Fair warning: Municipal Court warrants will be served soon

By BILL McCLELLAN

News Editor

A word of warning to those who made arrangements with Municipal Court to pay off fines or perform community service and haven't — warrants are about to be served.

GREEN

More than 600 warrants are to be issued on Monday, April 13, for offenders who have not paid their debt, said Municipal Court Judge Timothy Green.

"This includes everybody who has set up community service with us and didn't complete that, everybody who set up a payment plan with us and stopped paying, and everyone who we gave extensions to and who didn't come back," Green said.

The capias warrants will cover guilty pleas from January 1999 through June 2001. Most of those were people who were ticketed for offenses such as no automobile insurance, no driver's license, violation of license restrictions, minor in consumption charges, Class C assault/family violence and such infractions as dog at large or weedy lots. In each case, the offender made arrangements to pay a fine or perform community service but failed to meet their obligation.

"Soon, our warrant officer will be contacting as many of these people as he can.

After that, he will release the hounds," Green said.

What that means is, warrants will be issued statewide for those individuals.

"Patrol officers — here, in Midland or wherever — if they stop anyone, they'll run a check. Once we file these warrants, they'll be on record and if you have one, it will show up," Green said. "So if these people get stopped for running a stop sign, for instance, they'll be held on this warrant."

Offenders can save themselves an extra $50 fee if they walk into Municipal Court and pay their fine now. No warrant will be issued.

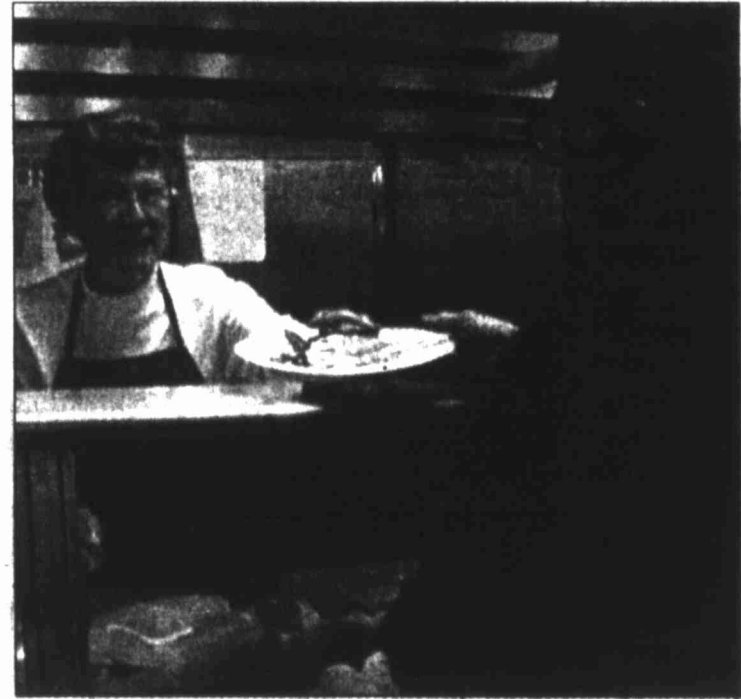

"If they come in and take care of their business, we are not going to do the capias warrant. If they don't, it's an additional $50 fee," Green stressed. "What we would like is for people to come in and take care of these. We realize not everyone will do that, but we're hopeful some of them will."

Early balloting numbers in primary elections fall well short of four years ago

By ROGER CLINE

Staff Writer

Early voting poll attendance in Republican and Democratic party primaries has been small this year, said County Clerk Donna Wright.

WRIGHT

"It's been a low turnout as opposed to four years ago," she said.

This year only 788 people voted in the Republican primary as opposed to 1,198 four years ago. Only 307 Democrats cast early ballots this year, while four years ago, 530 Democratic ballots were cast.

Wright said lack of county-wide interest is part of the problem.

"Part of it has to do with the fact that we have no county-wide contested race, like county judge, nothing like that, county clerk.... Everything is territorial," she said.

Wright encouraged those planning to vote Tuesday to check the precinct number on their new orange voter registration cards.

"They need to check their new card and check for the precinct number on that card," she said. "They can either call or look at the list in the paper and double-check. Where they normally go may not be where they need to go this year, because we redistricted and we had to redraw precinct lines. There are a lot of changes in our election precincts."

In the race for Precinct 2 county commissioner, Republican incumbent Jerry Kilgore is facing chal-

Staulcup joins cast filing for Place 3 city council position

By ROGER CLINE

Staff Writer

There are now three people running for Place 3 on the Big Spring City Council.

John Staulcup, 61, of Big Spring filed Friday for the position. Jimmy Ruth, a technician for Cox Communications, and Rick Dyer, owner of Dyer Plumbing and Mechanical, have also filed for the seat, which will be vacated by incumbent Chuck Cawthon at the end of this term. Incumbent Stephanie Horton has filed to run for re-election in the other council seat up for grabs, that being Place 1.

Staulcup, as chairwoman of the political action group Concerned Citizens Council of Big Spring, led a recall effort against Mayor Russ McEwen over what the group's petition called his "...insensitive refusal to recognize or consider the citizens' adamant opposition to the $60,000 per year (salary and benefits) position of airport manager."

The group managed to force a recall election and voters narrowly opted to keep McEwen as mayor.

Staulcup retired from the VA Medical Center in 1997 off in the Precinct 4 commissioner race; the victor will face Democratic incumbent Gary Simer in November. And for Precinct 1, Place 2, justice of the peace, David Mohn and Kathryn Wiseman are running on the Republican ballot. There is no Democrat seeking that office.

There aren't any locally contested races in the Democratic Primary.

Howard County residents can cast their primary votes in several state government races. The governor's race includes Democratic candidates Dan Morales and Tony Sanchez as well as Bill Lyon and John Worldpeace. The Democratic nominee will challenge incumbent Republican Rick Perry in November.

The race to fill retiring senator Phil Gramm's post is hotly contested.

Republicans vying for the job include Douglas G. Deffenbaugh, Dudley F.

Mooney, John Cornyn, Bruce Rusty Lang and Lawrence Cranberg. On the Democratic ticket are Ed Cunningham, Ken Bentsen, Victor Morales, Ron Kirk and Gene Kelly.

Other offices on the ballot include those for court justices and board of education members.

There are some 18,682 registered voters in Howard County, according to the county clerk's office.

after a 30-year career in positions including chief of office operations, chief of ambulatory care and processing, computer specialist, federal women's program manager, upward mobility coordinator and total quality improvement team leader.

In a press release, Staulcup said she will support attempts to increase jobs in Big Spring and advocate fiscal responsibility in government.

In a possible reference to the controversy about the new Malone-Hogan Airpark manager position, now filled by Jim Curtiss, Staulcup's release said she "...believes strongly that the city council should be aware of the duties of a job and the salary associated with it before any position is created or filled."

Staulcup has lived in Big Spring since 1962.

An official from Forsan has released information about that city's upcoming mayoral and council race.

Forsan has two at-large positions up for grabs as well as Mayor Jim Buske's seat.

The council seats involved include those currently held by Buddy Gambrell and Jack Hancock.

The city official said Marie Wilson has is the only person who has filed so far to run for a council seat.

The only filer so far for the mayor's job is Councilman Clarence Williams. If Williams is elected mayor, he will have to resign his council seat, but otherwise will continue to hold it.

Incumbents Dan Shelburne, Paulette Lindsey and Eleanor Garrett are the only filers in the Coahoma city election, and their at-large seats are the only ones up for election.

No one has filed to run for the two at-large seats in Stanton.

Early voting in the city races runs April 17 through 30, and election day is May 4.

Three dead, two critically injured when scaffolding collapses at John Hancock Building

CHICAGO (AP) — Scaffolding from the landmark John Hancock Building fell on a busy downtown street and crushed cars Saturday, killing three people and critically injuring two, a fire department spokesman said. Unusually high winds were whipping through the area, but it was too soon to say if they caused the 25 feet of scaffolding to fall from the 43rd floor, Fire Department Cmdr. Tim Stokes said.

Krista Galaida, who was working in a flower shop on the first floor of the Hancock building, said she heard what sounded like an explosion.

"We just bolted; it was so loud and the ground shook," said Galaida. "We thought a truck had come into the building or something. Everybody thought it was a bomb."

