First Church of Nazarene getting ready for drive through nativity

By ANDREIA MEDLIN

Features Editor

Are you looking for something new and different for the whole family to do that's in keeping with the Christmas spirit?

The First Church of the Nazarene will be hosting its 15th Annual Live Drive Through Nativity from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Thursday through Sunday, Dec. 13-16.

The annual event follows Christ throughout his life with depictions of the prophecy of his birth, the journey of Mary and Joseph, the birth of Christ, their flight into Egypt following King Herod's proclamation of the murder of first born sons, the crucifixion, his resurrection and Christ's ascension into heaven.

The actor in this popular scene appears to be floating on a cloud on his way to heaven.

There are 17 scenes with more than 100 actors who are members of the church and range from the elderly to young children.

The event takes several months to prepare and this year will include something for those who are hearing impaired.

"This year we're going to have signers from SWCID (SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf) for the hearing impaired on Thursday evening," said C.J. Ward, pastor's secretary. There will be one signer for each scene.

Although there are no new scenes, two of the old ones have gotten a much-needed face lift, according to Ward.

"The inn scene is all new. It was rebuilt from the ground up and has new scenery that was painted by the congregation," said Ward.

To make the event even more lifelike, live animals have been donated by area ranchers to participate in the production.

"We have several area ranchers who donate animals and some that let us use their animals every year," she said.

The route of the nativity will be the same as in previous years, but for those who are new to the event or who need reminding the entrance is on Lancaster from Martin Luther King Boulevard.

There will be markers for

CRMWD gets yearly grant for program

The Colorado River Municipal Water District and nine other entities statewide have received their yearly installments of matching grants for cloud seeding programs from the Texas Department of Agriculture.

The CRMWD will receive $89,658 from the department, by far, the lowest amount received by any of the 10 entities. The Val Verde County Commissioner's Court in Del Rio received the next lowest amount with $151,504. The Edwards Aquifer Authority in Hondo received the largest amount out of the 10, with $254,874.

"We have a smaller operating area than the others," CRMWD Manager John Grant. "Also, our program is 100 percent self-contained. We have our own planes, we use our own employees. That lets us keep our operating costs down."

Ray Pat Jones, meteorologist for the Colorado River Municipal Water District, demonstrates how a rack of 12 silver iodide flares fits on the wing of the district's twin-engine Piper Aztec weather modification plane. The plane can carry two racks of the flares on each wing. Smoke from the flares affects the freezing temperature of water inside clouds, which increases rain output of clouds already prone to rain. The CRMWD's weather modification program is the oldest in Texas, dating back to 1971.

Grant said that other programs hire independent contractors to perform the cloud seeding services, a more expensive option.

The CRMWD weather modification program is the oldest in the state if not the world, Grant said.

$2 million approved for relief route around city

By ROGER CLINE

The $59.6 billion Fiscal Year 2000 Transportation Appropriations bill, which includes funding for the Ports-to-Plains highway corridor and for the Big Spring truck relief route, has passed both houses of Congress.

The bill passed in the House of Representatives by a 371-11 vote Friday and in the Senate by a 97-2 margin Tuesday.

Bill Crooker, member of the Ports-to-Plains Committee, said he was surprised by the inclusion of $2 million for "the public involvement process, environmental analysis, project and plan development, right-of-way purchasing and utility relocation" for the truck relief route, which will, when completed, divert truck traffic on Highway 87 west of Big Spring near the McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark.

"Just a few days ago, Jeff Meador (public relations employee of U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm) called me and told me that the appropriations bill contained $2 million for the reliever route," Crooker said. "I'm personally elated over it. It moves (the project) from being just a plan to being something that is viable."

Truck traffic on Highway 87 currently travels through Big Spring on Gregg Street.

Giving Tree: Making holidays bright for foster children

By LYNDEL MOODY

Staff Writer

Wells Fargo Bank and Children's Protective Service hope the public will join them to provide Christmas presents for Howard County children in the foster care system.

The Giving Tree, located in the lobby of Wells Fargo Bank, displays Christmas wishes from 55 children. Each wish is written on an ornament which is placed on the tree.

"Each child has three wishes, and I fill out an ornament for wish number one, one for wish number two and one for wish number three," said Conchita Rodriguez, social services technician with CPS "People do not have to buy what is on the ornaments."

Rodriguez reminds the public children asks for a variety of presents from small to big.

"The foster parents let the kids, the ones that can fill out the forms, fill them out," she explained. "They will put down a computer, but we know that a person who is buying a present for them is not going to get a computer. Any gift is greatly appreciated."

Each ornament has the child's clothing size and CPS hopes the donor could purchase an item of clothing, shoes and an affordable toy for the recipient, Rodriguez said.

Donors may pick up an ornament, purchase the gift and return the present unwrapped and with the corresponding ornament to Wells Fargo.

A CPS representative will collect the presents from the bank and wrap the gifts. Case workers will personally deliver donations to the foster home of each child. Howard County children are currently in foster homes locally and throughout the state.

CPS and the foster families do not receive any extra funds to purchase gifts for children who have been taken out of their home. Many of the children have been in the foster system for years and look forward to receiving these donated presents, Rodriguez said.

Wells Fargo Bank is located on 400 Main St. and the tree will be displayed through Friday, Dec. 14.

Quality entries displayed at Wednesday's pecan show

HERALD Staff Report

Quality. That's the key word to come out of this year's show, held Wednesday at the Howard County Extension Office.

"We were down a little in overall entries but the quality was very good overall," said David Kight, county extension agent.

Top pecans were entered by Tom Roundtree, who was the champion commercial division winner; Linda Appleton, champion seedling division winner; and Nathan Hughes, champion classic division winner.

"The judges recommended to send 10 on to the regional pecan judging, and that's quite a few. It indicates the quality they had to choose from this year," said Kight.

The regional pecan show will be held Monday and Tuesday in San Angelo. Winners there will move on to the state show.

Winners in the county show are advised they can pick up their ribbons, rosettes and plaques at the county extension office, in the courthouse.

A list of winners by variety follows:

Wilda Langford, left, Wal-Mart personnel manager, presents a $300 matching check to Zane Harwell, Big Spring High School theater teacher, for the Comanche Trail Amphitheater renovation project. Also pictured are theater students Hollie Cobb, back left, Amanda Sheedy, Jeremy Knight, Wolfgang Robinson and Laura Schnake. Today is the opening for the theater production of "Don't Try and Wake Him, Hand Me the Shovel!" The production begins at 7 p.m. at the high school auditorium and admission is $5 for adults and $3 for students.

Over the years the drive through nativity has drawn nationwide attention and has seen as many as 8,000 cars come through the church's parking lot where the scenes are displayed.

"We usually have around 4,000 to 5,000 drive through," said Ward.

Admission is free and it will take about 15 to 20 minutes to drive through all the sets.

Donations will be accepted at the end of the tour.

programs from the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to the Department of Agriculture. The grants are funded on a 50-50 matching basis, he said.

"They actually pay half of our operations and maintenance expenses," he said.

Agriculture Commissioner Susan Combs said the CRMWD has seen annual rainfall increase by 2 1/2 to 4 inches in years when seeding was taking place over years before seeding started. Grant said that is an increase of about 20 percent.

"That also increases dryland cotton yield by about 20 percent," he said.

Combs said many facets of agribusiness have seen improvements due to heightened rainfall because of the program.

"Precipitation enhancement can improve grazing conditions for livestock, reduce irrigation costs and improve water quality," she said. "The practice also helps to increase rainfall runoff into reservoirs and aquifers."

Other entities participating in the program include the Evergreen Underground Water Conservation District in Pleasanton, which received $154,523; the high Plains Underground Water Conservation District in Littlefield, which received $240,000; the Irion County Water Conservation District in San Angelo, which received $224,936; the North Plains Groundwater Conservation District in Dumas, which received $186,700; the Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District in White Deer, which received $183,412; the West Central Texas Council of Governments in Abilene, which received $222,159; and the Wintergarden Groundwater Conservation District in Cotulla, which received $225,431.

The relief route has been proposed to handle an expected doubling of truck traffic once the Ports-to-Plains highway corridor project goes into effect. The route is also planned to improve access to the McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark and possibly attract new businesses to the facility.

Crooker said the federal grant moves the Big Spring project from a long-range project to a current project.

"What this does essentially is take this from a long-range category and place it into Category 2 which makes it a current, viable, ongoing project," he said. "We will need some more funding, perhaps. I don't know how far $2 million goes. Under ideal conditions construction could start within five years."

The planning phase should take about three years, Crooker said, after which purchase of rights of way and relocation of utility services will take about another two, depending on availability of funding.

