Murder suspect arrested

By ROGER CLINE
Staff Writer

A 19-year-old man has been arrested in connection with the murder of a Big Spring teen.

At 4:14 p.m. Thursday, Big Spring Police officers arrested Terrell L. Jackman for the murder of 16-year-old Lennon Lane. The arrest occurred in the 500 block of Westover Road.

Jackman was detained by police Aug. 5 shortly after Lane's body was found in a field north of the intersection of 19th and State streets in Big Spring, but released the next day for lack of evidence.

"We were able to get other information that led us to get enough evidence to file charges with the district attorney's office and get a warrant," said Sgt. Roger Sweatt of the Big Spring Police Department. "I can't really go into details as to what evidence or anything of that nature, of course." Jackman's bond was set at $200,000 in an arraignment this morning with Justice of the Peace Bennie Green.

Two juvenile suspects, males 15 and 16 years old, are also in custody in connection with the murder. The teens are in a juvenile detention facility in Midland undergoing psychological evaluation to determine whether they should be certified to stand trial as adults.

Lane's body was discovered Aug. 5 shortly after his parents called the police when he didn't return home from a sleepover at a friend's home. A subsequent autopsy positively identified Lane's body through dental records and determined the cause of death to be blunt force trauma.

A spokesman for the district attorney's office said District

Attorney Hardy Wilkerson is in the process of determining how to proceed in the case against the three suspects with Howard County Attorney and Juvenile Prosecutor Mike Thomas.

Anyone with information about this case should call the Big Spring Police at 264-2550.

Andrews girl wins showdown in 'Crazy' fashion

Claims $500 prize provided by local the DRA

By ROGER CLINE
Staff Writer

Like the lyrics of the Patsy Cline song she sang at the Colgate Country Showdown at the Howard County Fair Thursday evening, Jalee Barnes just might be "Crazy."

The 16-year-old Andrews girl underwent surgery Aug. 14 to have her tonsils removed. The throat surgery didn't stop this budding diva from taking top honors in the contest. Barnes, who now has the opportunity to proceed on to regional competition in Abilene, was quite excited after she was announced as winner.

"Overwhelmed! I don't know," she said, adding some kind words about the other performers. "They were awesome. I didn't expect this at all. They were really talented."

In addition to "Crazy," Barnes let loose with renditions of country favorites "Leavin' On Your Mind" and "Hurt Me." She said she plans to sing the same

BSHS' senior enjoys role as queen of fair

By NANCY KOGER

Special to the Herald
Cassie Coates has been coming to the Howard County Fair for years.

"My birthday is in September and when I was little, the fair was in September so we always came to the fair for my birthday and made a big thing of it," said Cassie, the daughter of Jim Bob and Lisa Coates.

It's not just her birthday which brings Cassie to the fair this year, however. This time, she's queen.

It's a natural role for her in many ways.

Brandon Steen of Odessa has been attending school in Nashville, Tenn., and flew in to take part in the competition. The aspiring country and western star took the runner-up spot in the showdown.

"I've been singing ever since I can remember, but really getting serious, about high school," he said.

Steen, who the judges ranked just two points behind Barnes' score, had good things to say about her performance and the event in general.

"She did a great job. She sang very well," he said. "It's nice to be able to just get up there on the stage and have a little fun. I haven't gotten up on the stage in a while, so it was a good refresher for me."

Steen sang "What You Gonna Do With A Cowboy," as well as an capella version of the gospel favorite "The Old Rugged Cross."

Judges for the event were country star Jody Nix, Big Spring Symphony conductor Keith Graumann and Big Spring Herald Managing Editor John A. Moseley.

"I thought overall it was really good; it was hard to narrow them down, but when you got right down to it there was no doubt in my mind who won it," Nix said. "They were all good, but the young girl (Barnes) was just the best. Howard County Fair Queen Cassie Coates said she enjoyed the performances.

Allan Johnson, president of the showdown's sponsor, the Downtown Revitalization Association, said he was pleased with the show and plans to make it an annual event.

the differences in the country kids we led in the morning and the city kids in the afternoon," said with a smile. "One kid looked at the stock barn floor and asked the teacher, 'Am I supposed to walk on that?'"

This unassuming president of her Big Spring High School senior class feels that the county fair is important.

"We live in a farm community, but the youth don't know about cotton or animals. We need an event like this; it's historical."

She also enjoys the stock show because it is a chance for the exhibitors from different communities to visit with each other.

Coates has shown goats and rabbits and will have swine to show this year.

She admits she was surprised at being named queen, saying that she entered the contest because it was something she had always wanted to do. She acknowledged appreciation to Marie Etheridge, who had gone through old 4-H record books to show Cassie the history of the fair.

"She told me about the fairs during World War II, when everyone canned and made things to show. They were very patriotic; it reminded me of how people have felt this year."

The new queen said that the historical insights helped her in the speaking part of the competition.

Not only an ag student, student leader and queen, Coates is a working woman. She is employed by the Medicine Shoppe.

She was pleased to use her queen scholarship to Howard College for the concurrent classes that she is taking this year. Later, she plans to attend Texas A&M, majoring in foods and nutrition as a precursor to medical school.

"In my job, I see how many pills people take. A college counselor advised me that nutrition was the number one entry major into medical school because med schools don't know nutrition."

As reigning monarch of the fair, Cassie is expected to be at the fair every evening, to greet people and interact with the public. She will represent the fair at all the community parades and at other events when called on.

Her suitability for the role was evident when two youngsters, noting her tiara, asked her where they could get armbands for the carnival rides. Even though that part of the fair is not her domain, she graciously directed them to the ticket area.

"Wow! That was the queen!" one of the boys gushed.

Impressing a 12-year-old is not easy. Royalty speaks for itself.

$18,750 per year. The lease would be for 15 years, said Duane Thomas, Moore Development board member and chairman of the Retention and Expansion Committee, which made the recommendation.

