Splash In planned Saturday at municipal pool

By ROGER CLINE
Staff Writer

It's cool and it's wet and it's free.

That's right, it's time once again for "Splash In," the municipal swimming pool's annual grand opening. The pool will offer free admission from 1 to 6 p.m. Saturday.

DARDEN

After the pool closes to the public, the city will hold its first Movie in the Park of the season, giving youngsters a dose of their favorite big green ogre and his talking donkey sidekick.

The pool actually opened for business Monday, but the city decided to hold the Splash In celebration later, said Public Works Director Todd Darden.

Darden added that work crews have been busy installing new features at the swimming pool.

"The city has purchased this year in the way of toys some float devices," he said. "One is a porpoise and one is a crab. We also purchased safety netting that goes up in the shallow end around the mushroom to help keep the small children out of the deep water."

The park also boasts some other new wet attractions.

"We also purchased what they call a 'Christmas Tree,'" he said. "It has several small spray devices built into the tree that will spray you or shower you or give you a fountain-like effect. We also bought two styles of waterfall. One's a barrel fall, it comes out of a straight four-inch piece of pipe.

"The other one's a curtain fall. It sprays a curtain about five feet wide out over the entrance to the deep end."

The Splash In event will include food vendors and a live broadcast by KBST.

The movie "Shrek" will be offered after dark at the Comanche Trail Amphitheater.

Relay 2003: The challenge begins

Who said Relay for Life was over?

Even as the event committee members announced current totals, team awards and spread a plethora of thank yous around at wrap-up party on Tuesday, several team captains proved the party was far from over.

"Her group (Martha Long team captain of Big Spring State Hospital Mind, Body, Soul) is already planning a fund-raiser," Gloria McDonald, Relay for Life committee member, told the crowd of more than 60 attending the celebration as she handed a team picture to Long.

"We also have a fund-raiser planned," piped in Chuck Walisa, team captain of the VA Medical Center Vagabonds. The Vagabonds received honors during the wrap-up for raising the most money for a group 46 members and more.

"We're still gonna beat you," quipped a BSSH team member. Not to be out done, Bonnie Miller, team captain of the Covenant Malone & Hogan Cancer Warriors, also announced the team had a fund-raiser under way.

"We are selling T-shirts," Miller said. The Cancer Warriors accepted a plaque at the celebration for raising the most funds for a team of 16 to 45.

The friendly competition shown Tuesday may account for the team contribution of $117,604.49 announced by Diane Wood, chair of the event, that was raised during the largest fund-raiser for the Howard-Glasscock unit of the American Cancer Society.

Business, organizations and individual contributors underwriting the event brought in $30,000, Wood said. Current expenses to put on the fund-raiser are about $12,900, Wood said.

Monies are still trickling in from the event and Wood estimates the final total will

Event to have co-chairs for 2003 committee

The announcement is made and we have pictures for evidence — Phyllis Turney will definitely have to take on the job of co-chairman of the 2003 Relay for Life committee.

"At Relay a girl came up to me — she is actually my cousin although we don't really know each other," Diane Wood, chair of the event, said at the wrap-up celebration held Tuesday. "She had just come from the survivor walk and said 'I will do anything to be on the committee.' I said 'boy do I have a job for you.'"

"I am really happy,"

TURNERY WOOD

Wood announced that she will co-chair with Turney for the next Relay for Life, the largest fund-raiser for the Howard-Glasscock unit of the American Cancer Society, before letting go the reins.

"I am really happy,"

Wood said with a large smile on her face. "This is my fifth year to chair and I am willing to do it next year with Phyllis as a co-chair."

Turney said she is looking forward to becoming a committee member.

"Thank you each and every one of you for letting me become a part of this," Turney told the crowd. "When anyone finds out that I was roped into this they get this deer the headlights look."

"Is there something I should know?," she joked. Turney has personal experience with the deadly disease.

"I have been on both sides of the cancer fence," she said. "My mother (Rachel Shaffer) is a cancer survivor."

Shaffer almost lost her life to lung cancer.

"On the other side of the fence, I lost my dad (Jack Shaffer) to cancer and I am still coping with that loss."

Her father died two weeks after his diagnoses.

"He promised me he would never leave me but he did. I think he left me for a purpose and I found out what that purpose was on Friday night."

Friday, May 10, was the

Local duo excited about playing music in Europe

By LYNDEL MOODY
Staff Writer

Two local students are hoping to take a trip to Europe this summer to perform with a national band and choir group.

Eighteen-year-old Chelsea Churchwell, a 2002 Big Spring High School graduate, and 17-year-old John Ontiveros, a BSHS junior, were selected for a 25-day European visit with Sound of America honor band and chorus. The group consists of about 200 students nationwide.

"You see it all the time on TV and movies but I never thought I'd be there," Ontiveros said.

"I've never been to Europe before," Churchwell said. The youth were invited to apply for the program after earning a position in region band competition. The next step after receiving their invitations was to send in three letters of recommendation and a taped audition.

"I delayed sending it (the application papers) off because I didn't think I would make it but my parents said I needed to get it sent off," Ontiveros said. It turns out his parents were right.

"I saw this packet on the table and thought there is my denial letter," he said. "Then I thought, 'This is a lot of papers,' and it said

"congratulations."

Also accepted to the program was 15-year-old Gracie Acosta, a BSHS sophomore who decided not to go on the trip.

"We can't raise the money in time, but I'm going to help John raise money," Acosta said. "I'll go next year."

All student performers selected for the band will meet on the campus of Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pa. on July 5. After four days of intensive rehearsal and orientation, the group will depart from New York to Frankfurt Germany.

The group is scheduled to present eight performances in some of Europe's finest concert halls and tour six different countries including Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy and Luxembourg.

"I'm excited to see all these concert halls and places," Ontiveros said.

The two students have a little more than a month to raise $4,100 to pay for the cost of the trip.