In addition to the federal money, the Howard County Commissioner's Court has approved $300,000 for purchase of rights of way and relocation of utilities.

The appropriations bill also includes $1.7 million for a Corridor Management and Development Plan for the entire Texas portion of the Ports-to-Plains corridor and $1 million for Ports-to-Plains planning in New Mexico, said Meador.

AMA declines to call for smallpox vaccinations

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The American Medical Association on Tuesday refused to endorse smallpox vaccinations for all Americans, rejecting calls from doctors who say the disease could be used as a biological weapon.

Instead, the 538 delegates attending the AMA's annual winter meeting in San Francisco voted overwhelmingly to continue studying the possible repercussions of such a mass inoculation.

"We do not yet know that the bad guys have the smallpox virus," said Dr. Ron Davis, a public health expert from Detroit and a member of the AMA's 16-member board of trustees. "There are huge, complex issues involved and due deliberation is needed."

Some doctors said they worry the vaccine itself could kill as many as 300 people if the entire U.S. population were vaccinated. There's also disagreement about whether those already inoculated would need another vaccination to prevent a smallpox infection.

Babies younger than 1 and people with weakened immune systems couldn't withstand smallpox vaccinations, doctors said.

A nationwide smallpox vaccination program was discontinued in 1972, and the disease was eradicated worldwide by 1980. Two smallpox virus samples remain — one in the United States and the other in Russia. Concerns about security at the Russian lab have been exacerbated by the recent anthrax cases.

Smallpox is contagious, and roughly 30 percent of those who contract it die.

Last week, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention issued a report recommending that no vaccinations should be given unless an outbreak occurs.

Rumsfeld orders investigation into deadly friendly fire accident

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld has ordered an investigation into the mistaken bombing in Afghanistan that killed three U.S. soldiers.

The Army Green Berets were killed and 20 other Americans were wounded Wednesday when an Air Force B-52 dropped a one-ton bomb near them. The soldiers had called in the airstrike to hit Taliban forces they were fighting near the militia's southern stronghold of Kandahar.

Five anti-Taliban Afghan fighters also were killed and another 18 were wounded.

"It's a terrible tragedy and our heart goes out to the families and the friends of those fine people," Rumsfeld said Wednesday on CNN's "Larry King Live."

U.S. warplanes on Thursday hammered Taliban positions south of where Wednesday's friendly fire accident occurred, but opposition forces said that for the first time in weeks no bombing was reported in or immediately around Kandahar, near the site of the deadly mishap.

Pentagon officials declined to comment on any change of bombing plans for the area, but noted that Wednesday's accident left fewer special forces in place to direct airstrikes.

The Pentagon identified those killed as Master Sgt. Jefferson Donald Davis, 39, of Watauga, Tenn.; Sgt. 1st Class Daniel Petithory, 32, of Cheshire, Mass.; and Staff Sgt. Brian Cody Prosser, 28, of Fraizer Park, Calif. All were members of the Army's 3rd Battalion, 5th Special Forces Group, stationed at Fort Campbell, Ky.

All but three of the wounded were evacuated from the scene, first to a U.S. Marine base south of Kandahar and then out of Afghanistan. The injuries to the Americans taken outside of Afghanistan "vary from moderate to severe," a statement from U.S. Central Command said.

Eighteen Afghan anti-Taliban fighters were being treated on U.S. Navy ships in the Arabian Sea, the statement said. Eight were on the USS Peleliu and 10 aboard the USS Bataan.

Pentagon officials said they could not immediately explain what went wrong in the deadliest "friendly fire" accident of the war.

Whatever the cause, it illustrated the danger to U.S. forces calling in airstrikes.

"This is one of the potentially most hazardous type of missions that we use as a military tactic," said Rear Adm. John Stufflebeem, deputy director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Hamid Karzai, the southern Pashtun leader and newly designated head of the provisional government in Afghanistan, was in the area where the bomb landed but was not seriously wounded, Pentagon officials said. Karzai said Thursday he received minor injuries of the face and head from flying glass.

"I, along with the rest of America, grieve for the loss of life in Afghanistan," President Bush said during an Oval Office appearance. "I want the families to know that they died for a noble and just cause."

The Pentagon initially reported two were killed. A third died en route to a hospital.

The deaths bring to four the number of Americans killed inside Afghanistan in the two-month war. CIA officer Johnny "Mike" Spann was killed Nov. 25 in a prison uprising while questioning forces captured in the fighting.

ACLU urges Texas police chiefs to not cooperate with interviews

AUSTIN (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union is sending letters to police chiefs across Texas urging them not to cooperate with federal efforts to interview 5,000 Middle Eastern men.

Sent this week by the Texas ACLU chapter, the letter states that the organization isn't trying to obstruct legitimate terrorism investigations. But it says the U.S. Justice Department's interview plan is "a violation of our core constitutional principles."

The interviews could lead to detention without bond of an interview subject if he has even a minor immigration violation, Will Harrell, Texas ACLU executive director, said in the letter. "Such heavy-handed, antagonistic tactics will only discourage cooperation in this investigation," Harrell wrote.

The letter has been sent to police departments in Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio, El Paso, Amarillo and Lubbock, and one was to be hand delivered in Houston today, Harrell said.

After the Sept. 11 attacks, federal authorities detained some 1,100 people in an attempt to track down terrorist networks.

The Justice Department last month announced plans to interview 5,000 young male foreigners from the Middle East and countries where terrorists are known to operate. Federal agents were told to work with local and state police to find people for questioning.

The ACLU letter praised the police departments in Austin and Richardson for declining to take part in the mass interrogations.

But spokesmen for those departments said Wednesday they would assist federal agents if asked, though they emphasized that the interviews must be voluntary.

The Austin Police Department would only help in a consensual interview and would not conduct one of the interviews on its own, said department spokesman Paul Flanigan.

"We did put conditions on our assistance," Flanigan said.

Democrats, GOP drive toward Senate showdown over anti-terrorism spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans say they will block a Democratic drive to shower $35 billion on anti-terrorism programs in a showdown with growing political overtones.

Majority Democrats were hoping to muscle the package through the chamber today, even though President Bush renewed his threat to veto it and Republicans say they have the votes to sustain that veto. Bush has demanded that the measure be limited to $20 billion, arguing that is enough money until early next year.

Democrats say their proposal — attached to this year's $318 billion defense bill — is needed immediately to protect a vulnerable public amid terrorism alerts the administration has issued three times since the Sept. 11 attacks.

The Democratic plan contains money for developing vaccines, bolstering border and airport security, hiring food inspectors, financing the war in Afghanistan and helping New York and other areas recover from the hijacked airliner crashes into the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

"They say wait. They're tempting fate," said Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., the package's main sponsor.

With Bush touting sky-high support in public opinion polls, the Democratic proposal underlines party thinking that he may be vulnerable on domestic policy.

Republicans, on the other hand, see the Democrats' plan as their latest example of excessive spending.

"They will always outbid us, and they will always outspend us," said Sen. Rick Santorum, R-Pa.

Noting the veto threat, White House spokesman Ari Fleischer warned Democrats against a bill "that complicates our nation's defense needs" by tying the extra anti-terror spending to it.

"The president has sent Congress as direct a message as you can about the need to pass a defense bill that can be quickly signed into law so our troops can have the resources they need," Fleischer said.

But Democrats say Republicans are forgetting that people's safety is at stake.

"For God's sake, can't we for once forget politics and think about the world that is out there, the people who are out there," Byrd told reporters.

"We're trying in this package to deal with problems that are real."

Bush's veto threat has sinew because Senate Republicans released a letter in which 39 of them pledged to sustain a presidential veto — five more votes than would be needed.

Report: Enron gave $55.7 million in bonuses before filing for bankruptcy

HOUSTON (AP) — Days before a crushing debt load forced Enron Corp. to seek protection from creditors in federal bankruptcy court, the energy trader reportedly paid $55.7 million in incentives to about 500 employees.

Sources close to the company told the Houston Chronicle in today's editions that the payments went to employees at many levels, from chief operating officers of certain divisions to lower-level employees, and ranged from several thousand dollars up to $1 million.

Payments were deposited electronically into employee bank accounts on Nov. 30, two days before the company filed for bankruptcy. Meanwhile, the company was laying off more than 5,000 workers in London and its Houston headquarters.

An Enron spokesman confirmed that a number of employees received retention incentives before the bankruptcy filing and that company attorneys reviewed the transactions carefully.

"In order to protect and maintain the value of the estate, we wanted to retain key employees in critical businesses," said spokesman Mark Palmer.