"If Parker-Hannifin left the building before that time, they would be liable for the remainder of the lease," Thomas told the board.

Parker-Hannifin is located at the airpark in the building that formerly housed Avantage Corp., a company it purchased in October 1999. Also located in the building are the Texas Department of Criminal Justice Wilderness Camp inmates — the group that performs many construction and cleanup jobs in Howard County. As noted Thursday, both Parker-Hannifin and the Wilderness Camp program are expanding and in need of more space.

"The inmate barracks are near the building, so it makes more sense that Parker-Hannifin would relocate rather than the TDCJ program," explained Kent Sharp, Moore Development executive director.

In fact, Wilderness Camp workers would perform much of the construction of the new building in order to keep costs down, the board was told. However, Parker-Hannifin has not yet agreed to the proposal. If the company concurs, Sharp said construction would probably begin within 60 days. No exact site has been selected, other than the company would remain within the airpark.

Parker-Hannifin is a worldwide manufacturer of motion control products, including fluid power systems, electromechanical controls and related components.

While the board voted 4-0 to approve the proposal, the vote to help the city with industrial waste cleanup wasn't quite as decisive.

The city of Big Spring requested Moore Development's assistance to help pay for the removal of 130 barrels of paint material left in airpark building 1101, vacated by A&A Aircraft Refurbishers. The barrels, which contain chromium-contaminated water, haven't been properly sealed, said Todd Darden, public works director for the city.

Darden told the board that the city is hoping to get a judgment against A&A Aviation for cost of the cleanup.

"We would offer reimbursement to Moore Development for any proceeds we would recover from that," Darden said.

Asked if cleanup of the building was considered an emergency, Darden replied, "From an environmental standpoint, no, although there might be some liability involved if someone were to enter the building and puncture the drums." He also noted that a company had expressed interest in leasing the building, so it would be prudent to make it available.

Because of the chromium level, the waste must be removed by someone with hazardous materials certification — something the city doesn't possess. The city asked for bids on the project, and received a low bid of $19,058 from Safety Klean of Midland.

Darden also presented the board with a letter from City Attorney Jean Shotts stating that in his opinion, Moore Development has the authority to use funds for the cleanup.

In a 3-1 vote, the board agreed to pay half of the cleanup cost. Board members Thomas, Max Green and Terry Hansen cast votes in approval of the request. Lee George, board president, cast the nay vote. Tim Blackshear was absent.

"I just thought that this is the city's deal, they had received rent from this company and it was really their problem," George said after the meeting. "But now that it has been approved, I support the decision fully."

Thursday's meeting had been moved to 5:15 p.m. at the request of Leo Welch, local citizen. After routine business, Welch thanked the board.

could not comment whether similar seizures might take place at Medical Care Plaza.

"A lot of the investigation is under seal right now," Vanderland said. "While it's in that status, I can't discuss much of anything that's involved. Obviously, our investigation is continuing and if there is anyone in Big Spring that believes they have information that's pertinent to the case, we encourage them to contact us."

When asked if he believes any arrests might be forthcoming in the near future, Vanderland indicated that would be unlikely.

"I'm viewing this as a long-term investigation," he said. "We have a large amount of information to analyze."

Tessa Olague, the receptionist at Medical Care Plaza, said the Big Spring facility is operating as normal today.

Vanderland indicated that the Medicaid fraud division of the Texas Attorney General's Office was involved in the investigation in a story first reported by the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

The records were seized on a warrant issued by U.S. District Judge Stuart Platt.

Calls to Patel and his San Antonio attorney, Gerald Goldstein, had not been returned as the Herald went to press.

Goldstein told the Midland paper that an investigation has been under way for about a year and indicated that the same records agents seized Thursday morning had already been provided by his client.

He also criticized the actions taken by federal officials, saying they were unnecessary and maintained that they were an interruption in the hospital's normal routine and therefore compromised the safety and welfare of patients.

A SMALL PRAYER

By K. Rae Anderson

Success in our lives should mean love in our hearts for you, Lord.

Amen

It was greed on a stupefying level

Vinson & Elkins, the attorneys for Enron, are now touting their expertise on "offshore special purpose entities" on firm's Web site. They are "well versed," says their advertisement, in "off-balance sheet treatment."

MOLLY IVINS

In New York, they call that chutzpah; in Texas we call it brass body parts.

"We have nothing to lie low about," Harry Reasoner, a V-E partner, told the Austin American Statesman. Enron was once V-E's largest client. In 2001, V-E billed Enron $36 million, more than 7 percent of the firm's revenue, according to the Houston Chronicle.

A lot of ex-Enroners down in Houston were tossed out on their ears without a nickel — savings gone, trust gone, faith gone, dreams gone.

I've been watching money and Texas long enough to know there's no point in raising questions about sensitivity or taste. But how about a lick of common sense here, people?

Perhaps the single saddest fact about Enron is that it's still unclear whether the company's executives broke any laws. Because it is so difficult to prove fraud, the Justice Department is moving painfully slowly to see what, if anything, these guys can be nailed with. But when you read Robert Bryce's forthcoming Enron book, "Pipedreams," you will have no doubt at all that this was chicanery and greed on a stupefying level.

Any fool — like, oh, say, the president — who tells you all these problems have been taken care of with the Sarbanes bill should check out the Vinson & Elkins ad. Attorney General John Ashcroft makes five guys do a per walk and thinks we're dumb enough to assume that's the end of corporate fraud. It is notoriously difficult to prove fraud and I, for one, am cynical enough to believe that there is a class of people in the country called Too Rich to Go to Prison.

The more sensible and satisfying punishment would be to Make them Give the Money Back. The Sarbanes bill does provide for the forfeiture of certain bonuses and profits, but as Roger Lowenstein pointed out in The Wall Street Journal last week, there's a nasty loophole in the law. And if there's one thing sure as Bush's fatuity, it's that our creative corporate execs will find every loophole.

