Representative says some good legislation passed

By BILL McCLELLAN

It wasn't the most productive 140 days the Texas legislature has ever had, but there were some good bills to come out of the 77th session that ended Monday, according to State Rep.

COUNTS

David Counts, D-Knox City. "There are a few things we did that we can look back on and say, 'yes, we accomplished something,'" said Counts, whose District 70 includes Howard County. Counts said the state's health and human services program received a $5.1 billion boost in funding. Additional funding was included for the Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP) which offers health insurance to children of working families who cannot afford the cost of private insurance. "Access for children to health insurance and the simplification of the Medicaid enrollment process for getting children signed up was one important thing we did," he said. Another, he said, was health insurance for public school employees. "One of the things we worked on the hardest and longest was pooling of State Rep. David Counts doubts Gov. Rick Perry will call a special session on redistricting, but is ready if it happens, he says. "My thinking is, if we didn't get in done in 140 days, we'd be hard-pressed to do it in 30," he says. "But that's the governor's decision. "I'd guess that we wouldn't have a special session and it would go to the See DISTRICTS, Page 2A

Grant to boost classroom technology

By LYNDEL MOODY
Staff Writer

Big Spring Independent School District (BSISD) received a $200,000 grant to develop new and expand current technology for classrooms on four elementary campuses.

"The funds will be used for Bauer Magnet, Goliad Elementary, Marcy Elementary and Moss Elementary," said Paula Cole, director of technology for BSISD.

The Telecommunications Infrastructure Fund Board, a state agency, awarded the grant.

According to Cole, the money will be used for Project Big Spring Connect.

The project's main objective is to provide or enhance Internet connectivity into the classrooms and labs so that students and teachers can engage in more collaborative and interactive learning, she said.

At Goliad, the funds will be used to replace old computers with a wireless system with headphone and microphone configurations. The funds will also be used to purchase a network laser printer.

The funds will be used to purchase a mobile cart that connects several laptops to a network.

Because of wireless technology, the students have the option to take the laptops a distance from the cart, such as their desks, and still be networked to the system.

Gonnie Helms, instructional technology specialist for BSISD, left, and Paula Cole, director of technology for BSISD, take out a wireless laptop from the cart at the technology building this morning.

"They can take the computer lab to the classroom," Cole said. "This will give the school more flexibility to move the computers to different classrooms. The cart can be positioned between two classrooms so the computers can be used by both classrooms." Moss Elementary will receive 30 non-wireless desktop computers for its library and classrooms. As an option, the equipment will have the flexibility to go wireless at a later point in the district's technology plan. The school will place nine 100-megabyte bandwidth hubs to replace lower bandwidth hubs that will speed up information flow from computer to computer, Cole said. Marcy will also be replacing computers with the money from the grant, she said. Bauer Magnet school will go with wireless technology, replacing its outdated computer system, Cole said. Funds will also be used to train teachers at all four campuses in the TIF training model. "The grant requires each school to send six teachers for the training," Cole said. The training will be held in Midland and teachers will learn the technical aspects of the new equipment and also techniques to incorporate the new technology into the classroom.

Local students fare well on exit-level test; Goliad shows improvement

By LYNDEL MOODY

Preliminary results from the exit-level Texas Assessment of Academic Skills (TAAS) tests indicated 90 percent or more of those Big Spring High School students met or exceeded the minimal required standards for every section.

MURPHY

"This is an extremely difficult test," said Murray Murphy, Big Spring Independent School District deputy superintendent. "To achieve a 90 percent or plus on that test is quite an accomplishment."

Preliminary results indicate 91 percent of the students who took the reading test met or exceeded the minimal standards.

Also, the results show 90 percent of the high school students who took the test met or exceeded the minimal requirements for both the math and writing sections.

"This is the first year the high school has achieved 90 percent on all three tests," said Murphy, who has been tracking TAAS scores for the past seven years.

"We are very proud of the high school," he said. "They are constantly maintaining a level of recognized status."

Murphy said that after receiving preliminary test

Nature Walks program begins Saturday at state park

HERALD Staff Report

Big Spring State Park offers its annual Nature Walks program beginning Saturday atop Scenic Mountain.

Individuals, couples and families interested in learning more about the flora and fauna on Scenic Mountain are invited to participate in the program which will be held each Saturday through June 23. Walkers gather at the pavilion at the top of the park at 8 p.m. The walks end about 9 p.m. The cost of $2 per adult - children 12 and under are free - covers the entry fee into the park. There are no additional fees.

The walk covers approximately one mile, half of which is up a steep grade, said Ron Alton, park manager and Nature Walks guide. Walkers are advised to bring sturdy shoes, water and a flashlight. On the final Saturday of the program, June 23, the park will also hold its Stargazing Nite. Members of the West Texas Amateur Astronomy Club of Midland and the San Angelo Amateur Astronomy Club will be at the park. "Their goal is to educate the public about night sky viewing. They love to answer questions about the solar system from children See WALKS, Page 2A

Model aircraft displays to be featured Saturday

By CARL GRAHAM
Staff Writer

Model aircraft enthusiast will get a chance Saturday to see all shapes and sizes of model aircraft at this year's model aircraft show at in the Wal-Mart entrance ways.

The show is scheduled to run from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

According to Big Spring Model Aircraft Association president Billy Sullivan, the big change this year is the location.

"We decided this year to move the show to Wal-Mart due to the lack of participation we have had at the Big Spring Mall," said Sullivan. "We are hoping to have a better turnout than we have had in the past couple of years."

Sullivan said there will be a large variety of planes on display.

"We should have between 20 and 30 aircraft on display," said Sullivan. "We will members of the club of hand to show the displays and talk to anyone interested in joining the association or answering any questions they may have."

Sullivan said preparations are being made for the 19th annual Big Spring Fly-In scheduled for following weekend, June 9 and 10.

"We are gearing up for another great fly-in this year," said Sullivan. "We always have model aircraft pilots from all over the state and sometimes as far away as New Mexico. We hope the weather will be better than we had last year."

Sullivan said that this year's fly-in, like ones in the past, will begin at 9 each morning and last until 5 p.m.

"We would like to invite insurance for our small schools," Counts said. "Health insurance cost has gotten so expensive a lot of folks can't afford it. Chairman Sadler (Paul Sadler, D-Henderson) worked it out where we will have a place to go and buy that now, and we feel it will be more competitive. The program calls for public school districts with an employment of less than 500 to be placed in the program automatically next year. Districts with an employment of more than 500 can choose to join as early as a year later.

exemption for the (Alon USA) refinery where they can stay on their plan. They have a plan already in place and they are on schedule," he said.

