The Big Spring Independent School District food service department began its free summer lunches Wednesday for community youths.

"School takes summer vacation but hunger does not," said Joann Knox, BSISD food service director. "This program is provided to ensure that the children in our community do not go hungry during the summer months."

Anyone who is 18 years of age and younger is eligible to enjoy lunches and breakfasts for free at three BSISD campuses.

Lunches are offered from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.,

Mondays through Fridays, at Big Spring High School, 707 E. 11th Place; Bauer Elementary, 108 NW Ninth St.; and Moss Elementary, 3200 Fordham. Breakfasts are offered at Big Spring High and Bauer from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m.

Newly elected U.S. Congressman Randy Neugebauer, right, stands with House Majority Leader Tom DeLay, R-Texas, Thursday after being sworn in. Neugebauer, Republican from Lubbock, said his first day as the District 19 representative was a bit overwhelming, but added he is excited about the chance to serve.

ON THE JOB

Neugebauer wastes no time getting acclimated

By BILL McCLELLAN News Editor

Less than 36 hours after he learned he had been elected as the U.S. 19th Congressional District's representative, Randy Neugebauer was in Washington, rolling up his sleeves.

"I think people in West Texas got their money's worth this day," the Lubbock Republican said from Washington late Thursday afternoon.

Neugebauer narrowly defeated Midlander Mike Conaway in a runoff Tuesday to fill a vacancy left by Larry Combest, who retired in May after 20 years in the post.

As family and friends looked on Thursday morning, Neugebauer cited the oath of office, administered by Speaker of the House Dennis Hastert, R-Illinois.

"It was a great feeling," said Neugebauer. "But it was a little overwhelming, too. I was sworn in and they said 'OK, now go to work.'"

In addition to a tour of the Capitol with family, Neugebauer had a full agenda. He participated in the day's session and met with House Majority Leader Tom DeLay, R-Texas. He had lunch with other Lone Star State representatives during a weekly luncheon of the Stars are coming out in Big Spring Saturday

By BILL McCLELLAN News Editor

The stars are coming out Saturday night.

It's time again for Big Spring State Park's annual Stargazing Party.

ALTON

"It's a neat family event that helps support our state park. It's a lot of fun," said Ron Alton, state park manager.

Each year, astronomers from the area, including Midland and San Angelo, put on the "party" to help educate the public about the heavens.

"They have been coming out for a good while.

This is at least the fifth straight year, and we had done it before that except for a two- or three-year lapse," Alton explained.

"It's a family outing for them."

"Their main mission is to educate others about astronomy. It's good for the public, too. It's something different from television on a Saturday evening. And it's educational, too. These guys love explaining about galaxies and planets."

It's low-cost entertainment that benefits the state park in at least two ways.

"It's our second biggest fund raiser each year, so it's very important to us," Alton said. "It helps the park garner revenue.

Plus, it is important that the state see that the park is being used. They look at those figures. So we naturally want to have as good of a turnout as possible."

Admission is $2 for everyone 13 and older. Children 12 and under are admitted free.

Organization has long, rich history in Howard County

By LYNDEL MOODY Staff Writer

The Masonic organization can track its beginnings back thousands of years — some say all the way to King Solomon's temple.

Wrapped in its mysterious history, many people consider the organization secret.

"Our lodge is 120 years old and we're the oldest organization in Howard County," said Bo Clawson, senior warden of the Great Staked Plains. "People think we're secret organization. We're not. We want to get our name out to the public."

The Heritage Museum is hosting a month-long display of memorabilia and information about

The Great Staked Plains Lodge was the first organization to be founded in Big Spring, Clawson said. "The Masonic lodge was the social center of the town," he said "When the Eastern Star was founded four years later, this was also their meeting place." During that time, the lodge opened its temple to the school system for classes. The lodge moved into its current temple on 219 Main during the early 1900s. Although the ancient organization still holds to

"You can go to a bookstore and find everything you want to know about the Masons, including all our secret handshakes," Clawson said. "We just can't tell you." according to Bruce Moore, president of the West Texas Astronomers, there should be plenty to view Saturday night. The moon will be a first-quarter moon and will be 50 to 60 degrees above the horizon. Jupiter will be about 30 degrees above the horizon to the west. To the east will be the constellation Hercules with M13, a globular star cluster. Rising to the east will be M4, a globular star cluster in Scorpius (the Scorpion). To the north will be spiral galaxies M81, Bode's Galaxy and Cigar Galaxy near the Big Dipper. Rising in the northeast will be the double star Alberio. Also rising in the northeast will be M57, the planetary nebular called the Ring Nebula. "It's an entertaining and educational experience for those interested in learning more about astronomy. It's a good family event, though individuals are certainly welcome," added Alton. "We invite everyone to come out and see the stars." The event will be held from 8:30 p.m. until 11 p.m. at the park, which is located atop Scenic Mountain, off FM 700.