It's legally difficult to prove "misconduct," as opposed to your simple "accounting error." Lowenstein suggests the most effective deterrent would be for execs to forfeit profits derived from any material misstatements. That's another item for the long, long list of reforms still desperately needed to "restore confidence," as they say on Wall Street. Wall Street euphemisms are a study in themselves. Who else would translate, "We cheated, we lied, we're complete skunks," into, "a restatement of earnings."

Speaking of Ashcroft, after spending a year on the investigation that netted 12 hookers in New Orleans, he has now announced that he is going after deadbeat dads, surely a more socially useful thing to do.

But given his record on tracking down whatever terrorists may be lurking among us, the single mothers of the nation shouldn't get their hopes up.

Ashcroft could screw up a two-car funeral. He is now holding two U.S. citizens as "enemy combatants" on alarmingly slim evidence.

These citizens are being held in a military brig without bail, charges, access to attorneys or the right to remain silent. John Walker Lindh, a nice-looking, well-to-do white boy, went into the regular justice system and plea-bargained down to 20 years. Yaser Esam Hamdi, whose story is exactly like Lindh's, has the wrong kind of name, was declared an "enemy combatant" and is now sitting in a military oubliette. Ditto Jose Padilla, who was arrested for allegedly planning to detonate a radioactive bomb except, oops, there turns out to be no evidence.

As the head of an Egyptian human rights organization said just a few weeks ago, "We were told initially the military law would be used only against drug dealers and terrorists." According to a recent report in The Wall Street Journal, Ashcroft is planning to expand the detentions.

Well, as Bush said about global warming, "We'll get used to it." Or maybe we should do something before it's too late. Been enjoying the weather lately?

Pesticides are good for the world

By RICH LOWRY

Guest Columnist

Sometime in the 1970s, the pesticide DDT became the most loathed and feared three letters this side of KKK.

This was a coup for DDT-scourge and "Silent Spring" author Rachel Carson, but it hasn't been so wonderful for the world's poor, who have suffered countless thousands of needless deaths thanks to an exaggerated fear of DDT and other pesticides.

As the United States battles the mosquito-borne West Nile virus, this summer is a reminder of something that the rest of the world never had the luxury of forgetting: Mosquitoes don't just buzz, bite and irritate — they, or at least the diseases they carry, can kill.

In the Third World, the plot of "Men in Black" isn't so fanciful: Man does battle with bugs, and if he loses, death and mayhem ensue. In 2000, malaria infected some 300 million people, and roughly a million died.

As Richard Tren and Roger Bate have demonstrated in their important work for the Washington-based Competitive Enterprise Institute, DDT literally changed the course of human history — for the better.

Earlier this century, malaria was still prevalent in Europe and North America. In 1914, there were 600,000 cases in the United States.

That all changed thanks to DDT, which Winston Churchill called "the excellent DDT powder." Malaria disappeared from Europe and North America, and seemed to be on the way out in the developing world as well.

Within 10 years of the start of its DDT-spraying program in 1946, Sri Lanka cut its malaria cases from 3 million to 7,300. In 1964 when it thought the disease had been vanquished, it stopped spraying. By 1969, malaria cases had jumped from a handful back to 500,000.

Meanwhile, DDT hysteria in the United States was building. Carson demonstrated that DDT hurt birds — especially raptors like bald eagles that are higher up the food chain — but there was no credible evidence of harm to humans.

It was banned anyway in 1973. DDT is so effective because of its "persistence." This creates trouble for raptors who eat other animals with DDT stored in their body fat. But it also means that sprayings do not have to be endlessly repeated in a way that is too expensive or too logistically difficult for poorer countries.

Nonetheless, Western environmentalists want to export DDT bans to the Third World through international agreements like the Persistent Organic Pollutants Treaty (yes, DDT is technically organic) and pressure from international-aid organizations.

Mosquito trouble for most enviros means finding one in their double skim latte. Elsewhere, the problem is much grimmer: Most of those who die from malaria are children and pregnant women.

DDT can save them. According to Roger Bate, as Latin America as a whole stopped using DDT in the 1980s and 1990s, its malaria cases soared, while Ecuador, which continued using the pesticide, saw its malaria rate fall.

It doesn't take much. By one estimate, the amount of DDT used on an American cotton field in the 1960s is enough to treat all the at-risk homes in Guyana.

In Africa, people spray a small amount of DDT on the walls inside their homes. This has no environmental effect (unless there are bald eagles in the attic), but, thanks to DDT's extraordinary "excito-repellency," it keeps mosquitoes away for six months to a year.

Enviros talk up other methods of mosquito control, including preventive ones like draining swampy areas.

As Donald Rumsfeld might put it, however, there's no substitute for simply killing the bastards, which means using pesticides.

Consider New York City's experience.

As Jennifer Zambone of the free-market Mercatus Center has written, the city nipped its West Nile problem in the bud last year when it started spraying, while outlying counties reluctant to apply dreaded pesticides continued to experience cases.

Environmentalists would rather suffer a death of 1,000 mosquito bites than admit it, but the West Nile virus here and malaria worldwide demonstrate an inconvenient fact: Pesticides, and even DDT, are good, especially for the world's poor.

Sponsors Thayer and Patsy Sanchez are ready review new members applications for the 2002-03 Cavaliers. "We'll review their grades and conduct records for this selection."

Not just anybody can be a Cavalier," Thayer explains. "We require pretty high standards. It's a privilege to be a member," Sanchez added. "Someone told me last week that the Cavaliers are becoming known as one of the most sought-after youth organizations in our community. That really makes me proud."

Member Effie Schultz and her husband, Mike, were winners of the KBST sponsored trip to Hawaii.

"I still can't believe it," Schultz exclaims. The couple will consider this their honeymoon trip.

"We didn't get a honeymoon when we married, so we're taking it now."

The trip is planned for September.

Upcoming events include the south side concession stand for the Fall Arts and Crafts Festival and the Optimist Outstanding Senior boy and girl recognition breakfast.