Other legislation provides prescription drug benefits to needy seniors and establishes a program to negotiate lower drug prices for state agencies.

One issue that didn't get solved is Texas' growing need to cope with congested highways.

"It's always been on a pay as you go basis, and we couldn't come up with an acceptable mechanism to change that. There is a lot of resistance to doing anything differently," he said.

"I had a rural telephone bill that would have helped to bring advanced services and high-speed access to the Internet to smaller communities. Unfortunately, we just ran out of time trying to get it done," said Counts.

State employees will receive a small raise. "Well, we were able to give them a raise, but not what they are entitled to," Counts said. "We would have liked to have done more."

And that in a nutshell, he said, was the problem.

"We were short of money this time, that's what it came down to," he said. "There are so many out there needing help and there just wasn't enough money to do what all needed to be done."

Legislative Redistricting Board." Perry may call a special session to deal with the volatile issue, which takes place every 10 years following the census.

Redistricting determines districts for state House and Senate members as well as districts for U.S. Congress and the State Board of Education. The House passed a plan before the 77th Legislature adjourned earlier this week, but the Senate didn't. The plan formulated by the Senate Redistricting Committee needed 20 votes to bring it up for discussion on the Senate floor. It received just 18.

Legislative Redistricting Board consists of four Republicans and one Democrat, but that doesn't seem to overly concern Counts, a Democrat from Knox City.

"A lot has been said about the makeup of the board, but you have to continue to meet Justice Department rules on one-person, one-vote and you also have to meet the fairness issue. So they are looking at the same things we looked at in the House," says Counts, who served on the House Redistricting Committee. "I think what we passed in the House would pretty much be what they'd come up with anyway."

The House plan called for Counts' 70th District to lose Lynn, Stonewall, Kent and King counties, and gain Dawson, Mitchell and Haskell. He would keep Howard, Borden, Fisher, Garza, Jones, Nolan and Scurry.

"I don't want to give up anything. I love the district I have, but in reality, someone is going to give up something," Counts said. "One thing about the new alignment is it keeps communities of interest together very well. It would meet congressional muster. It's a good plan."

Counts said the counties grouped in District 70 under the plan approved by the House have much in common. All are dependent on ranching, farming and light industry. They have similar sized public schools and Big Spring, Sweetwater and Snyder all have colleges.

"Their needs are all basically the same. They are all interested in roads and getting their products to market. Incomes come from the same industries, so it just fits. I think it works real well," says Counts.

The Legislative Redistricting Board would have 90 days to meet initially, then another 60 days to hammer out a plan. If the board were unable to reach an agreement, the issue would go to the courts.

results from Goliad Elementary, he expects the school to be named an academically acceptable campus.

Last year, Goliad was designated a low-performing campus after 53 percent of the fourth grade class failed to meet the minimal required standards in writing.

Murphy said approximately 35 students did not pass the minimal standard for writing, leaving the entire fourth grade below the minimal standard.

This year, only 12 percent of the fourth graders tested at Goliad failed to meet the minimal required standards.

"Goliad performed at or above the district average," Murphy said.

The district average for fourth graders meeting or exceeded required standards was 87 percent while 88 percent of Goliad fourth graders passed the test.

"Staff development was the key," said Estella Acambre, curriculum director, who works with Goliad faculty and staff.

Although district administrators are happy with the results district wide, Murphy said the district will continue to work to improve each school's performance.

"We expect to have several recognized or exemplary schools in our district," Murphy said. "Our goal is to be a recognized school district."

Stalmate continues for six children holed up in an Idaho house

SANDPOINT, Idaho (AP) — A lawyer who represents the mother of six children holed up in a northern Idaho house suggested the stalemate could be resolved by bringing the mother to the house.

A BIG SPRING AROUND THE TOWN

But attorney Edgar Steele said he would not have any part in such an effort if the goal was to separate the children into foster care. He said family and friends stand ready to take them in.

"This is exactly what she was afraid of and that's exactly what they're trying to do," Steele said at a news conference Thursday.

The children, ages 8 to 16, have been hunkered down in their ramshackle home with sheriff's deputies at bay since Tuesday, when their mother, JoAnn McGuckin, was arrested on charges of injuring a child. Their father, Michael McGuckin, was buried last week.

After her arrest, deputies went to the house for the children, who were to be placed in state custody. But one of the boys spotted them, yelled, "Get the guns!" and set the dogs loose.

Steele disputed the assertion that the children had been starving and living in unhealthy conditions before authorities tried to remove them to social service agencies. He planned to ask a Bonner County judge to reduce the $100,000 bail for JoAnn McGuckin and reunite her with her children.

Deputies had no luck trying to negotiate with the children Thursday. Authorities say they will simply wait out the standoff near Sandpoint, about 40 miles north of Coeur d'Alene.

The children are said to be well-armed and proficient with weapons, although Steele noted that no weapons have been seen in the standoff.

A family friend picked up a 200-pound box of staples for the children at the Bonner Community Food Center last Friday, director Alice Wallace said Thursday.

Wallace characterized the McGuckins as "a normal family that has fallen on hard times."

Michael McGuckin died May 12 after suffering from multiple sclerosis for several years. The county coroner attributed McGuckin's death at age 61 to malnutrition and dehydration.

Steele, who recently represented Aryan Nations founder Richard Butler in a lawsuit, spent two hours Wednesday with the mother.

"This woman is perfectly capable of taking care of the kids and herself," he said, though he conceded the family had become recalcitrant since the father's illness.

Steele went to the house Thursday, but said the children would not speak to him.

McVeigh asks for execution delay; experts predicting tough battle

DENVER (AP) — Legal experts following the case of Timothy McVeigh expect a judge will grant his request for an execution delay, but they say the Oklahoma City bomber will have a hard time proving the government intentionally withheld evidence that could have helped him at trial.

McVeigh's attorneys on Thursday accused the government of perpetrating "a fraud on the court" by withholding evidence from the defense and "continuing to withhold numbers of documents." They asked U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch to delay McVeigh's execution, now set for June 11. Matsch scheduled a hearing for Wednesday.

Attorney General John Ashcroft said the FBI had produced "every relevant document in its possession" and none raises doubt about McVeigh's guilt.

McVeigh had asked Matsch in December to end his appeals, and the government later set his execution for May 16. But in early May, Justice Department officials admitted they had found thousands of documents the defense had never seen. Ashcroft order the execution delayed.

Since then, more than 4,400 documents and 16 hours of audio and visual material have been turned over to McVeigh's lawyers, the latest arriving Wednesday.

Scott Robinson, a defense attorney who monitored McVeigh's trial in Denver four years ago, said Matsch will probably grant an execution delay to give McVeigh's attorneys time to review the material.

