Commissioners join other counties in blaming Washington for ag woes

By ROGER CLINE

Staff Writer

The Howard County Commissioners Court joined Monday with several others statewide in blaming the federal government for many of the state's agricultural woes.

The commissioners unanimously approved a "Declaration of Local Agricultural Emergency" based on a Oct. 1 declaration by the Scurry County commissioners.

Jerry Swafford of South Plains Crop Insurance in Lamesa, who presented the declaration to the Howard County commissioners, said agriculture in the United States should be treated better by the federal government because it was nationalized by Franklin Roosevelt.

"A farmer cannot strike,"

he said. "He would be breaking the law."

Despite the nationalized status of farming, the declaration claims that the government has failed to "enforce domestic anti-trust laws" against agricultural monopolies; "to stabilize foreign currency in relation to domestic currency" to even the global playing

A Big Spring man has been arrested on charges of aggravated sexual assault of a child.

Josue Johnathan Pena, 20, of Big Spring was arrested over the weekend and is being held on $85,000 bond.

Pena.

Police reports allege that Pena forced the victim into an automobile and took her to an unknown location, where he proceeded to sexually assault her.

COPE course ceremonies set

The ribbon cutting ceremony to open the Camp Thomas COPE

Challenging Outdoor Personal Experience course has been rescheduled for Wednesday.

Weather and other obligations may have postponed the challenge, but Big Spring Mayor Russ McEwen will hang from a rope during the event that will take place at 504 Driver Road, said Warren Wallace of the Buffalo Trail Council.

The event will last from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and chili will be served to those who attend.

"Please RSVP by Wednesday morning at the latest," Wallace said. "If you don't, come on anyway."

The official ribbon cutting will be held at noon when McEwen will test out the new course by going down the zip line, Wallace said.

Because of inclement weather, including six inches of snow covering the ground, the council decided to postpone the event on Nov. 29.

The 51-acre course includes 15 elements that reach about 35 feet in height, as well as many low-level elements.

The purpose of the course is to teach teamwork, problem solving and even leadership building, Wallace said.

The course, funded by the Dora Roberts Foundation, is open to the community, from church groups to edu-field; "to negotiate foreign trade agreements" beneficial to American agriculture; and to compensate farmers for "trade restrictions arising from foreign policy initiatives."

"About 184 textile mills in the last 18 months have closed across America," Swafford said. "If this continues at this rate, by the year 2004, there won't be a spinning mill operating in the United States."

Swafford said he spoke with Rep. Pete Laney (D-Hale Center) about the issue and that Laney is behind the declaration.

"Thirteen out of 16 counties in Laney's district have approved it," he said.

A spokesman from Laney's office said Laney has charged the Legislative Committee on Agriculture and Livestock to "...monitor the progress of federal farm legislation and evaluate its effect on Texas producers."

"We're already starting to do some of the things that this declaration is calling for," the spokesman added.

Swafford said with the advent of the North American Free Trade Agreement, "Seventy-two percent of our food is being imported," but only 0.7 percent of the imported food is being inspected.

Before NAFTA, only 30 percent of American food was imported and 8 percent of imports were inspected, Swafford said.

The declaration calls for Attorney General John Cornyn to "investigate the apparent purposeful abdication by the Executive Branch of the Federal Government" in enforcing several existing laws as well as the Fifth and 14th Amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

The declaration also calls for investigation and hearings from the governor, the commissioner of agriculture and the legislative council and directs the state legislature to form a legislative interim committee to hold hearings in rural areas to document the social and economic consequences of Federal inaction.

"I've seen cotton gins close up over the past few years," said Lamesa resident Andy Bratcher at the commissioners' court meeting. "I've seen tractor dealerships — you had a big one close in the past few months. It's just happening in all of rural America, not just here."

working the case and Det. Rider did a composite drawing," he said. "Out in the field with the victim, he used a computer program on his laptop to make the composite drawing."

Feedback from the victim helped Rider refine his computer-generated drawing to a reasonable likeness of her memory of her attacker, Chamness said.

The composite drawing and a description of the vehicle used in the abduction were distributed among the patrol division, he added.

"(Patrol Officer) Mike Campos saw a vehicle which matched the description," he said.

Campos identified the driver of the vehicle, Pena, as matching the composite drawing. Pena was arrested and put in a lineup.

"(The victim) identified him without any problems," Chamness said.

Other than being sexually assaulted, the victim was not injured, Chamness said. No weapon was used in the crime; the "aggravated" status of the charges is because of the young age of the victim, he said.

run again to get a four-year term," he said.

