Police putting extra officers on patrol this week

By ROGER CLINE
 Staff Writer

Over the river and through the woods to grandmother's house you go, but you'd better wear your seatbelt, obey the speed limit and drive sober to get there. The Big Spring Police Department is participating once again in the

CHAMNESS

Thanksgiving Day Safe and Sober Special Traffic Enforcement Program (STEP) and will have extra police officers on the street this week.

The extra officers will focus on issuing citations to drivers who speed, fail to wear a seat belt or restrain their children, or drive under the influence of drugs or alcohol, said Police Lt. Terry Chamness.

"This grant is from the Texas Department of Transportation," he said. "We have been receiving it for about the last five years and we are going to be doing five holidays this budget year. The first is Thanksgiving, the heaviest-traveled holiday of the year."

Although the program has been in place for five years, Chamness said this is the second year Thanksgiving has been part of the STEP program.

"(That's) because of the traveling that's being done by people," he said. Other holidays included in the program are Memorial Day, Labor Day, the Fourth of July and Valentine's Day, which occurs during Child Safety Week.

Because of the numbers of people on the road and the increase in alcohol consumption that invariably surrounds a holiday, Texas highways tend to become more deadly around holidays than at other times of the year, Chamness said.

According to the Department of Public Safety, 54 people were killed in 1998 and 56 people were killed in 1999 statewide during the Thanksgiving Day holiday period each year.

Chamness said the Police Department will be exercising a "zero tolerance" policy for drivers and passengers not using seatbelts during the holiday week with special focus on drivers who do not have children properly restrained.

"Because they don't have a choice; mother and dad take care of them," he said. "We just hope people keep using seatbelts because they do save lives and prevent injuries in an accident." During the 2001 Memorial Day holiday period, Chamness said compliance with seatbelt laws in Big Spring was 92 percent.

Relief route meeting with state officials encouraging

Texas Department of Transportation commissioners reacted favorably to a Big Spring delegation's proposal for a bypass to divert Highway 87 truck traffic to the west of Big Spring.

"It went very well," said local Ports-to-Plains project board member Bill Crooker of the 20-minute presentation. "The commissioners complimented us on our presentation."

The delegation included 12 people from Big Spring including Crooker and Mayor Russ McEwen and three representatives of Ports-to-Plains, including board president Kevin Evans.

"Sen. Bob Duncan was also there," Crooker added. "(Rep. David) Counts couldn't be present, but he wrote letters in support of the reliever route."

Crooker said the commissioners asked only a few questions about technical aspects of the project.

"One of them asked a technical question about how it would fit into the

Victim Services says 'thanks' to public officials

By LYNDEL MOODY

Victim Services volunteers just wanted to thank the men and women of emergency and law enforcement for all the long hours of work they put in after the Sept. 11 attacks.

So they did the one thing that was sure to soften their hearts and maybe add a lump to their throats and bring a tear to their eyes — they baked them some sweets.

On Tuesday, volunteers from the Victim Services brought homemade cakes, cookies and pies to all the law enforcement agencies and fire stations.

A new appreciation has swept the country after millions of Americans witnessed heroic acts of New York fire personnel and police officers who risked their lives, hundreds making the ultimate sacrifice, to protect their fellow citizens.

People showed their support by displaying U.S. flags on car antennas and coat lapels. Giving a firefighter or policeman an extra pat on the back or even treating them to dinner seemed to become everyday occurrences.

More than two months after the horrific events, public support seems to be continuing.

"There has always been good support from the public but people have gone out of their way to approach and talk to us," said Big Spring Fire Chief Brian Jensen.

Jensen is proud to see the community unite because of the attack on the country.

"It's great to see the citizens go in one direction," Jensen said. "It's been a great effort. I think it has made everybody more aware."

All the attention may give an extra boost to employment applications for the department because more people seem interested in becoming a firefighter, Jensen said.

"There has definitely been a higher awareness in becoming a firefighter,"

 Victim Service volunteers Amy Ogle, left, and Betty Kelley give Howard County Sheriff Dale Walker a few sweets to thank the deputies for their service to the community.