But the defense will likely have a tough time proving federal prosecutors knowingly presented false evidence or intentionally withheld documents they knew could have helped McVeigh, he said.

"That's an enormous burden. A simple mistake would never suffice," Robinson said.

If McVeigh cannot prove fraud occurred, he will have to provide substantial new evidence to win either a new sentencing hearing or a new trial, said former Denver prosecutor Craig Silverman.

Ashcroft said the Justice Department would oppose efforts to overturn the sentence or force a new trial. "Based on the overwhelming evidence and McVeigh's own repeated admissions, we know that he is responsible for this crime," Ashcroft said.

In requesting the delay, McVeigh's attorneys accused the FBI of continuing to withhold evidence. They have said evidence may have been "intentionally destroyed" or not documented, and four former FBI agents have come forward to suggest information was withheld.

The most recent document was a report written by a former agent who alleged this week that the FBI ignored some of his reports that would have helped the defense. Former agent Rick Ojeda said a gag order prevented him from revealing any details.

Jury still deliberating punishment phase in yogurt shop murder

AUSTIN (AP) — Jurors took two days to convict Robert Burns Springsteen IV of capital murder. Deciding his sentence has proven just as difficult.

Jurors broke off deliberations Thursday night without deciding his punishment for killing 13-year-old Amy Ayers in 1991: life in prison or death by lethal injection.

Springsteen's lawyers urged the jury to spare his life. "It takes a great amount of courage to spare a life," attorney Joe James Sawyer said in his closing.

Springsteen was convicted Wednesday of killing Ayers during a yogurt shop robbery that turned into murder on the night of Dec. 6, 1991.

Three other girls also were killed. All of them were bound, gagged and shot in the head.

Springsteen, 26, confessed in 1999 to killing

Ayers. Two other suspects, Michael Scott and Maurice Pierce, await trial.

Despite his attorney's pleas, prosecutors urged jurors to think of his victim's parents and to sentence Springsteen to die.

"His pain is but a drop in the ocean compared to the pain and suffering of Mr. and Mrs. Ayers," said assistant prosecutor Efrain De La Fuente.

Texas law allows only a life sentence or the death penalty in capital murder cases and the jury struggled with its decision. One female juror was crying when bailiffs led the panel out of the courthouse for the night.

"I ask you to find the courage to do what must be done," De La Fuente told them in closing arguments.

Jurors cried when Amy's father, Bob Ayers, described how the murder changed his family's life.

Jane Roe of Roe vs. Wade now fighting abortion

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two women whose fights to legally have abortions became staples of the nation's abortion law filed friend-of-the-court briefs Thursday to show their support for the other side.

The women — including Norma McCorvey previously known as Jane Roe of the landmark 1973 case Roe vs. Wade — now say they feel responsible for the legalization of abortion and both say they have since changed their minds on abortion.

"My case was wrongfully decided, and has caused great harm to the women and children of our nation," said McCorvey, 53, who now lives in Dallas and is active in anti-abortion causes.

"Because of my role in Roe v. Wade, how that decision came about, my experiences working at abortion clinics, I can provide the court with information and a perspective unavailable from other sources," McCorvey said.

McCorvey and Sandra Cano-Saucedo, 53, plaintiff of the lesser known Doe vs.

Bolton in which the Supreme Court overturned Georgia's restrictive abortion law on the same day Roe's case involving Texas was decided, are expressing support for five women who filed three state lawsuits in New Jersey. They also filed a federal class-action lawsuit challenging a New Jersey law that prohibits wrongful-death lawsuits when the victim is an unborn child.

Two of the women, identified only as Donna Santa Marie and Jane Jones, and a third woman, Rosa Acuna of Middlesex County, N.J., say their abortions were forced upon them. They sued their doctors who allegedly didn't inform them of the facts.

In the federal suit filed in 1999 in Philadelphia, the women, accompanied by two obstetricians, Dr. Teresa H. Jimenez of Somerville, N.J., and Dr. Myrana Guerra-DeLuna of South Plainfield, N.J., said New Jersey abortion laws violate the rights of mothers and children.

"I'm not pro-life just because of the baby. I'm pro-life because of the woman. I'm pro-woman," Jimenez said. "And I believe that the woman deserves to be well-informed of the consequences (of abortion)." Since the Supreme Court's 1973 landmark decision on abortion, McCorvey has claimed that she was not informed of her choices and the consequences of the abortion. Similarly, Cano-Saucedo said her involvement in the Doe vs. Bolton case was forced on her by her parents and lawyer.

Neither McCorvey nor Cano-Saucedo got an abortion at the time, and both have since become staunch opponents of abortion. Both their children were given up for adoption.

"I am speaking out to get the truth out. I have always been pro-life. We were wrong, and we are trying to overturn that," said Cano-Saucedo, who lives in Atlanta.

McCorvey said her reason for speaking out on this subject was "hopefully overturn Roe v. Wade."

McCorvey, whose identity was kept secret until the 1980s, made a high-profile conversion to evangelical Protestantism in 1995, joining the fervently anti-abortion group, Operation Rescue. She has since converted to Catholicism, and founded an anti-abortion ministry called "Roe No More."

McCorvey and Cano-Saucedo held a news conference prior to filing friend-of-court briefs in the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

They also talked to about 40 to 50 people in front of the Liberty Bell pavilion, along with some women who shared their own abortion experiences. Many supporters wore red caps or jackets that said "Pro Life."

The Rev. James Hutchins, 59, said he was at the gathering to show his support for the litigation.

"These women were lied to, they were fooled. One of them was not for abortion at all. The other woman is the one on whom many cases are decided. And now they're here," said Hutchins, a priest.

As governor, Bush signed the law that now has daughters in trouble

AUSTIN (AP) — President Bush himself signed the tough zero-tolerance underage drinking law that has his twin 19-year-old daughters in trouble.

Austin police on Thursday cited Jenna and Barbara Bush for violating state alcoholic beverage laws. It was Jenna's second offense and Barbara's first.

Then-Gov. George W. Bush on June 19, 1997, signed the law at a public ceremony. The federal government had threatened to withhold highway funding unless states adopted "zero-tolerance" underage drunk-driving laws.

Texas' law also strengthened the state's alcohol code by creating a separate offense with stiff penalties for people under 21 who are caught with or trying to get booze.

The law put in place the three strikes and you're out policy that also requires busted underage drinkers to have their driver's licenses or permits suspended, attend alcohol awareness classes, pay a fine up to $500 and perform up to 12 hours of community service.

That means Jenna Bush, who pleaded no contest to charges of underage drinking just over two weeks ago, could have her license revoked for up to 90 days for the second offense. Her sister faces a possible 30-day suspension.