The scaffolding had been erected so crews, who weren't believed to be working Saturday, could repair and clean the face of the building.

Fire Commissioner James Joyce said.

Winds gusted up to 58 mph at a downtown airport around the time of the collapse, according to the National Weather Service.

Those killed were in three cars that were crushed by the debris, Stokes said. Glass also rained down on the crowded streets.

One woman was in critical condition and two were in good condition at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, administrator Shelley Williams said.

A 56-year-old woman was in critical condition with injuries that included a broken femur and another was in fair condition at Cook County Hospital, a hospital administrator said.

Sanchez, Morales blast each other as primary nears

DALLAS (AP) — The two leading Democratic gubernatorial candidates exchanged more barbs Saturday, with Tony Sanchez insisting he hasn't spent any more money on his campaign than rival Dan Morales has in 15 years of politics.

Speaking to reporters after a get-out-the-vote rally at a downtown Dallas park, Sanchez responded to Morales' criticism of the amount of money the Laredo millionaire has spent on his campaign.

"All he's done is get elected and start raising money for the next campaign," Sanchez said. "He doesn't have a vision for the state of Texas."

Campaign finance reports show Sanchez has spent more than $14 million on the race since January, dwarfing the $561,000 spent by Morales so far.

"(Morales) has spent millions of dollars on his own campaigns for 15 years and all of a sudden, you know, he sets up two standards — one for him and one for the rest of us," Sanchez said. "Why doesn't he question himself about spending millions over the past 15 years to get his name out there?"

Meanwhile in South Texas,

Morales stood before an oil well Sanchez once owned and accused his opponent of so-called "Mexican politics."

"This is the way public service and government service operates in Mexico," Morales said. "Rich guys go into government to get richer."

John WorldPeace and Bill Lyon also are in the Democratic race.

Voters will decide Tuesday who'll run against Republican Gov. Rick Perry in November.

About 100 hundred supporters braved brisk winds and chilly temperatures as Sanchez encouraged voter turnout at the polls Tuesday.

"It's been a long primary and we've only got about three days to go," Sanchez told the mostly Hispanic crowd. "My wife and my children and I are sacrificing a lot of our time, a lot of our resources to try to give something back to Texas, because we want to make Texas fair and equal and respectful to all people."

A poll released Saturday by the Scripps Howard Media Center showed Sanchez had the support of 31 percent of likely Democratic voters and Morales had 23 percent.

Forty-one percent remain undecided. The margin of error is plus or minus 6.3 percentage points.

As campaigning seemed to intensify from both camps, Sanchez indicated he's growing annoyed with the mudslinging.

"I don't want to talk about Dan Morales anymore," he said. "We've got two or three days to go and I want to talk about education, jobs, health care. I'm really worried about having a million children out there without health insurance. Those are a lot more important things than talking about Dan Morales."

Pathologist: Yates determined when she drowned children

HOUSTON (AP) — The morning after Andrea Yates was arrested for drowning her five children a sheriff's deputy said he overheard her tell a jail psychiatrist that she was stupid for not just killing her 6-month-old daughter.

Another witness for the state on Saturday told jurors Yates' behavior on June 20 was determined, decisive and exhibited an element of deception.

Harris County Sheriff's deputy Mike Stephens testified he overheard Yates tell Dr. Melissa Ferguson during an interview at the jail that she knew her actions were wrong as she held each of her five children beneath the water's surface.

Stephens took the stand Saturday as a prosecution rebuttal witness to Yates' insanity defense.

She faces two capital murder charges for the drowning deaths of three of her five children.

To prove insanity, defense attorneys must show Yates suffered from a severe mental disease or defect and did not know her actions were wrong.

During cross-examination, defense attorney George Parnham asked Stephens if he eavesdropped on a private conversation between Yates and Ferguson.

Stephens said no, "I just stood there and listened." Spectators in the courtroom laughed after his response.

Earlier Saturday, Dr. Harry Wilson, a pediatric pathologist from Texas Tech University School of Medicine at El Paso, told jurors Yates hid from her older children that she was drowning the younger ones, removed the bath mat from the tub to make it more difficult for her kids to escape and overcame their violent struggles to live.

"Based on her behavior and the organization it reflects, my opinion is she has an organized and logical mind," Wilson testified while under cross-examination from defense attorney Wendell Odom. "An organized and logical mind is a sane mind."

Odom then asked how Wilson could make that statement without any training in psychiatry or without reviewing the Houston mother's medical records.

"You're the one who asked me about her mind," Wilson replied after he repeatedly tried not to answer Odom's question about whether the doctor's conclusions about Yates' behavior June 20 meant she was legally sane at the time of the drownings.

Bond set at $250,000 for hit-and-run suspect

FORT WORTH (AP) — A judge on Friday raised bond to $250,000 for a nurse's aide charged with murder after a homeless man she hit died in her garage with his body lodged in her car's windshield.

Chante J. Mallard, 25, had been released on $10,000 bail after she was arrested Wednesday. But at a bond hearing Friday, prosecutors said that amount was too low.

"It is no secret that the community is outraged by the offense of the defendant ... and I'd remind the court this is a murder charge," said Richard Alpert, a Tarrant County assistant district attorney.

State District Judge James R. Wilson raised the amount and said Mallard must be under house arrest, wear an electronic monitor, continue counseling, avoid alcohol and undergo drug testing.

Wilson also imposed a gag order in the case.

Mallard is accused of slamming into a man along a Fort Worth highway near her house one night in October, then driving home with his head lodged in the broken windshield.

She ignored his cries for help as he bled to death over the next two days in her garage, police said. Her friends then dumped the stranger's body in a park, authorities said.

Mallard faces from five years to life in prison if convicted. Police say they expect more arrests in the case.

Gregory Glenn Biggs' body was found Oct. 27. Authorities suspected he had been hit by a car, but they had no leads until a tipster came forward last week.

The tipster told police that Mallard had been drinking and using drugs that night.

But Mike Heiskell, Mallard's attorney, said it is a case of failing to stop and render aid — not murder.

He asked the judge Friday to set the bond based on the case, not community outrage. He said previous bond was set by a "neutral and detached" magistrate.

Enron executive donates $10,000 to ex-worker fund

HOUSTON (AP) — One of the funds established to help laid-off Enron Corp. workers got a $10,000 boost this week from a company executive.

The donation from Dave Delaney, chairman and chief executive of Enron Energy Services, the company's retail energy management arm, "couldn't have come at a better time because we were running out of money," Rebekah Rushing, a former Enron worker who administers the fund, said Friday.

"It's our first contribution from an Enron executive," she said. "That's five or six more people we can help."

Delaney was on vacation Friday, according to Enron spokeswoman Karen Denne, and didn't return a message left at his home.

A native of Canada and graduate of the University of Saskatchewan, Delaney joined Enron in 1994 after working for Shell Canada as a natural gas marketer. He started as a similar marketter and trader for Enron and worked his way up to president and chief executive of the company's trading arm.

He took the helm of the retail arm, Enron Energy Services, when it was created in 1997. Denne said Delaney has been calling himself that unit's managing director rather than its chief executive officer since it filed for bankruptcy along with Enron Corp.

Rushing was among 4,500 Enron workers laid off in December after Enron filed the largest bankruptcy in U.S. history.

She quickly found a job with a Houston oil and gas exploration company, then set up the Enron Employee Relief Fund Account to take donations for other workers who weren't as lucky.

Her first big infusion was $68,857 from U.S. Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-New York. The money had been a campaign contribution from Enron.

Keith Grant

"From nursing to admitting, everyone at Covenant was great."

- Keith Monroe, Big Spring, Texas

After four years of blaming chronic leg and hip pain on a previous car accident, Keith Grant began suspecting he had a heart problem. He visited a Lubbock cardiologist and found out he had 100 percent blockage in the artery leading to his left leg. "They told him, had they not found it, he would have lost his leg," said his wife, Sharon. Using advanced techniques called radiation brachytherapy and gene therapy at Covenant Heart Institute, his cardiologist placed two stents in the artery as well as two more stents in other locations. "The cath lab was great. The nurse told me, 'I'm your nurse. I'm no one else's nurse; so if you need me, let me know.'" Today, Keith has a much easier time running his oil-field electrical business and enjoying fishing and motorcycle riding. "We got back years of our lives," Sharon said.