Another would remove a requirement that city council members "shall not be in arrears in the payment of any taxes or liabilities due the city."

"That has been held unconstitutional by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals," Shotts said. "You can't bar someone from running for office for not paying their taxes."

One of the propositions would remove the requirement that resolutions be read twice at city council meetings before being approved.

"Ordinances are when you are enacting laws. Resolutions are when you are doing housekeeping things, like contract work," Shotts said. "If the citizens are comfortable having resolutions read once, that would certainly simplify things. This propositions would not affect ordinances; they would still be read twice."

The propositions are not on the council's agenda as an action item, so they will simply be discussed tonight.

In other business the council will:

- Hear the final reading of a resolution authorizing Public Works Director Todd Darden to execute change order no. 1 for the Capehart Addition sewer project. The change order will add $27,872.34 to the cost of the project if approved.

- Hear the final reading of a resolution authorizing Darden to execute an agreement with Parkhill, Smith and Cooper to update the city's Water Conservation and Drought Contingency Plan.

- Hear the final reading of a resolution to purchase a 10-foot wide utility easement for the Capehart project.

- Approve specifications for Phase II of the Capehart project.
- Accept $7,875 from the Texas Commission on Fire Protection for radios and personal alert safety systems for firefighters.

- Hear the first reading of a resolution authorizing City Manager Gary Fuqua to execute a contract with Lee George Construction for Phase II of the Hangar 25 project.

Prayer controversy debated in Kerrville

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The separation of church and state has become a hot topic in Kerrville as both city and school officials debate the issue.

At city hall in the largely Christian town about 60 miles northwest of San Antonio, the mention of Jesus in the invocations before council meetings is being contested. At the school, officials have been asked to display the Ten Commandments with other historical documents in a case to be donated.

Councilwoman Nancy Banks said she doesn't want Jesus mentioned in invocations routinely given by Christian clergy before council meetings. It's illegal and excludes those of other faiths, she said.

"Even if I agreed with the prayer, as a Jew I can't join in," Banks said.

Mail transport employees on strike

DALLAS (AP) — Hundreds of workers for a company that transports U.S. mail between cities have gone on strike in Dallas and five other terminals across the South.

Temporary drivers are being hired to replace some of the striking employees of Pat Salmon & Sons, said Jeff Boone, vice president of the company.

"We have many employees who have crossed the picket lines and come to work," Boone said. But he could not say how many have crossed lines or how many of the 900 employees at the five terminals are on strike.

Boone said Texans should not worry about not getting their mail. The company is working with the U.S. Postal Service to find other ways to deliver shipments, he said.

The mail transport workers voted to call a strike when they weren't able to reach a contract agreement after two years of negotiations.

About 345 workers are based in Dallas.

Gunman kills two restaurant workers

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — Police were searching for a gunman today who they say opened fire on his co-workers outside a fast-food restaurant in suburban Philadelphia, killing two of the men and wounding a third.

All three victims were in their late teens or early 20s, East Whiteland Township Police Chief Frederick Rosato said. Their identities were being withheld until the families could be notified.

The shooting began shortly after 9:30 Monday night when employees of a KFC/Taco Bell at the Great Valley Center in Chester County began closing the restaurant for the night, Rosato said.

Five male workers went outside to empty the trash and, for an unknown reason, walked into the woods about 100 yards behind the restaurant, Rosato said.

Acela Express may hit its stride too late for Amtrak

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amtrak says the nation's first high-speed train is exceeding projections as it enters its second year of operations in the Washington-New York-Boston corridor.

Ridership on Acela Express is up significantly since the Sept. 11 attacks made many travelers wary about flying. With creature comforts and a top speed of 150 mph, the trains have received positive reviews from passengers and travel writers.

But due to a series of delays, the high-speed service may be hitting its stride too late to help

Amtrak. As the railway celebrates the one-year anniversary of its premier train, Amtrak's own future is in doubt.

Amtrak was relying on profits from Acela Express to help it operate without government subsidies by Dec. 2, 2002, as ordered by Congress.

The federal Amtrak Reform Council has declared Amtrak will not meet the deadline, however, and early next year the council will give Congress a plan for a restructured national rail program that may or may not include Amtrak.

Amtrak focused on the positive during Monday's celebration at South Station in Boston. Amtrak's acting chairman, former Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, cut a birthday cake for Acela Express and said high-speed trains should be offered around the country.

"I cannot overemphasize the importance of this success," Dukakis said, "because what it really says is if you give people first-class, modern high-speed service, they will come by the thousands."