TOPS TX 21

Genay Bertran opened the meeting with a word of prayer for TOPS TX 21 when they met on Aug. 19 at 6 p.m. in the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center, 306 West Third.

Both the TOPS and KOPS pledges were recited. Shirley Jenkins led the group in singing the fellowship song followed by an enthusiasm song.

Eleven TOPS and two KOPS answered with their loss or gain when Genay Bertran called the roll.

One new member also weighed in.

Best TOPS loser for the week was Debbie Green and she received the weekly award and certificate.

There was no KOPS best loser as both KOPS showed small gains but all still well within their leeway.

Gladys Russell read the minutes of the last week's meeting.

Olnee Menges gave the program entitled, "Turn the Tide on Time."

She gave hints to help us as we age.

One was exercise at least three times weekly, and another was weight control.

She suggested we enlist the support of family and friends for both.

Anyone interested in learning more about TOPS, a weight loss support group which is also a non-profit organization can call 1-800-392-8677 or locally 263-0391 or 263-1758.

You are also invited to just drop in on a meeting on any Monday night at 306 West Third by 6 p.m.

Unchecked baggage in the style of Dickens

In the Charles Dickens' classic, A Christmas Carol, Scrooge is confronted during the Christmas season by his former business partner, Marley.

DWAYNE WHEAT

He has come to warn scrooge that he is facing an eternal future even more fearful than his own.

Scrooge is terrified and distracted by the heavy chain which would around Marley's body.

The chain is made even more burdensome because of the ledgers, cash boxes and other symbols of the counting house business. The unfortunate Marley informs Scrooge that it is a chain which he had forged in life—link by link.

Through the years I have talked with many people who also are burdened with unchecked baggage which they refuse to put down.

They drag old resentments, grudges, broken promises, etc. around with them as they forge their own chain in life.

All of us experience disappointment in friendships, business transactions, church relationships, and in family relationships. There are insults, efforts to do us serious financial harm, social issues and even physical harm.

When these hurts come, we have a choice about the way that we deal with them.

We can collect and wear them, thus forging a chain of our own, or we can release them and go through life much less burdened than those who choose to cling to such hurts.

How can such release happen when these things hurt so much and may cause long term hardship? Peter, one of Jesus' disciples, seems to have been struggling with this issue in his own life.

While he does not identify the link he is adding to his chain, he does ask Jesus this question, "Lord how often shall my brother sin against me and if forgive him?" Up to seven times?"

Peter thought that he was being extra generous. The religious teachers of that day generally taught that a person (fellow Jew) should only be forgiven three times.

Here is how Jesus answered: "I do not say to you, up to seven times, but up to seventy times seven."

Jesus then told a parable about the unlimited forgiveness of God and the responsibility that it brings (Matthew 18:21-35, NASV).

How long is your chain? Are you lugging a chain of resentment, hurt feelings, personal offenses, insults, and even serious injuries around with you? Jesus still offers the same solution.

Go to him for forgiveness for your own sins, and then forgive those who have hurt you.

No matter how grievous the injury, or how difficult it may be to forgive, the greater burden is that of an unforgiving heart.

Street preachers taking the gospel to the streets of Dallas

DALLAS — With a wireless microphone in hand, occasionally referring to notes on a wooden lectern, he paces back and forth and waves his hands like a preacher at a Sunday service.

But this is not Sunday, and this is no church service - at least in the traditional sense. It's Saturday morning, and Steve Tovar is preaching at his usual spot - the intersection of Ervay and Corsicana streets in downtown Dallas. His congregation is a group of homeless people, sitting on the sidewalk and curb across the street.

"This is my church. These buildings are the walls of that church, and the sky is the ceiling," he says. "You are the congregation."

Tovar is among several street preachers, including a police officer and several ex-cons, taking the gospel to the streets of Dallas. Their motivations vary. Some believe they must go where the needs are greatest by ministering to the homeless and those struggling with drug and alcohol addictions. Others who have been in trouble believe their street credentials can help them reach the homeless where others can't.

These street preachers differ from the fiery sidewalk ranters with their hand-scrawled signs and apocalyptic visions. Many dispense food and music along with their sermons. They often preach from the back of pickup trucks, using microphones or karaoke boom boxes.

They do share something in common with the old-style zealots. They aren't always a welcome sight to city officials and property owners. "The particular people we minister to, the city doesn't really want them in the 1/8downtown 3/8 neighborhood," says the Rev. Karen Dudley, founder of a church for the homeless in downtown Dallas. "When we bring our food, our service and our ministry, they don't want us here, either."

"But that's my calling. I'm going to be there." It's 10 a.m., and Steve Tovar has started preaching. Trim and youthful looking at 36, he's wearing a red T-shirt bearing the words "Born Again Street Ministry," baggy calf-length jeans and sneakers. His arms are covered with tattoos dating to his days as a gang member in Oak Cliff.

"Praise the Lord! It may not be the best place to praise the Lord, but we're going to have some church this morning!"

Over the next half-hour, he dodges passing cars and trucks as he preaches from the text of Second Corinthians. ("That's the thing about street preachers," he says, waving past an older model, brown Cadillac. "You get to flag traffic.")

Later, a rainstorm interrupts his sermon, forcing him to hurriedly pull a tarp over the amplifiers in the back of a Chevy pickup. Cheerfully undeterred, he continues unplugged. "I can preach in the rain or the sunshine. I'll preach to a dog if he'll listen to me. That's what God does for an ex-con - and a good-looking Mexican," he adds, grinning widely.

He finishes by huddling with a circle of homeless men and reciting the Lord's Prayer. Afterward, a half-dozen members of his ministry help distribute bucket loads of fried chicken.

Tovar says his experiences help him to relate to street people. He dropped out of school in the seventh grade. Born with muscular dystrophy, he says he joined gangs as a way to prove himself. As a teenager, he was in trouble with the police for drugs and theft. Eventually, he became addicted to heroin and spent a dozen years in prison, he says.