The 'Fro is back

Afro hairstyle a symbol of freedom, trendiness — again

CHICAGO (AP) — Rocker Lenny Kravitz sported one, round and full, on a recent cover of Ebony magazine. Basketball player Ben Wallace has been known to tie his up like a pineapple stalk, much to the amusement of his fans in Detroit.

The Afro, a hairstyle that shouted "black is beautiful" back in the day, is experiencing a revival among students, young professionals and celebrities — many of them black, others not.

For those born well after the civil rights movement, the decision to go naturally curly, and sometimes big and bold, is often more about being trendy than any big political or social statement. The trend fits right in with other popular "retro" styles from the 1960s and '70s, from bell bottoms to mutton chop sideburns.

But having an Afro can also be about self-expression, says William Humphrey, a master stylist at Loop Styles salon in suburban St. Louis. Today's Afros come in all shapes and sizes and sometimes incorporate braids, twists and beads.

"It's more of an accepted thing, but it's also kind of rebellious. It's, 'Now you're letting me do it, so I'm going to go all out with it,'" says Humphrey, who's getting more requests for Afros lately.

Several football players and even a few cheerleaders at Ferrum College in Virginia arrived at school last fall with Afros. And at a recent talk given by poet and activist Nikki Giovanni in Chicago, many young, black audience members had Afros and other hairstyles — like braids and dreadlocks — that don't require hair to be chemically straightened.

Jennifer Coates, a 23-year-old Chicagoan, says the trend made it easier for her to get a short Afro — and finally make peace with hair that, she believes, didn't look good long and straightened.

It's a decision that is an especially big deal for black women, she says. Many spend hundreds of dollars a month to get their hair straightened and softened — a ritual that some say is a misguided attempt to fit a white "ideal" of beauty.

"We accept that our bodies don't look the same. We accept that our facial features are often different. But our hair has been a hard thing," says Coates, a marketing professional who has given talks on images of black women in popular culture.

New Yorker Cheryl Bronson says that despite pressure from her family to blend in with straight hair, she opted last month to have about six inches of straightened hair cut off. Now she has an Afro, and says the decision has been very freeing.

"Not necessarily from societal restraints," she says, "but from my own personal hang-ups of what I should look like that were passed on to me from my family."

Even men sometimes feel the pressure.

Dante Dottin, who lives in Orange County, Calif., says he still gets grief from his wife about his Afro, but proclaims himself "happy to be nappy."

Humphrey says black people aren't the only ones who like the style. He has white and Hispanic customers, too.

And down in Houston, Ted Beam, who is white, sports a head of curly, six-inch locks. Many of his friends call his hair an Afro, though he thinks it's more "Afroesque."

"It's not the classic eight-ball shape," says Beam, a fourth-grade teacher and musician.

Cryogenically frozen 'Grandpa Bredo' honored in quirky festival

NEDERLAND, Colo. (AP) — The Grim Reaper led a parade float, obstacle-course contestants carried coffins and a frozen corpse was the main attraction.

By all accounts, the first Frozen Dead Guy Days festival was a lively affair.

The presence of Bredo Morstoe's cryogenically preserved body seemed a good enough reason for a two-day festival in this quirky little mining town trying to drum up winter tourism.

"Anything that makes us laugh is a good thing," said Mayor Jim Miller, popular in part because his campaign manager is a talking parrot named Jose.

Morstoe died in 1989 in Norway. His grandson, Trygve Bauge, had the body frozen and eventually brought it to Nederland, about 35 miles northwest of Denver, for storage. He had hoped that Morstoe could someday be revived or cloned.

Technology, unfortunately, has yet to catch up with Grandpa Bredo. Bauge was deported back to Norway in 1994 after his visa expired.

Since then, Bauge has paid $650 a month to Bo Shaffer to keep Morstoe's body on dry ice, at 90 degrees below zero. Shaffer admits he doesn't subscribe to Bauge's belief that Morstoe can be brought back.

"To me it's just a piece of meat," Shaffer said. "I know Bredo's off doing something else."

Local officials initially resisted having the body stored nearby, passing an ordinance against it. But it couldn't be applied retroactively.

Now people have warmed up to the idea.

Anyone who wanted to see Morstoe's resting place this weekend had to pay $25 and sign a waiver not to disclose the location of the shed where the corpse has been stored since 1993.

The only proof that Morstoe is actually inside the metal box is a picture of Bauge standing over the body just before the coffin was sealed, five days after Morstoe had died.

"I've seen that picture and Bredo doesn't look real good," Shaffer said.

The coffin hasn't been opened since then, and Shaffer said he's considered the possibility that Bauge, known to be an oddball, is just playing a monumental joke on everyone.

Still, several hundred people turned out for the town's macabre parade, featuring floats of coffins and a replica of Morstoe's shed.

In keeping with the frozen theme, there was a polar bear plunge into icy waters and coffin races, with entrants carrying elaborately designed caskets through an obstacle course.

Coahoma, Stanton, Forsan earn 3-2A all-district spots

By JOHN A. MOSELEY

Managing Editor

Coahoma and Stanton grabbed a large portion of the positions available when District 3-2A coaches met to select their all-district girls' basketball team.

While league champion and state-ranked Seagraves' Lady Eagles picked up most of the individual honors afforded on the team, Coahoma's Bulldogettes placed as many players on the first team as any school in the district.

The overall strength of the league was clear when Bulldogettes Crystal Atkinson, Kynzi Roberts and Karen Sterling earned first-team mention despite finishing fourth in the district standings, meaning the defending 3-2A champs were missing from the playoffs.

Stanton, which finished third behind Seagraves and Colorado City, placed Kristi Bridges and Heather Washington on the first team, while Forsan's Candice Gamble joined the other Crossroads area players on the first-team listing.

Seagraves' honorees were topped by Darrice Griffen, selected as the league's most valuable player, while younger sisters Darchelle Griffen was picked as the newcomer of the year. Colorado City's Kotia Russell was tabbed as defensive player of the year.

The remainder of the first team included Seagraves' Quneshia Griffen and Condra Wilson, Plains' Chelsea Blount and the Colorado City trio of Alison Lopez, Terri Pharris and Kassi Redwine.

Three other area players — Coahoma's Rachel Williams and the Stanton duo of Ashley Newell and Kynzi Williams — were second-team picks by the coaches.

They were joined on the second team by Seagraves' Erin Terrell and Sandy Rodriguez, Plains' Chelsi Wagnon and Mackenzie Winn and another trio of Colorado City players — Vanessa Quintero, Erica Grant and Karen Smith.

Taking no prisoners

Extra-base hitting, three-hit pitching fuel Lady Steers

By JOHN A. MOSELEY

Managing Editor

No prisoners.

That seemed to be the message Big Spring's Lady Steers delivered to the rest of the softball teams in District 4-4A Friday afternoon, as they made quick work of Frenship's Lady Tigers.

Some might have expected the Lady Steers to have fallen off a notch when two-time league MVP Christina Gwyn moved to the Dallas-Fort Worth area prior to her junior season.

Instead, the Lady Steers have opened district play with a pair of run rule romps — following Tuesday's 21-0 demolition of Lubbock Estacado with a 10-0 rout of the Lady Tigers.

Nothing really fancy, mind you. Big Spring simply took care of business in the most efficient manner possible.

With freshman Alex Watkins toeing the pitching rubber, Frenship managed a couple of one-out singles in the first inning, but that would be the one and only time the Lady Tigers had a chance to score.

When Watkins closed the door with a strike out and a fly ball out, it was clearly a matter of time before Big Spring would take control.

It took another inning before the Lady Steers would get their timing against Frenship's Kristina Day, but when they did, it was impressive.

Watkins got things going in the bottom of the second with a lead-off double to center field and scored moments later when Lady Tigers catcher Amanda Milam fielded a sacrifice bunt by Bridget Cain and overthrew first base.

The Big Spring lead improved to 2-0 when Trista Casey doubled to left, plating Cain.

Those two doubles were the first of 12 Big Spring hits during the five-inning affair. They were also the first of seven extra-base hits the Lady Steers would provide.

"We've been working on our hitting," Lady Steers head coach Dan Arista said following the win that improved Big Spring's record to 8-7 on the season but a perfect 2-0 in 4-4A play. "I've been trying a lot of different things, but I think we've settled on what works for us ... we're going against a lot more live pitching in practice than we used to and it's made a difference."

But perhaps the real difference has been the Lady Steers' collective attitude, Arista said.