"I'm going to be life-guarding, baby sitting, teaching flute lessons — any type of work I can get in a month," Churchwell said. She is also willing to speak to various clubs and organizations about the trip.

The Ontiveros family has been selling enchilada plates and planning car washing among the many fund-raising activities to help pay for his trip.

"I'm proud of her," said Dennis Churchwell,

"I don't like to express myself in words. I like to express myself in music," Churchwell said. "I can show my emotions through music."

First chair trumpet player for the BSHS Honor Band, Ontiveros also plans to continue with music at Texas Tech by double-majoring in trumpet performance and psychology with a minor in music education.

"This is a great opportunity for our young people," said Dennis Churchwell. "It's also a great opportunity to have someone locally representing the U.S."

Anyone interested in donating to help Churchwell and Ontiveros raise funds for the trip can send a check written to the student's name/Sound of America or Big Spring Students/Sound of America to P.O. Box 603, Carlisle, PA 17013.

All donations are tax deductible. An account has been set up in Churchwell's name for the trip at Big Spring Education Employees Federal Credit Union, 1110 Benton. For donations to Ontiveros call 267-6487, Ontiveros' cell phone at 816-3688 or his mother, Lorina Ontiveros' cell phone at 816-3687.

be released in August. "Our total currently as of 5 p.m. tonight when I came here was $175,763.91," Wood announced to the audience. "I have received another check for $55 that is not included in the total."

In all the 2002 Relay for Life raised $30,000 above the planning committee's goal of $130,000.

"It's unbelievable what this community does," Wood said. "Relay serves a lot of purposes. One, it has brought this community together like no other."

"Relay has no restrictions, everybody can be apart of it," she continued. "It lets us grieve for those lost to cancer and lets us celebrate those who have survived. It also helps make aware of what the ACS does."

Team captains, who helped guide 82 teams through fund-raisers, walking schedules, event policies and rules, were honored by being presented with a group photo of their team.

Members had a chance to remember the event as they viewed a slide show of pictures taken by Carla Harrold of Greenhouse Photography. Harrold put together the presentation.

Top awards given out were: Most money raised by team of more than 46 members, C-Group, VAMC Vagabonds, team captains Walisa and Barbara Miller; most money raised by a team of 16-45 members, Covenant Malone & Hogan Cancer Warriors, team captains Miller and Sandy Griffin; most money raised by a team of 15 or less, Tawana's Troopers, team captain LaWanda Ham; most creative campsite, Warren Chiropractic Angels of Hope, team captain Becky Holleman; and most laps walked, First United Methodist Church Youth Cross Walkers, team captain, Courtney Johnson.

first time Turney had been to the Relay for Life event since its first year. She said she had always participated by monetary contribution.

"I was walking with my mother in the survivor walk," she said. "The people in the stands giving a standing ovation as the survivors walked around the track was overwhelming. I knew then I wanted to do whatever I could to be apart of this. Little did I know what Diane had in-store for me."

"I promise you I will work for you," she said. "I can't wait to meet each and everyone of you."

Turney, a native of Big Spring, is married to Jeff and the couple have one daughter, Amanda, who currently lives in Dallas.

She is a legal instruments examiner for the Federal Correctional Institute—Big Spring where she has worked for the past 23 years.

As pictures were being taken of both Turney and Wood, one member in the audience quipped, "We have her picture. She has to do it now."

A BIG SPRING AROUND THE TOWN

In shift, FBI now says it might have been able to detect Sept. 11 plot

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director Robert Mueller, acknowledging serious lapses in how the FBI mishandled some information prior to Sept. 11, suggested for the first time that investigators might have detected the terrorist plot if they had pursued leads more diligently.

Mueller's acknowledgment came amid fresh disclosures of what could be missed hints about threats from suicide hijackings, including efforts by an unidentified Middle Eastern country to buy a commercial flight simulator.

"The jury is still out on all of it," Mueller said Wednesday at FBI headquarters. "Looking at it right now, I can't say for sure it would not have, that there wasn't a possibility that we could have come across some lead that would have led us to the hijackers."

On Thursday, Mueller told ABC's "Good Morning America":

"I do not believe, based on what I know now, that we could have prevented the attack. I'm not ruling out the possibility at all. We could have gotten lucky. Absolutely. But from what I've seen now, I do not believe we could have prevented the attack."

Mueller's remarks came after his announcement of a broad reorganization of the nation's premier law enforcement agency, partly in response to criticism of the FBI after Sept. 11. The FBI's new marching orders will focus on terrorists, spies and hackers, in that order.

"The president is pleased to see that change is under way at the FBI," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said Thursday. "He thinks they're important changes to help protect the American people and to reorient the mission of the FBI to prevent terrorism in this country."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House today urged India and Pakistan to take more decisive steps to keep extremists from escalating into a nuclear conflagration, while Secretary of State Colin Powell considered scaling down the U.S. diplomatic presence in India.

"A war in that region would not serve either country's purposes, short term or long term," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said.

At the State Department, meanwhile, Powell was faced with a decision on whether to advise American diplomats and their dependents to leave India, two U.S. officials said.

Citing rising tensions, an official told The Associated Press: "We try to be prudent. Anytime tensions rise we review our options."

If Powell orders a voluntary departure from the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi and three consulates, U.S. diplomats and their dependents would be advised to consider leaving India on commercial airplanes or chartered planes at U.S. government expenses.

There are several hundred U.S. Embassy employees and dependents in New Delhi, Calcutta, Mumbai and Chennai, and some 60,000 U.S. citizens in India.

A tougher step, not entirely ruled out, is for Powell to order all but essential U.S. employees to depart. This was done in Pakistan after an attack last March on a church in Islamabad frequented by Westerners. This stripped the U.S. Embassy of all but a core contingent.