Acela Express entered service Dec. 11, 2000, after a year of production delays. Service continues to be phased in. Amtrak has received 16 trains from the builders, Canada's Bombardier Transportation and France's Alstom Ltd., and is awaiting four more.

Amtrak says ridership numbers are encouraging, especially since the Sept. 11 attacks. Passengers have included professional sports teams, 40 senators traveling to New York to view the World Trade Center wreckage, and an original print of the Declaration of Independence, which rolled to Philadelphia for the start of a national tour.

"Acela is everything an American passenger train has never been: clean, quiet, stable and fast," said Sen. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J.

Dick Arney contemplates retirement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Majority Leader Dick Arney of Texas, second-ranking House Republican during seven tumultuous years of GOP rule, is considering retirement at the end of his current term, according to sources familiar with his thinking.

Arney, a staunch conservative, has appraised Speaker Dennis Hastert and other GOP colleagues of the possibility he won't seek a 10th term in the House in 2002, these sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The 61-year-old Arney has until Jan. 2 to file re-election papers in Texas, but may disclose his plans before then.

Arney's Dallas-area seat would be safe for Republicans in 2002, but a decision to retire would likely spark a lively competition among members of the rank-and-file for the leadership post.

One source familiar with Arney's thinking said neither health nor political necessity was prompting Arney to consider an end to his congressional career. But given the legislative record of the last seven years and the presence of a Republican in the White House, Arney may decide the moment is right to depart, the source said.

Arney's spokesman declined comment on the congressman's possible plans.

An economics professor, Arney won his seat in the House in 1984 as a strong advocate of tax cuts and less government.

He displayed an ability to pass legislation even as a junior member of the minority party a few years later, when he was instrumental in a bill that led to the closing of unneeded military bases.

Arney was elected to the House GOP leadership in 1992.

In the post, he played a key role in development of the Contract With America, the conservative campaign manifesto that Republicans rode to power in 1994 midterm elections.

He was elected majority leader in the aftermath of the GOP victory.

OUR VIEWS

Four-legged friends need help as well

Call it a non-traditional tradition. Each year, the Big Spring Herald, KBST and the Big Spring Humane Society team up to help make sure a particular group of residents in our community have enough to eat.

Like so many other charitable acts, we rely on donations to make this project a success. But we're not asking for toys, coats, blankets or cash. No, what we are needing is food — food for our canine and feline friends.

Yes, it's time again for our annual holiday food drive for animals at the humane society — dogs and cats that are hoping to someday be a family pet.

Each year of this program, Howard County citizens have donated generously, making it possible for the humane society to "stock up," if only temporarily, on dry and canned food for its four-legged guests.

If you'd like to help, here's how: Go to any store that sells pet food, and purchase one can, two, three, four or as many as you'd like, or a bag or two of dry food. Choose food for dogs or cats, or both, whatever you'd like to donate.

Then bring those purchases to either the Big Spring Herald, 710 Scurry, or KBST, 608 Johnson. The deadline is Friday, Dec. 21. Of course, if you'd rather drop off money, that's acceptable, too. The purchases will be made for you.

Howard County always goes "all out" to help its less fortunate children, families and senior citizens at this time of year. This program ensures another special group of our residents don't get left out.

Thanks.

YOUR VIEWS

TO THE EDITOR:
Two articles have appeared recently in the Herald like many from other resources each Christmastime bemoaning the seeming lack of Christmas being a Christian holiday.

The articles center on what appears to be a cynical crass commercialization of Christmas symbols through Christmas shopping, even in shopping vigorously for war.

One problem with this is that the contributors of the articles on alternatives are caught in a concept of God found in Phillips', "Your God is too Small," in which he points out that one of the images of a great god is the one called "God in a Box."

To assert that Christ is lost in the midst of Christmas shopping is to deny the Sovereignty, the magnitude and the magnanimity of God both in the creation and in the incarnation. The Mighty Acts of God demonstrate God's love for the whole world and the provision of resources for the good life are there for all. God through the presence of Christ is at work in the world, working to make and keep human life human.

The United States economy is one of the resources provided for our good life. If Christmas shopping, which amounts to 25 to 30 percent of it, were to be wiped out, the U.S. economy would simply collapse. There would be more unemployment, more poverty, more hunger, more pain and suffering than occurred even in the great depression of the 30s!

As in Humpty Dumpty, all the government and all the charitable institutions and all the generous individuals could not cope with the enormity of such an economic/cultural breakdown. To be the righteous cause of all that would be un-Christian in the extreme.