"We have our fun, but when we step out on the field, we've got our mind on the business at hand," he explained. "We showed that today. We walked out there and stayed focused. We had a couple of errors, but they were mistakes in execution, not mental errors. And neither one of those errors hurt us because we were all business out there."

Watkins allowed just one more hit, while finishing the game with seven strikeouts.

Meanwhile, the Lady Steers padded their lead in the third inning when Erica Stewart, Leina Braxton and Laura Olague hit back-to-back-to-back one-out singles. A throwing error following Braxton's hit allowed Stewart to score, and another following Olague's safety make it 4-0 in Big Spring's favor.

The best was yet to come for Lady Steers fans, however.

With two gone in the bottom of the fourth, Big Spring began to nail the coffin shut.

Nicole Chesworth doubled to left to get the two-out rally started. Whitney Hufford, who'd been frustrated in two previous trips to the plate ended in deep fly outs to left, homered to left-center field.

Stewart followed with a single up the middle, setting the stage for Braxton to send a towering shot out of the park in dead center.

"Actually, I was just trying to make contact," Braxton said of her home run. "Everybody was hitting and I was just trying to get the bat on the ball solidly. She just gave me a pitch I could drive."

That would be all Lady Tigers coaches could stand, taking May out of the pitching circle and inserting Kira Carnell in her place.

Carnell managed to get out of the inning after giving up a single to Olague, but was quickly in trouble at the outset of the fifth inning.

Cain led off the frame with a double down the left field line and scored when Casey came up with her second double of the game to left.

A misguided attempt to throw out Casey at second on the play proved to close the game, when Lady Tigers shortstop Cristi Cliff's throw sailed past second base and rolled to the fence, allowing Casey to score the game-ending run easily.

The Lady Steers travel to Snyder on Tuesday for a 1 p.m. game.

Kansas pounds Raiders

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bob Knight didn't offer a complicated explanation for his worst defeat in four years.

"It was very simple," he said. "We were beaten by a much better team. We were tired from the beginning."

Drew Gooden had 16 points and 21 rebounds, and freshman Aaron Miles had 15 assists as No. 1 Kansas dominated from the start and beat Knight's resurgent Texas Tech 90-50 in the semifinals of the Big 12 tourney Saturday.

Gooden's rebounds and Miles' assists were tournament records.

It was the biggest margin of defeat for a Knight-coached team since Indiana lost to Michigan 112-64 in February 1998.

"We could have let down," said Gooden, who by halftime already had his 21st double-double of the season. "But I've never won a tournament championship here and I want to win it all."

The Jayhawks (29-2) were up 83-35 with about 7 minutes left — their biggest lead — when coach Roy Williams pulled most of his starters.

Kansas has won 15 straight games.

"Needless to say, we played very well," said Williams, who improved to 7-1 against Knight. "This was Tech's third game in the past three days and I think the fatigue factor just caught up with them. We were still pretty fresh, and everything turned positive for us, and everything turned negative for them."

Texas Tech (23-8) made only 19 of 70 shots. Andre Emmett and Andy Ellis — the Red Raiders' leading scorers throughout this turnaround season — were a combined 0-of-15 from the field and both went scoreless.

Typical of the Jayhawks' dominance was a play midway through the second half. Gooden rebounded a Tech miss and dished off to Miles, who threw a nearly full-court pass to Nick Collison, who dunked for a 75-30 lead.

A moment later, Kansas' Kirk Hinrich hit an uncontested 3-pointer.

The Jayhawks, the nation's highest-scoring team, seized a 25-9 lead by hitting 11 of their first 14 shots.

"You've really got to work and work against Kansas," Knight said. "You become concerned about stopping their break. Then you're concerned about stopping the post scoring, and you forget about the emphasis you have to put on movement to get open. They're the best team we've faced this year."

Nothing Knight's team tried seemed to work. Hinrich stole an inbound pass under Kansas' basket and made a nifty bounce pass to Wayne Simien for an uncontested layup and a 27-11 lead.

Then the rout really got started. After Kasib

Dream match a mismatch as Lincoln wins 4A crown

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The dream matchup turned out to be a mismatch. Chris Bosh scored 21 points and Dallas Lincoln defeated defending champion Beaumont Ozen 71-51 Saturday to win the Class 4A state championship and stake a claim to a mythical high school national title.

Rail-thin compared to the hulking Perkins, Bosh moved away from the basket to shoot over his rival for eight first-half points and slashed his way in for six rebounds. Lincoln led 28-25 after two quarters. It wouldn't stay close for long. Lincoln pushed the lead to nine again with an 8-2 run highlighted by Bosh's dunk in transition.

left that set up the winning free throws. Curtis Morgan led Kountze (34-5) with 15 points Saturday. Gainesville was all show-time with five dunks in a semifinal win over Aransas Pass but looked much tighter at the start of the title game. The Leopards missed their first four shots and had five turnovers in falling behind 11-2 in the first quarter, causing coach Hosea Lea to sub out his entire lineup during one timeout.

Steers thinclads finish fifth at West Texas Relays in Odessa

HERALD Staff Report

ODESSA — Big Spring's Steers managed to gather 58 points and finish fifth in the teams standings Saturday at the West Texas Relays.

The Steers' only first-place finish came in the 100 meters where Brandon Mendoza motored to a time of 10.9 seconds.

In what has become somewhat of a standard, most of Big Spring's points came in the distance events where Daniel Garza finished second in the 1,600 meters with a time of 4:46.0 and was third in the 3,200 meters with a 10:30 clocking.

Jacob Marquez added fourth place in the 1,600 with a 4:49.0 clocking and matched that finish in the 800 meters with a time of 2:06.0. Andy Cuellar added fifth-place points in the 3,200 meters.

Big Spring enjoyed limited success in Friday's field events competition, where Kyland Wegner finished fourth in the pole vault with a leap of 11 feet, 6 inches. Adam Partee added fourth place in the discus with a 126-foot toss and was fifth in the shot put with a heave of 41 feet.

In addition to Mendoza's win in the 100, Steers sprinters got a sixth-place finish from Josh Pedigo in the 200 meters when he was clocked at 24.4 and a sixth in the 400 meters when Pat Gonzales crossed the tape with a time of 54.0 seconds.

Jared Phillips added a fourth-place finish in the 110-meter high hurdles with a clocking of 17.0 seconds.

Big Spring's chance to move higher in the team standings went by the wayside when they were unable to complete a baton exchange in the 400-meter relay.

However, the 1,600-meter relay team of Gonzales, David Garza, Marquez and Mendoza was able to motor to a 3:38.0 clocking, earning them third place.

The Steers now take a week off for spring break before returning to action the weekend of March 22-23 when they compete in the San Angelo Relays.

Weir, Wetterich tied for the lead at Honda Classic

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — The greens were soft, the palm trees were steady and the TPC at Heron Bay was perfect for scoring Saturday.

Mike Weir and Brett Wetterich were tied for the lead at 14 under when the third round of the Honda Classic was halted because of darkness. Weir completed 10 holes and Wetterich 11.

Twenty-four others, including Fred Couples and Phil Mickelson, were within four strokes of the lead.

Play will resume Sunday morning, and the final round will start shortly after the third round is completed.

Heavy rain fell on the course Thursday, leaving dozens of players with more than 18 holes to play Friday and Saturday.

The weather also left the course with soft greens that yielded several low scores.

Scoring was made even easier Saturday when Heron Bay's lone defender — strong, steady wind — took a day off.

Only five of 71 players were over par in the third round when it was suspended at 6:30 p.m. EST.

Second-round leader John Riegger, 1997 U.S. Open champion Matt Kuchar, rookie Stephen Gangloff and 1988 Honda Classic champion Joey Sindelar were tied at 13 under.

Kuchar (6-under 66) and Gangloff (65) were among the 21 golfers who completed the third round.

Riegger had a share of the lead after eight holes, but his tee shot on the tough, par-4 No. 18 found the water. He bogeyed the hole to fall a stroke behind of the leaders.

Weir, a left-handed Canadian, shot a 65 in the second round and was one stroke behind Riegger as the third round began Saturday afternoon.

Playing in the same group as Riegger, Weir took the lead after consecutive birdies on Nos. 11 and 12.

Riegger, winless in 115 tour events and still looking for his first top-10 finish in five full seasons on the PGA Tour, pulled even with a birdie at No. 14.