Last Friday, the State Department advised U.S. citizens in India they should consider departing. If Powell decides on a voluntary departure, another advisory would be issued telling U.S. citizens to consider doing what U.S. officials are being advised to do.

President Bush has made the region a top priority for his diplomats, Fleischer said, and is stressing to India and Pakistan "the importance of taking steps to reduce the tensions and avoid a war."

Bush was satisfied with Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf's recent pledge to do more to halt terrorist operations, and "will continue to urge additional actions and ongoing actions by Pakistan, as well as by India, to reduce the tensions," Fleischer said.

When asked about a USA Today report that a U.S. government team is planning to evacuate thousands of American troops and citizens from the region, Fleischer pointed out that the United States routinely has a plan for spiriting Americans away from potential unrest, and "you can assume we have plans in place as well in that area of tension."

Powell will dispatch his top aide, Richard Armitage, to the region next week, and there were reports of a possible visit by Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld. India and Pakistan have fought three wars, but the stakes now are much higher because both sides have nuclear weapons.

Discovery of cancer marker depresses wife

Dear Ann Landers: My wife, "Ella," has been diagnosed with the genetic marker for breast cancer. Mind you, she does not actually have the disease, but the marker indicates an increased chance that she will get it.

ANN LANDERS

Ella has always taken good care of her health. She exercises, eats right and has regular breast examinations. This recent diagnosis has been very hard on her, and she is angry and depressed. I have tried to convince her this is a blessing in disguise — that knowing about her susceptibility will help her discover any cancer early enough to take care of it. My words of encouragement mean nothing to her.

Ella is frequently ill-tempered these days and often directs her anger at me.

She insists she will die within the year. No matter how supportive I am, it has little effect. I have been married to Ella for 20 years and love her dearly, but her attitude is making me miserable. Is there any way to help her deal with this more constructively? — Unprepared in New Jersey

Dear New Jersey: Ella needs to be educated about the likelihood of developing breast cancer and what steps she should take to minimize her risk. The American Cancer Society offers information as well as support groups. She should look into it immediately.

Ella can also benefit from talking to her doctor about an antidepressant. The mind has a great deal to do with one's health. If Ella remains angry and depressed, she may make herself more vulnerable to disease. If she won't listen to you, phone her doctor and ask him to intercede. Let's hope she pays attention. Dear Ann Landers: Several years ago, you printed a wonderful poem that helped me enormously when I was going through a breakup with my boyfriend. It was about "decorating your own garden." I would like to show that poem to a friend who is having a rough time. Please print it again. — Riverside, Calif.

Dear Riverside: The poem you are talking about is "After a While," and it is the most-requested poem from my column. Here it is:

"After a While" by Veronica A. Shoffstall
After a while, you learn the subtle difference
Between holding a hand and chaining a soul,
And you learn that love doesn't mean leaning
And company doesn't mean security,
And you begin to learn that kisses aren't contracts
And presents aren't promises,
And you begin to accept your defeats

With your head up and your eyes open
With the grace of a woman, not the grief of a child,
And you learn to build all your roads on today
Because tomorrow's ground is too uncertain for plans.
And futures have a way of falling down in midflight.
After a while, you learn that even sunshine burns if you get too much.
So you plant your own garden and decorate your own soul.
Instead of waiting for someone to bring you flowers.
And you learn that you really can endure...
That you really are strong.
And you really do have worth.
And you learn and learn...
With every goodbye you learn.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, May 31:

Research and travel easily play a significant role in your year. If you are a lawyer or writer, you'll find that your mind often is on your work. A foreigner could play a role in your year. Still, you might be overly serious, needing to learn how to detach from trying experiences. Often you might feel as if someone is pushing your buttons. If you are attracting power plays, there must be something in you that needs them. If you are single, others will find you attractive and unusual. After July, someone quite special will enter your life. You will have an unusually good time from this period on. If you are attached, learn to avoid black-and-white situations through detachment and understanding. Work on communicating. AQUARIUS is a buddy.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) **** Understand someone better. Pretend to be him or her. A long-term goal becomes an even greater possibility if you're willing to walk past some of your mental blocks. Listen carefully to another before you make a major decision. Tonight: Follow a friend's suggestion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) **** Not everyone agrees with your ideas, especially those about an important venture. If you are looking for a consensus of opinion, you might as well forget it. A partner asks you to join him or her later on. Is there any reason to think twice about this? Tonight: Go for togetherness.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) **** Though you might not realize it, it is obvious that your mind isn't at work. If you were really honest, you would walk out the door and head into the weekend. Summer folly seems to preoccupy your mind. Make travel plans in the near future. Tonight: Use your incredible imagination!

CANCER (June 21-July 22) **** Another clearly has a different agenda than you. Reorganize your schedule if you must. Express your agreeable and considerate nature. You might feel as if another could be pushing you past your natural resistances. Tonight: Accept an invitation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) **** Others know how to spark your interest. Promises might be one thing, but for now, you still have to get your work done. A friend will wait, as will a loved one. Do one thing at a time, making sure you won't have to go back to it. Tonight: Skip on out the door.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) HHHH Don't take procedure for granted. Take your time as you clear out additional work. Double-check everything you do. Someone around you might be vague or somewhat witty. You might need to fill in for this person's errors. Tonight: Buy a favorite treat on the way home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) **** An early-morning call or idea could be most distracting. You might, as a result, need to reorganize your schedule so it works for you. Ask a co-worker to chip in. After all, you, too, would like to start the weekend. Tonight: Play away.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) *** You might be distracted by a domestic matter. Realize that you might need to establish a limit. Understand more of what you need to do with a loved one to make him or her comfortable. Finances play a substantial role in your decisions. Tonight: What's your favorite takeout? Order it!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) **** You might do a reversal out of the blue, leaving others wondering and drifting. You do need to think through a decision. Listen well to another's "brilliant" idea. Let this person down gently. Think how you would feel in the same circumstances. Tonight: Do your normal Friday-night thing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) **** Your instincts surround money right now.

