Davis to leave chamber for full-time faculty position

By LYNDEL MOODY
Staff Writer

Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce executive director Terri Davis will leave her position with the chamber in August to take a full-time faculty position at Howard College.

"This is a goal I had set for myself many years ago, to become a full-time faculty member at Howard College," Davis said. "This is a good thing."

Davis has been teaching business classes on a part-time basis at Howard College for the past several years and said the retirement of long-time business instructor Tommy Rutledge gave her the opportunity to follow up on her goal.

"People who know me will not be surprised by my decision," she said.

"This comes at a great time in my life."

Davis has led the chamber for a little more than four years. She said even though she is pleased with taking on a new position, she is sad to leave the chamber.

"June 4 was my fourth anniversary (as executive director of the chamber)," she said.

"It has been wonderful," she added.

With her years of experience from working with and promoting area businesses and her background in education, Davis plans to use her knowledge to give back to her students and area businesses.

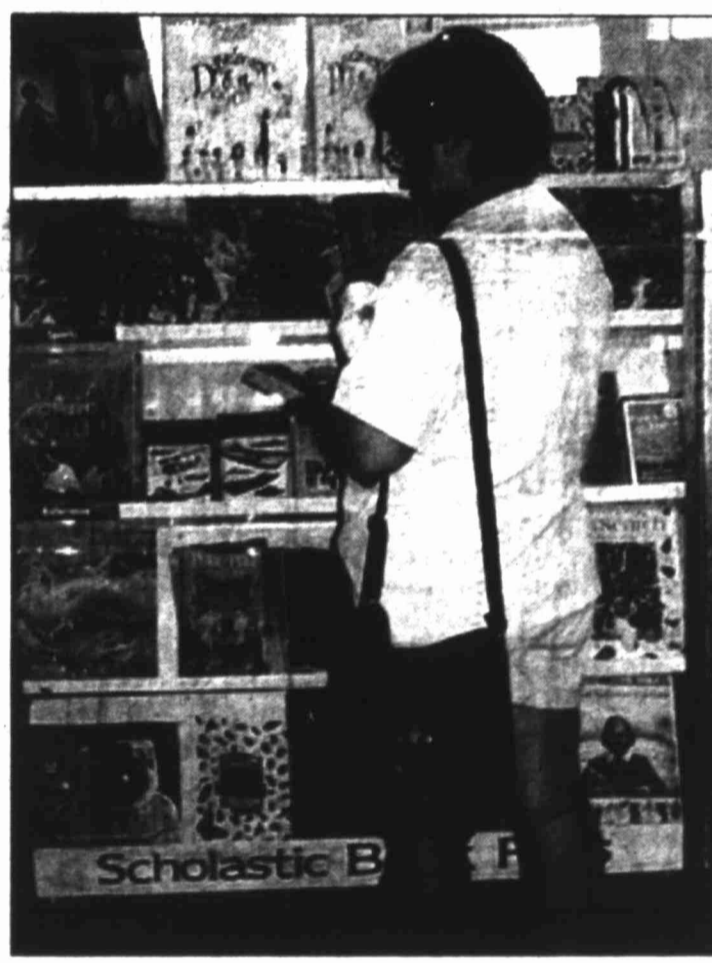

"The thing about being an instructor is you get to give back," she said.

Davis will continue as the executive director until Aug. 10, but does not know at this time who might replace her.

"That will be up to the board," she said. I have visited with John Freeman, the board president, and I will be involved with the process as much as the board wants me to be."

Davis said she wants to make the transition as easy as possible for the chamber.

County Court OKs pact to house female inmates in Midland

By LYNDEL MOODY
Staff Writer

Howard County commissioners approved a contract through the Midland County Sheriff's Office that will provide housing and care for Howard County female inmates on Monday.

KILGORE

"The county has no facilities for female inmates," said Commissioner Jerry Kilgore.

According to Kilgore, the contract will provide the county with the ability to transport female prisoners to Midland County which has facilities to house the prisoners.

Commissioners approved the burn ban ordinance set by County Judge Ben Lockhart on June 15. Lockhart said earlier that he enacted the ordinance because area weather forecasters offer little promise of change in hot, dry conditions.

Those conditions pose a threat of large, dangerous and fast-moving wildfires which would have the potential of endangering lives and property or on a large scale loss, he said.

Along with the burn ban, commissioners agreed with Lockhart's ordinance to restrict the sale and use of certain fireworks.

Those fireworks prohibited are rockets on a stick and missiles with fins and rudders.

The Howard County Library still has a problem with water leaks commissioners learned.

"By the landscaping area (of the library) it appears there is a broken pipe and it has been like that for some time," said Howard County Librarian Hollis McCright. "The soil has been saturated by the constant leak."

Water has been leaking into the community room and children's room, both located in the library's basement. As a result, several ceiling tiles have been damaged.

The county has replaced the old asphalt parking lot of the library that runs over the roof of the basement with a concrete slab because water was seeping through the cracks onto the roof.

The water from the saturated soil is leaking onto the parking lot, through the cracks of the construction and into the basement roof, McCright said.

In other business: Commissioners accepted the resignation of Woodie Howell as Precinct 1 constable.

Heart of City Festival to kick off Saturday downtown

By LINDY BARR

Big Spring's Heart of the City Park is going to hold the first Heart of the City Festival this weekend. This is going to be the first big event held in the park since its grand opening in October.

Preparations for the festival will be made all day on Friday. Activities will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday and continue through 6 p.m. The festival will resume at noon Sunday and continue through 5 p.m.