Known as "stay-on" payments, the money came in exchange for employees' guarantees they agreed to remain at Enron for 90 days.

Enron executives have also asked the bankruptcy judge to provide $4,500 payments to terminated employees. But it's not clear if that sum would truly be a form of severance, since not all employees have been paid in full for their time or expenses.

The company said it may ask the judges for further payments to compensate the laid-off workers.

OUR VIEWS

Let's make our way to Boomtown

Howard County has many traditions that help to make the holiday season bright, but one thing we've learned is there is always room for one more. Make way then, for Christmas in Boomtown, a Forsan first which takes place Saturday morning.

Some 30 entries are planned so far for the parade, scheduled to start its march at 10 a.m. from the high school parking lot. The route will run south on Avenue H to County Road 461, then follow Rex Avenue and turn on Main Street for the final leg back to the high school. The event promises to be colorful and fun with lots of local entries, as well as some that participated in last Saturday's Herald Community Christmas Parade. One section will be devoted just for children, who have been invited to walk, ride their bicycles or tricycles or whatever means of transportation they can imagine.

Grand marshals will be C.V. Wash, Ida Camp and L.T. Shoultz — all longtime residents.

Along the way, vendors will be selling food, crafts and decorative T-shirts.

Organizers would like to see Christmas in Boomtown become an annual event. You can ensure this will become another wonderful Howard County holiday tradition by participating or helping to line the streets of Forsan Saturday.

Let's all have a booming good time in Boomtown!

OTHER VIEWS

The ban on human cloning is a no-brainer politically, because many politicians have a fear of being on the wrong side of an emotional issue and there is a well-developed lobby against the use of embryonic stem cells in medical research. Unfortunately, the no-brainer politically is just plain no-brainer if the government moves too fast in an area still too little understood by politicians and the public. In July, the House voted to ban all human cloning, whether it was aimed at replicating individual human beings or at harvesting embryonic stem cells to treat disease. That is the work recently announced by a company, Advanced Cell Technology, that has provoked calls from the president and others to move the anti-cloning bill in the Senate. ... One sensible approach is for the president and the Department of Health and Human Services to move quickly to appoint members to the newly formed President's Council on Bioethics, which will be headed by a respected conservative, Leon Kass of the University of Chicago. The council should urgently review these issues before the Senate moves precipitously.

Internet undermines the stock market

A new wave of white-collar crime is sweeping America, made possible by the Internet and justified by the First Amendment. It is "pseudonym crime," in which people use fictitious names to spew out all sorts of venom.

JACK ANDERSON

The concept of anonymous advocacy, however, is rooted in American tradition. When the Articles of Confederation failed to create a stable government, the Constitution was written, but it needed to be confirmed by at least nine states. This requirement led to the publication of the Federalist Papers, 85 articles written by constitutional advocates including future President James Madison, future Treasury

Secretary Alexander Hamilton, and future Supreme Court Chief Justice John Jay, who used the pseudonym Publius.

The sinister form of Internet anonymity plays on that venerable example and works like this: A company or individual wants to undermine a competitor, so he goes into the Internet chat rooms to tell the public the inside scoop on the other company. But because the disseminators of this information believe their identities are hidden, the temptation to play fast and loose with the truth is significant, and many of them cross over the line.

Crossing over the line takes on various forms. It can be libel, an offense that can be redressed in civil court. But it can also be more serious, falling into the criminal arena, such as stock manipulation. The idea here is to drive the price of a stock down either because an individual is attempting to buy the stock cheaper, often because he has shorted the stock (sold borrowed stock) and needs to cover (replace the borrowed shares).

The problem has become extreme, and is now faced by virtually every public company. The culprits are generally lumped together under the heading of "bashers," but the word is too soft, too general. These people are criminals who are stealing money by spewing lies.

It is the sort of crime that typically falls below the normal prosecutorial radar because it is generally believed that civil recourse can be sought. In fact, civil litigation is expensive, time consuming and painfully slow. Meanwhile, the criminal damage continues, and that damage is immediate and significant.

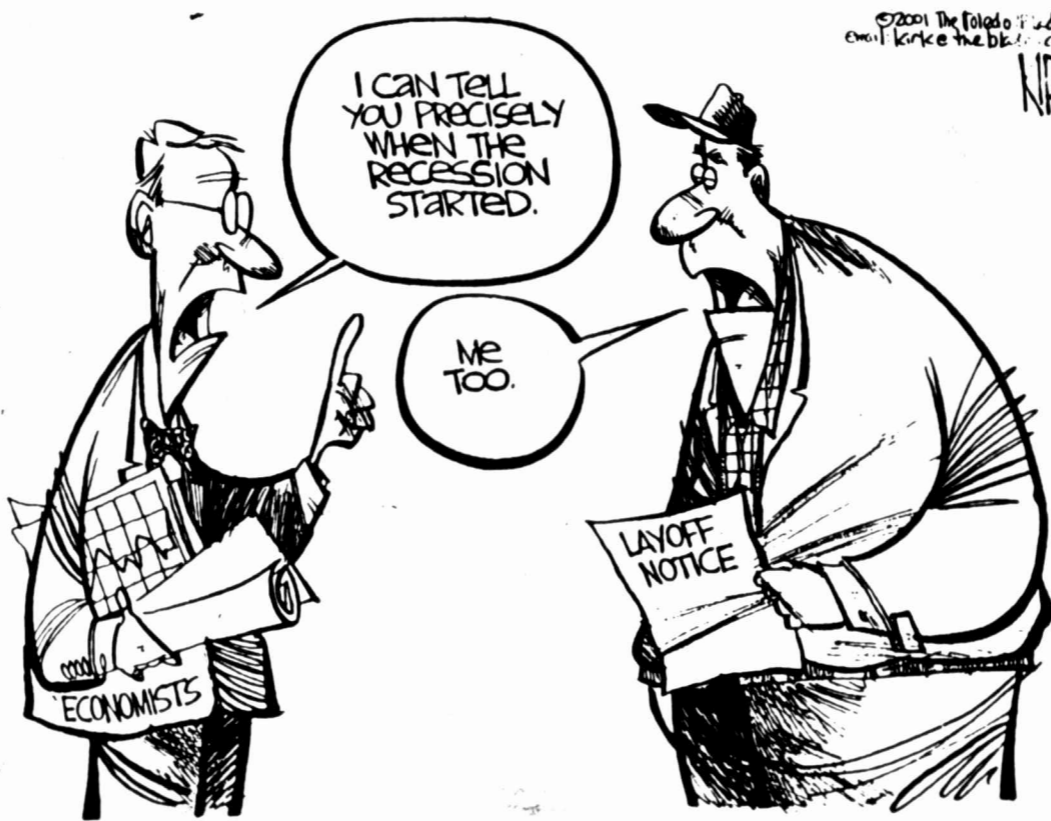

A California case actually upheld the right of bashers to act, but this has subsequently been seen in its proper light by other courts.

However, these are civil proceedings. In one egregious example, a market-maker (a licensed broker who trades a stock) in Florida shorted a company's stock, then went on the Internet and lied, distorting facts in a successful attempt to drive the stock down. The result? A civil suit was settled out of court and the marketmaker is still in business, doing the same thing to other companies and their stockholders. It is theft, plain and simple.

Why does the Securities and Exchange Commission allow this to go on? In a word, staffing. The SEC has not grown with the stock market.

The number of people investing in the market and the number of companies being publicly traded have increased dramatically over the last decade, while the SEC budget has simply crawled along. The SEC is the investor's police force, but it is a force so depleted that it is no longer capable of providing the protection so necessary to remove the corruption and manipulation that has become rampant in the stock market.

FDR vetoes camouflage at White House

By LAWRENCE L. KNUXTON
Guest Columnist

Smoke was still rising over Pearl Harbor when officials proposed masking the White House with camouflage paint.

Happily, Franklin D. Roosevelt rejected the idea and kept the White House white, even as the president's house went on a war footing.

This year, the White House is again upgrading security as it responds to terrorist threats made starkly visible by the Sept. 11 attacks in New York and Washington.

Pennsylvania Avenue across the lawn from the North Portico is likely to remain closed indefinitely. Other nearby streets are shut off. New barricades have sprouted. Incoming mail is closely inspected.

The White House is closed to tourists; only invited guests will see the traditionally splendid Christmas decorations.

When reports came on Sept. 11 that a hijacked airliner might be headed toward the White House, Vice President Dick Cheney and key staff members were rushed to an underground bunker.

But little compares to the fright that gripped official Washington in the first days of World War II.

For most of its existence the state floor of the White House was often open to any respectably dressed and sober citizen who sought admission. People roamed the grounds. Society matrons dropped calling cards on a butler's silver tray at the front door.