A third conviction under the law could result in up to six months in jail.

The law has resulted in a crackdown on underage drinking across the state, especially in university cities, said Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission Sgt. Randy Motz.

"This is pretty common, apart from it's prominent people that are involved," Motz said.

Police accused Barbara Bush of being a minor in possession of alcohol and Jenna Bush of misrepresentation of age by a minor for allegedly trying to use fake identification to buy alcohol, according to a statement from the Austin Police Department.

A third person, Jesse Day-Wickham, 19, of Austin, also was cited for being a minor in possession of alcohol.

An associate of the Bush family said Day-Wickham is a girlfriend of the Bush daughters.

The Police Department said it received a call

Tuesday night reporting minors attempting to buy alcohol at Chuy's Restaurant in Austin. Police went to the popular Tex-Mex eatery but did not issue a citation.

Police said a subsequent investigation found that Jenna Bush ordered a margarita and was asked to produce identification proving she was 21. She showed a valid driver's license belonging to someone else, police said. She was not served.

Witnesses said Barbara Bush and Day-Wickham were served margaritas.

Assistant Police Chief Jimmy Chapman said the restaurant checked IDs, but he did not know what ID Barbara Bush and Day-Wickham used. The ID Jenna Bush allegedly used was confiscated and charges could be forthcoming, he said.

Chapman said when police arrived, the daughters and Secret Service agents were cooperative.

Police work closely with TABCO on underage drinking busts, Chapman said. The Bush case was a typical example of how the so-called three-strikes law works, he said.

TO THE EDITOR:

Our daughter, Whitney Worthan, is 10 years old and just completed the fourth grade at Kentwood Elementary School.

Whitney's teacher was Tonya Graves. Graves was a wonderful teacher and Whitney had a most fulfilling year under her guidance. Not only did she learn academically, but Graves was "exceptional" in other ways. She treated all of her students with respect and kindness and her magical sense of humor made her a loving presence in her classroom. I can honestly say that she has made a definite difference in Whitney's attitude towards school.

Thank you, Ms. Graves, for your devotion to your profession. Fourth grade has been a memorable experience for us all.

OTHER VIEWS

A recent study has found that the use of prescribed antidepressant drugs in children and teen-agers between 1988 and 1994 soared three- to five-fold over the seven-year span of the study.

Now the question needing to be answered is: Are there more depressed children, or are these drugs being over-prescribed by doctors?

Health industry observers say the most likely answer is that the medical community is better equipped today to diagnose and treat depression in younger patients. Severe under-treatment of depression in children over the past two decades, they say, probably accounts for the significant increases found.

Which, in a sense, is good news. It should be obvious to the American public that there is a serious problem with depression in children and teens and that they can be treated with medication is promising too. Children and teens certainly aren't immune to mental disorders, and the fact that diagnoses are up indicates a greater awareness in the medical community.

While this is promising on the treatment front, it does nothing to address the root causes of childhood depression. Therapy and treatment for young people who are suffering from depression are beneficial after diagnosis, but there needs to be more study on why so many of our young people are dealing with depression.

Depression is the most common form of serious psychiatric problems in youth and adolescence, and its grip on our children is growing. The options of treatment offer hope, but the question truly in need of an answer is why, and why so many.

TEXARKANA GAZETTE

$1.35 trillion tax cut is nothing but dumb

The National Laboratory for Bad Government has just finished the most interesting experiment, with, as usual, sharp lessons for the rest of the nation. This one is called, "What Can You Do When the Cupboard is Bare?" The answer is: absolutely nothing.

MOLLY IVINS

The 77th session of the Texas Legislature was not, ah, productive. Because, of course, there was no money.

The reason there was no money is because George W. Bush pushed two major tax cuts through the 75th and 76th sessions.

But at least, you may think, the people of Texas are enjoying having a little more change in their pockets. Well, no. You see, as soon as the state cut taxes, the school districts raised theirs.

Most citizens of this state never saw a nickel from the Bush tax cuts, and even if they do live someplace where the school districts, starved for money, didn't add new taxes, what we get comes to a Big Mac a month. Meanwhile, the Legislature spent all session scrambling around to fund health insurance for teachers.

When the cupboard is bare, government becomes an isotonic exercise: Unmet needs push against the equal and opposite force of no money. Unfortunately, the only muscle that develops from this exercise is in the frustration department. Watching this exercise in futility in Austin take place while the Congress of the United States passed another Bush tax cut naturally led me to a spasm of Texas Proud. Our Ledge may have passed a couple of dumb tax cuts to help Bush get to the White House, but at least we never did anything THAT dumb. Pass a $1.35 trillion tax cut that takes effect 10 years out? In happy synchronicity (that's like N'Sync, kids), 10 years from now is precisely when the first of the baby boom generation will begin to retire, presenting us with a Social Security problem of major dimensions.

You may assume that's SO dumb that Bush's federal tax cut will never actually take place: Congress will see what's happening and cut it off before it throws the country back into the deficit/high interest cycle. But there's a law of political physics that applies here: Politicians love to cut taxes; they hate to raise taxes.

Raising taxes, or even canceling a promised tax cut, makes pols unpopular. They get attacked by their opponents and voted out of office for doing that. You may recall the last time the feds raised taxes was 1993, when the Democrats gutted up and raised them on the richest people in the country by exactly one vote. Rush Limbaugh and others of his ilk went ballistic over "the biggest tax increase in history," even though it affected no one we know. (All tax increases and cuts are "the biggest in history" because the size of the economy keeps growing.) In 1994, the Republicans took over Congress. That's cause and effect there.

Now Bush breezes in and starts by sending everybody in the country a check for "up to" $300 (that's being done at the insistence of the Democrats, who keep trying to get something for everyone, rather than for large political donors only). This is the Clinton Bonus, what we get for having Clinton and Robert Rubin in for eight years. What do you think the next president's going to face?

Apparently, we're dumb enough to fall for this once every 20 years. Ronald Reagan gave us a nice, shiny new tax cut in '81, and it only cost us $2 trillion in debt.

Back at Bad Government Central, the session was one long hangover from the Bush years. If it didn't cost any money — like the hate crimes bill and keeping kids out of the back of pick-ups — it got done. However, they could not bring themselves to stop executing the mentally retarded. Even with a record-large budget of $114 billion, the state still can't afford the level of services that would get us up to average in anything.

Forever 48th, that's our motto. It was especially gut-wrenching to watch the $250 million "Marshall Plan" for South Texas get voted down. The level of poverty in the Valley is staggering now: This state has short-changed the Valley since God was young, but this year was supposed to be different. Gov. Goodhair — also known as the Ken Doll, after Barbie's boyfriend — said in his State of the State speech putting money into the infrastructure of South Texas was going to be his top priority. Some top: They don't get a nickel.