"Admission for all the family fun is going to be free," said Mel Prather, chairman of the festival.

Heart of the City Park is located downtown on the southwest corner of Third and Scurry streets, just north of the Howard County Courthouse.

The festival will include displays of food and art available for purchase.

Food will include turkey legs, barbecue, sausage on a stick and more. Refreshments include lemonade, soft drinks and water.

There will be many exhibitors from all over the Southwest.

"You will be able to find marble art, clothing, beautiful jewelry, ceramics, pottery, woodwork, iron work and many varieties of colorful floral works," Prather noted.

"Since this is the first year for a big event in the park, we thought that this would be a great way to show off the new park to all the citizens who haven't seen it yet," Prather commented.

"Big Spring has wonderful indoor arts and crafts shows but we just thought that it would be great to try something different and see if people were willing to adjust with the outdoors.

"All of the exhibitors thought that it would be a great idea, too, and they were all willing to exhibit outside."

There will be a hospitality booth for those needing directions and drinks will be available for those needing relief from the heat.

"This is going to be a great event to take your family to and make a day of it," said Prather.

By JOHN A. MOSELEY
Managing Editor

John Cansino, 33, of Lubbock was booked into the Howard County Jail on a charge of murder Monday afternoon after having been transported from Tahoka by Big Spring police officers.

Cansino has been charged with murder in connection with the Jan. 20 death of his 7-week-old son, Julian. Howard County Justice of the Peace Bonnie Green arraigned him following his arrival Monday and set a bond of $150,000.

Department of Public Safety troopers arrested Cansino following a traffic stop in Lynn County at 10:30 p.m. Saturday after Green issued a warrant, charging him with murder on Friday.

Homicide was ruled in the death of the 7-week-old Big Spring boy who was brought to Scenic Mountain Medical Center by his family that January night.

The child died as a result of trauma to the head, according to an autopsy conducted by a Dallas pathologist.

According to police reports, when the boy's mother, Elaine Cansino, See JAILED, Page 2 found her infant son unresponsive and not breathing, he was rushed to the hospital. Efforts to revive him were unsuccessful.

He was pronounced dead by Green, who ordered an autopsy.

The body was sent to Lubbock for an autopsy. When the pathologist in Lubbock said it looked like more than a routine death, Green ordered a more thorough autopsy conducted in Dallas.

The Dallas County Medical Examiner's Office report indicated that the infant's death was due to blunt force injuries to the head and the manner of death was a homicide.

Fugitive wanted in Texas loses his fight to be sent back

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — A fugitive wanted in Texas for aggravated assault lost his fight to remain in Nebraska, where he was ordered to live following his conviction.

David Borrink pleaded guilty to two counts of aggravated assault in a Williamson County, Texas, district court in 1998.

As part of his sentence, Borrink was placed on probation for 10 years. One of the terms of the probation said, "The defendant, when released to community supervision, shall immediately leave the state of Texas to return to the state of Nebraska. The defendant shall not return to Texas during the term of his supervision except upon order of the 26th District Court."

Another part of his probation required him to regularly check in with a Texas probation officer.

In February 2000, the district attorney for Williamson County said Borrink violated numerous provisions of his probation and applied for him to be extradited from Nebraska to Texas.

Borrink was arrested in Douglas County, Neb.

Borrink challenged his extradition, saying he was not a fugitive and he had not violated his probation because he left Texas as required by the order.

He said he tried to fulfill his Texas probation order in Nebraska, but Texas never sent the paperwork needed for that to happen.

Borrink said he complied with other terms of his probation, including attending counseling, participating in mental health treatment and paying the fines offered by the Texas court.

However, he did not provide any documentation of such activities or payments.

Under the law, Borrink fits the definition of a fugitive because he left the state where he was prosecuted, the Nebraska Court of Appeals said in a decision released Tuesday.

Violation of the terms of probation is sufficient under Nebraska law for a fugitive to be extradited, the court said.

It will be up to the Texas courts to decide whether Borrink actually fulfilled the terms of his probation, the court said.

Retired Army Reserve officer convicted, now faces life term

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A retired Army Reserve officer was convicted Tuesday of smuggling military documents to the Soviet Union over 25 years, becoming one of the Cold War's most prolific master spies.

The jury deliberated just two hours before finding George Trofimoff, 74, guilty of a single federal espionage charge. He faces life in prison.

Trofimoff, a retired colonel, is the highest-ranking U.S. military officer to be arrested on spy charges. He was arrested a year ago trying to collect money he thought was coming from the Russians.

Trofimoff insisted that he never was a spy, but was forced to pretend to be one because of money problems. Some jurors laughed at his testimony Monday.

Trofimoff served as chief of the Army interrogation center in Nuremberg, Germany, from 1968 until 1994, when he was arrested by German authorities for spying. Charges were dropped when authorities could not prove spying occurred before the five-year statute of limitations expired.

The center regularly housed volumes of secret briefing documents that detailed what the United States knew and didn't know about its Soviet adversaries and other Warsaw Pact nations.

Among the information prosecutors said Trofimoff passed to the Soviets were details of what the United States knew about their military preparedness, which exposed potential American sources and gave the Soviets an opportunity to change how they prepared for war.

A former KGB general has described Trofimoff as one of the Soviet Union's top spies during the 1970s.

"George Trofimoff wasn't an accidental spy. He wasn't casual and he wasn't a sloppy spy," Assistant U.S. Attorney Laura Ingersoll told jurors Monday during closing arguments. "In a very real sense he was the perfect spy."