Jensen said. "We have received a lot more calls."

Those county volunteer firefighters who risk their lives hundreds of times a year to fight everything from grass fires to petroleum fires have seen a difference in public opinion.

"We have seen a tremendous change," said Howard County Volunteer Fire

Chief Tommy Sullivan. "People are coming up and saying thank you and we appreciate what you do."

hierarchy of TxDOT's management system, and so on," he said.

If he had to guess, Crooker said he believes the commissioners will approve the project, but says the area will have to wait two or three months to hear the results of Thursday's presentation.

"We will not hear about our project and how TxDOT will handle it for 60 to 90 days," he said. "They will write us a letter seeking certain information and putting us into the system."

McEwen said that although it's hard to tell for sure, he also feels the presentation went well.

"It's so hard to tell," he said. "Bill Crooker did an excellent job in his presentation and I think we made an excellent case for the reliever route. I think it went very well to be honest with you. Now we get to sit and wait and see what the results are."

The reliever route, designed to handle the expected doubling in truck traffic through Big Spring once Highway 87 becomes an artery of the Ports to Plains project, would also create better highway access for the McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark, improving its potential as an industrial site, Crooker said.

THANKS

The men in blue continue to patrol the streets of Big Spring, putting their lives in danger with every call for assistance and every turn of a corner.

While those they have to arrest or give tickets to are not always so appreciative of the Police Department's services, public opinion is still favorable.

"For the most part it has been favorable especially from the school kids, youth, older people and the average working people," said Big Spring Police Chief Lonnie Smith.

Smith said the department appreciates the outpouring of public support.

"We hope to continue to get public support, but we are not asking the public not to be critical," Smith said. "We want to provide the best service we can."

"Most police officers and firemen get into the field so they can help people and serve their community," he continued. "That is way I got into it."

Bush signing aviation security bill, addressing Ramadan dinner

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is dramatically expanding the federal government's role in aviation security, eager to reassure jittery passengers heading into the Thanksgiving week travel crush.

Bush was signing a sweeping package of legislative changes today at Reagan Washington National Airport, the last major U.S. airport to reopen following the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

The bill was the product of weeks of negotiations in Congress, and it contains provisions that Bush resisted.

The federal government will assume control of passenger and baggage screening operations, now run by private security firms contracted by airlines, and put all 28,000 screeners on the federal payroll.

Bush wanted most of them to remain employees of private companies, to give airports, airlines and the government more flexibility in hiring and firing them.

White House press secretary Ari Fleischer played down the president's loss in that debate. "There's so much good in the bill that the president is pleased he'll be able to sign it today even though it's not 100 percent reflective of what he wanted. Nothing is; that's the way it works," Fleischer said.

The Bush administration has one year to get the federal security work force in place at airports, Fleischer said. "It's going to be a difficult process and the federal government is going to be totally committed to it."

For three years after the law goes into effect all airports must be under the federal system, except for five airports of different sizes that can apply for pilot programs trying different screening approaches. After that, airports can opt out of the federal system.

The measure also moves toward 100 percent inspection of checked bags and seeks to ensure that a potential hijacker who gets into a plane will be stopped by air marshals in the cabin and reinforced cockpit doors.

Few signs of change will be evident immediately.

The government will have a year to take control of passenger and baggage screening operations and to put all 28,000 screeners on the federal payroll.

Among the more immediate effects of the new law will be a heightened law enforcement presence. The package requires at least one law enforcement officer at every screening post at major airports.

Airports have 60 days to initiate plans to increase such screening, with a deadline of the end of 2002 for subjecting all checked bags to explosives detection screening.

Travelers will feel one change early next year: To pay for the beefed-up security, the measure levies a $2.50 security fee each time a passenger boards a plane, with a $5 maximum for a one-way trip with multiple legs.