On the other hand, you might not be as careful as you need to be when counting your change. Double-check your figures. Listen to another carefully. Pace yourself at work. Don't make any great plans. Tonight: Indulge yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) **** A friend impacts your plans. You're in prime shape, knowing what you want and exactly how far you will go. Others seek you out. You're unusually successful when dealing with groups. A child or loved one could be moping. Tonight: What will make your heart sing?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ** You might be inspired, but it is also important to keep a matter hush-hush. Listen more often to a boss, even if at times you find this person to be downright disagreeable. Schedule some work that can be done alone, if possible. Tonight: In your thoughts.

OUR VIEWS

The date is not why we honor Memorial Day

Today is May 30. It is Memorial Day. No, it's not the day most of us observe as the one in which we pay our respects to those who died giving us our freedom. That day was Monday, May 27 — another example of our society altering a traditional holiday so that we can take advantage of a three-day weekend.

While we aren't necessarily in agreement with manipulating the dates of our holidays — in our opinion, the intent of the original observance sometimes gets muddled or lost entirely — we would point out that the most important thing is not the date but the observance. Here in Big Spring, we honored our fallen on Sunday at Trinity Memorial Park, on Monday at the Vietnam Memorial and again today with a tree planting at the Vietnam Memorial Park. None was more "right" than the other; each was, in fact, an important reaffirmation of our resolve to always honor our veterans and to forever keep our nation free.

It's not the place or the date that needs to be remembered, but the more than one million men and women who gave their lives, and why they did so.

As we reflect upon this day, we recall a poem by Maj. Michael David O'Donnell recited at a Memorial Day ceremony two years ago by Don Bolin, president of the Rackley-Swords Vietnam Veterans of America. Maj. O'Donnell wrote the poem less than three months before he was killed in a rescue operation in Cambodia.

"If you are all able,
Save them a place inside of you
And save one backward glance
When you are leaving
For the places they can no longer go.
Be not ashamed to say
You loved them,
Though you may not have always.
Take what they have left
And what they taught you
With their dying.
And keep it with your own.
And in that time,
When men decide and feel safe
To call the war insane,
Take one moment to embrace
Those gentle heroes
You left behind."

This is why we celebrate a Memorial Day, to remember those heroes who sacrificed all so that liberty can forever be preserved.

Argentine crisis is very, very serious

The economic crisis in Argentina is grave. Unemployment is now 20 percent, only 5 percent below ours during the Great Depression. It is no longer an inconvenience. People are now reaching the point where they simply have no money for food or medicine.

In the meantime, the International Monetary Fund refuses to make any loans because the Argentine provincial governments didn't cut their budgets enough to suit the international financiers. Thus, the human tragedy in Argentina provides a lesson Americans ought to learn. The present international banking system is exploitive and destructive and must be changed. So, for that matter, is our domestic banking system.

Many countries in the world today are saddled with debt beyond their ability to repay. For the moneylenders, this is an ideal situation. The usurer simply collects interest in perpetuity. Since the principal was created out of thin air, he doesn't care that it will never be repaid. He cares only that the interest is paid annually. As a matter of fact, our own public debt is beyond our ability to repay. Our annual interest payments for years have exceeded the federal budget during President Kennedy's first year in office and will continue to do so for generations.

While a column is too short to explain the banking and monetary system, there are a few points you should be aware of. First, the economy and the monetary system are two different things. You can have an economy, which is the production and exchange of goods and services, without a monetary system. But you can't have a monetary system without an economy. A monetary system is simply designating something as a medium of exchange. It could be gold or silver or sticks or stones or whatever. In our case it's paper — which, in itself, is worthless. The Federal Reserve notes in your wallet or purse cannot be exchanged for gold or silver, though you can use them to buy gold or silver at the market price.

A fractional reserve banking system, which we have, means that banks can lend more dollars than they have on deposit. These "dollars" are actually bank credits and are created by a bookkeeping entry. When the loan is repaid, the bank pockets the interest and fees, while the principal is extinguished with another bookkeeping entry. These kinds of banks, Thomas Jefferson warned, were more dangerous than a standing army. Since we have long forgotten the wisdom of our ancestors, we have both banks and a standing army.

At any bank in the country today, if all its depositors showed up on the same day demanding their money in currency, the bank would have to close. This is what is called a "run on the bank." It's happening in Argentina today, and it happened in American during the Great Depression. In that case, people just lost their money, whether it was savings or in a checking account. To prevent bank runs, the federal government now insures each account for up to $100,000. The point is that all the factors that caused the Argentine crisis are present in our country — too much public and private debt, inflation, fractional reserve banking and a central bank. I'm more concerned about this than I am about terrorists. It's easy to be missed by a bullet or a bomb, but not so easy to be missed by an economic collapse.

Muravchik's message should be heard

There is no one so bitterly despised as an apostate, one who's given up his faith, which may explain why author Joshua Muravchik has become anathema to the Left. Muravchik, the one-time chairman of the Young People's Socialist League, has written a book, "Heaven on Earth: The Rise and Fall of Socialism," that has him in hot water with some of his former comrades. It's one thing for a non-believer to sound the death knell for socialism and quite another for one who once believed in the promise of an egalitarian society to do so. The faithful have punished Muravchik by ostracizing — or worse for an author, ignoring — him.

"Heaven on Earth," a scholarly but delightfully readable analysis of socialist experiments from Robert Owens' New Harmony colony in the United States to Julius Nyerere's Tanzania, has yet to be reviewed by the New York Times, the sometimes prickly arbiter of serious books in America. The Times isn't the only liberal institution to snub Muravchik. Last week, a Washington, D.C., bookstore gave Muravchik the cold shoulder, too. Politics and Prose, a popular, independent bookstore that boasts that it hosts authors' lectures "almost every night," invited Muravchik to discuss his book. But then the bookstore's events manager sent Muravchik's publicist a note saying, "After further review, I regret that we will not be able to host the event."