In 1996, he was in jail at Lew Sterrett Justice Center waiting to be transferred to California on a parole violation. "I was scared, man, that I would never be in society again," Tovar says. "I tried everything else. I was scared. I wanted out of this way of life, and the only thing I knew to do was what I was taught to do as a child."

He remembered how his mother had brought him to church and taught him to pray. He decided to pray again.

"That's when I was saved," he says. During the year that he spent in California serving out the sentence for his parole violation, he studied the Bible. "I knew I was going to be a preacher. I didn't watch TV. I just stayed in my cell pounding my head on the Bible."

After his release, he got married. In 1997, he started coming downtown occasionally to preach to the homeless through an Oak Cliff church. When his family moved to Duncanville, he joined the Crossroads of Life Assembly of God. Working with other members from the church, Tovar started preaching every Saturday. He says he is motivated by the chance to help pull someone off the streets.

"I think what I get out of it the most is seeing someone delivered. I've seen people come off drugs and get a decent job and a house. The same way I got a chance, I want to give them a chance."

The neighborhood two miles south of downtown

"This is my church. These buildings are the walls of that church, and the sky is the ceiling," shows all the familiar signs of urban blight, where the sight of prostitutes and public drinking are as common as security bars on windows.

It is a bleak and grim area - and exactly the kind of place in which the Rev. Karen Dudley wanted to locate a new street ministry. The storefront is next to a nightclub on the corner of Harwood and Grand streets.

Dudley is the pastor of the Dallas International Street Church, the only local church dedicated exclusively to serving the homeless, and has institutionalized street preaching. Her church, based at a storefront location on the corner of Young and South Ervay across from City Hall, has been working with the homeless downtown since December 1997. The church holds six services a week, which are followed by hot meals.

Dudley also organizes outreaches into poor areas to seek out people in need of ministry, particularly those with addictions. "This is about taking Jesus to the streets," she says. "The whole purpose is to see people restored to God."

Beginning in June, the storefront at Harwood and Grand has held services in the parking lot behind the building, which is being restored. A band made up of church disciples sings gospel songs to people from the neighborhood, and Dudley leads prayers.

It is a far cry from her former job as a marketing director for the Better Business Bureau in Tyler. After a series of personal setbacks that included the death of her husband, she moved to Dallas. She joined Oak Cliff Assembly of God and worked as the church secretary. In 1995, she earned a bachelor's degree from Southwestern Assemblies of God University in Waxahachie. While serving in a jail ministry, she decided that what was needed was a church that served the homeless population, many of whom were ex-cons with nowhere to go.

Those who come to the Street Church can join a discipleship program. There currently are about a dozen men in the program who study the Bible and napkins and plastic forks for the meal that would be served after the service. "I know a lot of you are here because of some catastrophe in your life, and you've decided to walk away," Laky says. "I know you're not happy. Nobody can be happy on the street. God did not create you to live on the street, to eat garbage out of a trash can." Few of the homeless seem to be paying attention. Many are talking among themselves or idling away the time sitting on a sidewalk across the street. One reads the Metro section of the newspaper. Others cat nap.

"I used to get frustrated," Laky says. "I wondered if I was reaching anyone, if I should go into another ministry." But one day while in uniform, he was standing in a grocery line when he heard someone call out: "Brother Zoltan!" It was a man who had heard him preach. The man had started working for the City of Dallas and gotten his own apartment. "His name was Lawrence. He prayed to be delivered, and he was delivered."

Laky dates his own deliverance to May 19, 1999. He was experiencing some marital problems and personal pressures. A religious adviser visiting his home suggested he read from the New Testament, Romans Chapter 10. "I read it, and I felt the Holy Spirit. I looked at my wife, and I said, 'I've been saved.'"

He was looking for a way to express his newfound faith when Leon Bird, a former neighbor, suggested he join a street ministry. To that point, his only contact with the homeless came as a police officer. He had a "totally preconceived notion" of the homeless, he said. "I used to think all they wanted to do was get drunk and high."

As he talked, several people from the ministry passed out paper plates, napkins and plastic forks for the meal that would be served after the service.

"I know a lot of you are here because of some catastrophe in your life, and you've decided to walk away," Laky says. "I know you're not happy. Nobody can be happy on the street. To that point, his only contact with the homeless came as a police officer. He had a "totally preconceived notion" of the homeless, he said. "I used to think all they wanted to do was get drunk and high."

He didn't particularly want to minister to the homeless. "I did it to appease Leon, at first," he says, laughing.

Laky and other preachers say the police will occasionally drive by and ask them to keep the noise down. Or a property owner will ask them to move.

"We've been chased off this parking lot and that one," he says, pointing across the street. "If they let us know, we just move to another street."

The city this year announced plans to enforce guidelines covering proper food temperature, transportation, sanitation and preparation of food distributed to homeless by a variety of groups. No date has been set for establishing such a change.

Some preachers believe the plan is just another way for the city to try to push the homeless out of downtown to a place where they are less visible.

"The city wants to run us off from downtown," says Jimmy Ybarbo, who preaches to the homeless and distributes food with his Mesquite-based group on Saturday mornings a few blocks south of City Hall.

"We leave it in the Lord's hands."

Not all of Dallas' street preachers minister to the homeless. For years, a street evangelist has shouted his views from a sidewalk in the West End. Another stakes out a corner at Inwood Road and Lemmon Avenue. He is known for carrying a bullhorn and a ventriloquist dummy and shouting at customers who go into a liquor store.

Another itinerant preacher, Truly Livingston, recently stood on Reunion Boulevard near the Hyatt Regency Dallas and held a sign reading "Repent."

A Big Spring High Steer player dodges a tackle from a Lamesa High Tornadoes defensive player during the Steers last pre-season finale Thursday night. The Steers first game will be held on Friday, Aug. 30 against Odessa Bronchos.