Later today, Bush planned to address an Iftar dinner for Muslims, traditionally held at the end of daylong fasts through the month of Ramadan, in the State Dining Room at the White House.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY Tuesday, Nov. 20:
Opportunities strike more often this year because of your high charisma and desirability. Others seek opportunities to become closer to you. Share your dreams and needs. You find that your immediate circle is responsive. Sometimes you don't see the facts realistically, often donning a pair of rose-colored glasses. If others, you tend to draw others close, but you actually need a little more distance this year. Date and commit, but don't live together. You will increase the success of a relationship by not allowing the heat of the moment to take permanent control. If attached, you two often disagree about matters because you don't hear your partner. Work on your communication; consider taking a class together.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Beam sunshine into co-workers' lives. Bring chocolate turkeys or cookies to work. Tell those special people how thankful you are to have them in your life. Infuse others' lives with ideas and a more spiritual sense of direction. With all the good vibes, it might be difficult to keep your nose to the grindstone. Tonight: Laugh off confusion.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) A budding relationship draws your attention. You don't need to share every detail, though you might share your good mood. Don't be upset when someone reverses gears and does the unexpected. Say little, but listen big time! Your instincts lead you. Tonight: Play it low-key.

Officials: Collapse of Taliban leaves bin Laden little room to maneuver

WASHINGTON (AP) — More U.S. commandos have been put on the ground in Afghanistan to help in the hunt for Osama bin Laden, the Pentagon said today.

And American planes pounded Taliban front lines just outside the city of Kunduz, where Taliban and al-Qaida forces have been holding out for days as the rest of the north has fallen to opposition forces.

With U.S. bombs still falling, the Taliban regime cracking and Afghan opposition forces rising, Bush administration officials say chances of finding bin Laden are improving.

Pentagon spokeswoman Victoria Clarke said today that more American troops were sent Friday into the country's south, where special operations forces have been gathering intelligence and setting up roadblocks to try to catch bin Laden and fleeing Taliban. There are a few hundred Americans now on the ground throughout the country, she said.

"We're beginning to narrow his possibilities for hiding," Condoleezza Rice, President Bush's national security adviser, said Sunday.

In separate television interviews, Rice and other officials said bin Laden is on the run, with little chance of gaining safe haven in neighboring countries if he were to escape Afghanistan.

"It's getting harder for him to hide as more and more territory is removed from Taliban control," Secretary of State Colin Powell said on ABC's "This Week." "I don't think there's any country in the region that would be anxious to give him guest privileges if he showed up."

Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz said bin Laden was "in very great

"I don't think this fellow is going to be welcome anywhere. He is an outcast. He is a murderer, he's a terrorist. ... He is on the run, just as the president said he would be. And we will get him."

— Secretary of State Colin Powell danger" of being killed or captured.

"This is a man on the run who's doing his best to hide," Wolfowitz told CBS' "Face the Nation."

All three administration officials said the United States has no reason to believe bin Laden has fled Afghanistan.

The Taliban's envoy to Pakistan said Saturday that bin Laden had left Afghanistan, but that has not been substantiated. Later, the diplomat said he meant only that bin Laden was outside areas under Taliban control.

As U.S. bombing continued Sunday in the Kandahar area in southern Afghanistan and the Kunduz area in the north, the Pentagon said 75 strike aircraft had participated in Saturday's attacks in six target areas near Kabul. It said tunnels and caves used by Taliban and al-Qaida leaders were among Saturday's targets.

Powell said the CIA has been doing "some rather splendid work with respect to our activities in Afghanistan, working alongside our military forces that are inside in Afghanistan."

The Washington Post reported Sunday the CIA has paramilitary forces in Afghanistan; Powell would not confirm that.

"I think we've got a very fine linkup between our intelligence assets, our military assets, all within the framework of a good political and military strategy," Powell said. "And it's now starting to show rather significant results."

If bin Laden were to flee Afghanistan, the United States would keep up the hunt, Wolfowitz said.

"We are going to continue pursuing him," he said. "Let's also remember, we're going to continue pursuing the entire al-Qaida network, which is in 60 countries, not just Afghanistan and, worst of all, here in the United States. ... This is a campaign against all the global terrorist networks and the states that support terrorism."