What caused the turnaround? Apparently the store is a favorite among local socialists — namely, a small fringe group, the International Socialist Organization, which according to the dismissive missive "have had several discussions and readings with us." The ISO, which publishes the weekly newspaper "Where We Stand," argues that "Capitalism must be overthrown. ... The working class needs an entirely different kind of state — a workers' state based on councils of workers' delegates and a workers' militia."

Hmm. Where have we heard that before — and to what ends? From all too many believers, as Muravchik reminds us. In the decades when socialist governments ruled much of the world — at their height in 1985, some 60 percent of the world's population — the consequences were often bloody. Millions died at the hands of socialist zealots, an estimated 100 million in barely 80 years, in the most totalitarian socialist regimes, such as Mao's China, where as many as 30 million died to appease the socialist gods.

But Muravchik trains his critical eye not just on the obvious excesses of totalitarian communists but on the faith that undergirds even the most benign socialist enterprises, such as the kibbutz system in Israel. Muravchik's contribution is to understand socialism as a religion of sorts, but one devoid of that most important of religious elements: a moral code.

"Socialism was the faith in which I was raised," he writes. "It was my father's faith and his father's before him." Notwithstanding Marx's dictum that religion "is the opium of the people," socialism itself became the new religion of many intellectuals who looked for a substitute for faith after the Enlightenment onslaught against organized religion. As Muravchik demonstrates, however, the effort to establish this "heaven on earth" — as Moses Hess, a contemporary of Karl Marx, once described socialism — was doomed to failure.

"What was different about [the religion of socialism] was not the absence of God, since Buddhism and Confucianism also have no God, but rather the absence of good and evil or right and wrong. This opened the doors to the terrible deeds that were done in the name of socialism," notes Muravchik. Socialism "lacks any internal code of conduct to limit what believers may do," he says. "By no means all socialists were killers or amorals," he avers. "Many were sincere humanitarians," most notably some democratic socialists, he says. "But democratic socialism turned out to be a contradiction in terms, for where socialists proceeded democratically, they found themselves on a trajectory that took them further and further from socialism," he concludes.

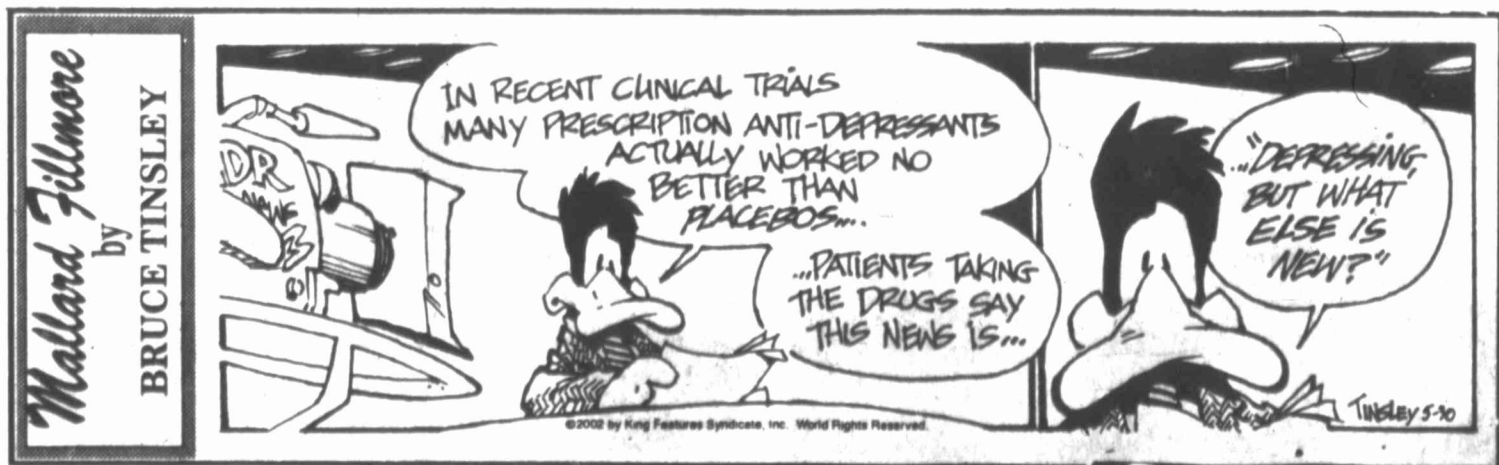

Not since "The God That Failed," the 1950 classic collection of essays by six famous former communist intellectuals, has there been such a trenchant analysis of the failures of socialist ideals.

In another about-face, Politics and Prose bookstore has now decided it will host Muravchik after all. Now if only the New York Times would pay similar attention, Muravchik's message might get the audience it deserves.

ANDREA MEDLIN

When I was young we were 'encouraged' to go outside and play and the warmer weather lent a variety of opportunities for play.

We seldom had any problem finding something to do and were soon making mudpies, which my grandpa didn't appreciate especially when we decided to paint the house with some of the mud, or playing kick the can.

But the sweltering heat of a West Texas summer would soon have us back at the screen door of my grandmother's house begging to be let back in.

However, we were only allowed back inside the house if one of us was seriously injured.

We soon learned a lot of tears and a few superficial scratches with a twig would sometimes do the trick.

Most of the time we didn't need tips on how to occupy ourselves back then.

A few clothespins, a tree branch and an old broom soon had us sailing the Seven Seas on a pirate ship or chasing after the outlaws on our straw-headed horses.

Life was good and we didn't seem to be so busy in those warm, sunny days at my granny's house where time seemed to stand still.

We are told everyday now that exercise is important for everyone.

We are bombarded with studies showing us that our children are obese and are developing diseases that go hand and hand with obesity such as diabetes and high blood pressure (hypertension).