Defending champion Jesper Parnevik, 17-year-old Ty Tryon and Southern sensation Boo Weekley missed the cut, which tied the tournament record at 4-under 140.

Wetterich earned his tour card at qualifying school in 2001, but missed most of last season with a wrist injury.

He received a medical extension that allows him to compete on tour this year, but he must make $383,901 in his first 19 events to become exempt for the rest of the season.

Wetterich missed the cut in each of the five events he entered so far.

Geography plays role in NCAA picks

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — When the NCAA tournament bracket is released today, it will have the familiar interlocking lines ready for the names of teams advancing toward the Final Four.

The big difference will be geography.

Chicago could be part of the West, Sacramento part of the Midwest.

A first- and second-round site could have two No. 1 seeds playing there, while some venues may be without a No. 1 or No. 2 seed.

Some lower-seeded teams might even be staying close to home.

Welcome to the 2002 NCAA tournament, where change and flexibility are the rule, not the exception.

"The teams on the first line will stay in their region and then we'll put them in the actual pods," tournament selection committee chairman Lee Fowler said this week. "If there is any way we can keep them closer to home, we'll do that, too."

The selection committee can achieve that goal because of a rule change this summer intended to limit travel in the early rounds.

In the past, eight teams have been placed into each of the eight subregionals. This year, the committee will place four teams into each "pod" and place two pods at each site. The teams then move on the next weekend to their assigned regionals.

It is the second major change to the tournament in two seasons. Last year, the committee added a 65th team and set up a Tuesday game between the final two teams qualifying for the tournament. The winner advances to a first-round matchup against a No. 1 seed.

This year, the change is a little more confusing.

With the added flexibility, the committee could place No. 1 seeds from two regions in a site such as Chicago, while a site such as Albuquerque may be left without a top seed.

Fowler believes the changes will make the tournament more affordable and attractive to fans.

"That could happen, where there's not a No. 1 or No. 2 seed at a site," Fowler said. "But the good thing under the new system is that they would have more teams with local interest or conference interest playing at their site."

The change was made after last season when three teams from the Washington, D.C., area — Georgetown, Maryland and George Mason — and Hampton, which is from southern Virginia, all were sent to Boise, Idaho for the first and second rounds.

There will be other changes, too.

Bob Knight likely will return to the tournament, this time in a black sweater with Texas Tech. North Carolina likely will not after going 8-19 in the regular season to end the record string of 27 consecutive appearances, a run that began in 1975. The second-longest streak is also current, Arizona's 17 straight.

Also missing will be Nolan Richardson, who won the 1994 national championship with Arkansas. His contract was bought out last week and his Razorbacks ended with a 14-15 record and won't make the tournament either.

But as much as things change, some things remain the same — such as the controversy over at-large selections.

After opening the season 13-0 and cracking the AP's Top 25 for the first time in 53 years, Butler finished 25-5 after losing in the opening round of the Horizon League tournament — putting the Bulldogs among those teams waiting for their fate on Sunday.

Ball State, which opened the season by beating UCLA and Kansas on consecutive nights at the Maui Invitational, entered the Mid-American Conference tournament with a 19-10 record. Did the Cardinals have to win the automatic bid to get in or can the MAC get two teams in the field?

"I think any quality wins are important, whenever they come," said Fowler, the athletic director at North Carolina State. "Good wins are good wins, whether you get them early or get them late."

Even old standards, such as 20 wins, might not be enough to warrant a bid, in Fowler's opinion.

"I've been on this committee for four years and a lot of teams with 20 wins don't get in," Fowler said. "I'd definitely say that just because you have 20 wins, you're not necessarily going to get in."

But the biggest controversy could come from the NCAA's new rule and keeping teams closer to home.

Pittsburgh, for instance, is a first- and second-round site. The Panthers are ranked No. 7 this week and could end up with a No. 3 seed and still play in Pittsburgh.

Other teams, such as Illinois-Chicago, which won the Horizon League tournament this week, could wind up in a similar situation since Chicago is a first-round site.

Fowler said the committee will try to avoid such anomalies as placing a team such as Loyola, likely to be among the bottom seeds, virtually at home.

The intention was to keep teams near home, not at home. But Fowler believes the changes will work properly and that fans will see that Sunday night.

"We, hopefully, will not allow that to happen, where you have a homecourt for a lower-seeded team," Fowler said.

Academy past Frankston 49-48 Saturday for the Class 2A state championship.

Frankston had taken a 48-46 lead on Chad Donnell's layup with 57 seconds left. Academy got within one when Brad Anderson hit one of two free throws.

Frankston's Vance Dallas then missed the front end of a 1-and-1 free throw situation before Academy set up for Barganier's winning shot. After a timeout, Barganier took the inbounds pass and ran down the clock before driving the lane. The shot rolled once around the rim before falling in.

Barganier finished with 23 points, eight rebounds and five assists and scored 10 of Academy's final 13 points. Anderson added 20 points for Academy (33-3).

Cox scored 18 points but committed his fifth foul on the play that sent Anderson to the line. Jonathan Dingle had 15 points and 10 rebounds for Frankston (32-6).

Both teams blazed through the first quarter with six 3-pointers. Dingle hit three in row and scored 13 of his team's first 15 points. Anderson hit two 3s in the period for Academy.

In the second, Cox hit two more 3s and Anderson hit another as Frankston led 23-19 before things finally cooled off. Frankston went scoreless the rest of the half and Lance Williams' layup off a steal with one second left made it 23-23 at half-time.

Frankston's Donnell, who had 26 points in a semifinal win over Olney, had just two shots and no points in the half as Academy collapsed its defense to put two or three players on him every time he touched the ball.

Frankston held the biggest lead at 38-31 with 6:12 to play before Academy closed the gap with 7-0 behind a 3-pointer by Bill Volney, his only basket of the game.

Class 1A Texas Cup
Brock 70, Nazareth 50

David Farmer scored 23 points as Brock rolled past Nazareth 70-50 Saturday in the Texas Cup, matching the title won by the school's girls team a week ago.

The Brock girls also beat Nazareth 46-38 in the girls' Texas Cup and Brock fans were chanting "sweep, sweep" by the end of the boys' game.

Jace Walker added 19 points for the Eagles (32-7). The 1A Division I champions hit 10 3-pointers and held Nazareth to just 31 percent shooting.

Eric Schilling had 12 points and 16 rebounds for 1A Division II champion Nazareth (26-4) despite missing most of the first half with foul trouble. Kade Wilcox led the Swifts with 14 points.

Schilling's foul problems severely limited Nazareth's scoring punch and the Swifts never recovered from a big early deficit.

After scoring 26 points in Thursday's Division II championship against Goodrich, Schilling picked up three fouls in the first four minutes and went the bench for the rest of the half. The teams combined for 20 fouls with physical play in the first two quarters.

With Schilling out, Brock went up 18-12 on Farmer's consecutive 3-pointers. The Eagles outscored Nazareth 16-4 in the second to go up 32-16 by halftime. Brock shot 52 percent in the first half while Nazareth was just 7-of-30.

Schilling returned in the third but badly missed two 3-pointers on his first two shots. Farmer hit another 3, Walker hit from long range and Dustin Whitley converted a fast break layup for a 42-20 lead.

Brock pushed the lead as high as 65-34 in the fourth.

Celebrating education in public schools

By ANDREA MEDLIN

They dove in, dressed up, put ignorance in the dark and claimed war on TAAS in celebration of Texas Public Schools Week.

Area schools also invited parents to attend open houses, to have pastries in the morning or lunch with their child.

These events provide public schools an opportunity to show the positive aspects of the school and the education our children are receiving.

The week began March 4th with a breakfast for educators hosted by area Masonic Lodges.

The schools celebrated in a variety of ways throughout the week including western days — when children and faculty could dress in western attire, red, white and blue day — to show patriotism, dive into... with different themes at participating schools including sidewalk ocean art or Just Say No T-shirt day.

There was Texas Trivia day, No Pass, No Play Day — students and teachers wore a favorite sport or college shirt to recognize how important education is even in sports, tie day, hat and/or sunglasses day — to put ignorance in the dark, spirit day and even a day to declare war on TAAS.

Several book fairs were held, puppet shows, assemblies and music rounded out the week. Texas Public Schools Week was begun in the 1850s by the Masons.