Powell said no country on the periphery of Afghanistan, including China, would give bin Laden a haven.

"I don't think this fellow is going to be welcome anywhere," the secretary said. "He is an outcast. He is a murderer, he's a terrorist. ... He is on the run, just as the president said he would be. And we will get him."

Rice cautioned against assuming that the military successes in Afghanistan over the past week mean the United States has met its main objective.

"This may take a while," she said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Rice also left open the possibility that Iraq could become a target.

Living Tree a tradition not to miss

If you'd been wandering the halls at First United Methodist Church this weekend, it probably sounded a lot like Christmas. The church has been preparing for its annual "gift to the community," the 22nd Living Christmas Tree. Two shows are planned Dec. 1 and 2 of the musical, which is titled "The Wonder of Christmas," created by Dave Hamilton with narration by Karla Worley. The production will feature dozens of adult and children singers performing traditional and modern Christmas songs with narration and a full orchestra accompaniment. And, of course, there's the huge, decorated frame that gives the appearance that the singers are actually on a giant holiday tree. In short, this is something you've got to see. And you're in luck: the church offers all tickets to the show for free. They will be available on a first-come, first-served basis beginning Monday, Nov. 26, at the church office, 400 Scurry. No ticket is needed for a dress rehearsal on Saturday, Dec. 1, at 2 p.m., and the public is invited to attend it as well. Want to join the singers? The next round of rehearsals begins Monday, Nov. 26, at 7 p.m., continuing each night that week. It would be a good idea to call Music Minister Jim Wright right away to see if there's a spot still open. This massive undertaking, which involves more than 250 people — singers, musicians, and many behind the scenes — has been a Christmas tradition in Big Spring for more than two decades. FUMC members and volunteers from several other congregations work tirelessly to see that it's better each year than the last. It may not come with a big red bow, but this production is a gift indeed. Don't miss the chance to enjoy this very special part of the Christmas season in Big Spring.

Constructive effort goes a long way

Good news, bad news; bad news, good news. Plane crash: bad news. "Just" a plane crash: good news. Our side takes Kabul. Ooops, our side could be a problem. My favorite guy on our side is Gen. Abdul Rashid Dostum, the Uzbek warlord who took Mazar-i-sharif.

