Mayor says those filing petitions 'exercising their rights By ROGER CLINE community."

October 2, 2001 Staff Writer

> Mayor Russ McEwen said this morning that he's "not worried" about a petition being circulated to force his recall election.

"I am not worried about it," he said. "That is not to say that if we get to an election that it is an absolute cinch that the recall would be defeated.'

The mayor said that the 11 people who filed affadavits against him and received recall petitions Friday are simply exercising their

MCEWEN HORTON rights.

"It is a citizen's right to circulate a petition," he said. "They have filled out affadavits and are circulating those petitions. I think they are exercising their rights as citizens of our

The affadavits were filed Friday by Thomas L. Guess, Sarah Noah Salisbury, June J. Sikes, Joseph Randolph Sikes, Willie Rangel Jr., Florence H. Slate, Edward G. Slate, John Staulcup, Roy R. Taylor, Ronnie Dean Carter and Tommy F. Tilley; and stated as their reason: "The mayor's insensitive refusal to recognize or consider the citizens' adamant opposition to the $60,000 per year (salary and benefits) position of airpark

manager. Carter's affadavit was initially rejected by city staff because of a clerical error by the tax assessor/collector's office. Tax Assessor/Collector Kathy Sayles confirmed that Carter is a registered voter. "Yes, he is, because it was a clerical error on our part,"

she said. City manager Gary Fuqua added that Carter received a petition from City Hall this morning. Big Spring City Council approved the budget, along with the airport manager's position, in September on a 4-3 vote.

City council member Stephanie Horton, who voted against the budget. said she doesn't support the recall.

"No, not at all," she said. "I think that during the time of election, that's when we should voice our opinions. I think that what we should do is pray for our leaders."

Horton said she's asking her constituents not to sign the petition.

"I'm asking, if they have already signed a petition, to call City Hall and take their names off it.

Horton said that McEwen

Lakeview Head Start youth exhibit their patriotism in special ceremony

By LYNDEL MOODY Staff Writer

The sky over Lakeview Head Start filled with red, white and blue Monday morning as students released colored balloons in a patriotic display following an American and Texas state flag presentation.

In a ceremony that brought out hundreds of people, members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars post 2013, presented the school a U.S. Flag flown over the U.S. Capitol Building in Washington, D.C., and a Texas Flag flown over the state Capitol Building in Austin.

"We have been preparing the children for this event," said Dominga Shockley, site manager. "We have been practicing the Red, White and Blue Song." Shockley said the last week was interesting as children would sometimes practice singing as they walked down the hall, fil ing the walkways with the patriotic song. The U.S. Flag was donated by the office of U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm (D-Abliene) and by the office of state Rep. David Counts (D-Knox City). Dressed in red, white and blue, students and employees watched as members of the VFW post hoisted both the U.S. and Texas state flags to full staff. Parents, students, staff and community members

"Think back to the events of Sept. 11," said Shann Thomas, Victim Services executive director. "Think about the emotions you felt, fear, uncertainty, powerless. That is my only description of what a person feels like who lives in a domestic violent situation."

The silhouettes held the women's story inscribed on a placard attached to the front of the figure and will be on display at the Victim Service Center as silent witnesses to domestic abuse.

"Domestic violence is rampant in this community," Thomas said. "This is what the candlelight vigil is for. It is for us to stand up for them, for peace and healing.'

Domestic abuse also impacts the family, Thomas said.

"When you see a clear pond and drop a stone in it, it has a ripple effect," Thomas said.

Three women stood before the crowd to recall their personal stories of living in a violent situation. Their stories echoed themes of physical and emotional abuse, low self-esteem and the difficult decision to

WASHINGTON (AP)

Congress is near agreement on legislation sought by President Bush to make aircraft and airports safer in the wake of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

The last big question to be resolved was whether airport screeners should come under federal supervision, as advocated by the White and House House Republicans, or become federal employees, the favored idea in the Senate.

Administration has proposal to use nuclear plants in military role

TEXAS BRIEFS

Fire strikes warehouse district

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Fire engulfed part of a South Texas warehouse district Monday night, destroying two used clothing warehouses that contained two businesses each.