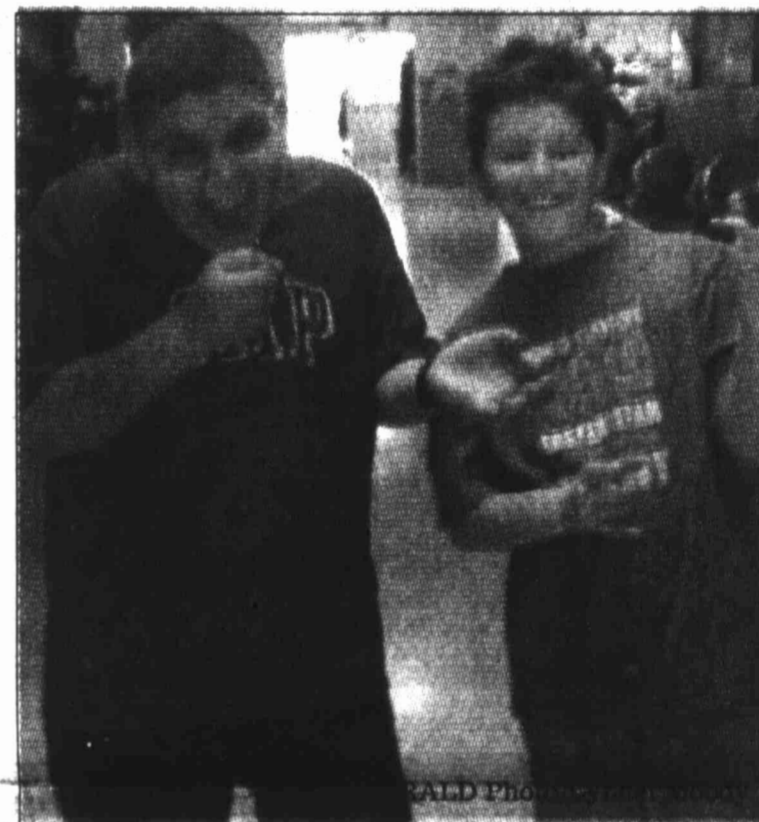

Their president, Mirabeau B.

Lamar, who is known as the father of Texas education, was also president of the Republic of Texas.

A far cry from the one room classes held in churches with the children and faculty having to use outdoor facilities in the 1850s, most schools now have state of the art equipment, central air and heat, restaurant style dining and Internet access.

These photos represent just a few of the myriad of activities the schools participated in over the past week.

The week not only provided an opportunity for parents to get involved in their children's education, but also gave the teachers and students a chance to showcase their style, educational processes and creativity.

Sensitive people unite! There's always a time and place for tears

There's always a time and place for tears. As I kid was a regular "bawl baby," according to my best friend's mother. What she meant by this unflattering moniker was that I was overly sensitive. I cried easily.

I could be reduced to tears by things my friends naturally shrugged off — boys making fun of my too-short haircut, kids throwing rocks at a stray dog on the playground. At times I was so prone to tears my mother told the school I had severe allergies so I could head to the nurse's office in case of an "attack."

My parents always said there was a time and place for tears, but I guess I thought just about any time, anyplace would work. Thankfully as the years went by, it got a lot better. I grew out of it somewhat, and working in journalism sure helped me harden my shell. I learned to try understand people and their actions without getting involved.

I never lost my sensitive side, though. I was reminded of this recently, when I took my stepdaughter to see the movie, "A Walk to Remember." OK, the critics called this high-school love story a sap-fest, and it was. Even Carissa, 12, guffawed at a few serious points. But there I was, blubbering behind my ski jacket. Hey, I'm sensitive, remember?

Sure, my eyes water at a well-crafted commercial. Church services can bring on sobbing if the hymns are good. And sometimes, there's nothing like a cheesy made-for-TV movie and a box of tissues.

Now I have been blessed with a sensitive daughter. Even at age 3, we can see the signs. Other kids had "separation anxiety." She had "separation horror." For a long time, she might crumple to the floor if a stranger looked at her, never mind actually speaking to her.

I got all kinds of advice from other people who observed this behavior.

She needed to be "broken," one woman told me. My husband, who is not sensitive, joked that we could get a cattle prod. (Are we living on a ranch here or what?)

Of course, sensitivity is not all negative. Hannah's always the champion of the downtrodden, even if it's just a talking asparagus on one of her favorite videos. I'll catch her out of the corner of my eye, watching the one she's seen a hundred times, her hand over her mouth, her eyes wide in exaggerated fear. Will the mermaid conquer the octopus and save the world?

And sometimes it's downright strange. At supper, she stands a carrot upright in ranch dip and sighs, "Look at the sad mountain." We roll our eyes. Will this sensitivity never end?

It will probably get better, but I don't think it will ever end. And that's fine.

I don't mind if she breaks into tears at a few inopportune times. I expect it, and I'm sure we can deal with it.

Because after all, where would the world be without us sensitive types? OK, so we're not all poets, and some of us will just end up writing those sappy movies. But you have to admit, when you feel like the world is poised against you, it's a sensitive friend that can make you feel better.

My friend Tom Koger is sensitive, too. He's not afraid to admit it, and he's sure not afraid to let anyone see him cry. He's a former football coach, now a Presbyterian lay preacher, a career where being sensitive could come in handy.

I've seen him teary-eyed plenty of times.

And it's why a few years ago, when I was planning Hannah's baptism ceremony, I asked him to take part. I knew this day was going to be sponsored by Kleenex.

Tom, of course, agreed, and I still choke up when I look at the pictures.

And someday, Hannah probably will, too.

Fort Worth's Kimbell showcases works by Spanish painter Murillo

FORT WORTH (AP) — Once adorning the walls of monasteries, cathedrals and palaces, works of the 17th century painter who embodied the golden age of Spanish art are featured in a two-city U.S. exhibit.

Nearly three dozen of Bartolome Esteban Murillo's oil paintings, on loan from some of the nation's premier museums and private collections, are displayed at the Kimbell Art Museum through June 16.

"Murillo is someone who's a fabulous artist and was tremendously popular in his own time and several centuries later," said Nancy Edwards, the museum's curator of European art. "There's never been an exhibit devoted just to Murillo in the United States, so we decided this would be a good time."

The 34-piece exhibit goes next to the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

Murillo (1617-1682) was a devout Roman Catholic who lived in Seville, where he worked primarily for churches and monasteries. The San Francisco del Grande commissioned him to paint 11 canvases in 1645, his first major project, and the art was displayed outdoors at the monastery for more than 150 years.

Most of Murillo's paintings are large — such as the 9-by-6-foot "Saint John the Baptist Pointing to Christ" — with life-size subjects who show high emotion. Murillo wanted viewers to identify with biblical events and characters, according to art critics.

"Murillo's career was to make painted images have a visionary presence to them," said Malcolm Warner, the Kimbell's senior curator. "You can almost imagine them coming to life."

Museum patrons can compare Murillo's evolving style in two versions of "Virgin of the Immaculate Conception."

Murillo used light and dark colors to contour, a naturalistic style evident in the "Virgin" he painted early in his career, around 1655-60. His 1680 painting has a softer and looser brushwork, which some 19th century critics called

"vaporoso." The exhibit includes several pieces depicting Jesus' crucifixion, including "Christ Carrying the Cross," "Christ on the Cross" and "Christ after the Flagellation, Consoled by Angels." The paintings were meant to evoke feelings of meditation, worship and devotion, Warner said.

Murillo, the first president of Seville's first art academy, used his vast drawing experience when he painted the human body in various realistic poses, such as the muscular images of Christ in the crucifixion pieces, Edwards said.

Other well-known Murillo works are "Two Women at a Window" and "Four Figures on a Step," the only Murillo painting in the exhibit owned by the Kimbell. Murillo gained acclaim for these secular works depicting everyday life, showing a Dutch influence on his painting, Edwards said.

The exhibit includes two of Murillo's five works on the biblical story of Jacob — each about 7-by-12-foot — for the palace of Marquese de Villamanrique. After a disagreement with another artist who was to paint the landscape portion of the pieces, Murillo painted all the lavishly detailed scenes. The other paintings now are in museums in Russia and Ireland.

"Unlike artists of today who pride themselves on being independent, for Murillo and other artists, what they did depended on commissions," Warner said. "Murillo's idea in life was to please the people who paid him and to give them what they wanted."