So here's the news bulletin from our parts: Living with the aftermath of Bush is a bad hangover. Some people are smart enough to see it coming. When Ronald Reagan was pushing tax cuts 20 years ago, a Republican voted against him, predicting the cuts would lead to massive deficits.

The guy's name was Jim Jeffords.

TO THE EDITOR:
Congratulations to the Big Spring senior class of 2001. Your graduation ceremony was wonderful. You were a "class act" during your graduation.

You are to be applauded for continuing the outstanding behavior that is a tradition with graduation at Big Spring High School.

The respect that you showed for each and every graduate was marvelous. This ceremony will surely be remembered by each and every graduate.

As a friend and colleague, I know the work that goes into this endeavor. Mike Ritchey, you and your staff are to be commended for putting together such a memorable night for the seniors of Big Spring High School.

The entire ceremony was a night to remember. It was most impressive that the entire faculty and staff were present to support the seniors during their graduation.

It is said that a work place takes on the personality of the person in charge, there is no doubt that Big Spring High School is in good hands.

Learn to communicate effectively with your family members

Growing up in Farmington, N.M., my dad took ample opportunities to teach me the joys of hunting and fishing. One particular incident stands out in my mind. We were fishing for trout at Humbert Lake; I was about 8 years old. As luck would have it, I caught the largest trout of the day.

CHUCK BREYMAN

Although my dad didn't say a lot to me directly, I knew that he found special pleasure in my success that day. I had done everything that he had instructed me to do in my years of training. As Dad and I spent many more days in the outdoors, I began to know the times he was proud of me as well as the times he was disappointed in me.

Communication is conveyed in many ways such as the expressions on the face, hugs, thumbs up and of course, spoken and written language. I want to discuss effective communication with family by using the counsel of our Heavenly Father.

Elder Marvin J. Ashton, of the Council of the Twelve in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, wrote seven basic suggestions for more effective family communication, which I will share with you now.

1. "A willingness to sacrifice." Providing time for communication is something that each of us must do in order to "open the lines" of dialogue. When a family member needs to talk about what happened at school, a social event, Scouts, church or work, how often do we say, "Just a minute, I'm busy." After a while, these opportunities are gone. The window of opportunity may only be one minute and can prove so very important in sharing your time with others.

2. "A willingness to set the stage." We must be willing to let the other person be front and center as we appropriately respond to what is being said. The stage can be set just about anywhere including the banks of a lake, the kitchen table, or maybe in the car. The important thing is that complete attention is given to the person speaking.

3. "A willingness to listen. Listening is more than just being quiet." Listening is undivided attention with a real effort to understand what is being said. How great is the counsel, "Wherefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath: for the wrath of man worketh not righteousness of God." (James 1:19 - 20 KJV).

4. "A willingness to vocalize feelings. How important it is to be willing to voice one's thought and feelings." Yes, how important it is to be able to converse on the level of each family member. Too often we are inclined to let family members assume how we feel toward them. Often, wrong conclusions are reached by significant others expected to know how we feel about something. I frequently fail to vocalize my feelings, especially when it involves expressions of love. Everything usually goes better when I express my love in words to my family during difficult times and grateful times.

5. "A willingness to avoid judgment." We need to try to understand what is being said and keep an open mind. It is not effective communication when we simply impose our values on others. We should respect the free agency of others, as long as it does not violate any laws, and strive to assist the person in becoming the person God intended him or her to be.

6. "A willingness to maintain confidence." Often, confidences are broken in an attempt to make one look better in the eyes of others. Maintaining confidences will ensure that the family member gains trust. Small confidences often precede more important confidences.

7. "A willingness to practice patience." Effective communication, like anything worthwhile, takes time. "It takes courage to communicate patiently. We constantly need to express pride, hope and love on a most sincere basis. Each of us needs to avoid coming through as one who has given up and totally weary of trying."

Basically, effective communication starts with prayer to our Father in Heaven.

While it is my belief that God knows everything about us, I also know that we have the responsibility of voicing our gratitude, wants and righteous desires in prayer.

Our family communication will improve by making the effort to obtain the virtues mentioned and by daily prayer to our Father in Heaven who loves us. I say this in the name of Jesus Christ, amen.

Chuck Breyman is bishop of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Other trips will be discussed at a later date and members will be contacted about dates and costs.

Also discussed during the meeting was a one-day trip to Lake Henry, about 30 miles east of Snyder, taken by seven members and enjoyed by all.

Prayer requests for several members were lead by Latrice Davis. Member Joyce Fortenberry had recently been inducted in the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The next club meeting is set for June 19 in the Fellowship Hall of East Fourth Baptist Church with a presentation by Pam Stevens, director of the Senior Circle program sponsored by Scenic Mountain Medical Center and the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center.

Big Spring Morning Optimist
"If natural gas was discovered today, we wouldn't be allowed to use it," states Gordon Leaman, a chemical engineer with Alon USA.

Leaman served as a guest speaker at Optimist club Wednesday morning.

"It's been 25 years since a new refinery has been built in the USA. Fifty years ago at least 300 refineries operated in the United States. Now only 154 are still producing. It's an economical and regulatory matter. It's hard to get new permits because of environmental issues."

"Our Alon refinery in Big Spring processes an average of 60,000 barrels a day," Leaman continued.

"Eighty percent comes from domestic sources. We produce five or six grades of gasoline here. We also produce a lot of blends of performance grade asphalt."

"The majority of our product is transported by pipeline. Some leaves by rail, some by truck. Some tankers are loaded with molten product; the trucks have to be heated again to unload the product," explains Leaman. Remember kerosene? It's not a product of the past. According to Leaman, "Gasoline blended with kerosene becomes jet fuel."

Asked about the increasing cost of a gallon of gasoline, Leaman comments, "Each product has rigid requirements. We spend quite a bit of money to refine oil and gas products to meet EPA specifications."

Leaman does not offer hope for decreasing gas prices. "In 2003, Alon is going to spend a lot of money to buy equipment to remove sulfur content from our products to comply with progressive EPA directives."

Sulfur is then sold as a by-product. Sidney Clark and club president Roger Goertz presented Leaman with a certificate of appreciation for bringing our program.

Howard County Retired Teachers Association

The Howard County Retired Teachers Association recently donated two books to each first grade student at Washington Elementary School.

The donation was part of a statewide Children's Book Drive sponsored by the Texas Retired Teachers Association.