Trofimoff was recruited as a spy by Igor Susemihl, a high-ranking priest for the Moscow-controlled branch of the Russian Orthodox church. Susemihl also was arrested and freed in 1994; he died five years later.

Trofimoff, who married five times, concealed his activities for 25 years from U.S. authorities and his wives. He controlled access to the documents and carefully copied them at night in his basement.

Trofimoff's defense attorney said the retiree is a patriot who desperately needed money and who made up a rich tale of spying to collect cash from a man he thought was a Russian official.

Trofimoff testified that it was a "coincidence" that in his meeting with an undercover FBI agent he was able to provide the correct first names of several KGB agents whose pictures were shown.

"If he had asked me 'Did you give us the Brooklyn Bridge?' I would have told him 'yes,'" Trofimoff said Monday.

Trofimoff, a Melbourne resident who lived in an exclusive development for military retirees, was working as a grocery store bagger when he was indicted.

ing to disclose them, but he was allowed to stay in office until his term expires in 2004.

Under the plea bargain, Supervisor Jerry Eaves will spend the next three years on probation and can't run for office again for four years. He was also fined $20,000.

Eaves did not attend Monday's hearing but said in a statement that the accusations were politically driven and had consumed him for more than a year.

"After long discussions with my attorney, my family and very close friends, I have decided that today's settlement is the best thing to do, for all," he wrote.

Eaves accepted free fishing trips to Canada in 1995, 1996 and 1997 from an attorney representing a bond underwriting firm. He later voted to approve county bond measures the firm was underwriting without disclosing the trips. The public funds, worth more than $160 million, were used to buy hospital equipment and help redevelop a former Air Force base.

The county has been hampered by a series of corruption scandals over the past decade, including several county officials pleading guilty to bribery in 1999.

DALLAS (AP) — The future of an 8-year-old girl who was locked in a closet and severely malnourished could be decided by a Dallas County judge who is also reviewing the cases of her five siblings.

Protective Services.

Meanwhile, an East Texas couple who tried to adopt Lauren when she was born but lost custody when the birth mother changed her mind and wanted the baby back, planned to again seek custody of Lauren during the hearing.

A custody hearing scheduled Tuesday morning before Judge Cheryl Lee Shannon was expected to decide whether the siblings of Lauren Calhoun should be placed with relatives or left in foster homes under the custody of Child

Lauren was locked in a closet for months and weighed only 25 pounds when she was rescued earlier this month from her home in Hutchins, located south of Dallas.

Authorities said she was imprisoned in a urine- and feces-contaminated closet for at least four months in Atkinson's home. Police also are investigating evidence that the girl was sexually abused.

Barbara Atkinson and Lauren's stepfather, Kenneth Ray Atkinson, were arrested last week on charges of injury to a child, a felony that carries a prison term from five to 99 years.

Both remain at the Dallas

County Jail and were not expected to attend the hearing.

Barbara was being held in lieu of $100,000 bond. Police said Kenneth Ray Atkinson faces charges of probation violation in Ellis County and would not be released on bond.

Bill and Sabrina Kavanaugh of Canton, said they were hopeful they will regain custody of Lauren.

The couple has been undergoing psychological evaluations and other tests with CPS officials. If approved for temporary custody, they'll attend six to eight weeks of classes that teach foster children how to deal with mentally challenged children.

Barbara Atkinson's attorney said last week that her client will voluntarily give up her parental rights to Lauren in favor of the Kavanaughs, if approved by Judge Shannon and CPS.

Douglas Dunn, a Dallas lawyer appointed by the court to represent the six children, was not available for comment Monday.

CPS spokeswoman Stacey Ladd said Lauren's birth father would have to be located and terminate his parental rights before adoption proceedings could be completed.

Lauren remains in Children's Hospital in serious but stable condition, said CPS spokeswoman Stacey Ladd.

"I don't anticipate she'll get out any time soon," she said.

GOP lawmakers mount attacks on HMO bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate Republicans are planning large-scale alternatives to a patients' rights bill pushed by the Senate's Democratic majority.

Republican senators are introducing amendments, or changes, that would curb the lawsuit provisions sought by Democrats for aggrieved patients in HMOs and other health plans.

In particular, they want to keep employers from being sued simply because they provided the health insurance. A vote was expected on the issue Tuesday.

Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H., said that, without such a limitation, "The practical effect is that a lot of employers are going to drop their insurance."

Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., a co-sponsor of the Senate bill, said employers should be protected, but not with the GOP approach that he says has "significant problems."

Democrats and Republicans agree on many of the same popular measures in the Democratic-backed bill — guaranteed payments for reasonable emergency room visits, mandated hospital stays for breast cancer patients and access to specialists such as gynecologists and pediatricians.

But the two sides differ on how patients should proceed in court if things go wrong.

Democrats and their supporters believe patients harmed by an HMO's actions should be able sue in federal or state court, where damage awards tend to be higher.

Republicans insist that patients complete outside appeals before heading to federal court, rather than state court. They also would reduce the Democrats' $5 million limit on punitive damages in federal cases and provide a better shield for employers who offer health coverage.

Edwards, a trial lawyer who has been helping negotiate a compromise, remains opposed to limiting patients to federal courts. Edwards said such courts are difficult for patients to get to and have huge case backlogs.

"It's not an accident that members of the federal judiciary say 'We shouldn't have all of these cases,'" said Edwards, referring to letters from federal judges about the bill.

Nonetheless, a group of senators backed by the White House will introduce such changes later in the week. They include Sens. Bill Frist, R-Tenn., John Breaux, D-La., and James Jeffords, the Vermont independent.

