Associated Press Writers NEAR KARBALA, Iraq The Army's 3rd Infantry Division dashed north Monday toward the Shiite holy city of Karbala, only 50 miles south of Baghdad, but was stalled by a sandstorm that blew out of the desert.

While Iraqi paramilitary units harassed coalition troops from the rear. U.S.-led forces tried to maintain their advance on Baghdad. The troops made a rapid advance under heavy allied air protection that wiped out a column of charging Iraqi armor and sent some of Saddam Hussein's outer defenses withdrawing toward the capital.

But the weather - not Iraqi troops - halted the long columns of thousands of vehicles that were stretched across the desert and farms.

Meanwhile, a British soldier was killed in combat in southern Iraq, the first British combat death since the war began, the Ministry of Defense said.

Memorial committee making progress on Cobra helicopter

By ROGER CLINE Staff Writer

It's an AH-1G Cobra helicopter gunship codenamed "Hammerhead," which the Vietnam Memorial Committee has acquired and is in the process of restoring.

"We've pretty well got it in pretty good shape,' said VMC member Jack Tibbets. "I'm going to guess that we'll be about. ready to paint it in another two weeks, and then put the main rotor and main mast back in it, and then we'll be in pretty good shape.'

Observant Big Springers may have noticed the pedastel for the helicopter has been put in place on the northeast side of the memorial grounds.

"We've got the pedastel up. We've still got to do groundwork some around it, foundation, rock, stuff like that,' Tibbets said. "(VMC Chairman) Gene Wilson's in charge of that. About with that, we'll be ready to set the bird."

Wilson said the helicopter will make a good addition to the memorial.

"Mostly because of what it stood for and what it did in Vietnam," he said. "It served a lot of purposes towards saving peoples' lives. It was there when needed. It basically took out a lot of

Council to consider dress code By ROGER CLINE

Staff Writer

Big Spring City Council members will consider implementation of a citywide dress code during their meeting Tuesday evening.

The meeting will begin at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday at the City Council Chambers, 307 E. Fourth 51

Currently, the city doesn't have unified rules for dress standards, according to Director of Administrative Services Leigh Corson.

"There haven't been any city-wide standards up to this point." Corson said. "It has pretty much been up to each department to set standards as they saw fit. This is just taking it more citywide."

Corson said the changes will not affect uniformed employees much.

"The main part of this is setting a standard for non-uniformed employees, which are pretty much our office employees," she said. "This will just give us a little more consistency between departments and the various worksites.

The proposed resolution would set the standard at "business casual" for non-uniformed employees. According to the proposal, examples of allowable clothing include slacks, long or short sleeved shirts with a collar or banded collar, blazers or sport coats, sweaters or cardigans, knit golf shirts, polo shirts, city logo shirts, skirts and dresses no

Associated Press Writer Troops pressed toward Baghdad with new wariness on Monday, as militiamen loyal to Saddam Hussein proved they were not a beaten force. Iraq claimed to have shot down two U.S. helicopters and taken two pilots prisoner, a day after more than 20 Americans were killed or captured.

Saddam, in an appearance that seemed calculated to show he was at the helm, sought to rally his people Monday with a televised speech. Minutes later, Iraqi television showed images of what appeared to be a downed U.S. Apache attack helicopter sitting largely undamaged in a grassy field.

"A small number of peasants shot down two Apaches," Iraq's information minister Mohammed Saeed al-Sahhaf said. "Perhaps we will show pictures of the pilots."

The Pentagon confirmed that one helicopter was missing but offered no information about pilots. U.S. Central Command, which oversees the war in Iraq, declined comment on the footage. A military spokesman said officials them, U.S. officials said. were analyzing the images.

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) -With U.S.-led forces closing in on Baghdad, a composed Saddam Hussein tried to rally his people and his troops with a stirring address Monday in which he vowed that allied forces would be crushed and "victory will be ours soon."

U.S. officials said American intelligence will review the address to determine whether it was Saddam and when it was produced.

The Iraqi president appeared in full military uniform and seemed more robust and relaxed than during his last nationally televised address on Thursday, which followed the first round of cruise missile attacks on his capital. There had been unconfirmed reports that he was killed or injured in those attacks.

"Iraq will strike the necks (of each enemy fighter)," he said. "Strike them, and strike evil so that evil will be defeated." Taunting the allies, he asked: "Have you found what the devil that besets your soul promised you in Iraq?"

Saddam urged loyal Iragis to cut the throats of the invaders and insisted that Iraqi troops would prevail in the fight against'a more technologically advanced enemy. He also made specific reference to U.S. tactics and the fighting around Umm Qasr, in an obvious attempt to show that the address was relatively current.