The purpose of the drive is to place a book in the hands of a child who otherwise might not have a book to call his very own; this book belongs to him to have at home.

A sticker identifying the book as a gift from the Local Unit of TRTA was placed on the back of each book.

Retired public school and higher education personnel recognize that the ability to read serves as the foundation for all education and the availability of books encourages children to read.

This project gives the retirees from education and opportunity to conduct a project that ties into their life-long careers, addressing the current problems in education and thus the economic structure of the country.

Through this project retired public school and higher education personnel continue to be a part of the education system of Texas even in retirement.

The Howard County Retired Teachers Association meets every third Monday, September through May.

Betty Cox is the current president.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, June 2:

Your creativity comes out, but then you always come up with solutions when asked or when under the gun. Emphasize your work with an eye to your future. Others might want to focus on health. Some will combine the two concerns. You break patterns this year. A trip or a relationship with someone at a distance might not be what it seems. If you are single, check out someone carefully before becoming too involved. Sometimes you get so excited by a potential sweetie, you kid yourself about what is happening. If you are attached, create much more of what you both want. You enjoy life and projects together. SCORPIO pitches in.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

Discuss recent adventures with a partner. You might be experiencing the same event much differently. By taking time to reconnect and share, you rebond deeply and meaningfully. Know that anything is possible if you open up. Tonight: Make nice.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

Brainstorm with friends and a partner. You come up with interesting plans that you ordinarily might not choose. Go with others' ideas. You might find life far more exciting! Think in terms of success rather than in terms of problems. Tonight: Say yes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

Plunge into a project, though you might want to discuss your ideas with a friend or loved one in the know. By recognizing your limits, you open up the door to new potential. Consider a healthier diet and exercise program to increase energy. Tonight: Make easy plans.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

Your flirtatious ways have not only you but also someone else daydreaming. Invite this person to go for a drive. In a different atmosphere, sharing and loving happen naturally. A new person could become more. Tonight: Be naughty.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

Stop or slow down. Take time for family and loved ones. Letting others know how much you care by giving them the attention they need and desire warms up your surroundings. Let your sun beam inside your house and inside your personal life. Tonight: You don't have to go far.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Express your opinions loud and clear. Dance to a new tune, and others will love being around you. Make calls and seek out those who are important to you. Get together for a favorite activity and meal. Tonight: Add a touch of flirtation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

A call needs to be made early in the day when someone will be there to answer it. You cannot keep avoiding a situation. Financial matters come together as long as you don't take great risks. Ask questions before you sign an agreement. Tonight: Indulge in the good life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

Once you get going this morning, you might have a hard time stopping. You have both energy and whimsy on your side. Review a personal matter carefully with family. Don't take another's opinions for granted. Ask for feedback. Tonight: Everyone wants to be around you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

After recent activity, a lazy day fits right into your needs. Let others find you and make plans that suit you. You don't need permission. Take a walk or indulge in a favorite activity that helps you relax. Arrange your day for yourself, rather than for others. Tonight: A little mystery goes a long way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-

Jan. 19)

Enhance a friendship by inviting this person to join you on an important errand or happening. The more you reveal, the closer this person can become. Join your buddies for fun. Don't hold back. Have fun too. Tonight: Where the action is.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

Sometimes you might find it difficult to relax. A request from someone puts you on guard. You answer the challenge and take responsibility. Whatever you do might feel a little like work. Don't agree to do something you don't want to do. Tonight: A force to behold.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

Continue a discussion about the future. Others might be more excited than you are about the prospect of a trip or special happening. Don't kid yourself and pretend that everything is OK when it isn't. Be honest with yourself, and relating will become easier. Tonight: Let others entertain you. Go to a concert or movie.

Agassi gathers momentum as Sampras and Chang depart

PARIS (AP) — Within a day of each other, Pete Sampras and Michael Chang were second-round casualties at the French Open. At age 29, both are losing momentum.

Andre Agassi, at 31, believes he is just getting started.

"I'm still waiting to shift gears," the 1999 French champion said after his second consecutive straight-set victory on Paris' red clay.

"The two matches I've had haven't been of a nature that allows me to feel I overcame any obstacles." Agassi's latest pushover was Frenchman Julien Boutter, who was defeated 6-3, 6-2, 6-2 Thursday.

The win signaled Agassi's return to form on clay after disappointing performances on the surface earlier this season, and his readiness to bid for a second straight Grand Slam title.

The third-seeded player won the Australian Open in January, and two other tournaments in Indian Wells and Key Biscayne.

Looking comfortable in long rallies despite being the second-oldest player left, Agassi has a strong chance of at least making the final in this year's French.

Possible semifinal opponents in his half of the draw are 1998 runner-up Alex Corretja and Marat Safin, seeded No. 2 but in poor form all season.

Sampras bit the red dust in straight sets Thursday against Galo Blanco, a Spaniard ranked 76th in the world. Agassi was not surprised. "There's fundamentals that you need on the clay that really help your chances," he said. "It's never been easy for a game like Pete's to do well here.

"On clay, you can't just explode for one shot and hit through the court."

Agassi dismissed a suggestion that Sampras, who holds a men's record 13 Grand Slam titles, was unwise not to seek advice on his clay-court game from anyone other than his coach, Paul Annacone.

"Maybe he could win 14 or 15 slams. I mean, I think he's really been a disappointment," Agassi said facetiously.