It was said of old — "Let the church be the church." Take a good look around and see what the churches are doing to celebrate the Advent and the marking of the birth of the Lord Jesus — the Christian tradition is alive and well in Big Spring, in Texas, in the USA and throughout the uttermost parts of the earth. God save the mark!

Christendom is surely that entity against which the gates of hell shall not prevail. Even Christmas shopping.

Grits: Girls Raised in the South

Not every woman can pull off the look. Deborah Faye Ford can.

She looks excruciatingly neat in faded blue jeans and a striped cotton blouse, a single strand of pearls around her slender neck. At the womanly age of 49, she still has the poised demeanor of a girl properly raised in the South.

And she was. Raised in the South. It's almost a Hollywood-worthy cliché, in fact, her beginning.

One of six siblings, Deborah Faye grew up in little Elkmont, Ala., the daughter of a sharecropper farmer and his wife. Deborah Faye — such a nice Southern name — chopped and picked cotton until she was 12.

She learned about hard work in the fields from her father, Bill, who died when she was only 10. But it was from her mother, Elizabeth, and an old Singer sewing machine that Deborah Faye learned style and grace, not to mention a trade.

"You either do what you love, or do what you have to — or both," she says matter-of-factly from the office and warehouse of GRITS in the Birmingham suburb of Homewood. Bright colors of fabric swatches, Deborah Faye's old sewing machine and dogs Poopsy and Alex make the home of the multimillion-dollar enterprise seem like a clubhouse, somewhere you'd climb a rope ladder to get to, ignoring the sign "NO GIRLS."

She didn't arrive overnight.

In 1972, she was just a popular Southern coed with good skin and raising. George Lindsey — better known as Mayberry's Goober — crowned Deborah Faye homecoming queen at the University of North Alabama in Florence. She might have rested on beauty-queen laurels — some girls raised in the South do — but Deborah Faye was not only athletic and pretty, she was driven.

The sociology and physical-education major went to work as a juvenile probation officer and a counselor for troubled youth before settling down in Birmingham to teach and coach junior-high volleyball. She married, had children, divorced, and did the typical things that struggling young women find themselves doing.

As a single mother, Deborah consistently relied on her expert sewing to make extra cash. She haunted garage sales for old chenille bedspreads from which she made unique clothes.

It was a cottage industry that flourished — within moonlighting limits and out of her car trunk.

In the name of motivation or reward, she often stitched occasional surprises for her students.

At a 1995 hen party — all girls raised in the South know that term — Deborah Faye had the inspiration that transformed her life. Old girlfriends were sitting around, comparing notes on life and love, when the term "girls raised in the South" slipped into the conversation. Deborah Faye started thinking about the acronym you could take from that phrase: GRITS.

"I went right away and had 15 shirts screen-printed for my volleyball team," Deborah Faye says. The shirts said GRITS: Girls Raised In The South.

Soon all the players' mothers wanted shirts. And their friends wanted shirts.

Deborah Faye made a quick trip to the copyright office. She hired an artist to draw a girl in a belle hat fingering her pearls. She packed more of the shirts into her car trunk with the chenille.

One day, she was monitoring the school hallways, wearing a GRITS cap. A friend passed, saw the cap and suggested Deborah Faye present GRITS wear at the Atlanta Apparel Mart. "What's that?" she asked.

Deborah Faye made that first trip to Atlanta in 1996 and got $65,000 worth of orders from a handful of samples.

Last year sales topped $1 million. And there seems to be an inexhaustible supply of the pithy slogans: Seasoned GRITS — Grandmothers Raised In The South.

Southern Girls Don't Sweat, They Glisten. GRITS: Girls Raised In Tennis Skirts.

"Southern women are more different than any other group in the world," Deborah Faye firmly believes.

She's bet her future and fortune on it.

Books have a place under the tree

On a loose day recently, I reread Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island" and "Kidnapped." They remain almost perfect stories for boys, and I would think they would make great gifts for children of middle-school age.

It surprised me to find out how swiftly Stevenson moves his stories. His characters talk instead of making speeches, and one exciting incident follows on the heels of another. It had been so long since my first reading that I had forgotten how good a writer he is.

I know this is the video age and the computer-game age, but I hope parents will realize that playing computer games is a total waste of time. Playing a computer or video game does nothing for the player. It teaches players nothing. It does not exercise their minds, their imaginations or their bodies. All computer games do is blast their retinas with an unnecessary dose of electromagnetic radiation that they probably don't need.

