination of an interested citizen. The same situation exists on an appointment to the Howard County Appraisal Review Board. Those two seats will likely come up again at the next council meeting.

Council members approved a holiday schedule as outlined by city staff. As in the past few years, the council will meet one month for the next two months. Those dates are set for Nov. 9 and Dec. 14.

Fuqua noted that Nov. 11, Veterans Day, is a city holiday. He said the city would take Nov. 25-26 for Thanksgiving, and Dec. 24 and 27 for Christmas. He also said the city would have a Y2K New Year's Eve party.

"I'm willing to look for grant money. That lake is a potential gold mine for Big Spring," she told the council.

"You are making your employee take the brunt of saving the city some money. That's rash. That's harsh," she added later.

Councilman Greg Biddison also spoke out against closing the lake.

"We don't close any of our other facilities while we are working on them. I think we can do this without closing the lake," he said.

Bob Harris, who resides between Midland and Odessa, asked the board not to close the lake.

"I've found the lake to be wonderful. I just hate to see it close and see people do without the resource. If you have to close it, please consider doing it for a shorter period of time, two, maybe three months," Harris said.

Councilman Joann Smoot wanted assurance that the closing was for the 1999-2000 only, and not for future years. Bogard assured her that was the case. Smoot also insisted that the city formulate a plan for the upgrades.

"We don't want to reopen in the spring and have several half-completed projects," she noted.

Biddison was the lone councilman to vote against the proposal. Smoot, Cawthon, Tommy Tune, Oscar Garcia, Stephanie Horton and Mayor Tim Blackshear voted in favor of the closing.

"I guess now I'll have to look into going to Robert Lee or Lake Thomas," said a dejected Harris after the meeting.

Warm winter seen for South, stormy in Northwest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans across the Southern tier of the nation can anticipate a milder than usual winter, but stormy weather is the outlook for the Northwest and Great Lakes states.

The National Weather Service says the Pacific Ocean phenomenon called La Nina will affect the nation's weather by changing the strength and pattern of the Pacific jet stream over North America.

The result will "give us a warm and dry winter in the southern half of the nation but more snow and rain in the Pacific Northwest and Great Lakes," D. James Baker, head of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said Tuesday as the agency issued its winter forecast.

"We expect considerable month-to-month variation in temperature, rainfall and storminess in the Central, Northern and Eastern states, which means days of warmer than normal temperatures followed by bouts of bitter cold," he added. La Nina is a periodic cooling of a large area of the tropical Pacific Ocean. It can alternate with an ocean warming called El Nino.

"Over the past decade we have improved the forecasting of La Nina and El Nino so that we can now predict these events and their expected climatic impacts on different regions with 70 to 80 percent accuracy a year before they occur," said John J. Kelly, director of the Weather Service.

The annual Weather Service forecast came a day after NASA researchers in Pasadena, Calif., issued their own similar forecast calling for a wet winter across the Northwest and a dry one in the Southwest.

The regional winter forecasts from the National Weather Service were:

—Alaska: Colder and drier than normal.

—Hawaii: Colder and wetter than normal.

—Pacific Northwest: Above normal precipitation and increased storminess. Near normal temperatures. Above normal snowfall.

—California: Below normal temperatures near the coast. Above normal precipitation in the north, below normal in the south.

—Southwest: Above normal temperatures, below normal precipitation. Below normal snowfall in eastern New Mexico.

—Northern Plains: Near normal temperatures and above normal precipitation. Significant arctic outbreaks likely.

—Rocky Mountain region: Near to above normal temperatures. Above normal precipitation in the north, below normal in the south.

—Midwest: Near to above normal temperatures moving from north to south, above normal precipitation entire region. Above normal snowfall in upper Midwest.

—New England: Warmer than normal in southern New England; jet stream makes prediction uncertain in northern New England.

—Southern Tier: Warmer and drier than normal, with dryness most likely in New Mexico, south and west Texas and Florida. Below normal snowfall in northern Texas and central Oklahoma.

—Mid-Atlantic: Milder than normal with near normal precipitation east of the Appalachians.

—Ohio and Tennessee River Valleys: Warmer and wetter than normal. Increased number of heavy precipitation events and an increased risk of severe winter weather. Above normal snowfall.

—Great Lakes and Northeast: High degree of uncertainty. Considerable variability from week to week with above normal temperatures in southern areas and closer to normal in the north.

Above normal snowfall in northern Great Lakes. Near normal precipitation south and east of the Appalachians, above normal elsewhere.

Less powerful air bags pose less risk of injury officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most newer vehicles have less powerful air bags than autos several years old and that is resulting in fewer passenger deaths and serious injuries from the devices, according to a federal safety agency's report.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration report provides details for the first time on how the design of air bags has changed during the 1990s among eight top automakers that control more than 90 percent of the vehicle market.

Redesigned air bags, which were tested by the agency, pose less risk of death or serious injury to passengers, says the report, which was released Tuesday. And the agency said real-world crash data also confirm the design changes are leading to fewer deaths from the safety devices, particularly among adults.

"It is clear that air bags in recent model year 1998 and 1999 vehicles are less aggressive than the pre-model year 1998 air bags," the agency concludes.

Starting with the 1998 model year, many automakers said they were installing car air bags with at least 20 percent less force.

The change was in response to a public outcry over deaths in low-speed crashes blamed on air bags.

Automakers welcomed the report. "This is showing depowered air bags have a positive effect on safety," said Gloria Bergquist of the Alliance of Automobile Manufacturers.

Among the design changes outlined by the safety agency, about half of vehicles from model years 1998 and 1999 have driver and passenger air bags with a lower inflation force. The speed of inflation decreased about 22 percent on average for driver air bags and 14 percent for passenger air bags for the 1998 and 1999 models.

The manufacturers reviewed were General Motors, Ford, DaimlerChrysler, Honda, Toyota, Nissan, Volkswagen and Volvo.

The agency did not single out manufacturers by name, claiming much of the data submitted by companies were confidential and proprietary. Some safety groups objected to that.

"The public has a right to know which air bags are better so consumers can pick the better vehicles," said Clarence Ditlow of the Center for Auto Safety, one of several consumer groups suing the agency for more detailed information.

Since 1990, air bags have been blamed for 146 deaths, mostly among unrestrained or improperly restrained children and shorter women, according to agency data.

But there have been few air bag deaths in vehicles from the 1998 and 1999 model years, the report said.

There was little change in the driver air bag fatality rate between model years 1992 and 1997. But officials have yet to attribute a single driver death to air bags in model 1999 vehicles and there was a significant reduction in the driver fatality rate in 1998 vehicles.

GOP includes lawmakers' pay in across-the-board cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican leaders are bowing to pressure and including congressional salaries in their proposed across-the-board budget cuts. But they are still hunting the votes they need to push the plan through Congress.

GOP leaders decided Tuesday to include lawmakers' pay in the reductions after rank-and-file Republicans, President Clinton and radio talk-show hosts chided them for not doing so. They now want agencies' budgets cut 1 percent, savings they say can come from paring federal waste.

"Republican members of Congress believe that the government can find a penny on the dollar in waste, fraud and abuse" to avoid spending Social Security surpluses, said House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill. "They also believe that they can set an example by shaving back their own pay by the same percentage."

Lawmakers decided last summer to boost their pay next January by 3.4 percent to $141,300, a $4,600 raise. With the 1 percent reduction, their salary would rise to $139,900.

It is unclear, however, whether legislators' salaries will ever be affected. President Clinton has promised to reject the GOP's across-the-board spending reduction, arguing it would be too damaging to defense, education and other programs.

"The president will veto the across-the-board cut they've proposed," White House chief of staff John Podesta told reporters.

Applying the reduction to lawmakers' pay would save less than $1 million, a tiny fraction of the billions of dollars in dispute between Clinton and Congress in their budget fight.

