Many Happy Returns

This Spring marks the birthday of the first American Newspaper

JOHN CAMPBELL, colonial postmaster of Boston, certainly set a good example in the liberal use of the mails.

Campbell corresponded regularly with the Colonial Governors of New England, keeping them posted on Boston news. So regular and voluminous was this correspondence that Campbell's letters finally emerged in the form of a printed pamphlet called "The Boston News Letter." And this was the first regularly and continuously published newspaper in America, appearing weekly from the last week in April, 1704, to the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

The newspaper carried advertisements . . . from its very first issue! And this advertising, telling the reader where to obtain the goods that he sought for his home or his farm or his business, lifted the mere friendly chronicle of village affairs into the realm of a service to the community. The news-letters, plus advertising, became a helpful, informative, and educational institution.

Today, as in 1704, and all the years between, the advertisements are your guide-posts to honest, dependable merchandise at a fair price.

CHAPTER XIV

When Slias Babson failed to come bome for dinner the night the Bank of Valley Center closed forever, his wife waited nutil eight o'clock and then telephoned Henry Rookby. Upon of hate if we couldn't see our one picion that something tragic impended. He found Babson's tin hox unlocked. so he opened it and found Babson's letter to his wife in the envelope with the life insurance policies.

Shaking slightly with apprehension, Mr. Rookby went into his cage and found there an envelope addressed to to him. It was from Pabson and read:

"Dear Henry: I can't stand it. If I live my wife and children will be paupers and I'll be the most hated man in this county, I could never beat back-and I'm too old to try. And I'm too tired. Look for me in Lake Rahson. Good by and good back. S. B."

So Mr. Rookby telephoned the super intendent of state banks at the capital to send somebody up to take charge of nouncing the closing of the bank.

The payment of the semi-annual interest had been due on July 1, Alas! The funds of the district had been deposited in the Bank of Valley Center, and all but 30 per cent of them had been lost in the collapse of the bank; so the district, not knowing what the bolders of its bonds purposed doing, defaulted on the interest.

holders notified the district that unless made by August 1 legal action would given to secure the bonds.

The directors of the district held a meeting. They recalled Nate Tiche nor's threat to buy the bonds from the original purchasers.