Books, on the other hand, have to be read with the conscious mind. The imagination is called into play. And good books, even adventure stories or fantasies, will educate. Great books will provide an insight into human character that can be gained otherwise only by long and observant experience.

The "Harry Potter" books are good gifts, too. Those are cracking good stories, and they earned their fame justly by so entrancing readers that word-of-mouth made the first one a best seller.

C.S. Lewis' "Chronicles of Narnia" can still charm and educate a modern child. For older children, J.R.R. Tolkien's "The Hobbit" and "The Lord of the Rings" remain the all-time greatest fantasies ever written, in my humble opinion.

Another good gift idea is Carlo Collodi's "Pinocchio," not to be confused with the sanitized Disney version. The original can be scary and even grim in parts, but the little puppet is someone children can identify with, especially children inclined to be naughty and disobedient.

It's interesting that in the pre-modern age, authors felt no need to shield readers from evil and tragedy. Both are part of the human condition, and including them prepares a child for the life he or she will have to live. Done properly, such tales do not depress but rather inspire young readers to meet the challenges of life.

I noticed in rereading "Treasure Island" that the young hero, Jim Hawkins, is older than he is usually depicted in Hollywood versions of the story, and Long John Silver is younger and far more menacing than Hollywood has usually shown him. Stevenson presents him as a psychopath, a coldblooded killer who can play the affable con man when it suits his purpose. Jim never trusts him, and Silver never shows any genuine affection for the boy. In fact, Silver seems rather like Bill Clinton, though considerably more courageous.

I might be paddling up a swift current, but Lord bless anyone who can induce children to read and stay away from mindless computer games and the electronic sewer outfall commonly called television. We can all be grateful that real people are not as they are depicted in sitcoms, advertisements, soap operas and most movies. If they were, the human race would be a sorry lot indeed.

What distinguishes humans from other mammals is their minds, and books will do a thousand times more for the mind than all the electronic and video output in the world.

Cowboys beginning to believe they can break even

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys are starting to believe that maybe they can avoid a losing season.

Confidence is building for the Cowboys (4-8) after two straight wins. If they could continue that streak for another month through their last four games, they would break even.

"To finish 8-8 would be tremendous, especially since we were only supposed to win one or two games," said safety George Teague.

Before wins against Washington and the New York Giants the past two weekends, Dallas had won just two games. It is the second time this season the Cowboys have won two games in a row, both times after four-game losing streaks. "Something's different this time, especially since the quarterback situation has stabilized."

The last two wins have come since the return of rookie quarterback Quincy Carter from thumb and hamstring injuries. In Sunday's 20-13 win over the Giants, Carter was 17-of-26 passing for a Cowboys' season-high 194 yards with a touchdown.

"The players right along felt we were making progress," said coach Dave Campo. "That's what we've tried to identify from Day 1, is that we are going to make progress, especially at this time in the season."

"When a quarterback comes in and has success, does some good things and wins a couple of games, I think everybody starts to have a positive opinion."

The Cowboys know it won't be easy to finish 8-8, but it gives them a goal to shoot for in what has been a miserable season.

Three of the last four games are on the road, but the only remaining opponent with a winning record — San Francisco (9-3) — plays at Texas Stadium on Dec. 30. The Cowboys travel to Seattle (6-6), Arizona (5-7) and Detroit (0-12), that the season finale after being postponed in September after the terrorist attacks.

"Campo told us to play the rest of the year like a six-game high school season. That's a simple way of looking at it," said safety Darren Woodson, who along with Emmitt Smith are the only holdovers from all three Dallas teams that won Super Bowl titles in the mid-1990s. "It's one game at a time. And we've taken care of two of them."

After winning 20-14 at Washington, and getting their ninth straight win against the Redskins, the Cowboys overcame a 10-point deficit Sunday to beat the Giants.

"It feels good, we want to keep it going," said Carter, who played just five quarters the first 10 games because of the injuries.

Carter is one of 15 rookies on the team, and among 39 players with less than three full seasons of NFL experience.

Lady Steers open 4-4A play hosting Estacado

By VALERIE AVERY

Special to the Herald

Big Spring's Lady Steers open their tough District 4-4A schedule tonight against the Lubbock Estacado Lady Matadors at 6 p.m. in Steer Gym battling for a playoff berth that eluded their grasp last year.

The Lady Steers were one win away from grabbing the third spot to enter post-season play in 2000-01 and that's something head coach Jimmy Avery hasn't forgotten.