But with Republicans arguing that federal agencies could afford to trim waste from their budgets, their initial exclusion of lawmakers' pay had caused them a public relations headache.

Republicans unmoved by White House revival of Social Security plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican leaders are making clear that President Clinton's Social Security legislation is going nowhere on Capitol Hill.

"This is not a realistic proposal," Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said Tuesday. "I've heard this proposal described as the Godzilla of all shell games."

"This plan won't save Social Security, it denies Americans the opportunity for personal accounts, and it places a huge burden on the backs of future generations," said House Ways and Means Committee chairman Bill Archer, R-Texas.

The scaled-down proposal from Clinton this week formalizes a Social Security rescue plan he first outlined in his State of the Union Address.

It would earmark for baby boomers' retirement benefits any government savings from using Social Security surpluses to pay off the national debt.

The official version Clinton delivered to Congress on Tuesday dropped a particularly controversial provision that would also have let the government invest some of the retirement program's cash reserves in the stock market.

However, Republican leaders, who had previously rejected Clinton's plan and declared discussion of it dead for the year, were not swayed by that change.

Both political parties have pledged this year not to spend Social Security surpluses as in the past, but to use the money instead to pay down the national debt. That would allow the government to save billions it would otherwise have to pay in interest.

Clinton's plan would use those savings, which would presumably accrue in the form of income tax surpluses, to help pay Social Security benefits after baby boomers retire.

Republicans, who want to see tax cuts in coming years, have objected to the fact that Clinton's plan would give Social Security, which has traditionally been financed with a separate payroll tax, a claim on other tax revenues.

Chamber needs you to join the Big Spring team

On Thursday, Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce will be holding a membership drive and if you have a business in the city and are not yet a member of this worthwhile organization, we hope you'll give a listen. Nowhere can you get so much assistance for such a small fee.

Consider, chambers of commerce are one of the first places visitors and newcomers go to find out about a community. Libraries and museums carry historical information about an area, but the chamber is the source of current and upcoming events and can provide information on restaurants, shopping, housing, recreational activities and more.

The chamber is the heartbeat of the city, maintaining an awareness of legislative issues, promoting tourism and economic development, and hosting get-togethers and seminars. It works hand in hand with the city, county, schools and economic groups to promote every aspect of the community — business, recreation, education, the arts, culture, its churches and charitable organizations.

As a chamber member, you can receive referrals to your business, participate in seminars and interact with other business leaders through the organization's many programs.

The chamber sends out many messages, but none is voiced more strenuously than Shop Big Spring. The chamber and its employees are dedicated to promoting our city, our businesses, and our people. They work for you.

The chamber isn't just made up of business owners, of course. Many organizations and individuals are members also. They recognize the importance of teamwork, of pulling together with one common goal — promoting what we have to offer.

So if someone comes calling at your business and says, "Hi, we're from Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce," take the time to hear them out. And if you aren't contacted, consider dropping by the chamber yourself and finding out what being a part of the Big Spring team is all about. You'll be glad you did.

YOUR VIEWS

TO THE EDITOR:

Annette Hazelett (my significant other) was passing through town from Seattle, Wash., in route to Kerrville, when her car croaked in my driveway. I called Bob Brock Ford, our local Ford dealership, at 8:30 p.m. last night to see about a wrecker. I was lucky enough to catch Mr. Brock at the office. He said that if I would wait until 7 a.m. this morning, he would not charge to send a wrecker out. I drove over to Bob Brock Ford at 6:58 this morning and the service manager was waiting for me. He already knew what the specific problem(s) were, sent the wrecker out, and the car has been towed to the dealership.

Mr. Brock said that the service department would put Annette's car at the front of the line in order to get her back on the road. It is my understanding that they will start working on the car as soon as it arrives with the wrecker.

My "short list" of one problem turned into three as I talked to the service manager.

I told him that I didn't mean to spring extra problems on him, but that Annette had made me aware of them after she and I talked later last night. The service manager's reaction was very professional and matter of fact. He said, "We'll take care of it and get Annette back on the road."

I cannot possibly say enough kind words about my Ford dealer.

Although he helps set the community standards in Big Spring for professionalism and community involvement, his philosophy is fairly typical for what we call the Permian Basin (Big Spring, Midland, Odessa) in West Texas.

These are good, decent, hard-working people out here who come by their money honestly. Come join our community. I originally came here for two years. I now own my own farm just outside town and will spend the rest of my life here. This is truly the good life and these are wonderful people.

We're turning babies into commodities

Want a baby? Worried it might have your receding chin or your spouse's big nose, or worse, both? Don't be. Beautiful babies are for sale on the Internet, starting this week. Well, actually what's for sale isn't quite a baby yet — it's just the stuff babies are made of. You know, eggs and sperm, but not just any old eggs and sperm. These genetic products come from supermodels, and they're available online at a web site — ronsangels.com — launched this week by fashion photographer Ron Harris.

LINDA CHAVEZ

Bids at the Internet auction site start at from $15,000 to $150,000. You'll still need to find some woman willing to have the baby-making material implanted in her after you've made your purchase. And for the time being, Harris only has supermodel eggs for sale, no sperm (his site promises sperm from male models will soon be available). But hey, why not check out one of the sperm banks specializing in genius donors? Maybe you'll end up with a baby that looks like Cindy Crawford and thinks like Bill Gates.

Then again, you might end up with one that looks like Bill Gates and thinks like Cindy Crawford — no tragedy, certainly, but not quite what you paid a quarter or half a million dollars for.

I don't suppose you can turn the little fella in for another model. Caveat emptor: Buyer beware, this purchase requires lifetime responsibility.

Ron Harris is only the most recent huckster — and one of the more crass — to tap into the fertility market. Dozens of fertility clinics and thousands of women offer "donated" eggs to infertile couples, usually for a fee that can range from a few thousand dollars to $50,000 or more. The procedure, which usually involves risky hormone treatments given to both egg donors and recipients, has become increasingly popular with couples desperate to have a child. But many couples are not content with just any child. If they can't have their own child — or even if they can — why not have the best child, the prettiest, smartest, tallest, most athletic, musically gifted, graceful child imaginable? A designer child, put together from the very best components available.

Babies turned into commodities. Why stop at auctioning off only eggs and sperm? Why not make designer embryos available, too? And why be forced to buy a pig in a poke? Why not wait until delivery before making purchase? Or later yet. If it's intelligence you're after, maybe it would be best to wait until her IQ can be tested. If it's looks you're interested in, maybe you should defer final purchase until you make sure his face actually catches up to his ear size, or that her baby fat melts away during puberty. Perhaps some creative entrepreneur will create a lease/option-to-buy plan whereby prospective parents can try the child out while they're deciding whether to make final purchase.

Unthinkable? Don't bet on it. Who would have imagined even a few years ago that fashion models would be hawking their ova to the highest bidder on computer screens throughout the world?