Steers close out preseason slate with 5-4 win over rival Lamesa

By TOMMY WELLS
Sports Editor

The Big Spring Steers didn't look quite as crisp as head coach Dwight Butler may have liked in their pre-season finale Thursday night. You won't find him too upset, though. He's more than content to see his team continue to make progress every time they hit the field.

Progress is what the Steers made in their 5-4 win over the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes. Big Spring, which finished with a 1-1 mark in its two pre-season scrimmages, rolled up more than 250 yards of offense and turned in a solid performance on defense against Lamesa.

"I was really pleased with the way we played," said Butler. "We were more physical tonight than we were at any time last year, and when we got into a game-type situation we picked up emotionally. Anytime you play with emotion you can make some good things happen."

And they did for the Steers. Ramone Ford and the Big Spring defense got to Lamesa early. The Steers dominated the Tors in their first offensive series, allowing just 39 yards — 18 of which came on one play — in 10 plays.

Big Spring didn't get off to a blazing start either. The Steers suffered a quarterback sack and fumbled a pitch on their first two plays on offense. From there, however, the BSBS offense began clicking as running back Josh Mathews reeled off a pair of solid runs and quarterback Tye Butler completed a pair of passes — one going for 10 yards to Michael Ornelas.

Ford gave Big Spring the lead midway through the Tors' second offensive series. On Lamesa's fifth play, the BSBS defensive back delivered a bone-jarring hit on the Lamesa quarterback, forcing a fumble which he managed to scoop up and take in for a touchdown.

Four plays later, Partee put the hurt on the Tors' quarterback again, sacking him from the backside for a 5-yard loss.

Lamesa accumulated just 12 yards in its second possession — four in their final five plays.

Big Spring backup quarterback Wes Smith got the Steer offense in gear from there. He capped the second-team's first possession of the night with a 41-yard touchdown strike to Brandon Mendoza. Howard Johnson set up Smith's scoring toss by rushing for 12 yards and a first down one play earlier.

Mathews stretched the Big Spring lead to 3-0 on the Steers' next possession. He highlighted a 5-play, 70-yard drive by the Big Spring first-team offense with a 4-yard romp.

Butler gave the local fans even more reason to smile on the final play of the 10-play series by hooking up with Ronnie Johnson on a long 56-yard pass play.

The Steers didn't let up from there. After Tom Overton had recovered a fumble to end Lamesa's fifth possession on a sour note, Butler rifled a pass over the middle to Curtis Woodruff, who raced 40 yards for a touchdown and a 4-0 cushion.

"Offensively, we're still running in spurts, but that's to be expected any time you do something different. We're getting there. Overall, I think we executed a lot better than in this scrimmage against Midland Lee," he said.

Lamesa did get its offense on track late in the affair. The Tors scored three times within a 10-minute span.

Butler dismissed the idea that the Steers had won, saying the Big Spring coaching staff was more interested in seeing their players going against live competition than the final score of a scrimmage.

"We don't really keep score in these," he said. "We were just looking at the players. We had a lot of different groups going out there. We got to play everybody a bunch and that's important to us. Right now, we're still looking for some backups who can step in during a game. That was the biggest thing for us with this scrimmage."

Cowboys have plenty of questions to answer against Atlanta

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Forget that rookie quarterback Chad Hutchinson is getting a trial run as the starter. The Dallas Cowboys have too many real issues to deal with in Saturday's pre-season game against Atlanta.

Cowboys coach Dave Campo and offensive coordinator Bruce Coslet just want Hutchinson, their 25-year-old rookie, to work with the first team and against a first-team defense.

There is no quarterback controversy for now. Quincy Carter, who will play the second and third quarters, is still No. 1 and will be the starter for the Sept. 8 opener at Houston.

Atlanta, which like Dallas is 2-0 in the preseason, will stick with its starter for the first half Saturday night. Michael Vick is in control after starting just two games, one of them against Dallas, as a rookie.

The Cowboys have a lot of questions that need to be answered in the last two preseason games, and Saturday's is the last before the first NFL-mandated cuts.

— Is rookie receiver Antonio Bryant indeed ready to take over as the starter for Raghieb Ismail, who is out for season after neck injury, or does second-year player Ken-Yon Rambo deserve the starting nod?

— Which cornerbacks are going to distinguish themselves? Eight players are still in the mix, with free agent pickup Bryant Westbrook and Mario Edwards (out with strained right hamstring) the likely starters.

— Who will be kicking field goals? Incumbent Tim Seder and rookie Billy Cundiff are both 3-for-3 so far, with Seder hitting a 59-yarder and Cundiff a 42-yarder.

— When will the starting offensive line be together? All five starting linemen have been hurt or held back at some point in camp. Only two or three of them will play Saturday.

— How much of a problem is the snapper position? Jeff Robinson is out with a torn ACL and Campo expects a revolving door there. First in line is Mitch Palmer, who was signed Thursday. He has played for Tampa Bay and Minnesota, but got cut by the expansion Texans this summer before even going to camp.

As for the quarterbacks, Hutchinson will start a football game for the first time since his sophomore season at Stanford in 1997. He spent four years playing professional baseball.

Campo and Coslet also want to see how Carter handles making halftime adjustments in the new coordinator's West Coast-style offense.

"We didn't want Quincy to have to play three quarters to get that done," Campo said. "He's making great progress and we feel comfortable with him. It's also a great opportunity to get Hutchinson in because there are not very many seasons you go through without using the backup."

Late fumble enabled CSU to escape with 35-29 win

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Cecil Sapp ran for 178 yards and Colorado State recovered a fumble at its 1-yard line with 10 seconds remaining Thursday night to preserve a 35-29 victory over Virginia in the Jim Thorpe Classic.

coach Al Groh replaced Schaub with Hagans, who immediately led his team on a 44-yard touchdown drive. Hagans ran the ball four times for 28 yards on that drive, including a 1-yard TD run.