Come out a bit early and watch the sunset. In the event of bad weather, Aug. 2 has been tentatively set as a backup date for the Stargazing Party, Alton noted. For more information, call Alton at 263-4931.

A SMALL PRAYER

by K. Rae Anderson

Prepare us, Lord, to be the wonderful people you know we can be.

Amen

'He's a rat, for sure skeeter'

"Hank the Cowdog" has made the news again. That isn't the purpose of this column, but it brings something to mind.

I don't have a cow-dog named Hank. What I have is a rat terrier. And her name is Skeeter.

I looked for information about rat terriers on the Internet. It says they were so named because they are good at chasing rats.

If that is true, then something is wrong with my rat terrier. Or perhaps she is too discriminating to be of any use at what Mother Nature apparently decided her worthfulness is all about.

That's another way of saying she doesn't do the rat thing.

Well, at least she doesn't do the mouse thing. You would think that a rat terrier would also help you with your mice problem, but as I said, perhaps she is too discriminating.

We had a mouse problem a couple of summers ago when it was so dry. We weren't alone. Living out in the "country," we are familiar with various critters showing up, particularly during times of drought.

Most people don't want to admit they've had mice though, because it sounds "unclean."

I suppose mice like clean houses, however. They may prefer them, in fact.

One thing is sure. Skeeter does not strike fear into the heart of mice. She basically ignores them. In fact, I think she is actually afraid of them.

One day during our rodent dilemma, Skeeter and I were playing catch with her favorite stuffed toy, Lambchop. Suddenly there came a rustling behind a paper sack in the corner. It was obvious Skeet (short for you know who) heard it because her ears perked up and she looked at the sack. Instead of investigating, she just picked Lambchop off the floor and brought her to me.

You'll note that I just called Lambchop — a stuffed animal which doesn't even have a head — a "her." That's because most animal lovers are pretty warped people. We have to name the toys and basically treat these four-legged bags of fur as if they were 3-year-old children.

"Where's your momma, Skeet?" I will say, if I am busy and Skeet won't leave me alone. And, for a second at least, she will go off looking for her "momma," which is, of course, my wife, Dixie. Pretty tricky, huh?

But not original. Another time I was napping on the couch, when I awoke to whispering: "Where's your daddy, Skeeter? Where's your daddy?"

Someone wanted to go shopping, and I don't mean Skeeter.

Anyway, the paper bag rustled again so I pitched Lambchop over in the corner and directed Skeet to "Go get Lambchop."

She moved in cautiously, sniffed a little from two feet away, then backed off altogether. She gave me a look which I interpreted to mean, "If you want Lambchop, you get Lambchop. I ain't goin' near that paper bag." And she trotted out of the room.

For all her fear of mice, she's an extremely hyper dog. I don't know what it is, but whatever she has makes Attention Deficit Disorder look like a sleep aid. She needs constant attention — though other than wanting her neck and head rubbed, she really doesn't know precisely what it is she wants.

And it's pretty sad, because she stays in the house all day. When we get home from work, she comes after us like wet on water.

It is like she knew we had left her for good and were never coming back and now here we have and praise the Lord and Merry Christmas and I love you, I love you, you're home, it's wonderful, it's wonderful, it's wonderful, I love you, I love you, I love you. Now let me lick your ears.

So maybe the mice keep her company while we're gone. The ones that survive the traps, the bait and the sticky mats, that is.

One night, I tried a new approach. Kind of a "Skeeter see, Skeeter do" idea. I tried getting down on the floor and acting like a mouse. It didn't impress the dog, but my wife was in complete agreement.

"He's a rat, for sure Skeeter," she said.

In answer to which Skeet walked over and licked my face, as if to say, "Yeah, but I love him, anyway."

I guess she's pretty intelligent after all.

BILL

Faith without 'thorns' is shallow indeed

There are at least two levels of faith in God. There is faith that believes as long as it sees the unmistakable proof. Then there is the faith that continues to trust even though the evidence is not always obvious.