Flames shot 100 feet into the sky at one point and law officers evacuated an undetermined number of residents from the area. Officers blocked streets for one-half mile on all sides of the fire, Police Chief Carlos Garcia said. Early today, firefighters continued to battle hot spots in the blaze. Two 100-foot ladder trucks and numerous fire trucks were on the scene. The two warehouses, one of 36,000 square feet and the other of 34,000 square feet, contained three used clothing businesses and a company that recycled cardboard, officials said. The businesses were identified as Bronx Recycling, Brownsville Wipers and Fibers, Jarritex and Casa Reyna.

Marcus said the fire must have started about 5 p.m. or 5:30 p.m. The call was reported to the Fire Department between 5:30 p.m. and 6 p.m. when someone saw smoke and flames coming from the building. FBI officials at the scene initially said there was some reason to believe the fire may have been set intentionally, but the FBI released a statement later in the evening saying investigators were about 90 percent certain that an electrical problem started the blaze. "We're hoping it is something like that. We don't want it to turn out to be arson," Marcus said.

egendary cowboys — both local, as well as those nationally known — will be honored during a reception and gallery opening at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Heritage Museum of Big Spring.

The museum is inviting the community to the first viewing of an exhibit of the pho tographs of David Stoecklein, "The Texas Cowboys," which pictures the day-to-day life on a working ranch.

Museum officials also want to show off the result of renovations to the main floor of the museum.

A special appearance by Tom B. Saunders IV, a Texas rancher who wrote the text for Stoecklein's photographs, is scheduled and world champion rodeo cowboy Wacey Cathey, a Big Spring native who spent 20 years as a bull rider, will be honored.

Western swing music provided by Big Spring native Jody Nix and his band will add to the party's flavor.

Saunders will be available to sign copies of the book. Also titled "The Texas Cowboys," and the full-color, coffee-table-style book is for sale at the museum gift shop.

Perhaps best of all, there's no admission

Don't blame all Muslims for attacks

he P.U. prize for the worst statement during the terrorism crisis goes to the Rev. Franklin Graham, son of the famous evangelist.

Appearing on Fox News he tried to frame the acts of terrorism as an Islamic attack against Christianity. CHARLEY The un-Christian REESE tone of his remarks even drew a wry comment from Brit Hume. The remarks were not only un-Christian in tone, they reflected an ignorance of both Islam and the Middle East, not to mention New York City. You've got to love those New Yorkers for their spirit and toughness, but I doubt anybody in the world, looking for a symbol of Christianity, would choose New York City - or the Pentagon, for that matter. What Graham said was the equivalent of saying that the troubles in Northern Ireland are a papal plot against the Anglican Church. Religion has nothing to do with either Ireland or the acts of terrorism against the United States. What is involved in both cases are purely secular issues. Islam reveres Jesus of Nazareth as a holy prophet of God and teaches Muslims that they must treat Christians as they treat themselves. Muslims and Christians have lived together in the Middle East for centuries. After all, both religions were born there.

Sure, there are small sects of fanatic Muslims, just as there are small sects of fanatic Christians and fanatic Jews. And to believe the nonsense that Islam is trying to destroy Christianity is to fall victim to the propaganda of a Christian sect.

There are a billion Muslims in the world, and 7 million of them are American Muslims. It's important that Americans not let some religious yahoos mislead them into condemning all Muslims for the entirely secular acts of a tiny group of individuals. At this writing, we don't know if Muslims were involved. If some were, they were not motivated by their religion but by their hatred of America, which has been generated by our own policies and actions. One young girl being interviewed during the constant TV coverage was in tears and asked the questions: "Why does anyone hate us? What have we done wrong?'

Unfortunately, she will never know by listening to the politicians who, in both parties and in Europe, are trying to depict the terrorism as an act of war against "freedom and democracy." That's as absurd and misleading as Graham's statement. Does anybody actually believe there are people sitting around in the world saying to themselves: "I hate freedom. I think I'll go attack the United States"? What balderdash.

Unfortunately, we have given plenty of people reason to hate us. Men in both parties presume the right of the United States to intervene militarily in the internal affairs of other countries whenever it pleases us. We made war on Yugoslavia – killing civilians and destroying what was left of their economy - without any provocation at all. We have killed more than 500,000 Iraqi children (and those are United Nations figures) by maintaining an embargo as cruel as any siege in the Dark Ages.