Schaub, who made no major mistakes but looked tentative in the first half, came back in the second quarter and remained in the game to lead the Cavaliers' second-half rally.

With 8:16 remaining and the score tied at 29, the Rams managed what turned out to be the game-winning drive, at one point facing first-and-32 at their own 4 after a high snap and a clipping penalty.

Three plays after the field goal, Colorado State's Dexter Wynn picked off an errant pass and returned it to the Virginia 5. Babcock kicked his fifth field goal of the game to make it 35-29 with 2:20 remaining.

Oswalt pitched 6 1/3 innings for a straight win to Houston Astro Chicago Cut Thursday night. Oswalt, who complete game last year, has innings five this month, but has a game.

Hagans, who unexpectedly shared duties with junior Matt Schaub, drove the Cavaliers 81 yards in two minutes, but fumbled on a scramble with 10 seconds remaining.

The Cavaliers, who played 10 true freshmen in the first half, looked sloppy early, fumbling the ball three times and falling behind 19-7 at halftime.

Astros remain 5 back of St. Louis

HOUSTON (AP) — Roy Oswalt has more important goals this season than pitching complete games.

Oswalt pitched eight innings for his sixth straight win to help lead the Houston Astros past the Chicago Cubs 9-1 on Thursday night.

Oswalt, who had three complete games as a rookie last year, has gone eight innings five times this season, including three this month, but has not finished a game.

"Complete games don't mean that much," Oswalt said. "They're nice to get but there's no sense pushing it."

The Astros remained five games behind St. Louis in the NL Central.

Oswalt threw 97 pitches when manager Jimmy Williams decided to sit him down for the ninth inning and allow Nelson Cruz to mop up.

Oswalt (16-6) allowed only a solo homer to Fred McGriff in the seventh inning as he improved to 4-0 in five starts against the Cubs this season. Oswalt struck out six.

Cubs starter Steve Smyth (1-2) retired only one batter, giving up six runs, four hits and three walks.

Brad Ausmus' three-run homer that just cleared the yellow stripe in left-center was the big blow in Houston's six-run first. Cubs manager Bruce Kimm briefly argued the call, saying the ball hit below the line and should be a double, but second base umpire Larry Vanover called it a home run.

Craig Biggio and Jeff Bagwell had RBI singles and Jose Vizcaino hit a sacrifice fly in the inning for the Astros.

U.S. deals Ming, China 84-54 setback

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — In person, Yao Ming was even bigger than the U.S. players expected.

And after getting their first look at him in an 84-54 victory over China on Thursday night, the American players were impressed enough to say he has already earned their respect.

Yao drew a sellout crowd of 19,873 to the Oakland Coliseum Arena and had some good and bad moments in his first game in the United States. He swatted away six shots, denied Antonio Davis the honor of being the first American to dunk on him and finished with 13 points and 11 rebounds.

The 7-foot-5 mystery man from China who was the No. 1 pick overall by the Houston Rockets in the NBA draft last June.

Yao also showed he can be dangerous from as far away as 18 feet, exhibiting a silky touch on his turnaround jump shot. But the center also blew a dunk of his own and struggled when he was defended by Ben Wallace.

Yao finished 5-for-12 from the field, and he was unafraid to push back when the Americans tried to push him outside. He missed his only 3-point shot and committed five turnovers.

Bzdelik is named Nuggets' new coach

DENVER (AP) — Jeff Bzdelik went from scout to assistant coach to head coach in a mere 43 days.

Upgrading the Denver Nuggets will take much longer, but general manager Kiki Vandeweghe is confident Bzdelik is the man to do it.

Introduced as head coach on Wednesday, Bzdelik promised to field a high-energy, defense-oriented squad that will be "the best-conditioned team in this league."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Aug. 24:

Focus on others this year. Often you might not be sure how much to give or what your limits are. Work proves to be unusually demanding. Expect to put in many long hours this year. You will gain as a result. Your instincts guide you professionally. You think work; you dream work. Networking comes easily. If you are single, others will grab your attention. Be careful when getting involved. Make sure the person you choose is emotionally available. If you're attached, your partner needs and wants more time alone with you. Make it happen. PISCES challenges you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) *** Maintain a low profile. You could find another to be a bit difficult to deal with. Your solution might very well be to vanish. Strong feelings come out around a child. The fur flies, if you're not careful. Is this really the best way to communicate? Tonight: Do your thing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) **** How you say "no" might be reflected in another's reaction. A family member might be cantankerous about an expenditure. You cannot reason with this person or change his or her mind. Allow this person to stew in his or her feelings. Refuse to get into a struggle over this issue. Tonight: Join friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) **** Your vision of what could happen doesn't match another's thoughts. Don't worry about it; instead, focus on what you want. Remain more upbeat about your long-term desires. Call a parent or check in with an older family member or friend. Tonight: In the limelight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) **** Opt for what seems like a different set of plans or something unusual.

HOROSCOPE

You'll be happiest if you choose a new activity, although at first you might not be comfortable. Be willing to act on a strong impulse, even if it seems a bit loony. Tonight: Use your imagination.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) *** Reactions confuse you. Communication becomes testy. Take a nap or vanish until you're ready to initiate a one-on-one talk. Then you'll get the results you desire. Finally you hear what ails others. You find a way to reverse the tides. Tonight: Dinner for two.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) *** You might want to avoid associates, especially if they're connected to work. Others seem to have their share of complaints, which you would prefer not to hear. Remember this too will pass, especially if you don't feed the negativity. Tonight: Accept an invitation from a pal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ** Pressure builds, making you feel at your wits' end. You juggle different problems with skill, but you might not be able to get the total perspective. Carefully consider opportunities that surround a very demanding but energized friend. Tonight: Don't change plans.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) **** Be imaginative with difficult associates. You might not be sure how to approach a partner. Perhaps being yourself and not pushing too hard will work. If someone close to you wants to do something, go along for the ride. Tonight: Please another.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) *** Stay close to home, and the party will come to you. Someone from a distance could appear out of the blue. Allow others to add more to your life. You often go out of your way for loved ones. Let it be mutual! Don't let a difference of views grow into a battle. Tonight: Entertain those who are around you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) **** Start up talks. You might be bolted over by another's anger and frustration. Lay back and let more happen in your life. You also might be unusually exhausted from the hard pace that you insist on. Continue discussions. Keep errands to a minimum. Tonight: At a favorite spot.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ** Deal with money changes in your customary and direct manner. Others seem to be a little awry, or at best not on the same page as you. Lighten up and don't take friends personally. Make plans that feel right to you. No one else can judge what you need. Tonight: Someone else steals center stage.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) **** You smile even when others are grim and somewhat off-kilter. Know when to put a halt to an issue or problem. A loved one shares much more of his- or herself. Still, someone's protest might not be unfounded. Tonight: Think.