Breaux said Monday that he would try to enlist fellow conservative Democrats in their mission to limit costly lawsuits and excessive awards, and eliminate any threat the new federal law would present to existing state rules on health plan coverage.

"The goal is to get a bill that will become law," he said.

Meanwhile, House GOP leaders say they'll present a patients' rights bill that would also curb litigation. That bill also will be introduced Tuesday as the Senate begins a second week of debate over the politically popular issue.

The plan is expected to allow a limited right to sue in state court, possibly marking the first time conservative leaders would support state court lawsuits.

Business and insurance companies still argue it would drive up the cost of health care.

House GOP leaders hope their alternative legislation will dissuade Republicans from supporting a bill, similar to the Senate Democratic version, that is backed by a bipartisan group led by Rep. Charlie Norwood, R-Ga.

But with a small majority in the House, Republicans could lose a floor vote unless they come up with a bill that can compete with Norwood's plan, which once had the support of 68 Republicans.

Billions at stake as power talks begin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy users and providers are billions of dollars apart in their estimates of how much the power crisis in the Western states has cost. The federal official overseeing confidential settlement talks wants them to come to terms quickly.

With just two weeks to reach agreement, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission chief administrative law judge Curtis L. Wagner said he wants all sides to start using realistic numbers when they meet Tuesday for the second day of negotiations.

"Now we're getting ready to get down to brass tacks," Wagner said Monday, after the first day of talks.

Led by California, Western states say power-generating companies overcharged them by $15 billion in the past year.

Michael Kahn, California's chief negotiator, said the $9 billion in refunds his state claims it is owed should be the first order of business. "We want our refunds. We want them now," said Kahn, chairman of the California Independent System Operator, which manages the state's power grid.

The states claim that the companies unfairly drove up prices to take advantage of a power shortage. Prices frequently surpassed $300 a megawatt-hour, 10 times what they were in 1999. One megawatt is enough to power about 750 homes.

The power companies argue that the charges were justified. In some cases, older, more costly power plants were pressed into service to deal with the high demand and tight supply.

Wagner attributed the states' claims to the rhetorical flourishes that often accompany the start of negotiations. "Everybody has to stick to their guns for a while," he said.

The judge, who is playing a mediator's role in the negotiations, said he has seen nothing to change his previously stated view that refunds in any settlement probably would not exceed $2.5 billion.

He cautioned all sides that a brokered settlement would be preferable to a plan he would recommend to federal regulators should talks fail.

More than 150 people representing about six dozen entities gathered in a government hearing room for negotiations. The talks were one result of a federal order last week extending price controls on spot power sales in California and imposing limits in 10 other Western states.

Wagner laid out several issues negotiators will have to tackle, including how much generators are owed for power they supplied to California without getting paid.

The size of the refunds and the unpaid bills "must be, both ways, resolved at the outset to put everyone on the same playing field," Wagner said.

Any settlement probably would also have to answer whether the generators should have immunity from existing and future lawsuits and prosecution, Wagner added.

The parties also have to try to reach agreement on additional long-term power contracts, which would reduce the amount of power California would have to purchase on the volatile spot market.

The attendees included representatives from California and a dozen city and county governments, investor-owned and municipal utilities, power generators and natural gas companies.

FBI joins search for gunmen wanted in Mexico

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The search for a group of gunmen who kidnapped a couple and shot at a police station in Matamoros, Mexico, has intensified with the FBI confirming that it will aid in the investigation.

The FBI joined the search at the request of Tamaulipas State Police the day after heavily armed inmates pulled a daring daylight jail break at the state police building, said Rosalie Savage, an FBI spokeswoman in McAllen. But Savage said the FBI's role in the case is limited.

"So far, we have increased our presence at international bridges and we have sent out an alert (to other agencies) at those points of entry," Savage said, adding that no more information could be given for fear of jeopardizing the investigation.

She said Mexican authorities asked for the increased presence at the ports because they fear the gunman could flee to the United States.

Mexican authorities, however, said they think the FBI's interest in the case could stem from the possible involvement of Osiel Cardenas Guillen, presumed leader of the infamous Gulf Drug Cartel.

According to the FBI, Cardenas climbed to the cartel's top post after Juan Garcia Abrego was sentenced in 1996 in Houston to 11 life terms in prison for drug smuggling. Cardenas Guillen is among the FBI's most wanted criminals.

Jaime Yaez Cantu, Tamaulipas State Police commander in Matamoros, said the FBI is conducting an exhaustive operation in conjunction with his agency in the Reynosa-McAllen region.

According to Yaez Cantu, several of the gunmen have been spotted in that area.

"We know that Cardenas is behind the whole deal, from the kidnapping to the shooting of our offices. This was confirmed by the testimonies of two men arrested in connection with the case," Yaez Cantu told The Brownsville Herald.

Weather modification pilots ready, but no clouds yet to seed

ABILENE (AP) — Pilots are ready to fly the West Texas skies this week in a cloud seeding mission designed to generate rain, but there's just one problem.

The weather forecast calls for mostly cloudless skies in what's starting out to be a hot, dry summer.

The Texas Natural

Resources Conservation Commission executive director is expected Friday to sign the license for the West Central Texas Weather Modification Association.

That will authorize pilots to fly whenever conditions warrant a cloud-seeding, said Tom Mann, economic development director of the West Central Texas Council of Governments. But National Weather Service predictions through this weekend are for mainly clear skies.

More than one-third of the region's growing season will be over when the rainmaking project is cleared for takeoff. Association directors had hoped to be ready to fly May 1, which would have allowed weather modification operations over the bulk of the season.