"Those who are believers will be victorious. In these decisive days, the enemy tried not using missiles and fighter jets as they did before. This time, they sent their infantry troops. This time, they have come to said he was not convinced that the address was current. "The contemporary events referred to ... did not appear to me to be unambiguously contemporary," he said.

"And had he have wanted to indicate that this was live, or was recent, there were many events that he could have referred to, which he clearly did not. So that is why we are continuing to analyze the situation.

Praising his troops, Saddam said Iraqi fighters were "causing the enemy to suffer and to lose every day."

"As time goes by, they will lose more and they will not be able to escape lightly from their predicament," he said. We will make it as painful as we can.

Saddam said American ond-largest city. and British forces had "become entangled" in Iraq's desert, with "Iraqi residents surrounding by allied forces, to be them and aiming their fire at them."

Addressing the people of Iraq's cities - Basra Baghdad, Mosul and elsewhere - Saddam warned that the enemy will intensify its raids as their troops suffer casualties on the ground.

"Be patient. God's victory is coming.... Be tolerant," he added.

Saddam said the ground battles were going well and Iraqi troops had been able to inflict great losses on the enemy. He praised his commanders, several of them by name, saying their units fought fiercelv against coalition troops. Among those he named were the commanders of the 51st, 11th and 18th divisions, which are posted in Basra, Iraq's sec- of the appearance.

He told the people of Basra, which has been isolated but not occupied patient because "victory is imminent."

Saddam said the allies were "trying to avoid engaging our forces" - a clear reference to the U.S. strategy of avoiding having to enter provincial cities - adding that "they are using their warplanes to attack our troops without engaging them in fighting."

"Whenever they penetrated our territory, they were faced with fierce resistance from Iraqi people, tribes, party members, Saddam's Fedayeen and security forces," he said.

husband's leaving

After losing brother, woman now faces

By LISA FALKENBERG Associated Press Writer

FORT HOOD — War is testing Sandra Brown in ways that even many soldiers could not imagine.

Though she won't step foot on Iraqi soil, her brother, 2nd Lt. Therrel S. Childers, died in fighting there Friday and her husband is facing deployment.

Brown, 32, said Sunday she hasn't been preoccupied with asking why the war has impacted her family so profoundly.

"I don't really question it," she said. "I figure there's a reason. I don't know that reason right now, but it will come to light eventually. I guess in the end it just makes you stronger."

Her brother, a 30-yearold Marine from Harrison County, Miss., assigned to Camp Pendleton in California, was one of two Marine's who died during ground combat in southern Iraq _ the first troops killed in combat since the fighting began. The other Marine was Lance Cpl. Jose Gutierrez of Los Angeles.

On top of the grief, Brown must now cope with the impending deployment of her husband, Richard, an Army sergeant based at Fort Hood.

The soldier is struggling to reassure his wife so soon after losing her brother.

"The hardest thing about this death is that I am going to the same place where it happened," Sgt. Brown, 31, who is with the 297th Transportation Company, said in Sunday's editions of The New York Times. "I kept telling my wife not to worry about her broth er. 'He's trained, he's professional, he knows his job,' I would tell her. But now I can't say that any more.

"She won't believe me." Sandy Brown is consoled by the fact that her husband, who serves in an Army support unit, will not be on the front lines as her brother was. She got a surprise Sunday, when her husband received a monthlong deferral to be with his family.

"I was a little uneasy about Shane, but my husband, I'm not so worried about," she said. "It's more a case of being separated than a fear of danger."

To cope, Brown said she turns to her family, and her second family in the military, where wives and mothers of soldiers help absorb her pain and the familiar fears.

"You just kind of draw from each other and encourage each other," she said.

She's trying to remain strong for her two children, a 3-year-old son who doesn't yet understand what has happened and an 8-year-old stepdaughter, who Brown said took the death very hard but is "accepting it."

"I can't let my fears take over," Brown said. "I've got to be strong for them and I've got to be strong for my husband."

Her husband facing deployment, Brown said the family has been spending a lot of time together and trying to resolve last minute housekeeping issues. But after the bills, the issues with children, the grief is ever present.

Moore Development for Big Spring Inc. is considering using some of that organization's 4-A economic development tax money for 4-B community improvement projects.

Are you for it or against it? Do you know what it means?

If you would like to hear more about the subject or voice your opinion to those who can make a difference, you're going to get a chance Tuesday night.

"Tuesday evening we'll be having a public forum," said Moore Board President Tim Blackshear. "The Big Spring City Council will be there as well as the board of directors for Moore Development. We hope to have a large crowd that will give us some public input on the possible use of our 4-A tax dollars for 4-B projects." Blackshear said the Community Roberts Center and begin immediately following the 5:30 p.m. Big Spring City Council meeting.