We have been outrageously one-sided in supporting Israel, which, with the help of our money and our weapons, has brutally killed Palestinians, Syrians and Lebanese and seized their lands. Every single time that those victims of Israel's violations of inter national law have sought relief from the United Nations, the United State has blocked any help with our veto or threat of a veto. That is not the action of a nation that allegedly supports the rule of law or democracy. The fact is, we have over thrown governments that were democratically elected when we didn't like the outcome of the democratic process. We did that to the Iranians and imposed the shah's rule on them. Then we supported the shah's repression with money. arms and training for his secret police, which routinely used torture and arbitrary executions. Iranians have good reason to hate us.

And to show you further how cynical our government has acted, we even clandestinely helped Iraq when it invaded Iran.

I love our country, but our government is not some pure, innocent band of angels. It's important for us to realize that.

Warren Rudman, R-N.H., reported to Congress on the magnitude of the threat and urged the creation of a National Homeland Security Agency. Their recommendation received scant attention from policymakers more focused on divvying up a huge tax cut than confronting the perils of facing a borderless enemy. Now that everybody's priorities have changed, the need for self-protection is painfully obvious. Republicans who might once have decried adding another layer of bureaucracy to the government are establishing a new Cabinetlevel position with the purpose of providing homeland security. Bush's choice for the job is the Republican governor of Pennsylvania, Tom Ridge. He brings a stellar resume to Washington, and he'll need it. How he conducts himself in the coming months could mean the difference between a one-time publicrelations gimmick and the launching of the most powerful Cabinet department of the new century. As a combat veteran in Vietnam who was awarded the Bronze Star, Ridge commands respect in the world he's now asked to oversee. and that is a crucial first step to his success. Some 40 government agencies are involved in counterterrorism, and they don't easily share information or yield turf. For Ridge to be effective, all the various agencies must report all their relevant findings to him. And he must have some say over their budgets and how they allocate resources. In the intelligence breakdown that preceded the Sept. 11 hijackings, there was nobody at the CIA or FBI who was able to connect the clues that came from numerous federal bureaucracies even though there were dozens of warnings about a megaattack.

Logic dictates that the new homeland protector should have a great deal of power, but the history of presidentially-appointed czars is not reassuring. They typically get named in a splash of publicity, only to discover they have no real power. That's why Sen. Bob Graham of Florida is pressing ahead with his bill to create a homeland czar who would be presidentially appointed and also subject to Senate confirmation, like every other Cabinet post. That would give the position more heft. Instead of depending on presidential good intentions, the job would be defined legislatively.

Bush is personally close to Ridge, and might have picked him for his vice president if it weren't for the abortion issue. Ridge, who is Catholic, supports abortion rights. But so far, the White House hasn't put anything in writing about what exactly Ridge would do. What authority will he have? Will he have money? Staff? There are reports that aides are scouting space for him in the West Wing, and where he sits will be a measure of his access and power, at least initially. Until we know what Ridge's appointment means bureaucratically, it will be hard to judge his potential effectiveness. "Does he have a black sedan and five people, or does he run a Cabinet department?" wonders one friend.

Ridge reportedly is not anxious to command a fullfledged Cabinet department, and would prefer a sleeker model that would look more like the domestic equivalent of the National Security Council, with a small staff and guaranteed direct access to the president. Ridge's power is potentially awesome if he is to coordinate such disparate agencies as the Coast Guard, the Centers for Disease Control and the INS. And he may have to grapple with the possibility of a national identity card. which until Sept. 11 was anathema to both conservatives and liberals. Putting a reassuring face on the kind of intrusive powers Republicans traditionally resist is what his job, however defined, is really about.

Sarah Corse and her Big Spring tennis team get a well deserved break today after a string of wins that have put the Steers in position to challenge for a District 4-4A title, starting Saturday in Lubbock when the Steers visit Estacado at 10 a.m.

The Steers have compiled an undefeated 4-0 district record with only two losses on the season. Both losses came on the road against an Odessa and a Midland team.

Saturday, the Steers stayed on track with a lopsided 15-4 win over Plainview at the Figure 7 Tennis Center. But a simple look at the score does not show the effort that allowed Big Spring to post the onesided score.

"The score does not reflect the level of competition in this match," Corse explained. "Plainview was a a good team and many of the matches could have gone either way. We lost five tiebreakers, but we won all four split-set matches.

Perhaps Mindy Partee's No. 6 girls' singles match represents the struggle the Steers faced. After losing the opening set, 6-4, she battled back for a three-set win over Alyssa Villanueva, taking charge in the second set with a 6-3 win before dominating the third set with a 6-1 win to take the match.