In the project, two specially equipped aircraft were designed to place seeding material flares containing silver iodide into suitable clouds to enhance rain.

The contract will be fulfilled by Weather Modification Inc.

Man cleaning pool stops mom from drowning baby

NORTH MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A maintenance worker cleaning a pool saw a woman trying to drown her 6-month-old son and rescued the boy, police said.

Dago Hernandez was pouring bleach into a pool at an apartment complex Monday when he heard Elsie Lazare-Louis screaming in Creole. Hernandez said he saw the woman holding her infant son under the water with both hands. He pulled the child out of the water and called 911.

The boy, Daniel, was taken to a hospital and then placed in state custody, police Detective Kathleen Ruggiero said.

Lazare-Louis, 35, was charged with first-degree attempted murder and taken to a hospital for a psychiatric evaluation. She was later taken to jail.

The woman's two other children, ages 9 and 12, will be placed in state custody after they return from summer camp at the end of the week, Ruggiero said.

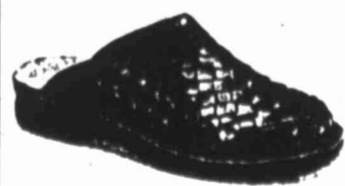

Police said Lazare-Louis made prior attempts to kill the baby. Three public works employees saw her lying on top of the boy in the street earlier Monday, but she disappeared before police arrived, Ruggiero said. On Saturday, a neighbor told police, she walked into the street with the baby and screamed for a car to hit them.

OUR VIEWS

Great things happening at our park!

Whether it is a dip in the pool, a movie, a game of golf, a walk or a picnic, Comanche Trail Park is the place to be this summer. Add in tennis, the civic center, the playgrounds and ball fields and the park becomes a pretty complete package.

Of course one of the major summer events — Pops in the Park — will make use of the park's amphitheater on July 3. We'll talk more about that event in the future.

Still, we're pleased to see that the amphitheater is getting more use this summer, thanks to the city sponsored movies being aired there every third weekend. We hope in the future to see more open air activities at the historic theater — perhaps plays, concerts and the like.

Without a doubt, the most-used facility at the park so far has been the swimming pool. It certainly appears that the city council's decision to renovate the pool is paying off. The new attractions are obviously a big hit with the swimmers, and from all indications, people are taking advantage of the fact that the fences have been moved back to create a more family type atmosphere.

It helped, too, in our opinion, that the city council decided to wait to implement any rate increase at the pool. Changing the rates in mid-stream is not only confusing, but sends the wrong message. By deciding to hold off, a fair admission price can be better calculated prior to next summer by comparing usage, hours, utilities, employee salaries and the like.

Our park — it belongs to all of us — is truly something to be proud of. And the reopening of the pool and showing of movies at the amphitheater are just two reasons why it is better than it has been in a while. We hope you and your family are taking advantage of this very special attraction our city offers.

YOUR VIEWS

TO THE EDITOR:
On behalf of Hangar 25. I would like to take this opportunity to say "thanks" to all that participated in our second "Celebrity Cake Auction." It was wonderful to see the creativity of those baking the cakes. It was absolutely amazing at all the talent, whether it be the individual baker or a ghost baker. You out did yourselves this year. Wonder what next year will bring? With all the delightful creations we were successful in raising $3,470 which is twice as much as last year's auction.

The cake bakers or creators this year were: Mike Abusaab, Johnny Lou Avery, Tim Blackshear, Janice Bond, Leon and Cheryl Byrd, Joe Conciene, Todd Darden, Shirley Davis, Ken Dulaney, Quail Dobbs, Lanny Hamby, Thomas Jenkins, Brian Jensen, Allan Johnson, Jimmy Johnson, Lou Knight, Kevin Larpenter, Tumbleweed Smith, Dan and Kathy Lusk, Skip and Bonnie McKenzie, Ed Moughon, Jody Nix, Gale Pittman, Cliff Slate.

Lonnie Smith, Dr. Cheri Sparks, Duane Thomas, Dale Walker, Michelle Wiggins, Hardy Wilkerson and Jerry Worthy.
Tumbleweed's cake went for $350 followed by Mike Abusaab at $225, Michelle Wiggins went for $225, Quail Dobbs' sold for $210 and Tim Blackshear's and Jody Nix's cakes went for $200.
I also want to "thank" our delightful auctioneer, Scott Emerson and his assistant, Tony Castillo, for their willingness to provide this necessary service. Without their help this would not have been possible. Miss Rodeo Texas Courtney Warden displayed the cakes also with help from Dobbs and Nix.

A great big "thanks" to all of the wonderful people that kept the bidding, you were great. Thanks also go to Gloria McDonald, Teresa Sheppard and Kay Clark for their help in auction transactions and Ashlie Simmons and Marc Ditto for handling the transfer of cakes.

The remembrance of pajamas past

IUKA, Miss. — I am sitting in the privacy of my red Ford truck in an open field surrounded by sycamores, pines and gums, eating but-tered pop-corn and watching a movie.

The movie is being shown on a big screen at the end of the field, where goal posts would be if our game were football. Scattered about the field are half a dozen cars, all of them claiming a post, like a pack of dogs on a block of parking meters. The posts have no real function anymore, save spacing the audience. You tune your car radio to a certain FM channel for the sound.

The Iuka Drive-In shows first-run movies and is open Friday, Saturday and Monday. "Closed Sunday. Attend the Church of Your Choice," a sign at the front gate admonishes. A drive-in with a conscience.