"We were one win away from making the playoffs last year," Avery said as he begins his fourth District 4-4A season in Big Spring. Avery previously served as the head boys' basketball coach, moving to the girl's slot last season.

Big Spring sports an impressive 8-4 mark at the midway point of the season. Estacado is 9-2 coming into tonight's contest.

"Estacado has a lot of talent returning from last year and had two outstanding players move in this year," Avery said, making it clear the Lady Steers face a challenge from the outset of 4-4A play.

"They have a freshman guard — LaVonda Henderson, who scored 27 points against Austin Anderson at the Concho River Classic a week ago. They beat San Angelo Central 53-36 in that tournament's championship. They just have so many weapons."

"They are an impressive group, but we are playing well right now, too."

Big Spring is coming off a 2-1 run in this past weekend's Best Western Crossroads Classic at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, playing their best game of the season against a much taller Hereford squad.

The Lady Steers dropped a nine-point game to District 4-4A rival Andrews — turnovers and rebounding cost Big Spring the game. But that loss was a marked improvement over the Lady Steers' previous contest with Andrews at the Polk-Key City Classic a week prior when Big Spring lost by 30 points.

Sophomore guard Kim Wrightsil has been out a week with a bruised shoulder, but the seven Lady Steers haven't missed a beat.

Big Spring thumped Lamesa and then played tough contests against Odessa High and Hereford in the Crossroads Classic before falling to Andrews.

"All of our players have stepped up," Avery said. "They have been so aggressive on defense and have executed well on offense. It's been very impressive. Tejal Patel and Brittany Bryant have just really gotten after it."

"Krystle Long wants the ball in her hands. You can just see it in her eyes. Even when she has two or three people guarding her, she wants the ball. She's not afraid to post up and shoot."

"Ashley Smith has been a nice presence in the paint, and Jessica Woodward and Courtney Brock have come on the past couple weeks. They do a lot of things that aren't noticed — like creating steals and making assists."

Sophomore Leina Braxton, who was named to the all-tournament teams in Abilene and Big Spring, along with Long has been shooting the ball well, Avery said.

"She's not afraid to play," he said of Braxton. "They are all very coachable. I could see this past weekend that they are believing in the system and passing the ball around until they see the open shot."

Big Spring will have its hands full with Estacado, which likes to play an up-tempo game.

"They are very quick and athletic," Avery admitted. District 4-4A features two teams in the Top 15, including No. 2 Plainview, the defending state champions, and No. 13 Levelland, one of the state's most storied girls' basketball programs.

The first half of district play doesn't get any easier as Big Spring travels to Wolforth Frenship Friday and Snyder next Tuesday.

"We have two tough games on the road," Avery noted. "Frenship took the third-place slot last year and playing in Snyder is always tough. They have so much tradition."

"But one thing I realized after watching the Hereford game was these girls will fight, scratch and claw and find a way to win. They work so hard in practice that it carries over to the game. To them, working hard is habit, a very good habit. Like second nature."

Steers earn spots on District 4-4A all-district team

By JOHN A. MOSELEY

Managing Editor

Despite getting off to what can only be called a slow start, Big Spring's Steers acquitted themselves well when they reached District 4-4A play and that was evident when the league's coaches met to select their all-district football team.

The Steers, who dropped their first five games, including 4-4A outings against Andrews and San Angelo Lake View, rebounded to string together four straight wins over Levelland, Plainview, Lubbock Estacado and Snyder before closing out the season with a loss to district champion and eventual state quarterfinalist Frenship.

That late success was reflected in Big Spring landing four first-team spots on the honor squad dominated by 4-4A's playoff representatives — Frenship, Andrews and Plainview.

Big Spring's passing attack, which game district opponents fits, obviously received the most respect from the coaches, as junior quarterback Tye Butler and wide receivers Brandon Mendoza, another junior, and senior Clarence Wilkins were first-team selections on offense.

The Steers' only first-team pick on defense was Wilkins, who did double duty as a defensive back.

Three more Big Spring players were second-team honorees — running back Kyland Wegner, receiver Larry Thompson and linebacker Mike Smith, all three seniors.

Big Spring added 26 honorable mention selections. On defense they included tackles Jarond Boyd and Jeremy Jones; linebackers Jesse Woodruff, Dustyn Beauchamp and Jared Phillips; punter Michael Ornales; ends Adam Solis, Tim Overton and Keith Newton; and the secondary threesome of Wesley Smith, Raul Garza and Ronnie Johnson.