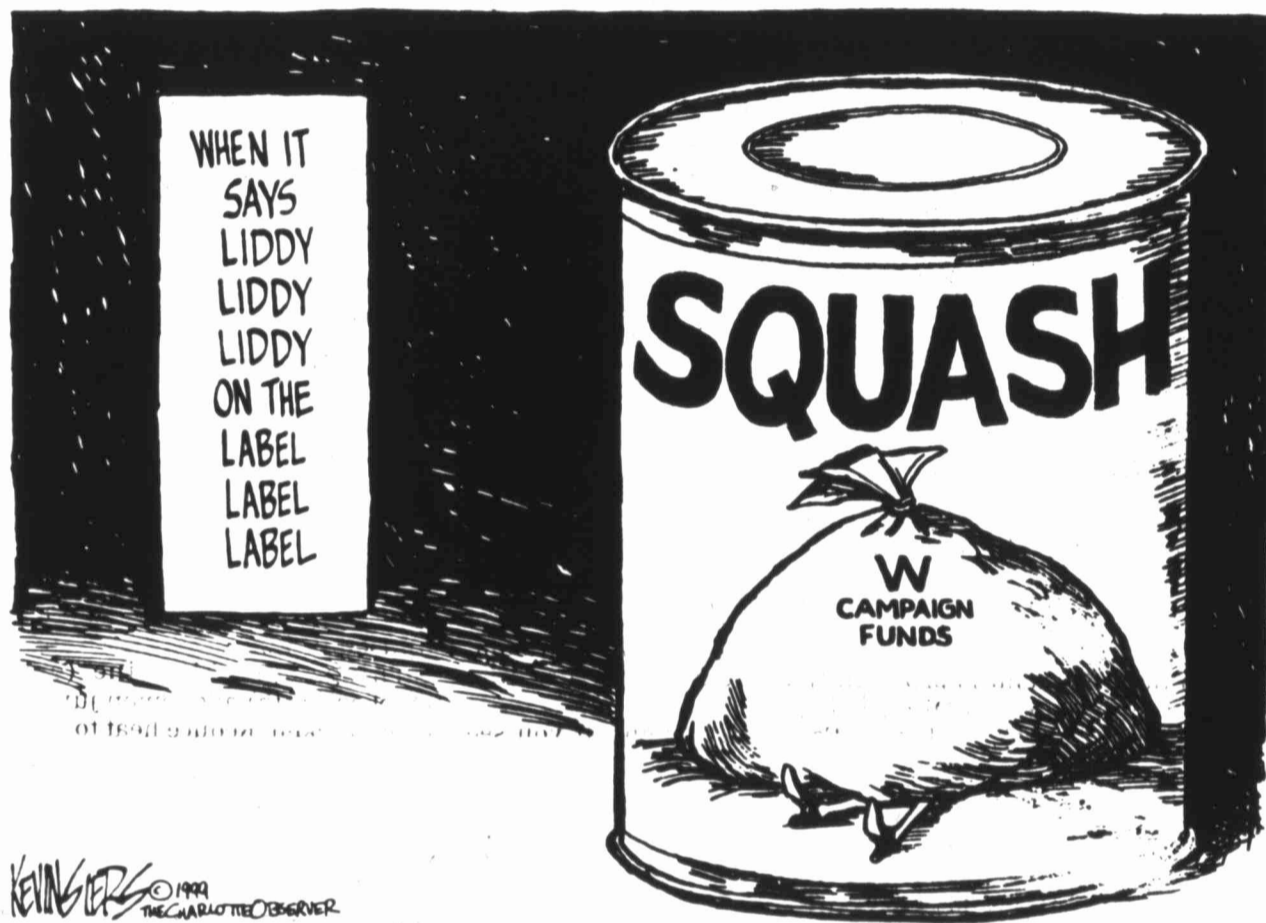

At its most primitive biological level, parenting a child has always been motivated by the desire to pass on one's genes — and thereby, cheat death. But what motivates this new phenomenon is cruder still. There is not even the hint of immortality or any purpose greater than material possession. No longer viewed as a gift of life from God, entrusted to his or her human parents for a brief period only, a child becomes a thing. Valuable as it is beautiful or smart, healthy or strong. Implicitly, less valuable as it is plain or dull, sick or weak.

We have created not a Brave New World, but a vulgar marketplace, where human attributes come with a price tag.

Having a porcupine for a pet

Sue Roberts, a native of England, is married to rancher Ike Roberts of Marathon. Once they acquired a pet porcupine.

"Ike and I were doing a windmill run," says Sue. "Of course he kills lots of porcupines because they take the bark off trees and we don't have too many trees. They're very destructive. So we saw one up in a tree and Ike shot it. When it fell out of the tree he went over to make sure it was dead. You know, he didn't want to leave it wounded. Ike said the porcupine was a female and very pregnant."

Sue said she wanted to see what a baby porcupine looked like, so Ike got out his knife and performed a cesarean operation. And out came what later was to be called Porky.

TUMBLEWEED SMITH

"It was a teeny weeny little thing," says Sue. "I'd been doing some sewing, so I had some thread which I tied around its cord. I asked Ike if I could keep it. Of course he thought the little thing would die before we got back to the ranch house, so he said yes."

Sue put the tiny porcupine in a match box. She says within just a few minutes its quills were sharp. "It was amazing."

Of course Porky lived. Sue fed the little critter on a baby bottle until it got big enough to eat. When Sue called Porky, the porcupine answered with a honk.

Sue gave Porky hugs. "A porcupine's tummy has no stickers. I could pick her up by her front paws and she would get on my shoulder and snuggle into me. She really made a neat pet."

Porky ate unusual things. "She'd sit up like a little monkey and use her hands to eat cornbread, segments of oranges, just about anything," Sue says. "I don't know what porcupines are supposed to eat, but Porky wasn't particular."

Porky got to know Ike and Sue real well. When either one of them walked onto the porch, Porky wouldn't move. But when a stranger approached, Porky turned around and put up her tail.

With age, Porky changed. "She started to get destructive. She'd come in the house. We lived in Ike's grandparents' ranch house which has some lovely antique furniture. Porky started eating on the furniture. So she was banished to the outside."

Then Porky started eating the screen door which opens onto the porch from the outside. She learned how to open the door and walk right in.

Ike and Porky had a tussle. One day, Porky took refuge under the deep freeze. Ike put on welder's gloves and pulled her out. Porky bit through the welding gloves. That was it as far as Ike was concerned. Porky was taken far away from the house and turned loose.

Ike still kills porcupines while making windmill runs with Sue. But before he shoots, Sue calls out "Porky" to make sure it's not her pet.

Dryer sheets in your gym shoes?

Try these outlandish but useful tips for common household products

Have you ever thought of everyday products you use in your home could be valuable for other things besides their original use?

Let me give you an example: Using catbox litter to keep your shower smelling clean.

Joey Green, a best-selling author, has come up with a new book called, "Polish Your Furniture with Panty Hose and Wash Your Hair with Whipped Cream."

In his book he offers tips for easy, economical ways to freshen your home this fall. And, according to a survey, it was found that 96 percent of Americans want their house to smell fresh even after they close up for fall and winter.

Here are some quick and easy tips:

- Look for hiding places all around the house that could use a little freshening with those scented dryer sheets. For example, in the bedroom, tuck sheets under the mattress cover, in the dirty clothes hamper and in dresser drawers and sachets.

In the bathroom, keep a sheet in the wastebasket to freshen the room and in the hallway, tuck sheets in the linen closet to help keep sheets and towels smelling fresh.

- Place a coffee can filled with charcoal briquettes in the kitchen to absorb cooking odors.

- To eliminate musty odors, put a tray filled with unused catbox litter in the bathtub — it will absorb any moisture in the air.

- Vinegar works to neutralize odors, so place a small bowl filled with vinegar in the kitchen to get rid of cooking smells.

- Wash your cutting board with lemon juice to remove odors from garlic, onions or fish.

- Hang dryer sheets from a hanger in your closets — the possibilities are endless!

- Tea, especially flavored blends, works well as an air freshener in the bedroom and around the home. Try apple spice tea during the fall months, cinnamon stick blend in the winter, tea with lemon in the spring, etc.

- Keep flowers looking fresh longer by mixing 2 T of vinegar plus 3 T of sugar per quart of warm water. Stems should be in three to four inches of water.

- Tuck a rolled-up dryer sheet in the center of the bathroom tissue tube. And put a sheet in the vanity to freshen under the sink.

- Add some lemon juice to the water in your humidifier to keep musty odors away.

- Take dryer sheets to the gym. A sheet in your gym bag or gym locker can help keep workout clothes fresh. And, put a sheet in your sneakers (when you're not wearing them).

Program aims at creating 'Better Living for Texans'

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas Department of Human Services are partners in a collaborative agreement to provide consumer and family science education to limited resource families, including food assisted recipients.