Activity doesn't have to be extended periods of time and 15 or 20 minutes a day two or three times a week on a regular basis will make a big difference in the long run.

When I was young we didn't discuss exercise or our health as much as we do now and we were healthy for the most part.

Maybe we shouldn't talk so much about it and just do it.

It seemed to work well enough back then.

A Day for Remembering
Memorial Day

To remind us of the meaning of Memorial Day, all Americans are asked to stop for one minute at 3 p.m. local time. They are asked to pause wherever they may be for a moment of remembrance or listening to "Taps."

Children at Arlington National Cemetery put flowers on the grave of their uncle, who gave his life for his country.

The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier is a gravesite at Arlington National Cemetery, outside Washington, D.C. No one knows the identities of the three soldiers buried in the tomb. As a tribute, this grave is guarded 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. To become a guard there is a great honor.

As a sign of mourning or sympathy, the flag is flown at half-staff until 12 noon on Memorial Day.

To honor the men and women who have served our country, there are special cemeteries in this country and in Europe where veterans may be buried. These cemeteries, like this one in California, are always well cared for by the government.

In 2000, an act of Congress established the White House Commission on the National Moment of Remembrance. The purpose is to promote a greater understanding of the meaning of the Memorial Day holiday. For more information, visit the Web site at: www.remember.gov

IN BRIEF

Coahoma siblings shine at tourney

Coahoma's Trey and Linsey Chavez turned in impressive performances over the weekend at the Texas Junior Grand Slam in Wichita Falls.

Linsey won the girls' 12-Under division rolling with a 6-1, 6-0 victory over Caroline Renton of Burkburnett.

Trey, playing in the boys 14-Under division, reached the finals before suffering a 6-4, 6-2 loss to second-seeded David Ashlock of Arlington.

To reach the finals, Trey defeated top seed Scott Powers of Lawton, Okla., 6-1, 6-2.

The brother-sister duo will compete at the Midland ZATs Championships June 14-16.

Lady Steers Softball Boosters to meet

The Big Spring Lady Steers Softball Boosters Club will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the BSHS Athletic Training Center meeting room.

Parents of all high school and junior high school age softball players should attend.

Enrollment forms must be turned in by Friday, June 21.

For more information concerning the camp, call Marcelino Chavez at 894-4355 or 395-4535 or 394-4615.

Nets almost there following 103-92 win over Celtics

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — After 26 years of struggle, turmoil and bad basketball, the New Jersey Nets are almost there. They are one victory from their first trip to the NBA Finals.

Jason Kidd had six points and three assists in a 20-1 fourth-quarter spurt Wednesday night, helping the Nets fend off another Boston comeback for a 103-92 win and a 3-2 lead in the Eastern Conference finals.

New Jersey can advance to its first championship round since its ABA days with a win in Game 6 in Boston on Friday or, if necessary, in Game 7 in New Jersey on Sunday.

"The big thing is that we are not in the finals and the hardest thing is to end the series," said Kidd, who finished with 18 points, 12 rebounds and seven assists.

The Nets won 26 games a year ago and had been to the playoffs only once since 1994. Even after the acquisition of Kidd, virtually no one expected this kind of turnaround.

"It's indescribable," guard Lucious Harris said. "You want to go out and play tomorrow. You're one game away from your dream — to get to the finals. When Friday comes we've got to play the way we did tonight."

The Celtics have to change.

In the past three games, they have fallen behind by double-digits in the first quarter and played catch up.

It worked in Game 3 as Boston staged the biggest fourth-quarter comeback in NBA history, rallying from a 21-point deficit.

Instead of letting that loss crush them, the Nets have shown a resiliency the last two games. They have jumped to big leads, taken Boston's best counter punch and refused to lose.

"Game 3, as crazy as it may seem, may have been the best thing that happened to our ballclub. It showed us that no lead is safe," Nets coach Byron Scott said.

"Everything happens for a reason. We blew a 21-point lead, but I think we matured a lot from it," the second-year coach added. "That was a defining moment for this franchise, and we came through with flying colors in Games 4 and 5."

Scott actually made the key decision in the fourth quarter of Game 5, switching to a zone after the Celtics wiped out all but one point of a 17-point halftime lead.

After two free throws by Erick Strickland cut the Nets' lead to 74-73, the Celtics missed two chances to take the lead when Rodney Rogers missed a shot underneath and threw away a pass on a fast break.

Kidd then came off a screen and hit a jumper. He would also score on a drive and a rebound follow, and assist on baskets by Keith Van Horn and Harris and a 3-pointer by Van Horn.

The 3-pointer by Van Horn gave New Jersey a 94-74 lead and the players started celebrating, knowing the game was over.

The pressure now swings to the Celtics.

Capriati, Agassi advance

PARIS (AP) — Jennifer Capriati won a contest of struggling servers to reach the third round of the French Open, while Andre Agassi advanced when his opponent quit with an injury.

Capriati, the defending champion, lost her serve six times, but was able to beat Amy Frazier 6-4, 6-3 today.

Fourth-seeded Agassi had a 4-6, 6-2, 6-1 lead when David Sanchez of Spain retired in the second-round match.

Between the second and third sets, a trainer taped Sanchez's right foot. Late in the third, Sanchez was unable to run down shots from Agassi and after losing the set, he said he could not continue.

No. 11 Juan Carlos Ferrero — a loser to Gustavo Kuerten in the semifinals the last two years — hoped to play against Nicolas Pietrangeli after spraining his ankle in practice.

Frazier held serve just once and was broken eight times in her error-filled match against Capriati at center court of Roland Garros.