In the other half of the men's draw looms defending champion

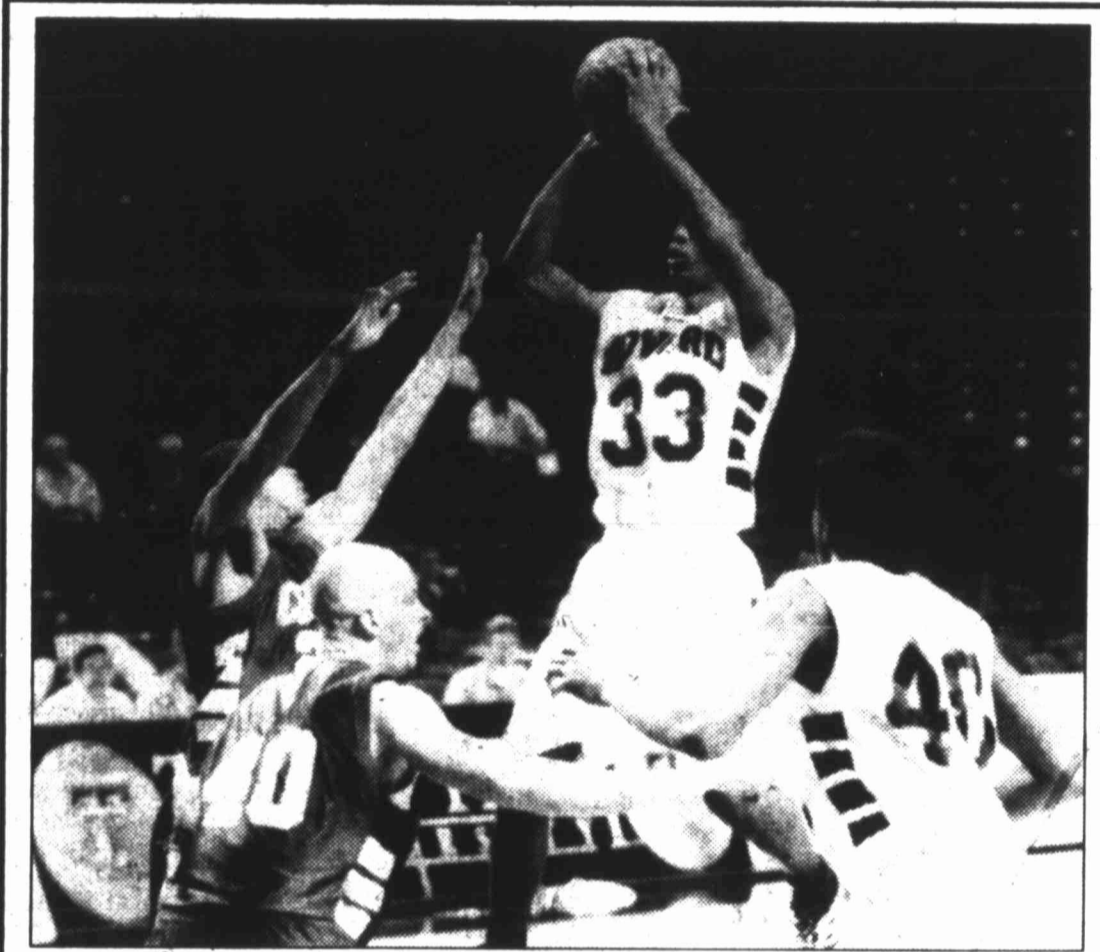

Gustavo Kuerten, widely considered the best clay-court player in the world and the favorite to win the French.

American teen-ager Andy Roddick is in Kuerten's half of the draw, making him an unlikely opponent should Agassi reach the final.

The 18-year-old rising star overcame cramping to beat Chang in an epic match on Wednesday that was reminiscent of the former champion's own fourth-round victory over Ivan Lendl in 1989.

"I love Roddick's game," Agassi said. "He doesn't hope for somebody to lose. He really tries to win."

Roddick, who served 37 aces against Chang, was to face No. 6 Lleyton Hewitt in the third round Friday.

Bucks beginning to wonder ...

ST. FRANCIS, Wis. (AP) — Ray Allen suspects the whistles aren't blowing Milwaukee's way in the Eastern Conference finals for a reason.

Stopping just short of claiming an outright anti-Bucks conspiracy, Allen said Thursday that the NBA would prefer to see the Philadelphia 76ers face the Los Angeles Lakers for the title.

"I think there's no question about that. The league, as a marketing machine, the bottom line is about making money," Allen said. "It behooves everybody for the league to make more money, and the league knows that Philadelphia is going to make more money with L.A. than we would with L.A."

After all, the Sixers have the league's MVP in Allen Iverson, its top sixth man in Aaron McKie, the coach of the year in Larry Brown and the defensive player of the year in Dikembe Mutombo.

The Bucks? They have a nondescript roster that includes three jumpshooters, no inside scoring threat and no reserve strength to speak of.

That doesn't sell as well as the Sixers against Kobe & Shaq.

Coming off a one-point loss in Game 5 in which two late flagrant fouls and a technical cost the Bucks dearly, Milwaukee now faces a must-win situation in Game 6 Friday night.

The 76ers lead the best-of-seven series 3-2, with the winner moving on to face the Lakers in the NBA Finals next week.

Thompson, Arcain lead way for Comets

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana Fever coach Nell Fortner told her team the key to beating the Houston Comets was shutting down veterans Tina Thompson and Janeth Arcain.

The Fever players learned in their season opener that their first-year coach knows what she's talking about.

Thompson and Arcain scored 26 points each in an 82-78 win for the Comets on Thursday night.

"We're just young," Fortner said. "I'm not going to talk about their youth all year long. But when you play against two tremendous players that make great big shots, it's tough."

The loss spoiled the WNBA coaching debut for Fortner, who coached the U.S. women's basketball team to an Olympic gold medal in Sydney.

Thompson and Arcain combined to score 13 of the team's 17 points in the final six minutes.

Their presence on the court might have eased the mind of Comets coach Van Chancellor, who is playing this year without All-Stars Cynthia Cooper and Sheryl Swoopes.

Cooper retired, and Swoopes, last season's most valuable player and leading scorer, is out for the season with a knee

Pine Needles wins the first day of 56th U.S. Women's Open

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (AP) — Everyone wanted to know how Annika Sorenstam played, what the pregnant women shot and whether the 13-year-old player kept her cool.

A series of soap opera-like dramas that developed prior to the 56th U.S. Women's Open gave way to actual golf Thursday.

The real winner after 18 holes was the Donald Ross-designed course at Pine Needles Lodge & Golf Club, which yielded just nine rounds under par.

Sorenstam, the best women's player in the world this season with five LPGA wins and a 59 to her credit, was average by her standards, shooting an even-par 70.

But the winner of the '96 Open at Pine Needles was positioned well within striking distance of co-leaders A.J. Easton of Canada and Cindy Figg-Currier, who each shot 3-under 67s.

"It's not an easy golf course," said Sorenstam, who also started with a 70 when she shot 8 under here five years ago. "Obviously, you have to be patient and go from here."

Sorenstam had an uncharacteristic up-and-down round, carding four birdies, 11 pars, two bogeys and one double bogey. She wasn't exactly thrilled with her 8 a.m. tee time, either.

"I got up at 5 a.m.," she said. "That was really early. It's kind of hard to wake up and get loose."

Brenda Corrie Kuehn, playing eight months pregnant, also had a rough start, going 8 over on the front nine before shooting a 79.

The 36-year-old amateur from Asheville held up pretty well walking 18 holes in her condition, except when she doubled over after her drive on No. 11. A contraction hit her in the middle of a swing.

"Ideally, I would just like to be a little fly and play my 18 holes and go home," Kuehn said of all the media attention.

One fan yelled, "One for the baby" when Kuehn saved par on No. 17 with a 7-footer.

Kuehn got a surprise when she walked to the first tee and found another expectant mother in her threesome — Jennifer Greggain, who is 21 weeks along.