All that abruptly ended with the outbreak of war in 1941.

"The house was heavily guarded, beginning within an hour after the news from Hawaii on Dec. 7," writes historian William Seale in his two-volume study, "The President's House."

A week later, the Secret Service proposed sweeping changes. The agency's report, Seale writes, still "exudes the fear felt by those responsible for White House security."

The proposals: —Repaint the walls of the White House "according to standards of Army Air Corps camouflage, with the slate roof painted black."

—Encircle the mansion and executive offices with a 15-foot-high barricade of sandbags.

—Cover the skylights with six inches of sand and a layer of tin.

—Set up sandbagged machine gun emplacements on the East and West colonnades.

The recommendations rolled on:

—Install rolling steel curtains in the open West Colonnade to protect the president as his wheelchair rolled from the White House to his West Wing offices.

—Station round-the-clock patrols on the White House roof; provide equipment to combat incendiary bombs; install bulletproof glass in all rooms used by Roosevelt and his family.

"Because of the president's recalcitrance, most of the official recommendations were not carried out," Seale writes.

But security was enhanced. Some measures became permanent; others were lifted as the war neared an end.

Bulletproof glass was installed in the Oval Office. A concrete "bomb barrier" was installed along the west wall of the Executive Office Building.

Heavy "blackout" curtains were draped across windows. A bucket of sand was placed in every room in case of fire. Gas masks were hung in bedrooms. Candles were provided in case the electricity failed.

Outdoor lighting was designed "to dimly illuminate the grounds, while casting no glare on the house," Seale says.

There were other changes, small and large. Roosevelt installed a map room so he could follow the daily progress of the war.

Construction crews replaced the turn-of-the-century East Wing with a much larger but still unobtrusive office building.

Working in secrecy, the Army carved out a large space below it for a presidential bomb shelter.

The shelter resembled a dungeon, "with walls and floors seven feet thick and a ceiling nine feet thick, all of concrete heavily laced with steel," Seale writes.

It consisted of one 40-foot-square room "with a tiny island of a presidential bed-chamber and bath in the center, encased in walls three feet thick."

Side rooms held ventilation equipment and toilets. A work room contained desks and telephones and telegraph and radio equipment. The low ceilings were plated with steel and the floors left as bare concrete.

Roosevelt visited just once, Seale reports, and then only out of curiosity.

"One can imagine his discomfort; during the tedious progress of his wheelchair through narrow descending passages, he was lifted down steps, there being no ramps."

The president's sense of unease must have been overwhelming, Seale writes.

"But he never had to go there again."

Detectives take bone fragments from home of man suspected of being Green River killer

SEATTLE (AP) — Authorities have seized several items, including bone fragments, from homes of a truck company worker charged with murder in the deaths of four women blamed on the Green River serial killer.

Gary Leon Ridgway, 52, who was arrested last week, was charged Wednesday with four counts of aggravated murder after authorities said they had linked him to three of the victims with DNA evidence.

Detectives took envelopes containing bone fragments, boxes of latex gloves and a copy of the book "The Search for the Green River Killer" from four homes where Gary Ridgway has lived, court documents made public Wednesday.

Authorities wouldn't provide details about the bones, including whether they were from humans. The documents offer graphic details of Ridgway's sex life, as described by two ex-wives, girlfriends and prostitutes. They also recount alleged incidents of past violence toward women.

Convicted murderer of teen-ager charged in decades-old slayings

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A man serving a life sentence for killing a teen-age girl was charged with murdering four others after authorities said DNA evidence linked him to two of the slayings.

Ray Dell Sims, 66, an inmate at San Quentin State Prison, was convicted in 1978 for the murder of 17-year-old Janet Herstein, who was found near the San Joaquin River in May 1977. She was on her paper route when she disappeared.

Authorities have been working to solve four similar mid-1970s killings, baffled investigators since 1982, when authorities began finding women's bodies in or near the Green River, south of Seattle.

Forty-nine women — most of them prostitutes or runaways — were believed to be victims of the killer in Washington and Oregon. They were slain in the early 1980s.

All involved teen-age girls who lived in Sims' neighborhood and whose bodies were found in remote areas. Most had been sexually assaulted. Authorities reopened the cases in 1996 after receiving a tip.

They compared a sample of Sims' blood with DNA left at the crime scenes, including a hair found under one of the girl's rings.

Test results received in 1997 and last month matched Sims to the killings of Elizabeth Ortega in 1974 and Eva Lucio in 1976. Both were 15.

King County Prosecutor Norm Maleng said "justice is a concept that never gets old."

"For the victim, the loss is ultimate. For the family, the grief is permanent and for the community the harm and danger do not diminish for the passage of time," he said.

Ridgway is accused of killing Opal Mills, Marcia Chapman and Cynthia Hinds, whose bodies were found in the river on Aug. 15, 1982, and Carol Christensen, whose body was found May 8, 1983, in woods in nearby Maple Valley. Hinds and Mills were teen-agers. Christensen was 21 and Chapman was 31.

Ridgway was identified as a suspect in 1984 and questioned after witnesses identified his pickup truck and said he had been seen with two of the victims, according to court documents.

In 1987, Ridgway complied with a court order to chew on a piece of gauze to collect a saliva sample. The saliva was tested again in March.

The results came back two months ago and detectives put Ridgway under surveillance. Ridgway, an employee of Kenworth Truck Co. in Renton for 32 years, was arrested Friday as he was leaving work. He is married and has an adult son.

The fourth victim, Hinds, was linked to Ridgway through circumstantial evidence, investigators said.

Pat Robertson resigns from Christian Coalition

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Pat Robertson stepped down as leader of the Christian Coalition after more than a decade in charge of the conservative organization, saying he wants to spend more time on his ministry.

"People come and people go. It's a good thing for leaders to step down and others, younger, to come and take their place. I don't see this as anything but positive for the Coalition," Robertson, 71, said Wednesday.

Robertson founded the Christian Coalition in Chesapeake, Va., in 1989, a year after his failed bid for the Republican nomination for president. The coalition became a major force in GOP politics in the 1990s by mobilizing conservative voters through grass roots activities.

In his resignation letter to the coalition's board of directors, Robertson wrote that the organization had fulfilled all of its 10-year goals established in 1990.

"He said the coalition was pivotal in the election of Christian conservatives nationwide and "without us, I do not believe George Bush would be sitting in the White House."

Anthrax-contaminated mail guidelines released; risk is low

ATLANTA (AP) — The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention issued guidelines today for people concerned they may contract anthrax from contaminated mail, though the agency stressed the risk is "very low."

The CDC said people concerned about exposure can keep mail away from their faces when they open it, avoid blowing or sniffing the contents, avoid tearing or shredding the mail before throwing it away, and frequently wash their hands.

Simply not opening mail that appears suspicious is also an option, as is throwing away the envelopes, the CDC said.

The guidelines appeared in the agency's weekly health bulletin.

CDC director Dr. Jeffrey Koplan has said tens of thousands of pieces of mail may be cross-contaminated — tainted by wayward spores from anthrax-filled letters sent to Washington and New York.

Koplan has also said the risk of infection from cross-contamination is extremely low.

The mail-handling guidelines are similar to advice that health officials have been giving since soon after the anthrax-by-mail scare began in October.

Investigators are trying to determine whether cross-contamination may be to blame for the inhalation anthrax that killed a 94-year-old Connecticut woman last month and a 61-year-old New York woman in October.

Man suspected of sending anthrax hoax letters to abortion clinics arrested

CINCINNATI (AP) — An abortion foe who escaped from jail and spent months crisscrossing the nation has been arrested for allegedly mailing hundreds of anthrax hoax letters to abortion clinics, ending a man-hunt for one of the FBI's Ten Most Wanted fugitives.

Clayton Lee Waagner, 45, was captured Wednesday at a suburban Cincinnati Kinko's copy shop where he was using a rented computer. He was carrying $10,000 in cash and had a loaded .40-caliber handgun tucked into his waistband.

Waagner was jailed overnight in Cincinnati to await an appearance Thursday before U.S. Magistrate Timothy Hogan.

Attorney General John Ashcroft has called Waagner the primary suspect in anthrax hoaxes committed against 280 clinics last month. The clinics received envelopes containing white powder and letters signed, "Army of God." The powder was not anthrax.

He claimed responsibility for the letters when he showed up with a gun at the Georgia home of an anti-abortion activist last week, according to authorities.

In June, abortion clinics were warned to be on alert after someone purporting to be Waagner posted an Internet message vowing to kill employees of abortion providers.