This four-year-old program, entitled Better Living for Texans, is an educational program focusing on food and nutrition, food safety and food resource management. The Better Living for Texans is part of the state educational plan of the Department of Human Services which has designated funds to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service to implement this comprehensive educational effort.

Howard County will be one of 165 counties across Texas participating in the program this year. This is the third year that Howard County's participating has been approved.

Nutrition, food safety, wellness and food resource management will be the program focus with the goal to assist limited resource families acquire needed knowledge, skills and behaviors for better quality of life.

Better Living for Texans Program Assistant Jessie Payne has organized educational programs during the past year for Lakeview Headstart, Sands ISD Migrant Farm Families Program, Texas Workforce Commission, Canterbury North and South and the Salvation Army. California inspires cooking with wine

On a recent trip to San Francisco, we had an opportunity to tour the wine vineyards and cellars in Napa Valley and Sonoma County. Aside from being in beautiful country, the wine tasting and wonderful California-style food in some great restaurants added to a most pleasurable trip.

Chinatown was indeed a fun experience.

At the Pearl City Restaurant in Chinatown we had a DIM SUM lunch. Dim Sum means "heart's delight" or "little jewels that tug at the heart" in Cantonese.

Dim Sum is standard fare in tea houses where it can be enjoyed anytime of day. Our meal for four consisted of sampling of spring rolls, spareribs, spicy squid, steamed dumplings that resembled little money bags, shrimp or pork balls, steamed buns and wonderful savory pastries just to name a few. Tea is drunk before, with and after the meal to refresh the palate and aid digestion. Chinese tea is usually much stronger than its color suggests. There are three kinds of teas served most often: green, black and oolong. As a lover of tea, I have found that making good tea is an art and the Chinese have had thousands of years to perfect it.

When Dim Sum is served, each order comes in its own individual bamboo or stainless steel steamer. A waitress walks around nonchalantly with her specialty. You pick out the dishes you prefer, it is placed on the table, and when the meal is finished, the dishes are counted and you are charged accordingly.

Chopsticks were provided, but no fortune cookies here. Chinese cooking is an art with endless varieties. Like all "tourists" we rode the cable car, visited Fisherman's Wharf and toured the island of Alcatraz.

Our time constraints did not allow for more San Francisco sightseeing, so we do look forward to our next trip with great anticipation.

While my recipes do not have anything to do with dim sum, they do come from the wine country.

Food for Thought: If you see in your wine the reflection of a person not in your range of vision, don't drink it.

Cranberry Chicken
6 chicken breasts, skinned and boned
1 cup flour
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. garlic powder
1 tsp. curry powder
1/3 cup margarine
1/4 cup Chardonnay wine*
16 oz. can cranberry sauce, whole berry
1/2 cup lemon juice
*Chicken broth may be substituted

Mix together flour, salt, garlic powder and curry powder. Coat chicken breast halves with flour mixture. In large skillet, melt margarine over moderate heat. Add chicken and cook about 10 minutes, turning. Sprinkle wine (or chicken broth) and lemon juice over chicken. Reduce heat to low and simmer 20-30 minutes. Serve with cranberry sauce.

War paint

Artist captures reality of world during WW II

ODESSA (AP) — Best known in the Permian Basin for his 1940 mural "Stamped," which embellishes Odessa's main post office, artist Tom Lea presented a different kind of art to the world during World War II.

He was chosen by then Life publisher Henry Luce as one of 10 artists who would literally illustrate the war for the magazine.

An exhibition of that published work will be displayed at Parker House Museum through Nov. 13.

"Of all the (10) guys work, Lea's is the most realistic," said Parker House director Richard Cummins. "He once said that his job was not to interpret what he saw, but illustrate what he saw."

Which he did with sometimes horrifying, sometimes terrifying accuracy.

Depictions of bloodbaths such as that which occurred on the island of Peleliu where 12 weeks of fighting produced 12,000 casualties fiery attacks on ships such as the aircraft USS Hornet; and a portrait of a dazed, battle-fatigued soldier all bring the horror of that war back to life, even after half a century.

According to Cummins, Lea, who covered action in the North Atlantic, South Pacific, Europe and North Africa, as well as depicting some soldiers and events on U.S. soil, left for his assignments armed with only a sketchbook and a combat knife he used the knife to sharpen his drawing pencils. After sketching for several weeks, Lea would return to the United States and create his color illustrations for Life.

But while on the various fronts, he came into personal contact with men, such as Jimmy Doolittle and Claire Chennault, who would be remembered by history. He painted their portraits, as well as those of some soldiers whose names, if not actions, would be forgotten by history.

Besides Lea's depictions of war, Life covers of the era, and such World War II paraphernalia as uniforms, weapons (including the pencil-sharpening knife) and illustrations of a trip to China (also commissioned by Life) fill the four upstairs rooms of the museum. A smaller display is on the ground floor.

Born in El Paso in 1907, Lea attended the Art Institute of Chicago, where for 10 years he studied and worked with his mentor, muralist John Morton.

After his Chicago interlude, Lea returned to the Southwest, first spending two years in Santa Fe, N.M., then returning to El Paso where he lives today, Cummins said.

Lea earned his living as an illustrator and mural painter and collaborated on such projects with Texas author/historian J. Frank Dobie and book designer Carl Hertzog before his World War II experience. After the war, a new assignment from Life took him to Mexico where he developed an interest in bullfighting.

That, according to Cummins, led to the writing of his first book, "Brave Bulls," which was published in 1949. Ultimately, it became a best seller and was made into a movie. In the 50s and 60s, Lea wrote and illustrated three more novels, an autobiography and a two-volume history called "The King Ranch."

Besides displaying Lea's work, the Parker House Museum, located at 1118 Maple Ave., gives visitors a glimpse of how early West Texas pioneers lived in Odessa.

Hemingway manuscripts were friend's gift to Library of Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unpublished material by Ernest Hemingway — stories, articles, photos, letters, home movies, recordings and a longer version of his last bullfight book — are going to the Library of Congress, the gift of his friend A.E. Hotchner.

A major item is a typewritten copy of "The Dangerous Summer," published as a 228-page book in 1985, nearly a quarter-century after Hemingway's suicide. It's the story of an afternoon contest between two of Spain's best-known matadors: Luis Miguel Dominguez and his brother-in-law, Antonio Ordenez.

William Kennedy, a Pulitzer Prize novelist himself, praised it in Hemingwaysque language:

"(It) became a book, truly, and is here with us now, and is good," he wrote in a review for The New York Times.

Hotchner worked intensively with Hemingway to shorten the text, which once covered 688 typed pages.

"This manuscript I helped him edit is about a third longer," Hotchner, now 70, said in an interview.

It's the first large collection of Hemingway material to go to the library. Some of it will be put on show Wednesday.

There are seven unpublished letters to Hotchner, a friend during the author's last 14 years who has written two books about Hemingway and adapted some of his major work for television. There are six unpublished articles and stories, and several poems including one "To Mary" — his fourth and last wife — recited by Hemingway himself in a recording.

Generally, Hemingway hated to record his image or voice. But there are 15 spools of magnetized wire recordings — technology of half-century ago. Hemingway talks of Spain during the 1936-39 Civil War, when his Madrid hotel came under shellfire from the forces of Gen. Francisco Franco, and he rolled up his manuscripts in a mattress to protect them.

The home movies include three reels of silent 16mm color film, showing Hemingway in the 1950s fishing for marlin from his boat, Pilar, playing with his dog and cats, talking with Mary in front of their Cuban home, the Finca Vigia, and later at a snow-covered house, apparently the one in Ketchum, Idaho, where he killed himself in 1961.

Hotchner is also giving 300 photos, one which shows himself in a matador's glistening "suit of lights," which Hemingway got him to don in an actual bullfight. They also illustrate their visit together to other Spanish sites, including some described in "For Whom the Bell Tolls," Hemingway's novel of the Civil War.