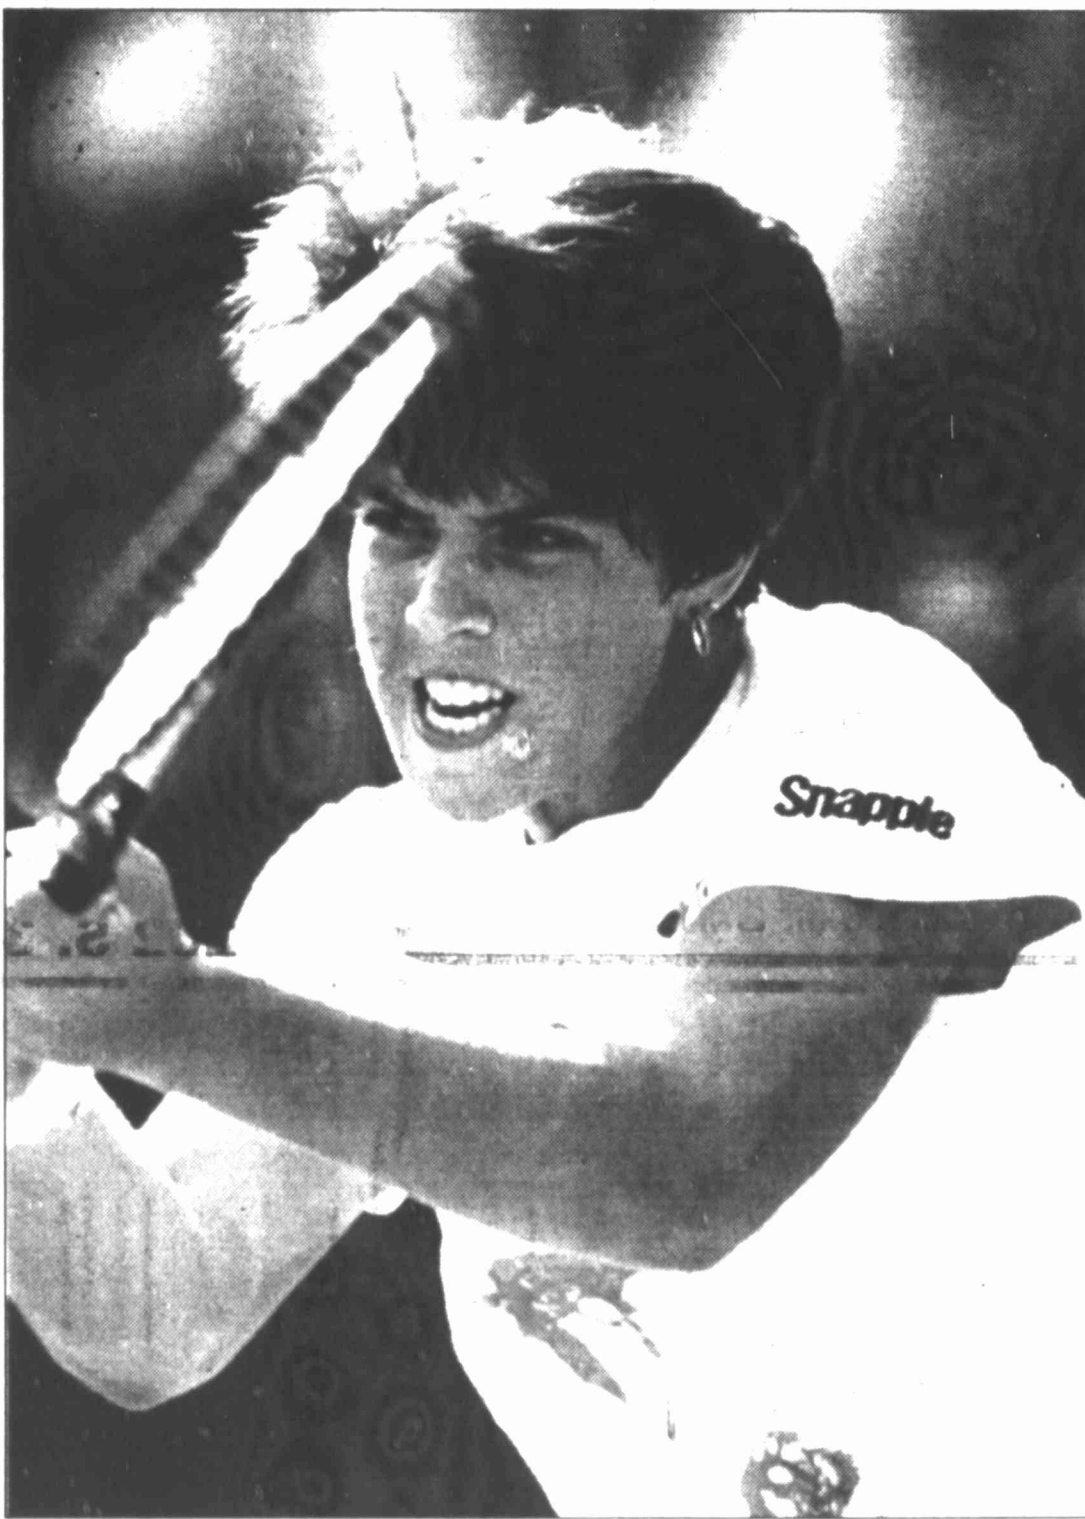

After Capriati held in the opening game of the match, there were 11 straight service breaks. Frazier had a 3-2 lead in the second set before Capriati won the final four games, holding to clinch the match.

"It was making me a little mad that I couldn't hold my serve. We were going back and forth in the first set," Capriati said. "In the second, I held my serve a little bit more."

Frazier, ranked 61st, finished with 53 unforced errors and Capriati 39, while each player had seven double faults.

Kuerten won his second-round match Wednesday and then took a lap around the court, slapping high-fives with fans who had cheered him as he pulled out another emotional victory at the French Open.

Marat Safin did not ignore the fans, either. In a fit of anger, he tossed his racket into the seats and got it back after a mild apology.