Waagner has previously testified that God told him to kill doctors who perform abortions.

Vicki Saporta, executive director of the National Abortion Federation, said she is relieved Waagner is in custody.

"We've been very concerned that he remained at large for so long because he made some very specific threats," Saporta said. "He'll be going away for a very long time and we don't want any people who might have helped him to escape justice."

U.S. Attorney Gregory Lockhart said his office would ask that Waagner be held without bond and be charged with illegal possession of a firearm as a convicted felon. Lockhart said his office would review whether Waagner could be subject to life imprisonment under the federal "three-strikes" law, because he had a weapon and had been convicted of three violent crimes.

The FBI said Waagner's criminal record includes attempted robbery and burglary convictions in Ohio and a firearms conviction in a Michigan federal court.

Waagner had escaped from a jail in Clinton, Ill., in February, while awaiting sentencing for auto theft and weapons offenses.

Federal marshals had distributed a wanted poster to Kinko's stores after learning Waagner was using their computers to check e-mail and log on to anti-abortion Web sites.

On Wednesday, a Kinko's employee in Springdale, Ohio, called authorities after recognizing Waagner in the store. Police arrested him without incident.

The FBI had offered a reward of $50,000 for information leading to Diet, exercise - tools to fight diabetes

The latest national and international diabetes studies could have Texans jumping for joy and for health.

ANDREIA MEDLIN

At least that's what staff with the Diabetes Program at the Texas Department of Health (TDH) hope people will do - walk around the block, push a lawnmower, swim and, yes, even jump rope.

All with the hope that diabetes, the chronic, often ignored disease, can be better controlled and perhaps prevented.

"A recent major U.S. clinical trial shows that people at risk for Type 2 diabetes can dramatically lower their chances of getting the disease with changes in diet and exercise," said Dr. Jan Marie Ozias, director of TDH's Diabetes Program and the Texas Diabetes Council.

Study results released recently show that participants in the national Diabetes Prevention Program trial, supported by the National Institutes of Health, reduced their risk of getting diabetes by 58 percent by eating a healthy diet and getting moderate exercise.

Smaller studies in China and Finland also have shown that diet and exercise can delay Type 2 diabetes in people who are at risk.

"Moderate lifestyle adjustments - not major changes - can significantly affect whether people will develop Type 2 diabetes," Ozias said.

"Overweight people benefit by being physically active for half an hour a day on most days of the week, reducing fat and calories in their diet, and losing as few as seven pounds."

With diabetes, the body either does not produce insulin (Type 1 diabetes) or does not effectively use or produce adequate amounts of insulin (Type 2 diabetes).

Insulin, a hormone, allows sugar, or glucose, to enter cells and be used for energy.

Insulin also is needed to make protein and store fats.

In uncontrolled diabetes, sugar and fats remain in the bloodstream and, with time, damage vital organs.

Type 2 diabetes accounts for up to 95 percent of all diabetes cases. Type 2 once was considered a condition of older people but now is being recognized in younger adults, with the greatest number of newly diagnosed cases among people in their 30's and 40's.

A risk for Type 2 also is associated with obese children with a family history of diabetes.

"Increasingly, the risks for Type 2 diabetes - what we used to call adult-onset diabetes - are being seen in children and adolescents," Ozias said. "That is why diet and exercise are so important as preventive tools. Diabetes is treatable, but once people are diagnosed with this chronic condition, they must learn to deal with it daily."

Complications from diabetes seriously affect a person's health. Results of having uncontrolled diabetes include blindness, irreversible kidney failure, amputations, heart disease, stroke and complications in pregnancy.

Diabetes was the sixth leading cause of death in Texas in 1999, and TDH estimates that more than 1.3 million Texans 18 years and older have diabetes.

About 911,000 of these - six percent of the state's population - have been diagnosed. The remainder are not aware they have the disease.

In Texas, African Americans, Hispanics, Asian Americans and people who are overweight are more likely than others to develop diabetes.

A family history of diabetes, high blood sugar, high blood pressure and cholesterol, diabetes that occurs during pregnancy, too little exercise and being age 45 or older also increase the chance of developing diabetes.

Symptoms of diabetes may include blurred vision, fatigue, lack of energy, extreme thirst or hunger, frequent urination, sudden weight change, numbness or tingling in hands or feet, slow healing sores or cuts, frequent infections and depression.

Because many of these symptoms go unnoticed, people may not be diagnosed or treated early.

Half of those who have diabetes are not diagnosed until they have complications such as foot sores.

The American Diabetes Association recommends that everyone 45 and older consider being tested every three years.

However, in the face of this growing problem, the American College of Endocrinology and the American Association of Clinical Endocrinologists recently recommended that diabetes screening begin at age 30 for people at risk.

People with diabetes need a yearly flu shot and should check with their doctor about a pneumonia shot because they are at high risk to develop life-threatening complications of pneumonia and flu.

The TDH Diabetes Program/Council offers 20 easy-to-read publications in both English and Spanish. Some of the titles are -

You Have the Power - Controlling Diabetes One Day at a Time, pocket folder dealing with diabetes topics; Food for Life - Living Well with Diabetes, 20-page booklet for meal planning; Diabetes Card, a simple, wallet-sized card containing checklists for managing diabetes and space for medical records; Could You Have Diabetes?, a quiz that lists risk factors and symptoms of diabetes.

Check for information about diabetes literature on the TDH Diabetes Program/Council Web site at www.tdh.state.tx.us/diabetes/public/htm.

Anthrax won't halt Santa's letters

SANTA CLAUS, Ind. (AP) - Pat Koch stood before a neighborhood garden club, making her annual plea for volunteers to help answer the thousands of letters to Santa that pour into this little town's post office each holiday season.

But this year, Koch asked whether anyone was afraid to open letters because of the anthrax scare.

What happened next was perhaps the kind of bravery few would expect from a garden club.

"There wasn't one single person who raised their hand," Koch said triumphantly. "In fact, I think more people signed up this year than ever before."

As it is in Santa Claus, Ind., so it seems to be around the country, from New York City to the North Pole.

The anthrax-by-mail attacks are not stopping volunteers and postal employees from opening and responding to kids' crayon-scribbled letters to St. Nick.

"I am not going to let terrorism stand in the way of helping these kids," said Phil Piccolo, a manager of consumer affairs at the Postal Service in Hartford, Conn. "No gloves or masks here. We're just doing it."

And they are doing it even though the threat of anthrax has hit close to home, with the death of a 94-year-old Oxford, Conn., woman.

The same is true in New York City, where members of Operation Santa Claus are again making sure that tens of thousands of letter-writing kids have their faith in Father Christmas confirmed.

Diane Todd, a Postal Service spokeswoman in New York, said this year's letters are being irradiated against anthrax at a mail installation in New Jersey as a precaution, but the volunteers who help delve into the letters have not been squeamish.

"You think about the kids," she said, "and you don't want the kids to be victimized."

This is a time of year when mail carriers usually grin at the sight of envelopes marked in awkward, red and green block letters, some without stamps and some with no more of an address than this: Santa Claus. Some contain cookies, dollar bills (to buy food for the reindeer) and in some cases hay, to feed directly to the reindeer.

Unfortunately, said Mark Saunders, spokesman for the Postal Service in Washington, such letters can raise suspicions.

But he said there is no national Postal Service protocol for handling letters to Santa; the agency just recommends a "common-sense approach."

The Postal Service is encouraging children to continue writing letters to Santa but is asking that they follow a few steps to avoid raising handlers' suspicions: Youngsters should include their return address, and enclose only letter-size paper, not bulky objects.

In Fairbanks, Alaska, a mere 14-mile sleigh ride from the town of North Pole, Nancy Schmitt and her fellow postal workers are as busy as ever responding to letters from children around the world. People take time during their lunch hour to write letters, they take them home and work on them around the kitchen table, and older school children volunteer to help out. Schmitt has single-handedly answered as many as 100 letters in one year, a small fraction of the 60,000 that deluge the Fairbanks post office.

Schmitt said she did not think twice when she sat down this year to open letters to Santa.

"How awful it would be to have your letter to Santa returned, or not answered," she said. "Nobody's going to make me live in fear."

Back in Santa Claus, Ind., 65-year-old volunteer Jack Hauser pointed out that the letters often contain an innocent wisdom that humanity might benefit from these days. Children ask for parents to get along, for people to stop fighting, for bad things to stop happening in the world.

"If more adults would just listen to them ...," Hauser said, his voice trailing off.

"You know, these kids expect a reply from Santa Claus," he said. "Someone has to do it."

In this season of terrorism, catalog retailers hope to see a boost

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, Tom Souza isn't driving as much as he used to.