The gift commemorates the author's 100th birthday this year and the library's 200th in 2000.

"This personal collection provides an intimate insight into the life and mind of one of the 20th century's great literary figures," said James Billington, the librarian of Congress.

John Hemingway, the author's eldest son, is also making a gift to the library — the "first copy" of this father's first book, "Three Stories and Ten Poems," published in Paris in 1923 and inscribed to his first wife, Hadley.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rolling Stone is suing a news syndication agency for disseminating photos of Brad Pitt in a dress from the magazine's October edition. The magazine filed suit last week in U.S. District Court accusing the agency of infringing on the copyright of photographer Mark Seliger and the magazine's publisher.

The magazine gave the agency limited permission to "use the images of Brad Pitt accompanying the feature article ... so long as they are used within the context of the magazine," according to the lawsuit.

"They've cropped out all of the references to Rolling Stone and the photographer," Kelli L. Sager, Rolling Stone's attorney, said Monday.

NEW APARTMENT?

Here's another necessity.

If you recently moved into an apartment or duplex, this may be the first opportunity you've had to experience the benefits of having natural gas in your home.

You'll find that for heating your home during cold weather, for hot water, or for cooking, nothing beats natural gas for convenience, economy, and efficiency.

Here are a few reminders from your friends at ENER GAS Company on the safe and responsible use of natural gas.

- ◆ YOUR FURNACE NEEDS AN ANNUAL CHECK-UP. Contact your landlord or apartment manager to arrange for an annual inspection by a qualified heating contractor.
- ◆ A CLOSET ISN'T ALWAYS A CLOSET. Your water heater or furnace is probably in a closet by itself. As tempting as it may be, don't use the space around a water heater or furnace for storage. This will assure adequate air circulation.
- ◆ IF YOU SMELL GAS. Day or night, exit your home then call toll free 1-888-363-7427. Do not flip light switches or use any other electrical equipment. Do not light a match or a candle. Do not try and find the leak yourself.

A return from exile of schizophrenia

BEAUMONT (AP) — When Tracy Russell recalls the old medications he took to silence the voices of schizophrenia, he looks around as if he is being haunted by a ghost.

The voices transformed Russell from a popular 20-year-old witty young man to a helpless hulk, who could not even recall his own name. The disease left him on an island of fear and isolation. He lived in the eye of a hurricane named schizophrenia.

The only available medications for his disease at the time controlled his delusions and hallucinations, but their side effects limited Russell's life. He could not lift his arms to shower or eat. He drooled and became constipated. He lost touch with his feelings and life. He took his frustration out on himself and his family. Russell lived in a walking coma.

But for a few years now, new anti-psychotic medications have reduced the debilitating side effects.

Russell has feelings again. Better yet, he's aware of them. He works part-time, lives in his own apartment and is putting his life together. Russell is born again.

"It feels good now," he said with a nervous laugh. "I get to be with people."

As Russell swims back to the shores of life, he and his family are experiencing an awakening after years of exile in schizophrenia.

Russell was born in Beaumont in 1960. His mother remembers him as a clever and funny child.

When he started first grade, he told her that he didn't like homework, but he would get the hang of it.

After graduating from high school, he began working for his ex-brother-in-law, installing metal doors.

Russell left home to live with friends, and he had many. He liked football and baseball and had a special affection for animals, especially cats.

Soon his older sister noticed a change in his behavior. The voices began calling to him from the radio, from the television set and from dark alleys. He ignored them at first, but they persisted.

His condition worsened. Soon, he wanted all the lights on because he was afraid of the dark. He carried a stick in his car because he believed that someone was going to hurt him. He didn't even recognize his own name. When someone called him, he would say, "That's not my name."

Like most people experiencing psychotic symptoms for the first time, he did not divulge his ordeal to anybody. But at the age of 20, he suffered a nervous breakdown. He began sobbing and could not stop. He moved back home.

His mother, Jeannie Morris, did not understand what was happening to her son. He was unable to work or care for himself.

"He was a wreck," she said as she fought back tears. "He said 'Mama, I just need a lot of rest.'"

A year and a half later, a doctor diagnosed Russell with schizophrenia. He was in the grip of the disease that many people did not understand, and the available medications did little to restore any normalcy.

To control the voices that ravaged his life, doctors prescribed a variety of medications for Russell. The side effects were all intolerable, he said.

While the medications controlled the delusions and hallucinations associated with schizophrenia, they heavily sedated him and left him with the glazed and vacant stare of a mental patient. The effect repelled people and scared family members. His younger sister did not want to bring her high school friends home, fearing they would notice him. She just did not understand, Morris said.

When Russell was diagnosed with schizophrenia, his mother was heartbroken. When she saw him suffering from side effects of the drugs, she was devastated. It was a sword with double edges.

"It was terrible. I just did not know what to do," Morris said. "I kept telling him he would be OK. But I knew he was not going to be."

For a while, Russell would not take his medication to spare himself the side effects. The voices returned, tormenting him. He landed in the hospital for three days to be stabilized.

It is estimated that 50 percent of patients using the older medications discontinue treatment because of the side effects.

Nearly one third of the patients in this area fall into this revolving door, said Nick LaConte, administrator at the Community Psychiatric Center at Life Resources, which serves Jefferson, Orange, Hardin and Chambers counties.

ODDS-N-ENDS

MOUNT VERNON, Wash. (AP) — Kissing a pair of Holstein calves was a "mooving" experience, according to Washington Elementary School Principal Mary Heath.

"They had no taste. They were clean as a whistle," Heath exclaimed after puckering up for the 6-week old bovines, named Rise and Shine.

Heath was fulfilling her end of the bargain in a student fund-raising campaign. She had promised her students that if they reached their goal of 60 percent school participation in the drive, she would kiss a cow.

The kids met their goal and raised $11,000 by selling Christmas gift wrap and chocolates over two weeks. The money will go to theater and other student programs.

The hesitant Holsteins were dragged into the school gym Friday to a room full of students chanting "Kiss the calf! Kiss the calf!"

Heath said she actually preferred the cow kiss to her other choices.

"I didn't really want to dye my hair green or shave it all off," she said. "And now I was rescued by these sweet, dear cows."

NORWALK, Ohio (AP) — Chris Kempf's first fishing trip to Lake Erie last month seemed like a disaster until he hooked some human kindness.

About eight miles off of South Bass Island, the 26-year-old lost the beloved brown leather wallet his wife, Jennifer, gave him on their wedding day.

Then, earlier this month, an envelope arrived from Ontario.

"I didn't know who it was from, but as soon as I opened it up, I saw the wallet in there," Kempf said Monday.

In an enclosed letter, retiree Andy Cincurak told Kempf he found the wallet near his cottage on Pelee Island on Sept. 20.

The plastic sandwich bag that Kempf hoped would keep his wallet safe during the fishing trip had apparently ripped open in the lake's choppy water.

Cincurak had carefully dried out the contents, including Kempf's treasured family pictures and a cross Kempf's mother had given him.

Cincurak said he was glad to return the wallet, gave Kempf his phone number and invited him to visit. Kempf said he wants to buy Cincurak dinner.

Last Liberty Tree cut down

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — A bell tolled 13 times Monday — once for each of the original colonies — as a crew with chain saws began cutting down the last of the Liberty Trees, where American patriots gathered to plot against the British.

The 400-year-old tulip poplar fell victim to years of disease and decay and a final blow from the winds of Hurricane Floyd.

Experts who examined the tree on the campus of St. John's College said it was in danger of collapsing and had to be cut down. "The liberty tree has lived a long and valiant life and has been on life support for a century," said college president Christopher Nelson. For 200 years, the St. John's commencement has been held under the tree, and Nelson said cutting it down was a sad duty.

Before the Revolutionary War, Liberty Trees were meeting places for local chapters of the Sons of Liberty throughout the colonies.