MOLLY IVINS

According to The New York Times, at age 23, Dostum led a militia of Uzbeks who sided with the Soviets when they invaded in '79. He rose to command an armored division and helped the Soviets kill about a million Afghans and drive more into exile. He sided with the Soviet puppet regime after the Soviets left in '89, but switched sides in '92 and helped overthrow them, instead. In 1996, he joined the Taliban, and since then he has switched sides again — first fighting then joining the late leader of the Northern Alliance, Ahmed Shah Massoud. Dostum ruled Mazar-i-sharif and six northern provinces, according to Pakistan intelligence. He seems to have favored corruption, nepotism and an un-Islamic lifestyle. In other words, this one is a doozy. The best news is that the supply roads are now open to the south in Afghanistan, which means we can get humanitarian aid in. Almost the only way we could have lost this war was if millions of Afghans starved while the world watched on television. Whew. Now the big concern is that the Pashtuns will break and run into Pakistan, creating a province seething with discontent, if not actually provoking civil war. Pakistan is estimated to have between 30 and 40 nuclear weapons. No shortage of worries, eh mate? It's rather touching that so many Americans seem to feel that what we need is better public relations. America has a genius for marketing, they love to say, and we ought to use it — make "the Arab street" love us with an ad campaign, better propaganda, jazzy graphics. Actually, it's quite difficult to persuade people that you are bombing them for their own good. It's not a circumstance propaganda can do much to popularize. Getting it over with is more helpful. Historically, bombing has served to cement tyrants in power, at least while it lasts. Since I've always been persuaded that Americans are unusually nice people myself, I'd like to convince the rest of the world, too. However, mass starvation is a hell of a public relations problem — I don't think a marketing campaign works there. But we are now in the best of all possible public relations positions, in that we are able to help bring in massive amounts of humanitarian aid. And that is not only a great marketing ploy, but also, as Martha Stewart would say, that's a good thing. It's hard to say what bombing a fragile country will do to it. The Soviets left Afghanistan such a shambles, a period of warlord rule was followed by the Taliban, who were initially welcomed simply because they brought order. We have a responsibility to see that history does not repeat itself. As Tom Friedman of The New York Times observed, part of the resentment from the Mujahedeen stems from the fact that we dropped them like a used hanky after the Soviets had been defeated. Many of you are old enough to remember what happened in Cambodia when it got sucked into a larger war: The Khmer Rouge, a bizarre communist sect with a strong resemblance to the Taliban, came down out of the hills and slaughtered millions. Spalding Gray called them "rednecks," for lack of any better way to describe their ideology, but that same resentment of modernity that one finds in the Taliban also marked the Khmer Rouge. Afghanistan is not the only country impacted by the current war. Pakistan is also so poor that it has been dividing essentially all its available resources between military expenditures and debt service. One consequence is the crumbling of its civil society. Because the state school system is in desuetude, the religious schools — madrasas — have emerged as incubators of jihad. The good news is that just as it takes a very little in the way of destruction to unbalance a fragile country, a little constructive effort goes a long way, too. America has been notably penurious with foreign aid — most developed countries manage 3 percent of GDP or better. We've been at 1 percent for several years, courtesy of politicians like Sen. Jesse Helms, who made careers out of attacking foreign aid, as though it had ever been a great burden on taxpayers. As we all know, Helms also waged an effective campaign to keep the United States from paying its United Nations dues. At the beginning of this conflict, we quietly ponied up the full amount owed. Pace, Sen. Helms.

Insurance industry lobbies president

Less than a week after the terrorist attacks on New York and Washington, the chief executives of 15 insurance companies met with President Bush in the White House to assure him that they would honor all claims arising from those events. Acts of war are not normally covered, and Bush had characterized the attacks on American soil as war. But the CEOs did not come to quibble. Ducking responsibility would place the industry in a terrible light, and there was no serious thought given to actually doing so. But the industry's wartime generosity comes at a price. The CEOs told Bush that while they will handle the losses stemming from Sept. 11, which could top $70 billion, they want the federal government to step in with financial assistance if there are future terrorist acts of a cata-clysmic nature. Without the backstop of a federal guarantee, the industry leaders told Bush they would exclude acts of terrorism from all future policies, a move that would cripple commerce. This veiled threat got Bush's attention. In a litigious society like the United States, insurance is the grease that makes the economy go around. Without it, vulnerable properties in major urban centers could not get coverage, and banks would either stop making loans or raise their loan costs for construction and manufacturing in a host of industries. The resulting crisis of coverage would be another victory for the terrorists and another blow for an economy still reeling from the primary attacks. It is in everybody's interest to cushion the insurance industry so that it can weather future shocks. But even a White House sympathetic to corporate interests is mindful of appearances. One top administration official said caustically that "building a trough" for insurance companies was not high on his list of priorities. Congress has a public-relations problem, too.

Lawmakers who are normally friendly to the industry did not rush to offer assistance. Bailing out the airlines in the immediate aftermath of Sept. 11 had been controversial enough, and the airlines had been ready to go under financially if Congress had not intervened. In contrast, the insurance industry is sitting on $300 billion in reserves, and liability for Sept. 11 is spread so far in today's global economy that a Swiss company will bear the brunt of the payouts. Predictions of numerous lawsuits have yet to materialize. The families of victims are waiting to see how the government structures its Victims Compensation Fund. Rules will be made public in December. If the awards are inadequate or unfair in some way, people will turn to the courts even though the wheels of justice grind slowly, and it could be years before the families see any financial return. The government promises swift action, if not overly generous payments. A suit has been filed against Osama bin Laden on behalf of the widow of a man who died when the World Trade Center collapsed. It may not be as quixotic as it appears. The State Department has frozen some $24 million in terrorist assets, and it could eventually tap into those funds to compensate victims. The delicate dance on Capitol Hill has less to do with the events of Sept. 11 than with shaping a partnership between the federal government and the state-regulated insurance industry to handle future attacks. New insurance policies will be written at the start of the new year, so there is an urgency about getting a bill to the president's desk before Congress leaves for the holidays. The compromise that seems to be emerging would provide government assistance after the first $20 billion of losses suffered in a terrorist attack. The government would shoulder the largest portion, perhaps 80 percent, of the higher losses, with that money being repaid perhaps through an assessment on policyholders. Above $30 billion, there would be no provision for payback to the government.