Serena Williams lighted up center court with a fashion statement — a bright green dress with yellow trim, sneakers to match, and knee-high yellow soccer socks. Lleyton Hewitt turned to some cinematic inspiration and avoided an early departure with a major comeback against a determined qualifier.

Kuerten, the three-time champion, had hip surgery in February and did not have big expectations for his favorite tournament. But after a three-hour second-round victory over Davide Sanguinetti, Kuerten thought his game, so suited for clay courts, was coming around in a place where he has won 16 matches in a row.

"It was a match where I just had to find a way," he said after rallying for a 6-7 (0), 6-2, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3 win that prompted him to jog around the court in celebration.

Glavine, Thomas say they're open to steroid testing

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tom Glavine doesn't think steroid use is as prevalent as Ken Caminiti says it is. Frank Thomas wants baseball to find out.

Caminiti estimated that at least half the major leaguers use steroids, and he told Sports Illustrated he was on them when he was the NL MVP in 1996.

Glavine, who has served as the Braves' representative to the players' union since 1990, doubts the problem is that widespread.

"Fifty percent is a lot, and if I'm going to sit here and look at 25 guys on my ballclub and think 12 or 13 are on steroids, then no, I don't believe it," he said Wednesday. "But if I look at 700 players overall, there might be some teams who have more than 13. I don't know."

Thomas wants baseball to start testing for steroids, saying he feels "cheated" if other players are using drugs.

"I don't know who's on and who's not on," the two-time MVP with the Chicago White Sox said. "There is definitely more activity in the weight room nowadays. I was hoping that it was just old guys working hard in the weight room. I really think it's time for testing."

Glavine said the union may have to address the issue, but he's not sure how.

"It's easy for me to sit here and say I don't care about drug testing because I don't take steroids and don't take drugs," he said. "It's not a big deal to me, but obviously there is much greater cause for concern that goes into why you would or would not agree with doing that."

Baseball officials said following an owners meeting in Chicago they would like a program to deal with steroids and testing.

The NFL and NBA prohibit steroids and test for them. The NHL and major league baseball have no policy regarding their use.

"We've made a comprehensive proposal to the players' association to deal with the issue of steroids and testing for steroids at the major league level, and we're hopeful that it's an issue that will be resolved in the bargaining process," said Rob Manfred, baseball's top labor lawyer.

A ban in baseball, or even testing players on 40-man rosters, would have to be bargained with the players. The union has resisted such a plan.

"The association regards the issue as a serious and complicated one and will treat those discussions accordingly," union spokesman Greg Bouris said.

Recently retired Jose Canseco went further than Caminiti, saying 85 percent of players use steroids.

New York Mets manager Bobby Valentine thought those estimates were overblown.

"Only if it's in the water or there's some way players are ingesting them without knowing it," Valentine said before his team's home game against Philadelphia. "I think it's a total exaggeration unless you're saying some of the stuff like MetRx mix and the blender stuff is a steroid, then I stand corrected."

"As far as something injected or prescribed, I think it's preposterous to say 85 percent."

There may be rumors about certain players, but Yankees manager Joe Torre said that's all he's ever heard — rumors.

"I'm not sure how widespread this problem is," Torre said. "I've seen players go from tall, skinny guys to tall, strong guys. Sure, you can say he's got to be doing something, but I've never had anybody tell me for sure that, 'This person is doing this.' It's always, 'I heard this guy is doing it.'"

Toronto manager Buck Martinez believes his clubhouse is clean.

"I would fight for the character of my 25 players. There are so many wonderful people that play baseball. You have to be careful not to paint everybody with the same brush."

Martinez did say he didn't always know what others were doing around him when baseball went through a drug scandal in the 1980s.

"I came from the baseball generation of cocaine abuse," Martinez said. "I was naive to that when my teammates were involved."

Thomas said he'd have no problem being tested.

"I know what I put into the game day in and day out," he said. "I feel cheated if everyone's on steroids, because I know how I've worked to get to this level and try to maintain it."

THIS DATE IN HISTORY

The ASSOCIATED PRESS
Today is Thursday, May 30, the 150th day of 2002. There are 215 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On May 30, 1431, Joan of Arc, condemned as a heretic, was burned at the stake in Rouen, France.

On this date:
In 1539, Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto landed in Florida.
In 1854, the territories of Nebraska and Kansas were established.
In 1883, 12 people were trampled to death when a rumor that the recently opened Brooklyn Bridge was in imminent danger of collapsing triggered a stampede.
In 1911, Indianapolis saw its first long-distance auto race; Ray Harroun was the winner.
In 1922, the Lincoln Memorial was dedicated in Washington D.C., by Chief Justice William Howard Taft.

In 1943, American forces secured the Aleutian island of Attu from the Japanese during World War II.

In 1958, unidentified soldiers killed in World War II and the Korean conflict were buried at Arlington National Cemetery.

In 1971, the American space probe Mariner Nine blasted off from Cape Kennedy, Fla., on a journey to Mars.

In 1982, Spain became NATO's 16th member.

In 1996, Britain's Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson were granted an uncontested decree ending their ten-year marriage.

Ten years ago: President Bush ordered the seizure of Yugoslav government assets in the United States after the United Nations imposed sanctions in an effort to force Yugoslavia to observe a cease-fire in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Five years ago: Child molester Jesse K. Timmendequas was convicted in Trenton, N.J., of raping and strangling a 7-year-old neighbor, Megan Kanka, whose 1994 murder inspired "Megan's Law," requiring that communities be notified when sex offenders move in. (Timmendequas was later sentenced to death.)

Today's Birthdays:
Country musician Johnny Gimble is 76. Actor Clint Walker is 75. Actress Ruta Lee is 66. Actor Michael J. Pollard is 63. Actor Stephen Tobolowsky is 51. Actor Colm Meaney is 49. Actor Ted McGinley is 44. Actor Ralph Carter is 41. Country singer Wynonna is 38. Rock musician Tom Morello (Rage Against The Machine) is 38.