Historical records show that British forces destroyed trees in Boston and Charleston, S.C., said Edward Papenfuss, Maryland state archivist. He said other trees were cut down or died of disease and old age.

The end of Maryland's liberty tree was commemorated with a solemn ceremony on the campus of the nation's third-oldest college. Wreaths were laid at the base of the tree and of a 100-year-old offspring that stands about 100 yards away.

After the singing of the national anthem, written by St. John's graduate Francis Scott Key, and the tolling of a bell, a worker riding in a cage was pulled about two-thirds of the way up the tree and began cutting the first branch.

Among those watching was Gary Coleman, a University of Maryland scientist who is trying to clone samples of the tree's DNA taken about four months ago. He said it will be midwinter before he knows whether the effort will succeed.

If so, a clone will be planted at the site of the Liberty Tree and others will be presented to the 49 other states.

Dennis Claude, a 70-year-old Annapolis resident who played under the tree's branches as a child, recorded the cutting down ceremony with his camera.

Curtis' 10th-inning homer puts Yankees on verge of sweep

NEW YORK (AP) — The fans were gone, the lights were off and the trash sweepers were out in force at Yankee Stadium after Game 3.

Their brooms might have a whole new meaning tonight.

As in: Yanks in four, goodbye Braves. A 3-0 edge sure didn't look likely for most of Tuesday night. Atlanta had everything going its way until New York once again found a way to win, rallying for a 6-5 victory on Chad Curtis' 10th-inning home run.

"I'm still amazed, and yet I'm not amazed," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "We go out there and play nine innings. And good things happen."

Or even extra innings.

New York trailed 5-1 against Tom Glavine — the home fans were booing — before Curtis homered twice and Chuck Knoblauch and Tino Martinez also connected. The Yankees won their 11th straight World Series game, putting them one victory away from a second consecutive sweep.

"It would have been nice to have won," Atlanta manager Bobby Cox said. "It would have gotten us going real good. This was a big one to lose."

Knoblauch's two-run homer in the eighth off right fielder Brian Jordan's glove made it 5-1 and finished Glavine.

In the 10th, Curtis hit a 1-1 pitch from Mike Remlinger into the Braves' left-field bullpen for the first game-ending homer in the Series since Joe Carter's Game 6 shot won it all for Toronto in 1993.

"I have a tendency when I get up there in that situation, I try to hit a home run," Curtis said. "So I went up there and tried to hit it up the middle, and I hit a home run."

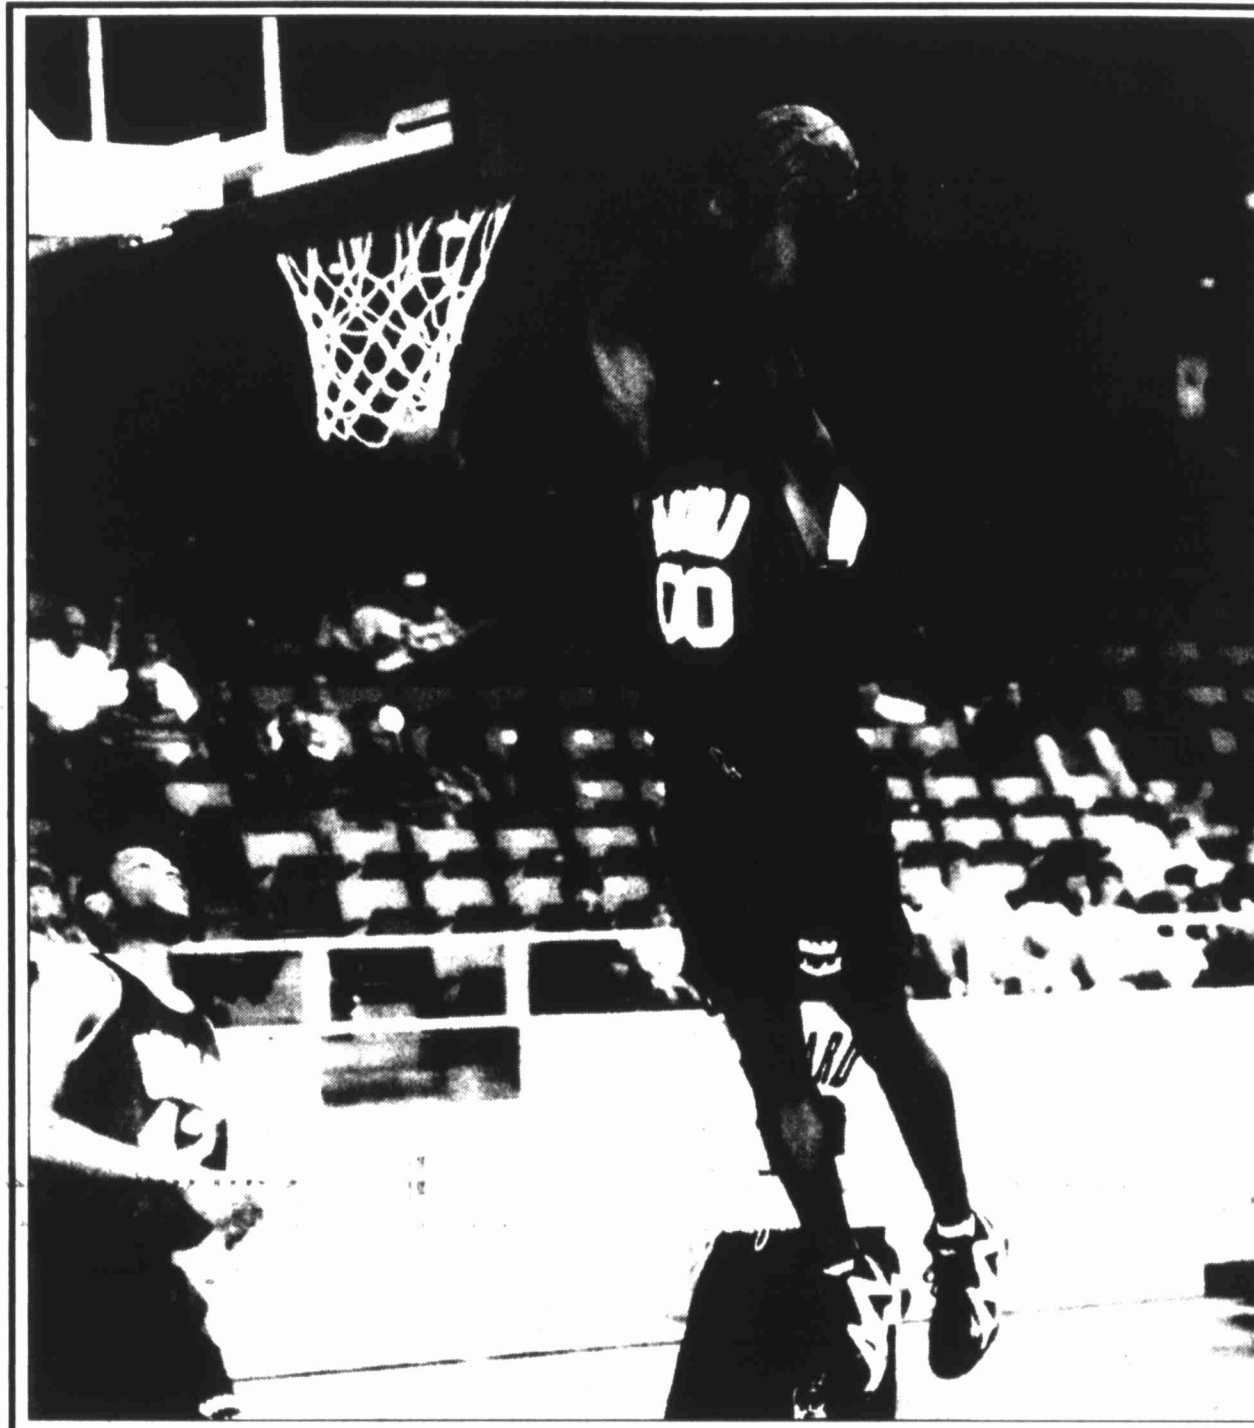

Curtis made his first ever start in the Series and ended up as the hero with the first walkoff homer he could remember hitting. Until Tuesday, he had homered just once since May 23 and had not hit one at Yankee Stadium since Sept. 23, 1998.