Olympic torch begins journey to Salt Lake City for Winter Games

ANCIENT OLYMPIA, Greece (AP) — The flame that will burn at the 2002 Winter Games began its long journey to Salt Lake City on Monday after a ceremony held among the ruins where the Olympics were born.
Cloudy skies and sporadic showers prevented the flame from being lighted during the ceremony. The flame is ignited in a concave mirror by the sun's rays in the mountains around the Olympics' ancient birthplace. The ceremony is set amid the temples of Hera and Zeus, the main gods once honored at this sanctuary.

"The fire of the Olympians inspires us, lifts us. These athletes ignite a fire within those who experience the inevitable Olympic moments of the Olympic Games," Mitt Romney, head of the Salt Lake City organizers, said after the flame lighting ceremony. "It will light our way."
Romney was accompanied by Utah Gov. Mike Leavitt, United States Olympic Committee President Sandy Baldwin and her Greek counterpart, Lambis Nikolau.
"It's a moment we have long waited for, the beginning of a long trail to Salt Lake City," Leavitt said.

During the ceremony, Greek actress Thalia Prokopiou, in her role as high priestess, used a flame burning in a clay urn to officiate at the ceremony. The flame had been lighted in the mirror on Friday and Saturday in the presence of Salt Lake City officials.
Greek officials worried about bad weather did not even try to use a torch to light the flame in the mirror. The sun briefly shone through the clouds shortly before the ceremony, but it was raining when the relay began.
It was the third Games in a row that the torch has failed to light during the official ceremony. Clouds prevented the torch lighting for the 2000 Sydney Olympics and the 1998 Nagano Winter Games.

Prokopiou used the jar to light the Salt Lake City torch in another ceremony at a nearby grove dedicated to Pierre de Coubertin, the French baron who revived the Olympics more than 100 years ago. The first torch was carried by Lefteris Fafalis, a Greek cross-country skier.
Greek runners will relay the torch to a ski center near the ancient ruins of Delphi before it is taken to Athens on Tuesday.

Cory Hill, 5, utilizes the blocking of Jeremiah "Baby" Baeza, 63, on Friday as the Coahoma Bulldogs defeated Idalou 28-9 in Class 2A bi-district action. The win sets Coahoma, 10-1, up against Mason, 4-7, 2 p.m. Friday at San Angelo Stadium. In another playoff involving the Crossroads area, Sands, 8-3, takes on New Home, 10-1, at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Wellman.

Rams overcome injuries, Pats; Redskins win sloppy in Denver

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — As long as the St. Louis Rams have Kurt Warner and Marshall Faulk, not even a slew of injuries can slow them down.
Despite injuries to five players, four on defense, the Rams (8-1) rode Kurt Warner's 401-yard passing effort to a 24-17 victory over the New England Patriots on Sunday night. Warner ignored an injured right thumb that cut his practice time last week.
Faulk had 83 yards rushing and 70 receiving and scored one touchdown.
The Patriots (5-5) sputtered even though St. Louis' defense was missing first-round draft picks tackle Damione Lewis (broken right foot) and strong safety Adam Archuleta (concussion), plus linebacker Mark Fields (sprained ankle) and end Leonard Little (sprained knee). Wide receiver Az-Zahir Hakim left in the first quarter with a sprained left ankle.