The idea is to get input from citizens on the idea. "We've had several smaller meetings and I felt like we needed to get a crowd and get the general public's views on the possibility of doing this for the community," Blackshear said. "Show them some ideas of what we can do, the possibilities of using that money for 4-B projects. I'm kind of halfway neutral on it right now and I'd like to see what the public has to say.'

Moore Development officials will explain the concept.

"We'll explain the difference between 4-A and 4-B and each one of our members and hopefully members of the city council will give their viewpoints on it," he said. "Then we'll open the floor up.

forum will be at the Dora Actually, we'll have com- A/4-B going on for several fill out with their questions so that we can address those in an orderly manner."

Moore While Development was originally set up to provide economic incentives for commercial, industrial or manufacturing companies to locate or remain in Big Spring, state law allows Moore to use some of its tax dollars to enhance the infrastructure and facilities of the city if the issue passes in election. Moore an Development has formed a committee and is considering going to the voters about 4-B projects.

Blackshear said the viability of Moore itself. questioned in a citizen's petition now circulating. will not be a topic at the forum.

"I'm not interested in the petition," he said. "Those people have the right to do that if they want to. We've had this 4-ment cards for people to months and because of some questions and concerns that some people have had/and asked me on the streets, I felt like the public is not aware of how the process could work and the possibilities, the pros and cons of doing it.'

> Blackshear would like to see the forum stick to the 4-A/4-B issue.

We're going to stick to that topic pretty much," he said. "We're not going back five years, we're not going back 10 years. We're going to stick to that and we want facts and we want opinions. We will listen to peoples' opinions, but this is not a session for people to come in and beat up the city council or the board of directors.'

Annie's Mailbox . . . Advice for those in need

Dear Annie: I read the letter from the father in "Springfield, Mass." He instructed his child to hide in order to teach his wife a lesson about leaving him alone in the unfenced backyard. (She was shoveling snow in front.) He said he has tried for years to get his wife to better supervise their children. Evidently she is too selfish and stubborn to recognize a good lesson when she sees one. If I had her name and address I'd report her to child protective services for neglect.

- Father in Oregon Dear Oregon: We were flooded with mail on this subject, and most of it could be categorized by gender the women thought the father was sadistic, the men thought the mother was totally irresponsible. Here's what came into our office:

From Tucson, Ariz.: A 5vear-old is old enough to attend school without Mama, use a school bus without Mama, dress himself, and so on. He should be trusted in his own backyard. This father must be very controlling.

California: Southern When I was in high school, I warned my sister not to leave her bike unlocked in the front yard, but she ignored me. One day, I hid the bike. When she noticed it was missing, she burst into tears. I showed her where it was, but the message never sank in. A year later, the bike really was stolen.

Prince George, B.C.: As the father of two young boys, I applaud this man's actions. If more parents put that kind of care and devotion into protecting and raising their children, we would see fewer abductions and runaway teens. West Virginia: Why hasn't this cautious guy built a 6foot stockade fence with gate latches to keep the kid inside and intruders out? Next time it snows, she should let him do the shoveling.

The Associated Press

Michael Moore, the Oscar-nominated filmmaker and political activist, accused President Bush of exploiting the public's fears after the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks to launch what Moore called an unnecessary war against Iraq.

"This is all a cover and what's so outrageous about all of this is that this man. George W. Bush, would use the deaths of Sept. 11 ... as a cover for his rightwing agenda," Moore said Thursday night as he accepted the Eleanor Roosevelt Freedom of Speech Award from the Southern California chapter of Americans for Democratic Action, a liberal activist group. The rotund, scruffybearded activist from Flint, Mich., is up for best documentary at Sunday's Academy Awards for "Bowling for Columbine," which explores America's gun culture.

He told the crowd of nearly 400 Thursday night that it was "high immorality" for the Bush administration to try to link Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein to the Sept. 11 attacks without providing evidence.

"Because they died, let me go bomb another country that had nothing to do with Sept. 11," Moore said sarcastically.

"This is an absolute disgrace. It dishonors those who died.

NEW YORK (AP) Elizabeth Taylor is giving up show business for good saying raising money to fight AHDS is more important to her than acting.

"At the end of the broadcast, all the past winners are going to walk across the stage: So that will be my swan song on the stage," she told "Access Hollywood" this week. "I've retired from acting; it doesn't really interest me much anymore.

It seems kind of superficial because now my life is AIDS, not acting."

Taylor, who won bestactress Oscars for 1966's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" and 1960's "Butterfield 8," said she's glad the red carpet arrival has been scrapped this year in deference to the war in Iraq.