"It was a sound win, one that was well fought," assistant coach Taff Wennik said of Saturday's meet.

Partee experienced a similar fate in her girls' doubles match. Teamed with Veronica Villarreal, the two Lady Steers struggled through a 4-6 start, dropping the first set to Colbie Boedeker and Allison Gammage before responding to the challenge to win the next two sets and the match by taking a tie break in the third set. They evened the match with a 6-3 second-set win before winning the tie break, 7-5, in the No. 1 doubles match.

It has been this kind of comeback competition from all levels that has given Corse and Wennik plenty to smile about this season.

After traveling to Lubbock Saturday, Big Spring has only two district matches remaining on the schedule. The Steers step out of district action for their final non-conference meet with a trip to Sweetwater Oct. 9 before hosting Snyder at the Figure 7 Tennis Center on Oct. 13.

They finish the season with a trip to Friendship Oct. 20, a trip that could provide the Steers with an undefeated district record before they travel to Wichita Falls for the regional meet, Oct. 26-27.

Cowboys not quite sure where to go from here

IRVING. (AP) The Dallas Cowboys aren't quite sure what they're good at, but they still don't think they're a bad team.

There's a lot of evidence that suggests otherwise following a 40-18 pummeling at hands of the the Philadelphia Eagles Sunday However, night. the Cowboys (0-3) think their odious performance was an aberration and that better days are soon to come.

"I still look at the team as being able to win," said quarterback Anthony Wright, who was 7-of-23 for 33 yards with an interception in the loss. "We're just trying to figure out where, we can improve.' about offense, How defense and special teams? The Cowboys looked inept in all of those areas against the Eagles on a cold, rainy evening in Philadelphia.

Dallas' first three offensive possessions netted minus 9 yards, but the Cowboys still had a 6-0 lead midway through the first quarter. The points came on a pair of field goals by Tim Seder that were set up by two Eagles' fumbles.

The defense faltered next. Philadelphia quarterback Donovan McNabb threw touchdown passes on the Eagles' next two possessions, giving them a 14-6 lead early in the second quarter. Then things really got ugly.

The Cowboys fumbled four times - the Eagles' Damon Moore returned one for a touchdown — and had a punt blocked that set up a field goal.

When the blooper reel was complete, Dallas was staring at a 33-6 deficit entering halftime.

"It was embarrassing for the whole team," said safety Darren Woodson. "It's tough anytime the defense has to go out in a bad situation like that."

Cowboys coach Dave Campo said he expects his team to struggle this season, but doesn't envision similar meltdowns.

"You can measure wins and losses, but you can also measure improvement," he said. "There are a lot of things being evaluated and done besides the wins and losses."

However, the Cowboys didn't show much improvement against the Eagles after showing unexpected spunk in losses to undefeated San Diego and preseason Super Bowl contender Tampa Bay.

It's not something readily admitted around the locker room.

Athletes help raise money

IRVING, (AP) – Dallas Cowboys safety George Teague and cornerback Jason Bell were among NFL athletes at a celebrity fundraiser organized by a sports agent for survivors of firefighters killed in the New York terrorist attacks.

Teague said he was getting ready for work the morning of Sept. 11 when showed up at Monday's event at Las Colinas to help do his part for relatives of firefighters who perished at the World Trade Center.

"I think this showed a lot of people the big picture," Teague said. "These problems are far bigger than anything in my life. This loss is huge. But it moves us all closer together." Organized by sports agent

Jordan Woy, who represents about 40 NFL players, the charity event raised at least $30,000. A silent auction included items autographed by actors John Travolta and Mike Myers and baseball legend Hank

Blair's message: Taliban have had ample warning, now face military strikes

Prime Minister Tony Blair has a message for Afghanistan's Taliban rulers: Time has run out for handing over Osama bin Laden. It's the same warning sent earlier by Pakistan's president, and another sign that military strikes are almost inevitable.

Blair, in a speech to a Labor Party conference later today, was to warn that the Taliban have had their chance to turn over terror suspect bin Laden, Labor Party aides told journalists. Blair was to say that U.S.-led strikes will be directed at the Saudi dissident's training camps and the Taliban's military hardware, supplies and finances, aides said.