Redskins 17, Broncos 10
DENVER (AP) — Kent Graham replaced Tony Banks (concussion) and threw two touchdown passes in the fourth quarter as the Redskins won their fourth straight after opening the season 0-5. Graham led the Redskins to all their points.

In the snow, Washington lost three of six fumbles, and had seven dropped passes. Denver (5-5) had six fumbles, two of which were lost, and five drops.

Cardinals 45, Lions 38

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — At the other end of the standings, Detroit (0-9) remained the only winless team. Arizona (3-6) had just 13 touchdowns in its first eight games before Jake Plummer passed for 334 yards and four touchdowns, two to David Boston.
It was the sixth consecutive time Detroit has lost by a touchdown or less.

49ers 25, Panthers 22, OT

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jose Cortez's 26-yard field goal won it, after Jeff Garcia staged a late comeback for San Francisco (7-2).
Garcia threw a 7-yard touchdown pass to Terrell Owens and made a 2-point conversion throw to Eric Johnson with 1 second left in regulation.

It was the fourth time this season Garcia rallied his team to either win or tie a game in the waning moments. The 49ers are 3-1 in overtime. Garcia finished 34-for-54 for 305 yards, three touchdowns and two interceptions.
Carolina (1-9) has lost nine straight.

Jets 24, Dolphins 0

MIAMI (AP) — The Jets (7-3) earned their fourth straight victory and are 5-0 on the road. New York's opportunistic defense scored on interception returns of 60 yards by Aaron Glenn and 63 yards by Victor Green in beating Miami (6-3) for the eighth consecutive time.
New York's five takeaways gave it a league-high 33; the Jets now have an NFL-leading plus-22 turnover differential.

The Dolphins were shut out at home for the first time since 1970.

Bears 27, Bucs 24

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Marty Booker caught three touchdown passes from Jim Miller as Chicago (7-2) took over first place in the NFC Central.

With Rahman out of the way, Lewis looking to fight Tyson

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Lennox Lewis looked spectacular when he desperately needed to. Now, the fight that might have ended his career could set up his biggest bout ever.
Knocking out Hasim Rahman in the fourth round Saturday night didn't just give Lewis back his heavyweight titles and a bit of revenge. It also set up a megafight against Mike Tyson that could be one of boxing's biggest ever.
Lewis wants it, and so does Tyson. And, with Lewis 36 and Tyson one year younger, both fighters realize time is running out for a match talked about for much of the last decade.

"Since after the Holyfield fight I've been waiting for Tyson," Lewis said. "Where is he?"
Closer than ever, if you listen to Tyson.
"He said he wants me," Tyson said.
"Well, I really look forward to it."
Tyson is the mandatory No. 1 challenger by the WBC, one of two belts Lewis took back with one crushing right hand that put Rahman on his back midway through the fourth round of their rematch.
But both fighters are bound under contracts to competing networks.

Cowboys make it easy for Philadelphia, 36-3; two picks go for TDs

IRVING (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles were held to just 227 yards and one offensive touchdown. That didn't stop them from blowing out the Dallas Cowboys again.
The Eagles returned two interceptions for TDs — Jeremiah Trotter's 50-yarder and William Hampton's 33-yarder were both longer than any of Donovan McNabb's completion. And they never had far to go on offense Sunday in a 36-3 win at Dallas.

"We had great pressure all day," cornerback Troy Vincent said. "To put your offense in scoring position makes all of the difference."
Philadelphia's average starting position for 10 offensive possessions was its 49. The only offensive TD — McNabb's 2-yard pass to Chad Lewis for a 7-0 lead midway through the second quarter — ended a 25-yard drive set up when Bobby Taylor stripped Emmitt Smith and also recovered the fumble.

Before their short TD drive, the Eagles gained only 1 yard on their first three possessions. Dallas had already missed two field goals.
The Eagles have won four of their last five games, including two straight blowout victories. The NFC East leaders beat Minnesota 48-17 a week earlier and have four more games before facing another team with a winning record at San Francisco on Dec. 22.
"Whether we blow them out or win by one, it doesn't matter," offensive tackle Tra Thomas said. "It shows a lot of character in the team to come back and just keep going."