"Always somebody you don't expect," Cox said. "You never know where it's going to come from."

Roger Clemens, who joined the Yankees this spring in hopes of winning his first World Series ring, gets a chance to close it out in Game 4 tonight against John Smoltz.

No team in baseball history has overcome an 0-3 deficit in postseason play. "We swept four before, but not in the World Series," Cox said.

Mariano Rivera, Mr. Automatic in October, pitched two innings for the victory. He has not allowed a run in his last 41 2-3 innings, and has a postseason streak of 24 1-3 scoreless innings.

Howard hoops fans get first look at Hawks, Lady Hawks

By JOHN A. MOSELEY
Sports Editor

Even though it was the first night Big Spring's "Tower of Terror" was open to the public, a good crowd of basketball hands was on hand Tuesday night as Howard College staged its "Meet the Teams" event at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Those in attendance didn't go away dissatisfied. In fact, by the time the 1999-2000 edition of Tommy Collins' Hawks finished a 10-minute interquad scrimmage, there seems little question they were drooling for more.

Unless appearances are truly deceiving, this season's Hawks look considerably stronger than last year's Howard men.

Of course, all that squad managed to accomplish was win the Western Junior College Athletic Conference championship. Not only that, but the 1998-99 Hawks went through conference play undefeated — a feat only twice accomplished by any team in the league's history. "This team's fine ... just fine," Collins said in a classic understatement following the brief scrimmage. "We probably need to be a little more aggressive right now, but that will come once we get some games under our belt."

The Hawks roster includes four players from last year's team — guards Justin Rhodes and Darryl Martin and forwards Derrick Franklin and Donald "Yogi" Ceasar.

The remainder is filled with talented freshmen including Zakee Smith, a 5-foot-11 point guard from Philadelphia; Terrance Radford, a 5-foot-9 guard from Las Vegas, Nev.; Chris McKelvey, a 5-foot-10 point guard from Houston; Vasilis Tsimpliaridis, a 6-foot-4 guard from Naousa, Greece; Anthony Thornton, a 6-foot-4 forward from Baltimore; Steve Bonner, a 6-foot-5 forward from Petersburg, Va.; Winston Brooks, a 5-foot-11 point guard from Richmond, Va.; Doug Whittler, a 6-foot-7 forward from Detroit, Mich.; Eric Washington, a 6-foot-7 forward from

Braves manager becomes accidental tourist in Game 3 of Series

Bobby Cox wandered the Big Apple like a tourist before Game 3 of the World Series.

Hearing this, most New York Yankee fans would ask: "Alone and unarmed?"

Yes.

But that was hardly the biggest risk the Atlanta manager took Tuesday.

That almost certainly was letting weakened Tom Glavine start the eighth inning. Unless it was letting Glavine face the second batter, Chuck Knoblauch, who promptly redirected Glavine's 77th pitch of the night over the short porch in right. That homer tied a game the Yankees would win 6-5, effectively vacuuming the last bit of drama from this series.

"We got beat with a pop-up to right field," Cox grumbled afterward. "A Yankee home run. They hit three of those tonight."

The Yankees actually hit four, but Cox had no problem with the last one. Chad Curtis began the 10th by crushing a pitch over the left-field wall. It had plenty to spare, landing in the middle of the Braves' bullpen.

"That one," Cox said, "was really tagged."

Besides, that wasn't the one with all the sleepless nights written all over it. That would be Knoblauch's, now and forever.

"Three-hundred-and-fifteen feet," Cox sighed one final time. "That's an out in my book."

But that's not the only page in his book that needs revising.

At the beginning of this series, the Braves were contending for team of the decade. Now, it will take a miracle just for them to get off the deck. And the 58-year-old Cox will share responsibility for the fall, as much as the guys who couldn't hit, run and throw straight when it mattered.

He might be as good a regular-season manager as there is. But the Braves' 1-3 mark in the World Series already this decade suggests Cox hasn't figured how to play October baseball.

Before Game 3, he was asked how much the flu weakened Glavine and how long he would pitch.

"Seven strong innings," Cox replied. Told the microphone in front of him wasn't working, he said it again.

At the start of the seventh, pitching coach Leo Mazzone had relievers Russ Springer and Mike Remlinger, the eventual loser, warming up. Glavine gave up a home run to Martinez to pull New York to 5-3. Nobody in the Atlanta dugout twitched.

Then he gave up a leadoff single to Joe Girardi to begin the eighth. This time, Mazzone had closer John Rocker warming up. Still, nobody twitched, even when Glavine started Knoblauch off with a 2-0 count.

"We all thought he was throwing great," Cox said.

Echoed Mazzone: "He started the eighth at 70-something pitches. He was doing everything right. We actually thought he might go all nine."

"He had command, he was changing speeds, he didn't drop off at all. And we had Rocker going just in case something crazy happened."

All of which begs the question: The Braves got what they wanted from Glavine. They had Rocker ready to roll. Why not switch after seven?

"There was no reason to take him out," Cox replied. "Really."

But that's where October baseball is different.

This game was not about saving the bullpen. It was not about winning three out of five. This was one game Atlanta absolutely had to have.

Cox still doesn't understand that. His

New York counterpart, Joe Torre, wins in the postseason precisely because he does. "I keep stressing, 'Don't think in terms of the regular season.' We have to win every game. Every game is a series in and of itself," Torre said. "You don't want to lose your momentum. That's what it's all about, especially in five- and seven-game series. You lose that momentum and you start getting on your heels a little bit and getting a little uneasy." If so, Cox was on his heels without a left-handed reliever for New York pinch-hitter

Darryl Strawberry in the eighth. That's when fast-tiring Atlanta starter Greg Maddux, a master of control, walked Strawberry on five pitches. That pushed the tying run into scoring position and ignited the Yankees' decisive rally. In Game 2, Cox swapped regulars Walt Weiss, Bret Boone and Eddie Perez for Ozzie Guillen, Keith Lockhart and Greg Myers. The move reeked of panic. He didn't get the offense he needed and the Guillen-Lockhart combination discombobulated the Braves' normally solid middle-infield defense. The two figured prominently — and poorly — in four plays that helped New York win.

Before Game 4 tonight, Cox will probably walk around New York one more time. It's an old habit, something he does every time he visits, something he started doing three decades years ago, when he was an infielder with the Yankees briefly. "They're all very nice," Cox said about New Yorkers. "I haven't had one person this year in New York say anything bad about the Braves." What? And ruin a good thing? TEAMS
Lafayette, Ind.; Richard Manning, a 6-foot-8 post from Fresno, Calif.; and Kresimir Tomorad, a 6-foot-9 post from Zagreb, Croatia.
The Hawks will open the season at home with the Howard College Early Bird Classic on Nov. 5-6. The next weekend the Hawks will host the Howard College Classic before heading north for the Nov. 19-20 Barton County (Kan.) Classic.
New Lady Hawks head coach Ron Mayberry introduced his team to open the evening's festivities.
The Lady Hawks will be somewhat short on numbers, injuries and a couple of players' decisions to leave the team, having reduced Howard's women to just eight players during their scrimmage.
Sophomore guard Ashanti Nix was sidelined for the event, having had knee surgery on Friday. Mayberry did note, however, that Nix was already running and should return to practicing with the team in the near future.