I love this old place, a few grassy acres of the past not yet paved over and into oblivion. In 1989 there were 70 drive-ins in Mississippi, according to a Web site that keeps track of such things (DriveInMovie.com). Today 95 percent of them have gone dark, leaving four, including this one. The computer tells me five states have no drive-ins whatsoever, so I feel especially lucky.

Hard to believe the attrition rate. Such a good idea, the drive-in. Why can't cell phones disappear, or fax machines, something useless? Why do so many truly good things in life not stand the strain of evolution?

I look about. The twilight scene is far more interesting than the previews on screen. The girl at the gate had warned rain was likely, and said she'd been told a minimum of five cars must arrive before they could show the movie.

I am Number Five, making the evening possible. You can smell an approaching rain, but all of us are geared for entertainment now, and ignore it.

A family parked a few rows in front of me spreads itself out picnic-style, unpacking chairs and blankets and some vile-looking blue liquid in plastic for the children. They get comfortable.

There is such an intimacy about drive-ins. I remember as a child wearing pajamas to all our family's drive-in excursions. Our parents feared we'd fall asleep while Ben Hur raced chariots pell-mell or Atticus Finch shot a rabid dog. Fat chance.

Drive-ins allow the best of all worlds: a big screen and the comforts of home. You don't have to worry some fool who saw the movie last week will sit behind you and spoil all the best moments. "This is where he gets shot..." Yet at the drive-in, unlike with home videos, there's no Pause or Mute button to tempt you into a series of self-imposed, irritating intermissions.

If the movie messes up, people at drive-ins blow their horns to alert management. Don't you wish you could blow a horn for problems in a walk-in theater?

The refreshment stand here is pink. Pink! That's a good drive-in color. The drive-in is from that era of poodle skirts and cotton candy and other delectable, pink, 1950s things.

My parents really believed in the drive-in. It was cheaper and less trouble for a family with lots of children, I guess.

They believed in it until we girls became teen-agers, that is. Then the drive-in was verboten, except in special circumstances — for instance, a Sunday School outing with all girls in the car. Everyone knew what went on at drive-ins, after all. Behind the steamy windows of suspiciously souped-up automobiles there were couples Not Watching the Movie.

I can't spot any teens desperate for alone time tonight. This is more of a family scene, a cheap evening out for budget-minded moms and dads. Besides, young lovers don't need drive-ins anymore. They have apartments and school-sponsored dances.

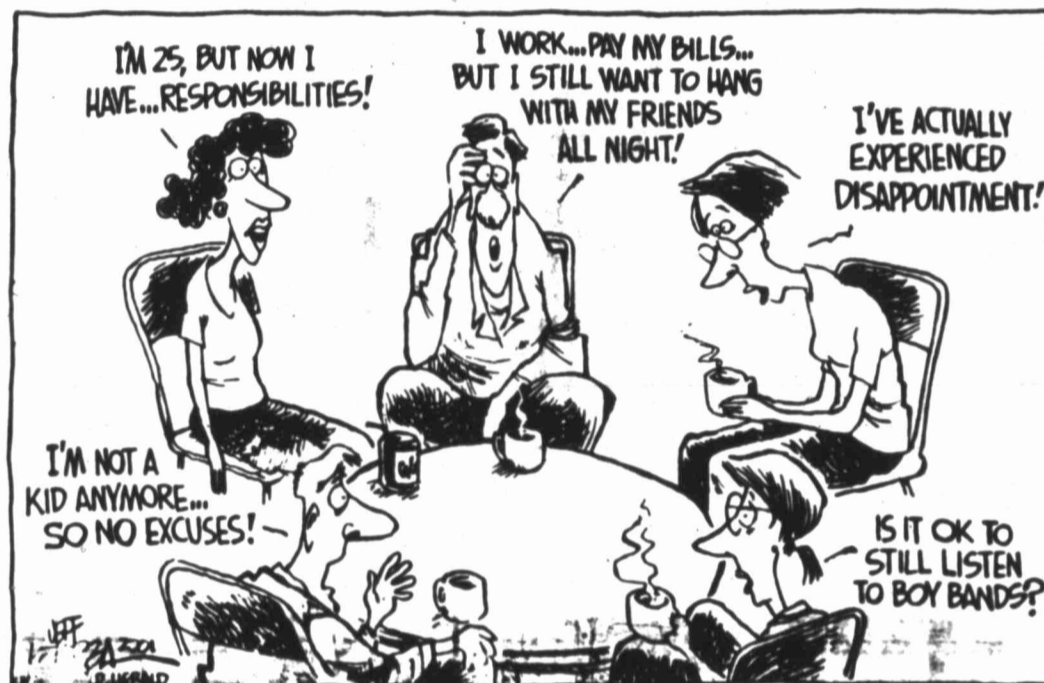

A sudden downpour chases the picnickers back into their van, and I run the wipers to try and clear up the windshield and the movie plot.

Nobody leaves, and after the rain the air is cool and sweet with honeysuckle. I am tempted to stay for the second half of the double feature, but there are 19 car crashes in the first five minutes.

Besides, I'm sleepy and not wearing pajamas.

We need to listen to teachers

When you used to hear the word engagement, it usually meant someone had just agreed to be married. These days, it seems to connote significant give-and-take diplomacy almost as often. "Engagement with China" was the order of the hour in the last years of the Clinton administration. But engagement isn't limited to foreign relations, either. Even public-school superintendents have taken to public engagement.

Few people had heard of public engagement when pollsters from Public Agenda contacted them about the concept. Once they explained that it was a chance for parents to talk with teachers and school policy-makers, however, interest grew.