Despite their 2-7 record, the Cowboys have only been blown out twice — both against the Eagles. Dallas lost 40-18 at Philadelphia on Sept. 30, but their other five losses are by an average margin of less than a touchdown.
"What you saw there was a replay of the first game," Cowboys coach Dave Campo said. "We needed to protect the ball, and we didn't do it."

It was the worst Dallas loss since a 43-3 defeat at home to Minnesota on Nov. 13, 1988. That's was 207 games ago.
Trotter got his interception on the final play of the first half. And it came on a needless throw by Ryan Leaf, the 1998 No. 2 overall pick by San Diego who has lost both of his Dallas starts and is 4-15 as an NFL starter.

From their own 40 with just 15 seconds left, the Cowboys let Leaf take a deep shot downfield. That pass was incomplete, and then they called a 10-yard out route that wouldn't have accomplished anything.
Philadelphia's average starting position for 10 offensive possessions was its 49. The only offensive TD — McNabb's 2-yard pass to Chad Lewis for a 7-0 lead midway through the second quarter — ended a 25-yard drive set up when Bobby Taylor stripped Emmitt Smith and also recovered the fumble.

Hampton returned Leaf's other interception with 2:51 left in the game. Leaf was under heavy pressure and made another ill-advised pass toward the sideline.
David Akers had a career high with five field goals, including kicks of 24 and 46 yards in the final four minutes of the second quarter. He added three field goals (26, 28, 30) on the first three possessions of the second half.

Notes: Jon Hilbert, signed last week to replace injured kicker Tim Seder, got the only Dallas points with a 30-yard field goal with 12:08 left. He missed his first two attempts, one tipped by the Eagles at the line and the other after a low snap. ... Smith, back in the Cowboys' lineup after missing two games with a sprained right knee, had 80 yards on 15 carries. ... The Eagles swept the season series against the Cowboys for the second straight year — the first time they've done that since 1988-89. ... Duce Staley rushed for 102 yards, giving him consecutive 100-yard games for the first time in two years.

Aaron Cloer high his mom, Vickie, during the Area 18 Special Olympics Bowling Tourney, held over the weekend at the Bowlerama in Big Spring. Several hundred athletes and fans attended the annual event.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: During the Gulf War, you gave a list of addresses to write to 'Any Service Person.' Now that our country is at war again, I would like to be able to let these wonderful people know how much their contributions mean to us. Would you please tell me how to write to our servicemen and women overseas? - Patriot in Tennessee of their three children. The problem is my mom. She keeps trying to shield me from the world, hiding information that I already know. I realize she wants to protect me, but I am not a little girl anymore and can handle whatever comes along.

Please help me find a way to tell her that I don't need her by my side every minute and that she should stay out of my business. She is smothering me.

I hope you understand my problem. It's hard to put it into words. - Stressed Out in Minnesota

Dear Stressed: You did a fine job of 'putting it into words.' I get the picture perfectly. Mothers tend to be protective, and you will always be her 'little girl.' Keep in mind, however, that she has been where you are and understands some of the problems you will be facing. Take her suggestions as evidence that she cares deeply about you.

The best way to gain more freedom is for Mom to believe you can handle it. Be trustworthy. Be honest. Expect some bumps along the way, but consider them learning experiences. Those lessons will be the ones that will serve you best.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I recently moved into a new home, and we have been inundated with housewarming gifts - ornamental objects that must be hung on the walls and displayed. Frankly, they aren't what we would choose.

Our friends expect to see their gifts when they visit. Your advice would be greatly appreciated. - Trapped in Texas

Dear Texas: Although it would be nice for the guests to see their gifts on display, you are under no obligation to show every knick-knack you receive. If they ask, simply say you are in the process of redecorating.

Gem of the Day (credit Yogi Berra): When you come to a fork in the road, take it! © 2001 CREATORS SYNDICATE, INC.