The other three sophomores on the Lady Hawks roster include Shaketha Ashley, Caryn Ross and Yolanda Grant.
Those four will be joined by freshmen Taneisha Harris, a 5-foot-7 guard from San Marcos; Tashawn Thomas, a 5-foot-6 guard from North Hollywood, Calif.; Grace Gantt, a 5-foot-11 forward from San Marcos;

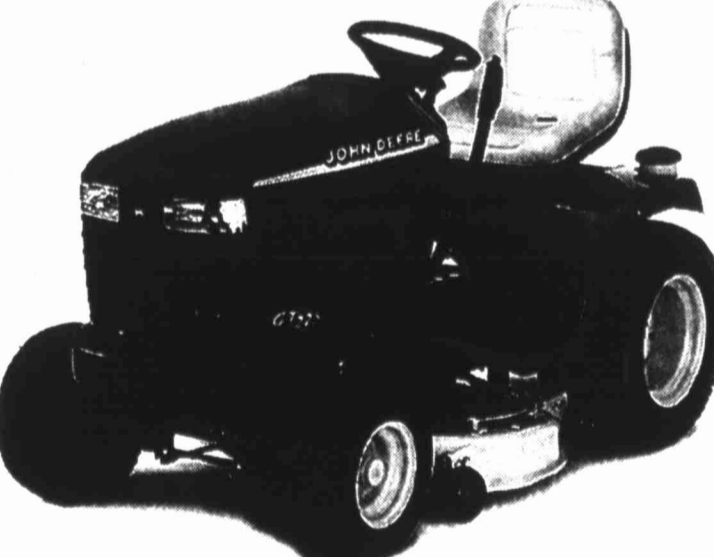

Vanessa Lehrmann, a 5-foot-11 forward from Sweetwater; Koretha Johnson, a 5-foot-11 post from Myrtle Beach, S.C.; and Latonya Jackson, a 6-foot post from Fort Worth.
The Lady Hawks will open their season Nov. 4-6 in Levelland taking part in the Breakfast Rotary Tournament there. Their home opener will come during the Pizza Invitational set for No. 18-20 at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR THURSDAY, OCT. 28:

You're especially grounded and creative this year. You prosper because of your dealings with others. You're seen as someone who can be trusted. Popularity soars. Opportunity knocks on your door. If you are single, picking the right partner could be challenging, with as many suitors as you are likely to have. Someone who might be very different, highly educated or from a foreign culture proves to be an excellent choice. If attached, your partner comes through for you. CANCER encourages your instinctive responses.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Keep reaching out for others. Listen to a financial guru you know and trust. He has interesting insights that can help you. Conversations illuminate information and give you the status of a confusing situation. You'll learn where another is coming from. Clear your desk; return calls. Tonight: Bring work home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be your ever-cheerful self. You inspire confidence from those in your daily life. Neighbors and siblings understand what you're trying to accomplish. Evaluate news. Keep communication flowing. You might know more than you want to share about what motivates others. Tonight: Errands and a visit with friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)  Beam in what you want. Your sixth sense helps you communicate, especially about money. You don't have to commit to any plan of action until you are ready. Clear out extra work; get a head start on the weekend. Tonight: Treat another to dinner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)  Take some time this morning to clear up a personal matter. Another responds favorably to your inquiries because of the sensitivity you demonstrate. Attend a meeting. Don't hesitate to network and reach out for others. Tonight: Beam in what you want.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Despite your good intentions, there might be something about the end result of a job that puts you into a funk. No question about it, you do an excellent job of handling various demands. However, you might want a little more. Maybe you just need some downtime. Tonight: First, check in on a parent.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)  Listen to feedback and reach out for others at a distance. A friend is demanding, but it's worth it to try to make him happy. Accept an offer that could entail travel, taking a workshop or doing some studying on your own. A call from someone at a distance brings only good news. Tonight: Whatever your idea of fun is.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)  Your ability to detach makes you a surefire winner. You gain because of your mental capacities and your ability to understand where others come from. A partner really does make a difference. Let another add more to your life. Tonight: A must show.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)  Others listen to what you say. Your impact is a lot greater than you think. Popularity increases. With all the associations you've made, you have many more options than you are aware of. Listen to what another puts on your plate. Zoom in on what you want. Tonight: Watch a favorite movie or TV show.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)  You're sought after; there is little you have to do. Make a point to get together with others. Your good will and the surrounding positive attitude help clear out any backed-up projects. Let your sense of humor come into play. Schedule a work lunch. Tonight: Nurture a friend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)  Allow more spontaneity into your work, and you'll find new ways of making money. Make sure you have what you need to network. You make a strong impression on others; they really like what you represent. Another responds to your creativity. Tonight: Visit with a special friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)  Recognize how important a child or loved one is to you. Buy a token of your affection during your lunch break. Making another feel good makes you beam all day. Work flows smoothly. Co-workers are in the mood to clear their desks. Finally, you can clear your desk, too! Tonight: Bring any leftover work home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)  Home-related matters could preoccupy you for a good part of the day. Your sense of humor emerges when dealing with someone who is young at heart. You might not always feel this playful at work, but others appreciate your levity. Tonight: Talk up a storm.

Hating others because others hate you is no way to live

DEAR READERS: After printing letters about racism during the summer, I received an onslaught of mail from readers who wanted to comment. It's a subject about which people are passionate.

I regret that space limitations do not permit me to share all of the terrific letters with you. Read on for a sample:

D E A R ABBY: I am writing in response to Mr. Jones' and Dr. Wood's replies to the letter from "My Kid's Mom." Dr. Wood claimed that he knew of "no dark-skinned people who believe they are superior to light-skinned people, at least not those living in Western societies," while Mr. Jones claimed "there is no racism in the African-American community."

Are these gentlemen actually serious? One only has to listen to the comedy of Chris Rock or D.L. Hughley, or a speech from Louis Farrakhan, to realize that there is racism in the African-American community.

The only way there can be serious discussion and improvement of race relations in America is if we as citizens refuse to accept ANY racist rhetoric, regardless of the skin color of the speaker. As long as American society accepts racist dogma from white, black, Asian and Hispanic communities, this country will never find peace among her citizens. Only when we can accept this fact and make a conscious effort to root out this aspect of ourselves will we truly end racism once and for all. — CHRIS HOWELL, ALSO FROM GEORGIA

DEAR CHRIS: I agree with you. Read on: DEAR ABBY: When our society gets to the point where one discusses race only when talking about genealogy or national origin, and when we begin to describe ourselves as "Americans," and not "something-Americans," then and only then can we make the statement that there is no racism. — HOPING FOR A NON-RACIST AMERICA

DEAR ABBY: Mr. Jones states that he teaches his kids "to be tough and smart, because a black person is always surrounded by whites with racist attitudes." Mr. Jones should teach them instead to be intelligent and compassionate for the shortcomings of others. Defense mechanisms are no way to deal with real problems.

Teaching to hate because others hate only shows his willingness to sink to someone's level and to conform to racist policies, which only fuels racism. — CITIZENS FOR AN EQUAL America's Drug Problem Is Not As Big As You Think.

It can start as a dare. Or youthful curiosity. Or it may be a way to escape problems at home. Whatever the reason, studies show that an alarming number of young children are trying drugs. Unfortunately, too many parents still do not believe that their children are at risk.

If you are not sure how to talk to them, call the Texas Prevention Partnership at 1-800-269-4237 and ask for the free booklet called "Growing Up Drug-Free - A Parent's Guide to Prevention." Call today because if you don't take care of little problems, they can easily grow into big ones.

When was the last time someone tacked a television ad to their refrigerator?

Words on paper. They will always be the most powerful tools human beings use to communicate. They place no limits on how much we can say, and the furthest reaches of the imagination are the only limits on what we can show. They have the power to make complex ideas simple, and simple ideas powerful. We do more than read them, we hold them. And, from the advertising we see in publications to the letters we receive in the mail, the things we hold in our hands have the quickest routes to our hearts.

Say It In Print.