The pieces in the exhibit are on loan from private collections and museums, including the National Gallery of Art, Washington; Museum of Fine Arts, Boston; Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Richmond; Cincinnati Art Museum; The Cleveland Museum of Art; The Hispanic Society of America, New York; Timken Museum of Art, San Diego; and Southern Methodist University's Meadows Museum, Dallas.

What to call grandparents is a name game

WACO — A new grandchild's on the way. Time to pick a name. No, not a name for the baby a name for the grandparents.

Will it be the traditional "grandma and grandpa," names like "Granny Lou and Granddaddy Bob," or cultural references such as "Oma and Opa" or "Abuelo and Abuela?"

Grandparents say deciding what their grandchildren will call them is one of the most important decisions they'll ever make.

Some grandparents bicker about it long before the baby is born. Some choose names and stick to them, while others let parents or even grandkids decide once they start talking. However it happens, the names chosen tend to stick with them for the rest of their lives.

"It's actually a really big decision they all have to make," said Sam Brown, whose wife, Nicki, gave birth to their first child, Samantha, in September.

In the Browns' case, the grandparents told them what they wanted to be called. Nicki's parents, Sharon and Wayne Lee, would be called "Nanna" and "Pop," and his parents, Pat and Doug Brown, would be called "Grammy" and "Papa."

"We had ideas they didn't go for," Sam Brown said. "My mom was toying around with 'Oma,' (German for grandmother since they're of German heritage.) I was actually surprised she didn't want that because I thought it was cool. Nicki's father joked that he just wanted to be called 'Mr. Lee.'"

Clare and Robert Paul, who have a 5-year-old son, Joseph, and a 2-month-old daughter, Elisabeth, did go with the German pronunciation for Robert's parents, who are of German descent.

"We sort of initiated it, but they liked the idea," Clare Paul said. "It was real easy for (Joseph) to learn and say that."

But pronunciation hasn't been a problem for the 5-year-old. He started calling his other grandparents "Grandfather" and "Grandmother" when he was 2 years old, even though his parents called them "Grandma" and "Grandpa."

"I don't know why he started that," she said, "but they went along with it." Nan Brown, a Waco grandmother (unrelated to Sam and Nicki Brown), said she had called her grandmother "Mama" and had always thought that's what she wanted to be called. But when her first grandson was born 16 years ago, his other grandparents had already been named "Mama Lou" and "Daddy Keith" by their other grandkids. She knew nothing with "Mama" and "Daddy" would work for her and her husband.

"We thought, well, we'll just play it by ear," she said. But then they got the idea to turn her name, Nan, into "Nanny." Her husband became "Papa." They now have four grandchildren, including a newborn, and they expect all of them to call them by the same name.

Throwing out underwear may be sign of other problems

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from "Illinois Son," whose parents threw away his "perfectly fine" underwear. You suggested he do his own laundry and said his parents' behavior was strange. I think you may have overlooked something in your response.

ANN LANDERS

"I'll bet that underwear was less perfect than he told you. Men seem to think their underwear is fine as long as it doesn't fall apart. If my mother found a hole in one of my father's undershirts, she would put her finger in the hole and rip the garment in half. She said it was the only way to be certain those undershirts were never worn again. Throwing them in the trash didn't work. I have tossed out my husband's ragged underwear, only to have him retrieve it from the garbage and put it back in the dresser drawer.

Men never understand that something can no longer be fit to wear. My husband howled when I destroyed his beloved undershirt that had stains under the arms and holes in the back. He said there was nothing wrong with it. I suspect "Illinois Son's" underwear was beyond repair, but he needed someone to point it out to him. — Miami, Fla.

Dear Miami: You may be right. I had a flurry of mail about that son and his underwear, and most readers agreed with you. Here's more:

Dear Ann: You recently printed a letter from "Illinois Son," whose elderly parents threw out his underwear. You told him to keep an eye on his parents because such behavior might indicate dementia.

My grandmother did many peculiar things. She hid food all over the house, wore almost 20 pounds of jewelry, and folded and put away soiled clothes. We knew her behavior was odd, but thought it was nothing to worry about. We humored her. Then she entered the next stage, which included paranoia, threats, hysteria and calling the neighbors to claim her family was starving her. She had a complete personality overhaul of frightening proportions.

You were wise to suggest "Illinois Son" watch his parents more closely. There is medication available that may hold off the onset of Alzheimer's disease, if taken early enough. Believe me, it's worth it. — Grandson in Canton, Mich.

Dear Grandson: Thank you for the support. Here is a letter that is more representative of the mail I've been getting:

Dear Ann: What on earth were you thinking, Ann? There is no reason a 42-year-old, unemployed man should be living with his parents, expecting his 80-something-year-old mother do his laundry. He should be doing HER laundry. In fact, he should be doing all the laundry, all the shopping, all the cooking, all the cleaning and all the yardwork. It's the least he can do.