The retired Los Angeles police officer restores Corvettes, and now orders the parts he needs from catalogs instead of going to stores. He also plans to do his holiday shopping by catalog.

"I've used them before, but now I'm using them almost exclusively," he said. "I feel more comfortable buying through the mail now."

Catalog retailers and some Wall Street analysts are pinning their hopes for solid holiday sales on shoppers like Souza.

"The catalog retailers, as well as Internet retailers, are in a better position," said Kristine Koerber, an analyst with WR Hambrecht & Co. "It's going to be a lot easier to send your package across the country, especially if you're not traveling across the country."

The change in buying patterns is one bright spot for an industry stung not just by the recession but by postal increases in January and July.

Catalog companies that also have stores and Web sites are using cross-marketing tactics. Last year, 13 percent of all catalog company sales were made over the Internet, according to the Direct Marketing Association.

And like their brick-and-mortar counterparts, catalog companies are offering deep discounts to attract shoppers.

"This is a very promotional holiday. There are a lot of free shipping and volume discounts," said Amy Blankenship, a spokeswoman at the association.

Home electronics, food, pet supplies and basic clothing are the best sellers so far this holiday, she said. The luxury business is weak.

So far, early sales results for catalog companies have been a little bit better than originally projected, according to Chris Merritt of Kurt Salmon Associates, a retail consulting firm.

Lands' End reported one of its strongest quarterly performances early last month, and is hoping that the fourth quarter will generate a small sales increase.

Other companies aren't doing as well.

"Some of the general merchandise catalogers have struggled all year, like Federated or Spiegel or J.C. Penney. It just happens that Lands' End is knocking the cover off the ball this year," said Richard Baum, an analyst with CreditSuisse First Boston.

For some catalog companies, the outlook is murky. "We've seen such varied results not only from channel to channel, but from week to week," said Donaldson.

"One week our retail stores are looking good, and mail order drops off, and other weeks, we see mail order look good, and in-store sales drop off."

Let Internet freedom ring for Texas

Let's face it: it's a high-speed world out there. Distance learning, telemedicine, videoconferencing, telecommuting, home networking - sooner than you think, these will be daily activities for Texas residents and businesses.

Guy Andrews

Which is why every day, more and more people are turning to high-speed Internet access as an essential resource for modern life.

Unfortunately, too few consumers can get the service they really want. In fact, only 7 percent of Americans have a high-speed connection today, while the populations of our global competitors are much more likely to have high-speed connections; for example, 36 percent of South Koreans have high-speed Internet access.

Fortunately, there is federal legislation under consideration to close the digital divide by guaranteeing high-speed access to millions more Americans: H.R. 1542, the Internet Freedom and Broadband Deployment Act of 2001. Authored by Congressmen Billy Tauzin and John Dingell, H.R. 1542 requires local telephone companies to upgrade 100 percent of their central office facilities to provide high-speed service - so inner-city and small-town residents aren't left behind as we race into the Information Age.

Equally as important, the measure creates fair competition among all high-speed service providers - cable, Digital Subscriber Line, satellite and wireless alike - by establishing one consistent set of rules for them to follow. And fair competition means greater choice, better service and lower prices for consumers.

The Internet Freedom and Broadband Deployment Act of 2001 is moving quickly through the U.S. House of Representatives; a vote is expected soon. Congress should do the right thing, giving us all the speed we need and the access we deserve.

Florida's Grossman selected as AP's Player of Year

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rex Grossman might remember his record-setting year at Florida more for the sting of a season-shattering loss.

Despite a gallant effort by Grossman, Florida lost to Tennessee 34-32 last week and missed a chance to play for the Southeastern Conference title and a spot in the BCS' national championship game in the Rose Bowl.

The loss did little to hurt the stature of the nation's top-rated passer, who was chosen Wednesday as The Associated Press College Player of the Year.

"Our season fell short of what we hoped," Grossman said. "We're a little down in Gainesville. I thought I had a pretty good year, but two losses is kind of all we can think about right now."

Grossman received 18 votes in balloting by the 72 members of the AP college football poll board, which includes member newspapers, TV and radio stations. He edged Miami quarterback Ken Dorsey by three votes, with Nebraska quarterback Eric Crouch third with 12 votes.

Oklahoma safety Roy Williams was fourth with seven votes, and Indiana quarterback Antwaan Randle El and Miami left tackle Bryant McKinnie tied for fifth with five votes each.

"There are some tremendous players around the country and I am privileged to be in their company and receive this award," Grossman said.

Gators coach Steve Spurrier said the sophomore "richly deserved" the honor.

"He is probably the best pure passer of the quarterbacks I have coached and is one of the most courageous players," he said. "He loves to compete and play the game."

Grossman is among four finalists for the Heisman Trophy, to be awarded Saturday night.

He's also up for Walter Camp player of the year, the Maxwell Award and the Davey O'Brien national quarterback of the year.

With Grossman at the controls,

Spurrier finally closed his revolving door of quarterbacks, which began after 1996 Heisman Trophy winner Danny Wuerffel departed.

Grossman, a Parade All-American from Bloomington, Ind., didn't even know he'd be running the Fun 'N Gun until finally beating out Brock Berlin for the job.

Once he got going, the numbers started piling up. The nation's leader in total offense threw for 3,896 yards and 34 touchdowns.

Grossman's biggest game was a 464-yard, five-TD effort in just over three quarters of a 44-15 win at LSU on Oct. 6.

He directed the nation's second-best offense, which averaged 43.8 points and 527.5 yards a game.

Even in a sub-par season, Emmitt still owns Redskins

IRVING (AP) — Emmitt Smith has made it a habit in his career to run for more than 100 yards with more than 20 carries against the Washington Redskins.

What's been unusual for Smith in this subpar season for the Dallas Cowboys (3-8) is that he's not doing that against anybody else. This hasn't been a normal year for the NFL's second-leading career rusher.

Smith missed consecutive games because of injury (sprained right knee) for the first time in his 12-year NFL career. He had a nine-carry, 9-yard game against Denver that included a 7-yard run.

And with five games left, he has just 589 yards and his NFL-long streak of 10 straight 1,000-yard seasons is in jeopardy. Smith also is 971 yards behind Walter Payton's record 16,726 yards.

Smith has his only two 100-yard games this season against the Redskins. That includes 102 yards on 25 carries Sunday when he also scored his first touchdown, the latest he's ever gone in a season before scoring.

"I know people are accustomed to me scoring 100- and some odd times," Smith said. "It seems like it's more important to other folks to see me scored touchdowns than to win games."

That's because most of the times, Smith's individual success has translated into Cowboys victories.

His 146 career rushing TDs are the most in NFL history, and he got 25 of them during the 1995 regular season and six more in the postseason when the Cowboys won their last Super Bowl.

The Cowboys are 95-23 when Smith carries more than 20 times a game. They are 62-17 when he rushes for more than 100 yards.

This season, Smith has carried more than 20 times just three times — in the three Dallas victories.

Before the Washington game, coach Dave Campo and Smith talked back-and-forth through the media about how often the running back was being used. Smith questioned why he couldn't be a 30-carry a back anymore.

What followed was a season-high in carries against Dallas' Emmitt Smith, pictured here during a 1993 playoff game, has had a difficult season — one that would consider sub-par for the league's second leading rusher of all time. But that hasn't been the case against the Washington Redskins.

Washington, matching the 25 he had in the previous game against the Redskins on Oct. 15. The Cowboys ran 45 of their 61 plays in rookie quarterback Quincy Carter's return to the lineup.

"Sometimes when you talk like that, people have a tendency to believe that we are going to give it to him and see what he can do," Smith said. "I'm sure that might have been maybe their thought process."

Smith also knows that his increased carries were probably based on past success against Washington.

"One thing kind of lost at times is that Emmitt had 25 or 30 carries against the Redskins the last four years, not just last week," Campo said Tuesday. "Matchups, it's how you play different people."

In 22 career games against Washington, Smith has scored 22 TDs and averaged 22 carries for 104 yards per game.

Dallas plays a better defense Sunday against the New York Giants (5-6), who are also coming off an open date. Campo knows the Cowboys will have to be more balanced offensively against the Giants, and won't say how many carries Smith may get.

"Emmitt is a great player still," Campo said. "He is capable at any time of controlling the game with what he does. Again, somebody has to block for him and we have to open some things up in other areas."

Notes: As of Tuesday, the Cowboys' still had about 7,500 tickets left for Sunday's game. They have until noon Thursday to sell those tickets and avoid their first local television blackout since Dec. 16, 1990.