The Steers' honorable mention selections on offense were linemen George Quintero, Mike Manzanarez, Jeff DeLos Santos, Keith Newton, Bryan Stokes, Kyle Newton, Bryan Stokes, Kyle Newton, Adam Partee, David Partlow and Daniel Miramontes; kicker Jordan Cobb; tight end Mike Smith; and running backs Ramone Ford and Josh Mathews.

Frenship tight end David Thomas, a 6-foot-3, 215-pound, senior was named the district's most valuable offensive player, while Andrews' K.C. White, a 6-foot, 195-pound senior, was named the loop's most valuable defensive player for his showing at defensive end.

Andrews' sophomore Matt Gardner, a 6-foot-2, 220-pound running back, was selected as the district's sophomore of the year, while four other sophomores were honored as newcomers of the year.

Those four included Plainview's Micah

Estacado's Daunte Boyd, Snyder's Isaac Ramon and Andrews' David Kessler.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, Dec. 12:

Many of the givens in your life could go up in smoke this year. These events occur to help you have less rigid pictures of what "should be." The more open you become, the better
your year will be. Remember, you're the captain at the helm.
Learn to listen more and develop the art of becoming a silent supporter. If single, at first be a little cynical of those you meet, until you get to know the person. You will have a tendency to connect with emotionally unavailable people. If attached, take more downtime together,
away from children, home
and hassles. Your bond benefits from this attention.
SAGITTARIUS is a soul mate.

with facts and figures to make sure you're heading in the right direction. Call in an expert, if need be.
Tonight: Find solutions on the Internet.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Others would be perturbed if walking in your shoes. No wonder you get upset with an unpredictable boss. Unexpected news

could shake you up, as well as others. Stay as calm as possible, seeking out a trusted adviser for suggestions. Tonight: Relax with your favorite person.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 Prepare to regroup or go back to square one. Unusual news throws
another perspective, which causes a total reassessment.
Don't count on others, and you will succeed. Be more in touch with a supervisor's expectations. Talk about these matters first. Tonight:
Out among the crowds.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)* Be creative when dealing with the people around you. A partner could be irascible and emotional. You know how to tame someone's feelings.
Realize what is going on and work through his or her erratic behavior. You find solutions when no one else does. Tonight: Cut the romping early.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 Strap yourself in as others act out. You're on a roller-coaster ride, whether you like it or not. Don't push someone too hard;
rather, relax. Investigate a real estate investment or property matter more carefully. Don't take anything for granted. Tonight: Nap first.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 Keep communicating,
even if you want to end talks. A co-worker could unnerve you, or you could be unnerved by a friend.
Take a walk rather than trigger. You need to understand the bottom line here

and what is getting to you.
Stay on top of calls. Tonight: What would soothe your nerves?

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
 A child or loved one can persuade you to do things
you would prefer not to do.
Unanticipated surprises
move you in another direction. Realize what it is that you want from a key person in your life. Keep your eye on the end result, not the moment. You'll smile at success. Tonight: Hook up with a friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.
21) Your strong personality causes a shake-up when you least expect it. You might think that someone rebels for no reason. Rather,
you are part of the problem. Be honest with yourself and then you can change the pattern. Keep smiling, and it'll all work out. Tonight: Do your holiday errands, stopping for eggnog with a friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) When it comes to disruption, stand back.
You might not be the cause,
but you might be affected by these events. Your sense of humor can make a substantial difference in how you view your day. Don't think you're the only one!
Tonight: Go with a second wind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Though you believe everything is under control, you might find out otherwise. Listen to the drumbeats. Listen to the echoes. Read between the lines. Make an important meeting, but think very carefully about what you expect. Tonight: Vanish.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb.
18) Whether you intend to or not, you add a certain element of uproar. You could feel quite out of control as you try to calm down. Others react strongly to this side of you. Please try to don a professional image at work. Tonight: Let off steam with friends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Continue seeking out information, tapping in on new resources. Your perspective could change as a result. In fact, you could be stunned when a piece of news filters in to you. Make arrangements to work as late as you need to. Tonight: Get as much done
as possible.

Kindness and Justice Challenge teaches goodwill

Dear Ann Landers: Last year, you printed a letter from Martin Luther King III, challenging children in grades
K-12 to do acts
of kindness
and justice. I am an elementary school teacher in New York. As a result of that column, I registered my school for the Kindness & Justice Challenge, and over the two-week period of the Challenge, we collected over 3,000 documented acts
of kindness.