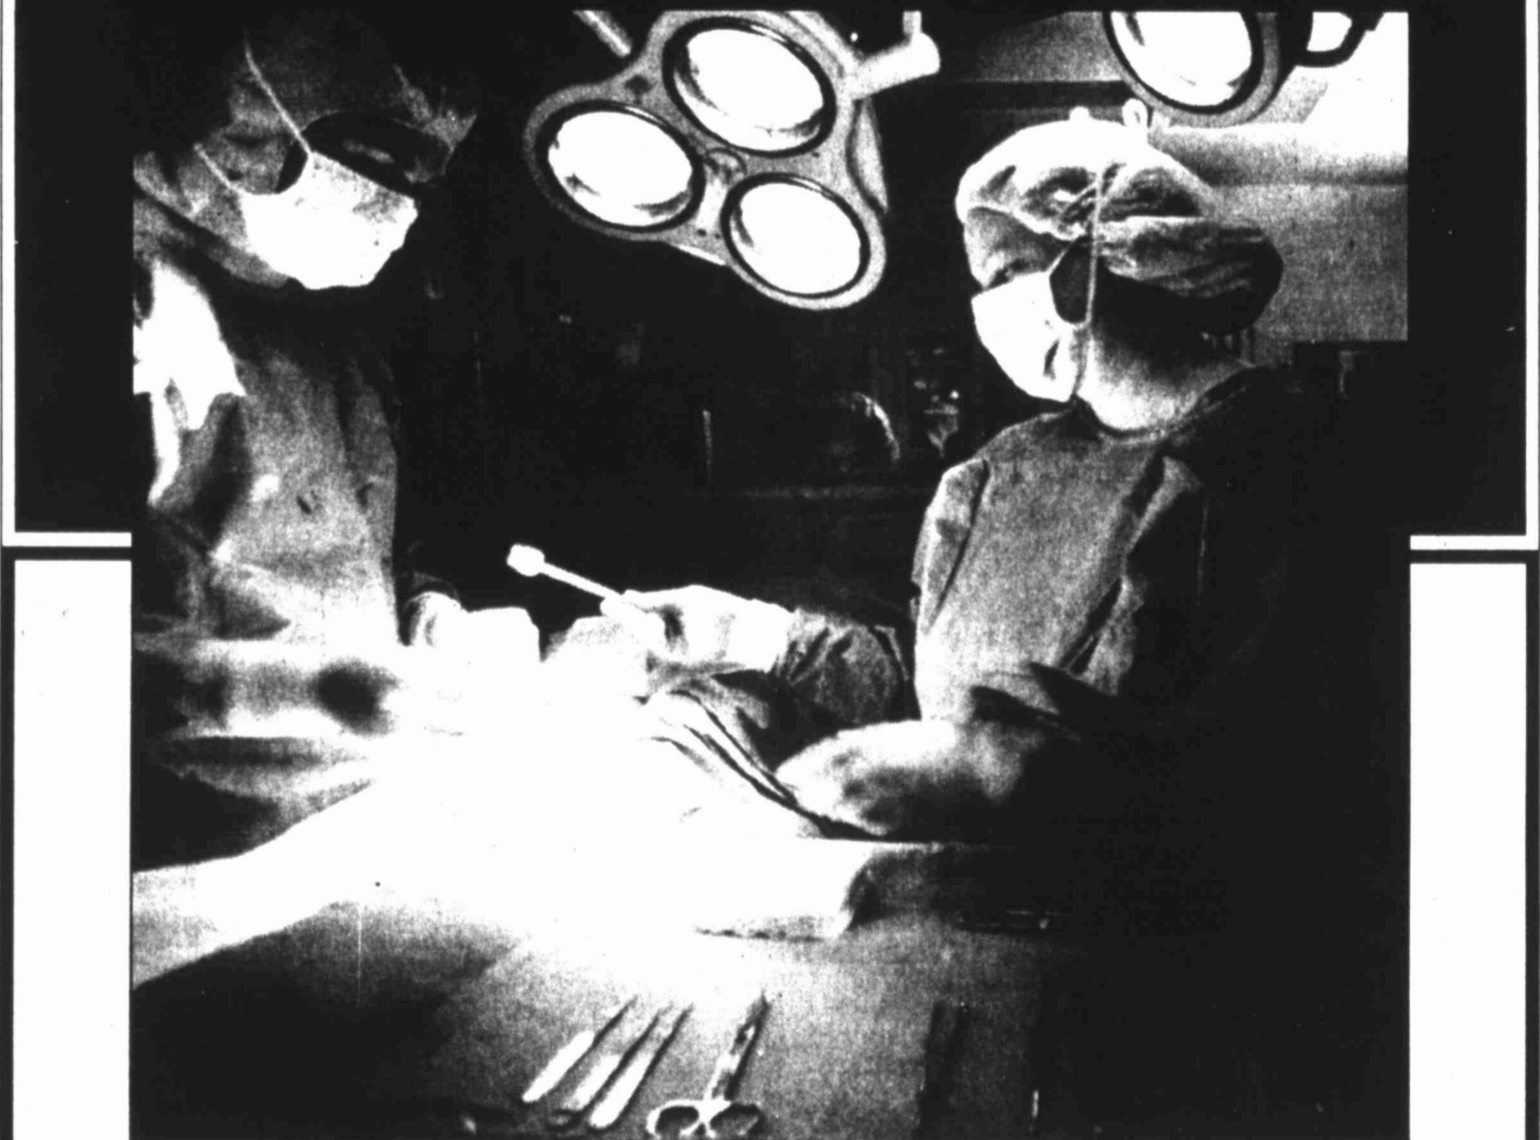

I suspect his parents tossed out the underwear as a hint for him to find other accommodations. They should be having a nice vacation someplace warm instead of supporting him and taking care of his every need. — Flabbergasted in Chapel Hill, N.C.

Dear Flabbergasted: You are right. There is no reason a 42-year-old man should not be doing his own laundry and helping out around the house. Nevertheless, parents should not be throwing out their adult child's belongings without his knowledge or permission. Such controlling behavior suggests there are other problems that need attention.

Insurance commissioner approves new option for homeowners

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Insurance on Friday approved a new type of insurance policy for State Farm that the department says will allow some customers to make substantial savings while giving them more choices.

The all-risk policy, called HO-W, allows customers to tailor their coverage to their individual needs, Insurance Commissioner Jose Montemayor said.

It also will provide reduced coverage for water damage including mold repair, with an option to purchase mold remediation coverage at various levels. Consumers also can get limited coverage for foundation repair.

A consumer advocate blasted the policy, saying the savings it offers are "nothing more than a shell game in which the losers are Texas homeowners."

"The fact of the matter is there ought to be reductions in rates because there are significant reductions in coverage," said Texas Watch executive director Dan Lambe.

Gov. Rick Perry held a news conference Friday to tout the plan as a way to lower homeowner insurance rates and increase consumer choice.

He began discussing the issue publicly last month, noting that insurance premiums were increasing from 14 percent to 200 percent for Texas homeowners.

In addition to the rising prices, two of the big three insurance companies have stopped offering the comprehensive coverage for new customers, and the third has stopped offering it for new or existing customers.

While the insurance department said some State Farm Lloyds customers could see their rates drop from as much as 40 percent, State Farm said only that some policy holders will see a premium reduction.

Others, the company said, will experience an increase in their annual premiums because of rate increases implemented in November 2001 and February 2002 that have may not yet been added to their policies.

The new Texas policy is the same policy State Farm offers to homeowners nationwide.

Lambe said Texas homeowners do not have the same needs as someone who lives in New York City or Seattle.

The HO-B policy addressed those needs by providing for things such as gun collections and water damage, he said.

"As much as we'd like to think that we need an insurance policy that's unique to Texas, the fact of the matter is that the state's existing policy provides insurance coverage for items that in almost every other state are considered a property owner's maintenance responsibility," Dodd said.

Existing State Farm homeowners insurance policyholders will begin receiving notices in July.

New TxDOT engineer 'on the job'

Martin Co. native mulls key projects around area

By ROGER CLINE

Staff Writer

The Big Spring area has a new Texas Department of Transportation engineer.

Roy Dill, a native of Stanton, comes to Big Spring from the Odessa area office. The nine-year TxDOT veteran has been on the job since March 1, and was officially welcomed at a reception Friday.

Dill spent his TxDOT tenure before moving to Big Spring in the Odessa district and area offices, he said.

Prior to going to work for TxDOT, he worked for an Oklahoma company designing floating structures.

He graduated from Howard College in 1983 and transferred to Texas Tech, where he received his bachelor of science degree in civil engineering.

Several major road projects are in the works for Big Spring, including the rebuilding of the U.S. Highway 87/FM 700 intersection, and the Highway 87 truck reliever route to the west of town.

"This office will be handling the design and construction for those projects," Dill said. "The FM 700 project has already been designed. We start construction, I believe, next month."

Dill is also handling the day-to-day routine maintenance jobs in his area, which includes Howard, Scurry and Mitchell counties.

"We've got several ongoing projects," he said. "The U.S. 87 rehabilitation project north of town here. We've got a bridge project we're repainting over in Colorado City that started up this week. We've got several jobs that are routine maintenance, doing small bridge repairs, bridge joints, that sort of thing."

But the truck reliever route is the biggest project in the near future.

"The biggest one is probably going to be the reliever route," he said. "That's got a lot of interest in it, and it's a big impact for Big Spring. Right now, the overall cost is estimated at $50 million. It's going to basically be done in a couple of sections"

The first section will cost about $15 million to complete, he said, and will route the truck traffic around Big Spring to the west, connecting Interstate 20 west of town with Highway 87 south of town.

"It will probably be about two years before we can even get into construction on it," Dill said. "We hope within about six months to have another public meeting about it."

Federal standards change for importing Mexican cattle

Effective April 1, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has raised health standards for importing Mexican feeder cattle in order to protect U.S. animals from tuberculosis (TB), a bacterial infection that can cause internal lesions in the lungs, lymph nodes or other internal organs. On April 1, feeder cattle (steers and spayed heifers) from Mexico will enter the U.S. under health regulations published more than a year ago.

Texas cattle producers import approximately a million Mexican feeders each year. On April 1, entry regulations for these animals will be tied directly to the prevalence of TB in their Mexican state of origin, or their region within a Mexican state.

Mexican feeder animals have offered excellent opportunities for cattle producers. Cattle TB, however, continues to be a problem in many Mexico states, and we must continue to assure that imported animals are properly tested for TB before they enter Texas.

The USDA agreed to grant waivers to the whole-herd test, if Mexican states could demonstrate sufficient progress in eradicating TB prior to April 2002.

During the past five months, USDA-sponsored teams have conducted in-depth TB status reviews in sixteen Mexican states with active TB eradication programs.

These rules are intended to protect the health of U.S. livestock. In the early 1990's, nearly 5 percent of U.S. cattle herds were infected with TB. More TB-lesioned cattle are being detected at slaughter, and ear tags indicate that many of these animals are of Mexican origin. Prior to pasteurization of heat treatment of milk, humans could contract the disease from infected cows. Today, human TB cases in the U.S.

are rarely, if ever, traced to the cattle form of the disease, due to a combination of slaughter surveillance, pasteurization of milk and disease eradication. The new federal requirements will advance the TB eradication effort by protecting all U.S. states that may receive Mexican cattle.

As of April, only feeder cattle — steers and spayed heifers — from a designated portion of Sonora, which borders Arizona, may be imported into the U.S. without a TB test because this area has an infection rate of less than one infected herd per 10,000.

As always, all Mexican cattle must be officially identified with a blue-ear tag imprinted with the name of its Mexican state. The animals must also be accompanied by a certificate of origin, which documents where the animals came from.