LB Markus Steele's injured right knee may not be as bad as originally thought. Steele had an MRI on Monday, and Campo said there is a chance he could play Sunday.

Tar Heels' Peppers claims Lombardi

HOUSTON (AP) — Julius Peppers apparently chose the right sport.

He gave up a spot on the North Carolina Tar Heels basketball team this year to concentrate on football. He was rewarded Wednesday night with the Lombardi Award as the nation's top college lineman.

"I never second-guessed my decision because I knew that this was my sport," Peppers said.

Peppers plans to skip his senior year with the Tar Heels and enter the NFL draft, possibly ending up back in Houston with the expansion Texans, who have the first pick in next year's draft.

"It would be nice to be the No. 1 pick, but that's not a goal of mine," Peppers said. "I just want to go somewhere and play. I've heard about the Texans since I've been here."

Peppers led the Tar Heels with 30 1/2 sacks for his career. He beat out linebacker Rocky Calmus of Oklahoma and defensive ends Alex Brown of Florida and Dwight Freeney of Syracuse for the Lombardi Award.

"He was a target of all the teams we played this year," Tar Heels academic adviser Carl Carey said.

"Teams went into games to stop him, so the fact he still leads our team in interceptions, in sacks, regardless to what other teams have done to stop him, is a credit to him."

Peppers was the sixth man on the Tar Heels basketball team, but he decided to put all of his efforts into football this season.

"He certainly loves basketball, but football was where he could find excellence," Carey said. "It was a business decision."

Peppers said he's ready for the challenge of the NFL.

"People have been telling me all my life I couldn't do things," Peppers said. "I wanted to play basketball, and people said I wasn't good enough. You've got to prove yourself and that's what I did."

Peppers had a season-high 10 tackles, including four for losses, and intercepted a pass in a 41-7 victory over Florida State that helped the Tar Heels rebound for a 7-5 season.

Fehr fears potential carnage if contraction fight lingers

IRVING (AP) — Players union head Donald Fehr warned owners that baseball faces big problems if there isn't a quick resolution to their plans to eliminate two teams.

Fehr said Wednesday night that contraction has to be settled before other issues, such as revenue sharing, player contracts and scheduling can be properly addressed. He also worries that free agency will be hurt.

"It will be carnage all over," Fehr said.

Fehr said the union knows little about management's plan.

Montreal and Minnesota are the leading candidates to be folded, but an injunction mandates that the Twins play next season. The appeal by baseball to lift the injunction will be heard on Dec. 27.

The union's executive board is discussing issues such as a new labor agreement, interleague play, licensing and pension plans during its annual meeting this week. But contraction is the pressing issue.

"Things are a little tenuous right now. We are trying to find out the direction contraction talks are going to take," pitcher David Cone said. "You can talk about everything, but certainly contraction is front and center right now."

The first two days of testimony in the grievance hearing ended Wednesday with the first witness still on the stand.

Gene Orza, the associate general counsel and No. 2 official of the players' association, completed his direct testimony. Lawyers for owners will cross-examine him when the hearing before arbitrator Shyam Das resumes Monday in New York.

Orza refused to comment publicly on his testimony, which took place at the same hotel where the players are meeting.

The union claims the owners' Nov. 6 contraction vote — two days after the end of the World Series — violated the terms of its labor contract, which expired Nov. 7, but remains in effect.

"It seems like overnight this whole thing came about. Obviously, they had discussed it before," said Chicago White Sox outfielder Chris Singleton. "A lot of times, it's hard to understand what the owners are trying to accomplish."

Baseball lawyers contend that owners can eliminate teams without union approval, and are only required to negotiate other details such as the dispersal of players.

In their grievance, players say, contraction should be part of negotiations for a new labor deal.

"It don't know if I was shocked, but when they said they were actually going to do it, it was a surprise," Detroit outfielder Damion Easley said. "But you try not get overwhelmed by anything that the other side might do because you don't know if it's going to end up like that or not."

Kidd dominates with ball handling in Nets' 106-87 win

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jason Kidd did what Stephon Marbury rarely did in New Jersey — get his teammates involved. Kidd was at his unselfish best in his first game against his former team, accumulating 11 of his 13 assists before he even scored a point Wednesday night as the Nets beat Marbury's Phoenix Suns 106-87.

Kidd finished with six points, nine rebounds and four steals for the Nets, while the player he was traded for never got untracked offensively and finished with 15 points and seven assists.

"It's amazing the way this guy can control and dominate the game, and he doesn't have to score," Nets coach Byron Scott said. "You just don't see many guys in this league that are able to do that."

Kerry Kittles scored a season-high 24 points, and Kenyon Martin added 22 as the host Nets snapped the Suns' five-game winning streak and remained in first place in the Atlantic Division.

In other NBA games, it was the Lakers 98, Dallas 94; Golden State 93, Philadelphia 87; Boston 95, Denver 80; San Antonio 120, Atlanta 112; Orlando 102, Chicago 74; and Detroit 95, Seattle 91.

Shawn Marion had 22 points to lead the Suns, who never recovered after a scuffle ignited the Nets late in the second quarter. New Jersey closed the first half with an 11-2 run and scored the first seven points of the third to take a 16-point lead.

Marbury received a mixed reception from the sparse crowd of 11,452 during player introductions. He spent 2 1/2 seasons with the Nets, never contending for the playoffs.

Scott was quite critical of Marbury in the two days leading up to the game, repeatedly saying Marbury was not the type of leader the team needed. Marbury's former teammates candidly admitted that the team had a chemistry problem during time Marbury was around.

"I like guys like Jason who are positive with their teammates, who try to uplift their teammates. Steph didn't do that. If he did say something to his teammates, nine times out of 10 it was negative or just body language," Scott said.

Marbury was aware of Scott's comments, but did not come back with any bit-

All Aboard the Citizenship

Great good citizens said these words:

"AND SO, MY FELLOW AMERICANS, ASK NOT WHAT YOUR COUNTRY CAN DO FOR YOU — ASK WHAT YOU CAN DO FOR YOUR COUNTRY."

President John F. Kennedy said this at his inauguration in 1961.

"GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE, BY THE PEOPLE AND FOR THE PEOPLE SHALL NOT PERISH FROM THIS EARTH."

Abraham Lincoln said this in his famous address at Gettysburg, Pa., in November 1863.

We all want to be patriotic and show how much we love the U.S.A. We want to be good citizens because we care. The important things kids do help to make our country strong. While young people can't vote or serve in the armed forces, they can make a difference. For example, you can earn money for a worthy cause. You can show respect for one another. The good-citizenship training you get while you are young helps now and also prepares you to be a leader in the future. Your country needs you!

What good citizens say.

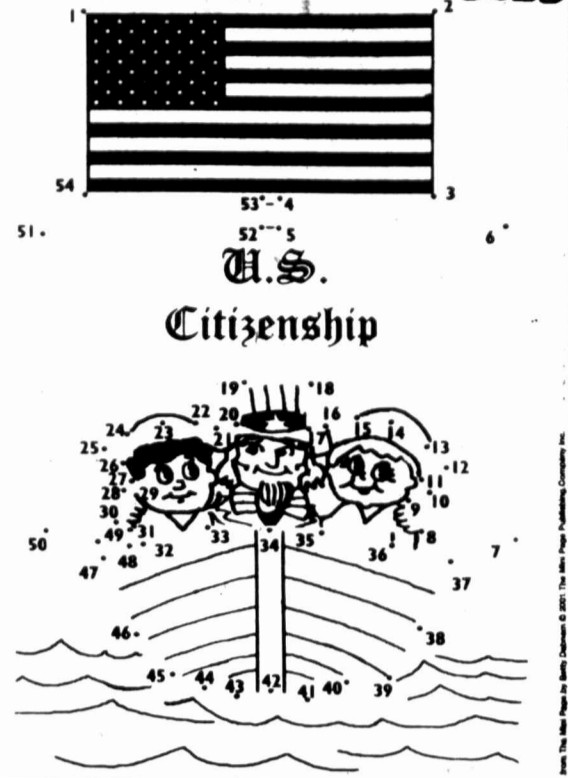

- Let me help you.
- I will volunteer!
- I will do my best.
- It is my responsibility.
- What can I do?
- I will tell the truth.
- Thank you for all you do.
- I understand how you feel.
- Let's work together.
- I will take turns.
- Let's share.
- I will cooperate.
- I appreciate what you do.
- Good for you!
- I will be fair.

LET'S GET ALONG.

- I will do my duty.
- I'm proud to be an American.
- Thank you.
- Let me show you how.

On a separate sheet of paper, make a list of the occasions when you might use these words.