Fifth-grader Sandra collected clothing and toys to send to earthquake victims
in Guatemala and El Salvador. Amanpreet, a fourth-grader, helped her mother pass her citizenship test. Jossy, who is in the third grade, helped her brother learn to read.

We are proud of the children at New York P.S. 86.
Thank you, Ann, for promoting this very special event. We hope you will do it again. — Fern

ANN
LANDERS

Rashkov, Jamaica, N.Y.
Dear Fern Rashkov: I am pleased to alert my readers once more to the Kindness & Justice
Challenge. Here is this year's letter from Martin Luther King III explaining
the program:

Dear Ann Landers: This
fall, with individual acts of conscience and large gatherings of unity, students
across America responded to tragedy and expressed their dreams for a better world. Young people are rising up to renew our nation.

Next month, young people across America can continue to make a difference by participating in the Do Something Kindness & Justice Challenge. Students in grades K-12 perform Acts of Kindness (helping others) and Justice (standing up for what's right). The Challenge takes place between Jan. 21 and Feb. 1,
in honor of Martin Luther King Jr. Day. Students
record the Acts of Kindness
and Justice they perform and post them on the Internet to share with schools across the country.
Participants also will have the opportunity to receive grants.

Educators can obtain all materials for the 2002 Do Something Kindness &
Justice Challenge on the Internet at:
http://coach.dosomething.org
or by e-mailing kjchallenge@dosingomething.org.
The free educator resources include grade-appropriate curricula with engaging daily activities, instructions for posting Acts of Kindness and Justice on the Internet, and incentives to encourage participation.

Now, more than ever, we have the chance to help young people learn the virtues taught by my father
— tolerance, responsibility and moral courage — and put these lessons into practice. Let's honor the Martin Luther King Jr. national holiday by helping a new generation understand the hope that true citizenship
can bring. Sincerely,
— Martin Luther King III

Dear Martin Luther King
III: Thank you once again
for the opportunity to let my readers know about the Kindness & Justice
Challenge. I urge teachers everywhere to get their classes involved. The rewards will be enormous.

Dear Ann Landers:
I would like to respond to
"Heartbroken Mother in Texas," who wanted her rich daughter to support
her. "Mom" said she had no job skills and could barely make it on Social Security.

Why is she selling herself short? She took care of her dying husband for seven years. She can call her local hospice organization and ask if they need help. She can run an ad in the paper and let it be known that she's available as a companion or caregiver. Once her daughter sees Mom is trying to make it on her own,
she will have newfound respect for her mother, not to mention the high self-esteem the mother will gain for herself. — Advice from Oklahoma City

Dear Oklahoma City:
Right you are! It is never too late to reinvent yourself. Thank you for pointing it out.

Dear Ann Landers: I have been living with "Keith" for two years. Last year, he took me to meet his parents and sister. His parents are fine, but his sister, "Rosie,"
is a problem. She is moody and rude. Keith says that is just the way she is and I should overlook it. I have tried, but she has become impossible.

Rosie got engaged six months ago. Keith and I helped his parents look for locations for the wedding and offered to let out-of-town relatives stay in our house. Two weeks later, Rosie called and said only immediate family would be invited, and that did not include me. She was married last month, and I was not invited to the wedding.
Although Keith was angry,
he went to the wedding
without me.

Last weekend, Rosie and her husband invited Keith to their apartment. He brought me along, hoping that we could patch things up. It didn't work. As soon as I saw Rosie, I was so filled with hurt feelings I had to leave. Keith and I argued about it. He said I was unfriendly. I think he is insensitive. We've agreed to listen to your advice,
Ann. — Out in the Cold in Los Angeles

Dear Cold in L.A.: It sounds as if you didn't stick around long enough for Rosie to extend the olive branch. I say, give it another try. While you and Rosie are never going to be bosom buddies, you can at least put aside your hurt feelings and be civil to her for Keith's sake. Please listen to me. You'll be glad you did.

Dear Ann Landers: The
letter from "Nameless in North Carolina" about guests who stay too long brought back some wonderful memories.

When visitors stayed too
long at my parents' house,
Dad would quietly disappear and return within a few minutes, wearing his pajamas. It always made people laugh, and they got the message and left soon after. So far as I know, there were no hurt feelings.

— Longtime Reader in Elmira, N.Y.

Dear Elmira: Your Dad
was a true diplomat with a good sense of humor. The U.N. could use his talent
now.

Drugs are everywhere.
They're easy to get, easy to use and even easier to get hooked on. If you have questions about drugs, you need Ann Landers' booklet,
"The Lowdown on Dope."