"Military action, as the prime minister will be saying, may well have to be used unless there is some dramatic change of mind by the Taliban," Foreign Secretary Jack Straw said Tuesday in an interview with British Broadcasting Corp. radio.

"But we are all very clear that it has to be proportionate, it has to be directed and it has to be backed by a much wider program to try to end this kind of instability," Straw said.

A U.S. official laid out for NATO's ruling council what proof the United States has against bin Laden. The United States gave "clear and compelling evidence" at the classified briefing, NATO Secretary-General Lord Robertson tion.

LONDON (AP) - British said in Brussels Tuesday. The briefing was given by U.S. Ambassador at Large Francis X. Taylor, who is Bush's coordinator for counterterrorism.

> Robertson said the allies have determined that the attack "was directed from abroad" and therefore covered by NATO's Article 5, which says that an attack on one member is an attack on all 19 members. Straw's warning comes a after Pakistani day President Gen. Pervez Musharraf said he had all but given up on efforts to mediate the standoff between the Taliban and Washington over bin Laden, chief suspect in the Sept. 11 suicide hijacking attacks against the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

> "It appears because of the stand that the Taliban have taken that confrontation will take place,' Musharraf told the BBC on Monday.

Musharraf said it now "appears that the United States will take action in Afghanistan, and we have conveyed this to the Taliban.'

Asked if the Taliban's days were numbered, he replied: "It appears so."

The Taliban, an Islamic militia that controls the majority of Afghanistan, said Sunday they know where bin Laden is, and that he is under their control. Previously, they had said they didn't know the Saudi millionaire's loca-

GENERAL NEWS

Four-year-old saw parents, sister slain, officials say

HOUSTON (AP) - Investigators are relying on a 4-year-old girl to help them solve the fatal shootings of the child's pregnant mother, father and 5year-old sister.

The child apparently hid as shots rang out in a Sugar Land home on Monday afternoon. The victims were identified as William Arvizu, 25; his wife, Danielle, 23; and daughter, Hayley, 5.

Officials said a shotgun and pistol were used in the attack.

"I think we are dealing with people who have no conscience," Chief Deputy Craig Brady said in today's Houston Chronicle.

"What kind of person would kill a small child?"

The 4-year-old was found unharmed in a back bedroom.

"The child did see what happened and she hid," Brady said. "She is very articulate and has been able to help The girl spent several hours talking to detectives. Neighbors said they heard gunshots about 3:15 p.m., then saw a dark pickup truck speeding away with two or three people inside. The truck reportedly had chrome wheels that extended slightly outside the fenders. Brady said.

Officials said robbery was not believed to be a motive.

"We have some ideas, but we are not going to discuss it at this point,' Brady said.

Initially, investigators thought robbery might be a motive, but they began to shy away from that as friends and family members arrived on the scene

"We do have some information and leads to follow up on and hopefully we will have some suspects identified relatively soon," Brady said.

The victims may have known their assailants, he said.

Town provides sites for vehicles housing homeless

EUGENE. Ore. (AP) - An old van sits alone in a downtown parking lot hear a Dumpster and a toilet. It doesn't run and is sorely in need of care, but it is home sweet home to Kathy Obert, a 60-year-old homeless woman.

She is one of scores of people who live in old cars, vans or recreational vehicles on sites set aside for that purpose by the city of Eugene, a leafy university town with a progressive reputation.

Eugene appears to be the only city in the country with such a program, according to the National Coalition of the Homeless.

Camping on the streets of the city of 137,000 is prohibited. But for the past three years, city officials have been making an exception for homeless people who live in vehicles.

sites where people can stay for up to 90 days, a limit that is flexible. About 60 more sites have been provided by churches, businesses and nonprofit organizations.

Each site is provided with a portable toilet and a Dumpster and is limited to a maximum of three vehicles.

The program is run by a Catholic relief agency, St. Vincent de Paul. The agency coordinates with city officials to find places for homeless people to park the vehicles they are living in.

"For every space in the parking program there are 10 applicants," said William Wise, who works with the homeless for the agency.

The number of homeless people living in cars is hard to calculate, said Richie

The city has supplied 15 Weinman, the neighborhoods and affordable housing manager for the city, but he estimates it is well over 100.

Even though current Eugene regulations stipulate that homeless people who live in cars and vans must park their vehicles on designated sites, those who don't are only told to move on if there are complaints from neighbors.