Height: 5-11 Birthdate: 5-1-73 Weight: 205 College: Pittsburgh

Curtis Martin is in his fourth season as a running back for the New York Jets. Before joining the Jets, he spent three seasons with the New England Patriots. He was the Jets' Most Valuable Player in 1999 and 2000. Curtis played in the 1995, 1996 and 1998 Pro Bowls. He is one of only three players in National Football League history to run for more than 1,000 yards in each of his first six seasons.

He grew up in Pittsburgh, Pa., where he played football as a senior in high school. He studied public administration in college. He is involved in several youth-related charities.

Meet Lindsay Felton

Lindsay Felton, 17, has been performing for most of her life. As a child, she was in TV commercials. At 8, she got her first acting role on a TV show. Since then she has been in several TV shows, including "Caitlin's Way."

Lindsay grew up in Seattle and now lives in Los Angeles. She has a parrot and three cats. In her free time she likes watching movies, shopping, playing the guitar, listening to music, dancing, and playing on the Internet.

She hopes to continue acting when she is grown and would like someday to be on Broadway.

CAR WASH TODAY

A Citizenship Checkup

Think about it ... when are you a good citizen? Citizenship takes practice. What you learn while you are young helps your country now and trains you to be a better citizen when you grow up.

How would you complete the sentences below? Talk over your thoughts with your family and classmates.

All aboard the citizenship!

1. I settle differences in a peaceful way when I ...
2. I take care of my health when I ...

3. I take good care of my school building when I ...
4. I am a good sport when I ...
5. I help others in the community when I ...
6. I am cooperative when I ...
7. I obey the laws when I ...
8. I keep my pledge to the flag when I ...
9. I show that I am dependable and responsible when I ...
10. I am a cooperative family member when I ...
11. I show that I am proud of my country when I ...
12. I keep America beautiful when I ...
13. I share with others when I ...
14. I show respect when I ...
15. I show loyalty when I ...
16. I'm a good friend when I ...
17. I show tolerance when I ...

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Dec. 7:
Your professional reputation becomes more important than it has in many years past. A key partner or associate helps you increase your status and security. Learn to adapt to others and flow with opportunities. You're unusually creative and intuitive, but you need to be careful that others "get" your ideas. Communication can make or break you this year. If you are single, romance will have a starry-eyed quality. Make sure you are seeing this person clearly. If you are attached, your relationship might be very pleasant and caring, or chaotic and upsetting, depending on your skill-handling issues. Consider taking a class in communication as a couple. VIRGO admires you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)* Your family or a close friend backs you. You feel you are coming from a strong experience. Reach out to a problem person at a distance. Be more nurturing with the difficult people in your life. Walk in their shoes, and you will gain a deeper understanding of them. Tonight: Put up your feet or think massage.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)* Pressure from a partner could be quite irritating, if not difficult. You should be able to deal with the situation by now. Do what you feel is best for the majority rather than doting on a difficult associate. Confirm meetings; return messages. Tonight: Play the night away.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)  Family, real estate and domestic matters shake up a relationship. Listen to someone else's perspective. There is something to be gained there. Brainstorm and you will come up with an even better idea or solution. Confusion surrounds communication. Tonight: Handle the basics.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)* Your energy sags, though you do manage to finish up all you must. Work with someone on a one-on-one level in order to effectively structure a monetary agreement. Not everyone sees what is going on as you do. Don't even try to explain right now. Tonight: Talk up a storm with friends over bubbly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)  Deal with finances directly. A risk could backfire. New beginnings happen because of ingenuity - not only on the amorous level, but also the creative level. Pressure builds to a new level and confusion ends up in chaos or uproar. Tonight: Don't do your holiday shopping.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) * You're personality plus, but a family member or roommate might not be swayed. Creativity stems from your ability to make peace and your ability to allow others to express their ideas. In the long run, you will be able to have your way. Avoid passive-aggressive behavior. Tonight: Whatever makes you happy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)  Kick back. Keep an important conversation with a child or loved one quiet. Pressure builds if you try to force your way. Step back and take a deep breath. Discussions could be confusing. Think about the bottom line here. Tonight: Vanish quietly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)* Your friends mean a lot to you. Work meetings become not only networking opportunities, but also a full social occasion. Be careful with the spending. Listen carefully to someone you trust about spending. Your intuition plays into your domestic life. Tonight: Whatever makes you smile.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Your responsibilities could stress you out, when you would rather do other things. Instead of grumbling or pushing through work, put on your pleasant face and do what you have got to do. You'll gain much more with good will. Tonight: Don't worry about the present confusion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)* Call a friend rather than acting out on a problem. Relax and know that others are under similar pressure. You're also very sensitive at the moment, as you're not reading a situation clearly. Pencil in a movie or a concert where you can escape to later on. Tonight: Vanish.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)* Deal with others on a one-on-one level. Have that discussion you have been putting off. Your softer ways work with a disappointing association, whether you decide to allow this tie to become less important, or give it one more chance. Tonight: Go with the flow.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Pressure builds at work. Are you allowing too many personal calls? Learn to say "no" to friends and family. Remember your priorities. Your instincts tell you how to placate an irritated boss or associate. Recognize that you have been pushed to your limits. Tonight: Say "yes" to someone's request.

You say you didn't notice until it was too late to do anything about it?

Probably, if you aren't checking the Public Notices columns of this newspaper regularly.

Public Notices are required by state law to protect your rights and to help you function more effectively as a citizen. Access to information about what government agencies are doing is what makes the American the most powerful citizen in the world.

The Public Notices give you access to information you need...about plans for major land use changes...about where roads will go...whose land will be condemned...how your tax dollars will be spent...about court actions that could be important to you, or just plain interesting.

Whether you know them as Public Notices or as "the legals", it pays you to check the Public Notice columns in this newspaper each issue. What you don't know might cost you!

Dear Ann Landers:
When I was 18 years old, I met "Bob" and fell in love. We dated for two years and became engaged. Unfortunately, we were young and foolish, and said some hurtful things to each other. It broke my heart when we split up. Four years later, I met "Tom," and we got married. I still had feelings for Bob, and Tom knew it, but I thought those feelings would fade away. Well, it's been 13 years, and those feelings are as strong as ever. Tom and I have a good life, with two beautiful children, but it's not enough. I still dream about Bob. He's married now, lives in our town, and I see him occasionally. He is always at the pool when I take my kids for swimming lessons. He has mentioned the possibility of us "getting together" if anything were to happen to our spouses.

Don't worry, Ann, I would never allow this to become an affair. I respect my husband too much. However, I'm wondering if I am doing the right thing by staying married to Tom. Doesn't he deserve a wife who loves him with her whole heart? And what about me? Will I regret letting this opportunity pass me by?

Our children are still young, so waiting until they are out of the house will take a long time. I need your advice. — Small Town Girl in Iowa

Dear Girl: It's good to know you have decided not to cheat on your husband. Tom sounds solid, and you have two children who should be a priority. Bob's suggestion that you two "might get together" if something happens to your spouses sounds nice and cozy, but it's dream-stuff and quite unlikely. Stop fantasizing, and invest your energy in solidifying your marriage. That's where the rewards are.

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing about the letter from "Frustrated in Texas," whose husband was a shopaholic and bought a lifetime supply of shampoo, razors, vitamins, and so on. My wife did the same thing. When I asked her why she bought so much of "everything," she said the items were on sale, the prices were terrific, and she wanted to stock up.

This went on for a number of years. Then one day, she was arrested for shoplifting. I was stunned. It then became clear why we had so many things we didn't need.

My wife was in her 70s, and fortunately, she was put on probation by a sympathetic judge and did not have to serve time. I might add, Ann, we are not poor people. She had no need to steal anything.

I now realize she had a form of mental illness, and my anger at her is gone. "Frustrated in Texas" might consider this possibility. — Enlightened Husband in Florida

Dear Husband: Thank you for a letter that will surely enlighten a great many readers. Your wife is lucky to have such a supportive and understanding husband. If she hasn't yet thanked her lucky stars, she should do so now.

Dear Ann Landers: I recently discovered that one of my co-workers is selling stolen leather coats on the side. Several of the people in our office have purchased these coats for incredible bargain prices, and they don't ask any questions about where the coats came from.

I intend to report this thief to the police, but am worried that some of my co-workers will get into trouble for buying the coats. How can I hold my head up in the office if they find out I am the one who alerted the police? — Twin Cities, Minn.

Dear Minn.: You are caught between the proverbial rock and a hard place. Those co-workers who knowingly purchased stolen merchandise could wind up in plenty of trouble. Do what your conscience tells you — but be prepared for the fallout. In fact, you might want to start looking for other employment opportunities.