Superintendents are still probably the most excited about the idea. Since they pay the highest price for public dissatisfaction, they know they need to interact with parents. As one of them said, "You really have to take the time to talk to parents. If you don't, it's a lethal mistake. The rumors spread like wildfire."

It might surprise that superintendent to know that parents are not so receptive. Over half said their involvement is limited to giving children guidance at home. Teachers applaud this approach. They stressed that it is far more important for parents to watch over their children's homework and inculcate respect for learning than it is for them to spend their time at committee meetings, haggling over education policy.

Those with no children at home have little interest in the public schools except to attend an occasional performance or football game. Detachment from school policy-making isn't limited to them. Two-thirds of the general public and 50 percent of the parents reported that they could not name their superintendent. Similar percentages could not identify a single member of the school board. Mostly, people seem willing to let educators do their job without interference.

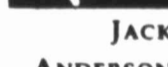

There are, however, some big exceptions: agitators who show up at board meetings week after week and dominate the proceedings with their complaints and demands. Board members told the study that they deplore this repeated intrusion. Nonetheless it is at those meetings that they get most of their feedback from the public, who they view as concerned mainly with spending issues.

Even though board members hear quite enough on that subject, they would be wise to seek the opinion of calmer voices than they are accustomed to hearing. Of all those surveyed, the most troubled were teachers. When first asked, 70 percent had never even heard of public engagement. When prodded, though, 42 percent recalled such an effort in their districts.

Many of them feel completely left out of important planning, and 70 percent believe that when administrators talk to them it's only to sell programs they've already adopted, not to seek the views of teachers. Half the school-board members concurred that teachers are excluded from decisions that affect their work.

The situation has grown so strained that teachers now take a jaundiced approach to that most precious word in education: reform. They know that a new regime cannot be far away, and today's reforms will give way to tomorrow's enthusiasms and so on. All they have to do is nothing. Time will relieve them of the obligation to change. Anyone reading this survey will see immediately that the most vital area for engagement is with the teachers. They are the indispensable people.

Garcia less than pleased by being compared to Tiger

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Whether he likes it or not, Sergio Garcia is going to be judged against Tiger Woods.

After Garcia won the rain-delayed Buick Classic on Monday, he got several questions about Woods — who finished tied for 16th — and not one about Scott Hoch, who finished second behind Garcia by three strokes, or any other golfer in this tournament.

"You are disrespecting the other guys," Garcia said. "You are disrespecting Scott Hoch, disrespecting J.P. Hayes and Vijay Singh and all those guys that have a better chance of winning than him (Woods)."

It was Garcia's second PGA victory in five weeks. He also won at the Colonial in May and was a contender at the U.S. Open before fading in the fourth round.

Garcia finished with a record-tying total of 16-under 268. Hoch was at 271 and Billy Andrade, Stewart Cink and J.P. Hayes were at 273.

This victory inevitably invited comparison to — here's that name again — Woods. Garcia won his second tour event at age 21 years, 8 months. Woods won his second tournament in 1996 at 20 years, 9 months.

Garcia has been showing tantalizing signs of becoming a serious rival to Woods since the Spaniard hit his famous tree-root slice shot punctuated by a scissors kick in the fairway at the 1999 PGA. He finished second there to Woods and beat him in the "Battle of Bighorn" last year in a head-to-head made-for-TV match.

"To me, it doesn't matter if Tiger is in the field or not," Garcia said. "If I win and Tiger is in the field and he finishes second, it is even going to be sweeter, but if he is not in the field, I still love to win because if he is not playing the tournament, I am not going to think, 'Well, Tiger is not here, so why win?' No, it is not that way."

"It is just great to win." Garcia's proud parents, Victor and Consuelo, were waiting by the 18th green at the Westchester Country Club to hug their son after his last shot Monday.

It was the first time his mother saw him win a pro tournament in person, he said.

For Victor, it was again a matter of redemption. Thought to be harming his son by staying as his swing coach through Garcia's dry spell on the PGA tour between 1999 and last month, Garcia said Monday his father should now be recognized for what he is: a great coach.

"I think that everybody who said that my swing was bad and I had to change it, I think 's going to have to eat all those words that they said,'" Garcia said. "I think it's a pretty good swing."

Victor Garcia is a club pro Sergio and others are trying to prepare for the Seniors Tour in the United States.

There was nothing wrong with Garcia's swing Monday. Except for a 3-putt bogey on the second hole, Garcia was nearly flawless from tee to green in a five-birdie, one-bogey round of 4-under 67. His misses with the putter were all close.

"Today could have been so low," he said. "I played so well. I just didn't make many putts."

Sampras begins his quest for eighth Wimbledon title

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Top-seeded Pete Sampras has felt at home on the Wimbledon grass for the last eight tournaments. He won seven of them and took a stride toward a record eighth title and fifth straight by winning his 29th consecutive Wimbledon match, 6-4, 7-6 (5), 6-4 over Francisco Clavet of Spain on Centre Court.

"I love the court, and when I step out there, I draw a lot of memories," said Sampras, who had 19 aces. The surface was "like it always is the first day. It's very slippery. ... I lost my footing a couple of times."

A sign of how well his day went came on the final point of the second-set tiebreaker. He skidded and fell on the grass as he hit a deep backhand. But Clavet, facing a wide-open court, netted his return.

Two other men with reasonable championship chances also advanced: fourth-seeded Marat Safin of Russia and sixth-seeded Tim Henman of Britain.

And 18-year-old Andy Roddick, a budding American star, won his Wimbledon debut. Martina Hingis didn't expect to join the growing list of injured leading women on the Wimbledon sidelines.

She got there anyway with a stunning opening-day loss.