Meanwhile, teen-ager Morgan Pressell, who goes to Omni Middle School in Boca Raton, Fla., and is the youngest qualifier in U.S.

Jones, Cowboys considering Arlington for new stadium

FORT WORTH (AP) — A $500 million stadium could be the Dallas Cowboys' new home, but team owner Jerry Jones says taxpayers would have to help finance the project.

Jones has been considering what it would take to relocate the team's venue to the Dallas-Fort Worth midcities. The city of Arlington is considered a leading contender for the team's home.

"We're moving quickly now, and Arlington is obviously close to the center of the Metroplex," Jones told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in Friday's editions. "This would be a focal point of sports not just here, but nationally. This would not just be a place for the Cowboys to play."

The new stadium, Jones said, should have 100,000 seats and a retractable roof and should host the Super Bowl within a year or two of opening. He wants a 300-acre site that could accommodate projects such as a Cowboys Hall of Fame or art gallery.

Although the Cowboys owners declined to project stadium costs, he said earlier that they might reach $500 million.

The Cowboys' current home at Texas Stadium in the Dallas suburb of Irving is under a lease which expires in 2006. Jones said it may be extended to 2008. The city of Irving, which levies the maximum 8.25-cent tax allowed by state law, cannot offer any new sales tax revenue for a new stadium.

A renovated Texas Stadium is still an option, see COWBOYS, page 2B

Smith, Verplank share lead, but Tiger lurks two shots back

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Just about everything went wrong for Tiger Woods in his first few holes at the Memorial Tournament.

And he still had one of the best rounds of the day.

Woods twice dunked shots into ponds on the first five holes, but came back for two eagles in a five-hole span for a 4-under-par 68 that left him two shots behind co-leaders Chris Smith and Scott Verplank after the first round.

"It was definitely a bonus to end up in the 60s," said Woods, who has won the last two Memorial Tournaments. "I'm just trying to get back to even-par or 1-under par because anything even-par or better is going to be a good score."

After playing the first 10 holes in 2 over, Woods was 5 under on the next five holes to turn things around. He hit a 3-iron on his second shot into the par-5 11th and made the 20-foot eagle putt, then followed that with an 18-footer for birdie on the signature water hole, the 12th. At the par-5 15th, Woods reached the green with a 5-iron second shot and rolled in a 4-footer for eagle.

A birdie at No. 17 gave him a 6-under 30 on the back nine — a shot off the course record — and had to send shivers down the backs of the rest of the players.

"The guy's remarkable — how could you say anything else?" Verplank said after a round of seven birdies and one bogey. "Nobody's played like he's played."

Sergio Garcia, who matched Woods with a 68, said, "He's so aggressive and so good he can stiff it on every single hole. That shows how strong mentally he is. He makes a double, and it doesn't get to him and he's able to bounce back."

Woods said other players should only reach one conclusion.

"The message is still the same: I try on every shot. I don't bag it," said the winner of five of the last six major championships. "You've just got to be patient and know that you can turn it around."

Smith is a former Ohio State player who has played the Muirfield Village Golf Course hundreds of times — even though this is his first trip to the Memorial.

"I've looked forward to this, oh, for a mere 10 years," he said.

The first player in the first group of the day, Smith said he could hardly wait to get going. He had bugged the tour office until he was certain that he was in the field.

"This is more important to me than any other tournament," said Smith.

Verplank, who grew up playing hot and dry courses in Texas and Oklahoma, said he is at his best when the greens are fast and hard, as Muirfield's have been so far this week.

Verplank had to withdraw two weeks ago at Colonial after his coughing from allergies caused him to pull a muscle in his back. He used the week off to get treatments and recover from his allergies.

He almost took the lead by himself, but his 20-foot birdie putt on the last hole curled off inches short of the hole.

Broken promise to her shows his disrespect

Dear Ann Landers: During a lovely vacation in another country, I reluctantly allowed my boyfriend to photograph us while we were having sex. (He set the camera on a timer.) There were also some nude shots of me alone. We live in a small town, and I was concerned about our privacy. I told my boyfriend that the pictures needed to be developed through a mail-order processor so that no one would recognize us. He said he understood and would respect my wishes. I was shocked when I ran across the developed pictures in the glove compartment of his car. Not only were they developed at our local pharmacy, but the envelope had my name and address on it. I confronted my boyfriend about this, and he brushed me off, saying I shouldn't make such a big deal out of nothing. In fact, he said he used the local pharmacy on purpose because I was so adamantly against it. I think it shows how little he cares about my feelings. What do you say, Ann? Your response may determine whether or not we have a future together. -- Wisner Now in Washington

Dear Ann Landers: I thought you and your readers might be interested in a follow-up to the letter I wrote you about adopting a child from China. My father was totally against it and making me miserable. I signed my letter 'Betwixt and Between in the Midwest.' You told me to go ahead with the adoption and not say anymore about it to my father until the baby arrived. You said he would come around. We followed your advice.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and two young children would like to get a cat to complement our household. I think this is a great idea. The problem is my mother visits us every other month and sleeps over. She has an allergy to cats and says if we have one, she will not be able to come to our house any longer. Mind you, she has a friend with three cats and visits her all the time. We have looked into the amount of care needed for a cat and have checked out the local animal shelter. The children have their hearts set on the cat we promised and keep asking when we will bring it home. I have tried to reason with Mom about it, but she refuses to budge. I have offered to put the cat and the litter box in another room during her visits, but she insists that if we go ahead with this, it means we no longer care about her.

I am beginning to resent my mother a lot, and it's getting to the point where I don't care if she visits us or not. What do you suggest? -- Cat Lover in Iowa

Dear Iowa: Your mother sounds manipulative and controlling, but you promised the children a cat and must keep your word. Your vet will tell you where you can "board" the cat when your mother visits. Galling, yes, but your relationship with your mother depends on it.

Dear Ann Landers: I thought you and your readers might be interested in a follow-up to the letter I wrote you about adopting a child from China. My father was totally against it and making me miserable. I signed my letter 'Betwixt and Between in the Midwest.' You told me to go ahead with the adoption and not say anymore about it to my father until the baby arrived. You said he would come around. We followed your advice.

My husband and I came home from China with a baby girl last September. She is a beautiful, happy child and has managed to wrap Grandpa around her little finger. It took less than a week. Grandpa comes to our house to see her every other day and is so proud of the fact that he has taught her to wave "bye-bye."

Thanks, Ann, for the great advice. You were so right. -- Settled in the Midwest
Dear Midwest, I'm pleased you took my advice and it produced such wonderful results. That child is a lucky little girl -- and you are lucky, too.