"The police are compassionate about this," Wise said.

"They don't want to write a ticket or take a homeless person to jail or tow their homes, but they can't ignore the complaints of the other citizens, either," he commented.

A van owned by Lori Harward, who is around 60, is parked illegally with two other home/vehicles on an isolated street in west

Brady told Houston radio station KTRH that family members said Danielle Arvizu was due to have a baby today.

Brady said there apparently was a struggle near the front door where Arvizu was killed. His wife and daughter were killed elsewhere in the onestory, middle-income brick home.

Neighbor Erica Duque said she spoke with the family from time to time.

"They are a good family," she said. 'I can't believe this has happened."

Several people described the neighborhood as quiet and relatively crimefree, but others said there have been problems the past couple of years.

"In the four years I have lived here, it has changed" with an increase in petty crimes and vandalism, said Michael Harding.

"This is a horrible tragedy," he said. "It is just sad to hear something like this.

> Eugene's industrial area. A bed is tucked in crosswise in the back. There is a card table. Strands of costume jewelry hang from a hook.

"I'd rather be in my van than have to adapt to other people, or to my kids, God forbid," she said.

Eugene officials chose their current approach to the homeless car dwellers because strict enforcement of the no-camping ban was failing.

"It was a cat-and-mouse game," with the car dwellers just moving on to some other location, Weinman said.

There are few complaints against the legal cardwellers because they are scattered around in groups of one to three, instead of being bunched together in large groups, said Weinman.

Man convicted of murder to be released after 18 years

WAGONER, Okla. (AP) A man who has spent 18 years in prison on a murder conviction was expected to be released thanks to DNA testing showing that hair found at the crime scene wasn't his.

Prosecutors agreed at a hearing Monday that Albert Wesley Brown should be released on Oct. 16. They will decide within six months whether there is enough other evidence to retry him.

"We feel confident that there won't be anything else that will tie Mr. Brown into the case," said Jim Bednar, executive director of the Oklahoma Indigent Defense System.

Brown, 39, was serving a life sentence for the 1981 murder of Earl Taylor, a retired firefighter who was bound, gagged and drowned in a lake.

During trial, prosecutors contended that hair in the gag in Taylor's mouth was linked to Brown. But new DNA analysis, conducted by an independent laboratory at the behest of defense lawyers, found the hair was not Brown's.

An investigator also testified at trial that four hairs found in the trunk of a car driven by Brown were the victim's. The new DNA analysis also found that to be false.

Under a law that went into effect last year, defense lawyers for the indigent can investigate claims of innocence by convicts in state prisons: Brown was the first to apply to have his case re-examined.

Prosecutors had contended Brown killed Taylor after being interrupted during a burglary. Brown said he was elsewhere in the state at the time of the crimes, and friends and family testified to his alibi.

Besides hair, other evidence included soil and fiber, and testimony from a man who said he saw a vehicle similar to the one driven by Brown near the area where Taylor was found.

District Attorney Dianne Barker Harrold said Taylor's family was understanding about Brown's pending release.

Dear Ann Landers: Last year, I married "Joe," a wonderful guy. We were both 24 years old and very much in love. Here's the problem: Neither of us is financially stable right

I love the guy. we get along great and enjoy each other's company. But I am losing respect for him because he is so lazy and unmotivated. Should I call it quits while we are still young and have no children, or should I stand by my man? Is he likely to change? -- Conflicted in California

Dear Conflicted: You work 16-hour days while Joe sleeps late, visits friends and forgets to come. home. You say you love the guy, you want to have a family and ask if he is likely to change. The answer is yes. He will probably get worse

Will Joe be a responsible house-husband? Will he' take good care of the children and do his share of thehousework, cooking and laundry while you support the family? If you are both willing to have such an arrangement, things might work out. If not, you should dump this loser, and next time, before you get serious, make sure the man is self-supporting. It doesn't matter if you make a lot. more money than your; partner, but he should atleast have a job.

Dear Ann Landers: Yesterday, my husband and I were standing in line at the grocery store behind a nice-looking young woman who was chatting on her cell phone. During her conversation, she gave out her address, her phone number and the license plate of her new car. We were not trying to eavesdrop. The infor mation was available for anyone within earshot.

Please tell your readers be careful when they talk on their cell phones in public. Some unscrupulous pe son could get an earful. Cautious in Sioux Falls, South Dakota