The world's top-ranked player tried to fight through pain in her lower back, but endured the disappointment of a straight-set setback Monday to the 83rd-ranked player.

That 6-4, 6-2 loss to Virginia Ruano Pascual of Spain removed a huge obstacle to Jennifer Capriati's bid for the Grand Slam.

Capriati already has won the Australian and French Opens. Monica Seles, Mary Pierce or Anna Kournikova never made it to Wimbledon because of injuries.

"I think Jennifer right now is the favorite, definitely," Hingis said after her elimination.

Hingis' own chances dropped about a week ago when the tendinitis in her lower back surfaced. Acupuncture helped, but there wasn't enough time for a full recovery.

As late as Saturday, she said, she thought about skipping the tournament, but said, "I didn't want to miss Wimbledon."

Now, all she has to show for her shaky performance in the world's most prestigious tennis tournament is another blemish on her Grand Slam scorecard. She hasn't won any of the last 10 events despite being seeded first in all of them.

"There are no excuses whether you're injured or not. If you step out there, you should play," Hingis said. "I was just afraid to move."

Capriati and Serena Williams, in the same half of the draw as Hingis, won their matches easily Monday. Capriati, seeded fourth, beat Maria Alejandra Vento of Venezuela 6-3, 6-2, winning nine straight games in one stretch. And No. 5 Williams barely worked up a sweat in her 40-minute match, a 6-1, 6-0 victory over Rita Kuti Kis of Hungary.

Pete Sampras is seeking his eighth win at Wimbledon and looks strong after winning seven of his last eight trips to Wimbledon.

That was the first match completed in this year's tournament. The final match last year was Venus Williams' victory in the final over Lindsay Davenport. Venus and Davenport are in the half of the draw scheduled to play Tuesday.

Ruano Pascual probably won't last much longer, but savored the victory that brought a wide smile to her face as she raised both hands in triumph to the fans at Court 1. The victory gave her a big jump start during the tennis season.

"I'm still dreaming now. It's unbelievable," she said. "I feel very comfortable today out on the court."

Hingis was just 16 when she won Wimbledon in 1997, but has been eliminated in the first round in two of the last three years. The only other No. 1 women seeds to fall that early were Margaret Smith in 1962 and Steffi Graf in 1994.

But Hingis brushed off her Grand Slam slump and she doesn't expect it to continue.

"I don't think it's such a big failure," she said. "I know if I'm 100 percent, I can go out there and beat anybody."

She did reach the semifinals at her previous three tournaments and will keep her top ranking after Wimbledon because of her success in second-tier events.

Hingis' loss was as big a surprise as the weather. London, where rain has dampened the Wimbledon experience year after year, suffered through 86-degree temperatures Monday.

Fans, not used to such heat, covered their heads with damp cloths and sought shade. Some spectators and ballgirls fainted.

Ruano Pascual thought Hingis held up well.

"She ran on the court and she served and she did everything, so I don't know she was injured," the victor said. "If she says she was injured, I'm sorry for her."

For Hingis, there is one consolation. "Sometimes you just need some time to recover your body and soul, and now I have some time to do it," she said.

Martinez hits pinch homer; Devil Rays still can't beat Red Sox

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tino Martinez found out that there's a first time for everything. The Tampa Bay Devil Rays want to learn the same lesson against the Boston Red Sox.

Martinez hit the first pinch-hit homer of his 12-season major league career to rally the New York Yankees to an 8-7 victory Monday night over the Cleveland Indians.

"I've always had a tough time as a pinch hitter because basically I play every day," said Martinez, New York's regular first baseman.

The Devil Rays, who own the majors' worst record, lost 12-8 in Fenway Park to fall to 0-10 this season against the Red Sox.

"I think we're in the kind of situation right now where we're just trying to play a good, solid ball game," Tampa Bay catcher Mike DiFelice said. "Sometimes you go out and try too hard and things don't go your way."

Things weren't going the Yankees' way before Martinez turned a 7-6 deficit into a seventh-inning lead with a two-run homer against Ricardo Rincon (1-1).

Martinez entered the game in a 6-for-51 slump that dropped his average to .246.

"I know he has not been knocking in runs the way we're used to," manager Joe Torre said. "But he's done this too much for our club the last few years for me not to like him coming up with runners in scoring position."

In other American League games, it was Minnesota 6, Detroit 3; Baltimore 8, Toronto 2; and Anaheim 11, Texas 7.

In National League games, Atlanta topped Philadelphia 9-4, San Francisco beat Los Angeles 5-2, Houston blanked Arizona 6-0, San Diego defeated Colorado 6-4, Chicago edged New York 2-1.

New York squandered a 6-0 lead when Cleveland scored seven runs in the sixth against starter Randy Keisler and reliever Jay Witasick, making his Yankees debut after being acquired from San Diego.

Witasick (1-0) ended up getting the victory despite giving up three runs in two innings. Mariano Rivera got four outs for his 24th save.

Boston has outscored Tampa Bay 79-28 in winning the first 10 games against the Devil Rays this year.

The Red Sox lead the AL East by two games over New York even though they're just 14-14 against the rest of the division.

"At this point, we've been able to win most games when we felt like we were favored," said Bichette, who hit a grand slam and added an RBI double in the win. "We'll take it."

Greg Vaughn, Randy Winn, DiFelice and Brent Abernathy homered for the Devil Rays. Abernathy, recalled from the minors earlier in the day, homered for his first major league hit.

"We're paid to win ball games. It's not fun losing," Abernathy said. "It's not going to be a fun place to be if we keep losing."