Hubby's demand unreasonable to wife

Dear Annie: I am a single mother and work as a freelance photographer in the Midwest. Last week, I was in Chicago and noticed I was low on gas. I stopped at a filling station in a rundown part of town. When I got out of my car, a large man came out of the shadows, waved a knife in my face and grabbed my arm. He said he would hurt me if I yelled, and ordered me to get into the car and give him my keys.

I was frightened to death and could think only of my little girl and never seeing her again. I reached into my purse for the keys, but instead, felt the handgun my father had given me for protection. I pulled out the gun and pointed it at my attacker. He took off running.

I was numb and shaking. I got into my car and drove home, but realized later I should have reported the incident to the Chicago police. I have a good eye for detail, and this man's features are burned into my memory. I am certain I could create an accurate picture of him. My father, however, thinks I should keep quiet. I have a license to carry a gun, but not in Illinois. He's concerned I could go to jail.

My mother says I owe it to other women in Chicago to report this predator and I shouldn't mention the fact that I possess a gun. But I'm sure the police would be suspicious of how I managed to escape, and it would be hard for me to lie.

I don't want to go to jail, but I would not be able to live with myself if this man attacked another woman because of my silence. Scared But Alive in Indiana

Dear Scared: We contacted Patrick Camden, deputy director of news affairs at the Chicago Police Department. He said the police are more concerned about a man accosting women at gas stations and stealing their cars than they are about your handgun. He assured us that you would not be arrested — provided, of course, that you do not bring the gun with you when you report the crime. He also recommended that you make the report as soon as possible. It will give the police an opportunity to catch this man and will also ease your conscience. Please do it.

Dear Annie: When my husband and I were separated for six months, he had an affair with my best friend, "Katie." He confessed the whole sordid mess, and we have since reconciled.

Now, Katie says the affair was a big mistake and she wants to be my friend again. Annie, she lied to me the entire six months the affair went on, even when I asked her point-blank if there was something between her and my husband.

Katie has always been great fun, but I don't feel the same way about her anymore. Should I trust her again and let her back into my life? — Lulu in Louisiana

Dear Lulu: It's time to move on. You are taking a risk by having Katie as a friend. She may still be interested in your husband and could entice him if your marriage flounders again, and you'd always be suspicious. This friendship is over.

Dear Annie: I am 25 years old, attractive and well-educated. I am involved in a local organization and recently met a man who is 48 years old. I find him quite good-looking and interesting, and would like to pursue a relationship with him. He has never been married, nor has he ever been involved in a serious relationship.

I know he's old enough to be my father, and I'm worried this could be a problem for him. Do you have any advice? — Connecticut Cutie

Dear Cutie: He's 48 and has never been involved in a serious relationship? The age difference may be the least of your problems, dearie. However, this is why flirting was invented. It allows you to express a casual interest, and if he wants to pursue the matter, he will let you know. Try it.

Gay ex-husband concerned about mother of his child

Dear Prudie: Before I came out, I was married for 20 years to Debbie, a very nice gal, who wised up to the situation before I did and left me for another guy. As divorcees go, it was pretty amicable, especially since we both wanted to minimize the damage to our teenage daughter. Since then, we have seen each other at family events, exchanged Christmas cards — that sort of thing. I moved out of state many years ago, and we both appear to be in solid relationships.

Two weeks ago, I was informed that Debbie has cancer, and it does not look good. I sent a card, and we talked on the phone for about an hour a couple of days ago, which was nice, but I did not bring up one topic. Should I go back for her memorial service? I will miss my ex-wife and mother of my child and feel that I owe her my respects, but I never really got along with her (now) ex.

Also, the focus of any memorial service should be about her, not her (some-what famous) gay ex-husband showing up out of the blue. On the other hand, I am worried about how my daughter will be holding up, but I really do not know if my presence is a good thing or bad thing. Any advice? — Wondering

Dear Won: By all means, go. This is a woman with whom you shared a life and had a child, and your parting was friendly, to boot.

These "qualifications" remove you from the category of someone showing up "out of the blue." Your presence will surely be appreciated, and it is appropriate for you to pay your respects. (And forget her ex. These days, a great number of people have them.)

Prudie, encouragingly Dear Prudence: I have been seeing my boss (a married man) for about two months. I know it is wrong to be involved with someone like him, but when we're together, it feels so right. He is constantly telling me he misses me when we don't see each other, and he tells me I make him happy. Every time we're alone, we end up kissing, hugging, making out... and twice we actually made love. I really love him, but I'm confused as to whether he feels the same or if he's just in it because it is a sexual thing to him. I get the impression I'm more or less a sex object.

I've been thinking about breaking it off, but I'm unsure about it because I want to figure out what it is that we have — a loving relationship or a sexual one.

Confused Dear Con: He's maaarriied. But you knew that, so we'll just concentrate on your actual question. Because all your get-togethers are, literally, get-togethers, suggest a movie one night, and see what he says. As to Prudie's opinion about whether you are more or less a sex object, Prudie's answer would be "More." — Prudie, directly