The first kind of faith is very natural. Thomas heard the excited announcement of his fellow apostles that they had seen the crucified Jesus alive from the dead. He refused to believe until he saw Jesus for himself. When Thomas finally saw what the others had seen, he was then eager to worship Jesus as both Lord and God. (John 20:24-38).

That kind of faith can still be seen today when people who look to God for everything that they consider blessed and good. As long as those self-defined blessings flow into their lives, they remain eager Christians. However, when life takes a turn for the worse and God no longer lives up to their expectations and their external religious props are kicked from beneath them, such shallow believers often lose their faith.

The other kind of faith is deliberate and rare. When the ship that was carrying the apostle Paul to Rome sailed into a violent storm, the outcome looked bleak. The crew abandoned all hope of surviving the tempest. Then Paul stood among them and announced that God had revealed to him that there would be no loss of life. When by all appearances it looked like they would not live, Paul said, "Therefore, keep up your courage, men, for I believe God, that it will turn out exactly as I have been told" (Acts 27:25).

The reality was that these seasoned sailors had lost all hope in the face of the apparent. Still Paul continued to trust God in the face of an uncertain future. He believed God is trustworthy no matter what the future looks like.

That is the kind of faith that continues to trust God in the face of suffering. It is the faith that continues to trust God even though you don't understand. It is the faith that continues to trust God in the difficulties of the present because He has always been trustworthy in the past.

One of my favorite episodes of the old Andy Griffith Show is the one when Opie met Mr.

MacBeavy. Mr. MacBeavy walked around in the trees and blew smoke from his ear and jingled when he walked. When Opie persisted in telling this fantastic story, Andy threatened to punish his son. He did not believe Opie's take and knew in his head that he must discipline Opie for lying. However, in his heart he believed "in" his son, who had always been honest with him. (By the way, Mr. MacBeavy really did exist and what Opie said about him had a logical explanation).

Andy's choice was between a faith that believes only when the evidence is clear and a faith that always trusts even when there is no apparent reason to believe because the object of your trust is trustworthy.

That is the choice we have before God. Any faith that rejoices in the roses, but has no room for the thorns is a shallow faith. But, a faith that, despite the thorns, chooses to trust God because He is trustworthy is a faith that will see you through. "O taste and see that the Lord is good" (Psalm 34:8).

HERALD Staff Report

An investigation into credit card theft has led to multiple charges being filed against a Howard County couple.

Joseph Lawrence Mathis, 46, and Debra Faye Mathis, 42, both of 100 Broken Bow, are out on bond after being arrested on charges involving drugs, credit card abuse and theft of a firearm.

Howard County sheriff's deputies, executing a search warrant in the investigation of stolen credit cards, discovered much more.

"They recovered some drugs and some items purchased with a stolen credit card. There were also some stolen rifles in the residence, two rifles," said Sheriff Dale Walker.

"There were some children in the residence. It appears that some of the children may have been involved in some of the thefts. The parents may have used the children in that manner," Walker said. "Child welfare was called and took the children."

Debra Mathis was charged with credit card or debit card abuse, possession of a controlled substance, possession and transportation of a chemical with intent to manufacture a controlled substance (methamphetamines) and theft of a firearm.

Joseph Mathis was charged with possession of a controlled substance, possession and transportation of a chemical with intent to manufacture a controlled substance.

Walker said components for the manufacture of methamphetamines were discovered at the residence. He said other charges may be filed, including possible child endangerment.

The case is under the direction of investigator Jay Fryar.

Law enforcement officers stop a vehicle on Interstate 20 at Stanton after pursuing the driver from the Midland area. What was to have been a routine traffic stop turned worse when the woman, Patricia Sample, allegedly rammed a Martin County Sheriff's Office vehicle.

Pursuit ends in charges of assault on an officer

By LYNDEL MOODY
Staff Writer

A high speed chase involving deputies from the Martin and Midland County sheriff's departments ended Thursday night with no injuries.

Patricia Sample was arraigned this morning on a $8,000 bond in Martin County and transferred to the custody of the Midland County Sheriff's Office after leading law enforcement on a chase down Interstate 20.

Sample, who was wanted on a Midland County warrant for no insurance, now faces a charge of aggravated assault on a police officer with a deadly weapon after her vehicle rammed a Martin County Sheriff's car.

Martin County sheriff's deputies joined the pursuit after it crossed the county line, said Chief Deputy Jerry Heflin.

Taking the lead, Heflin and another deputy attempted to box in Sample's fleeing vehicle.

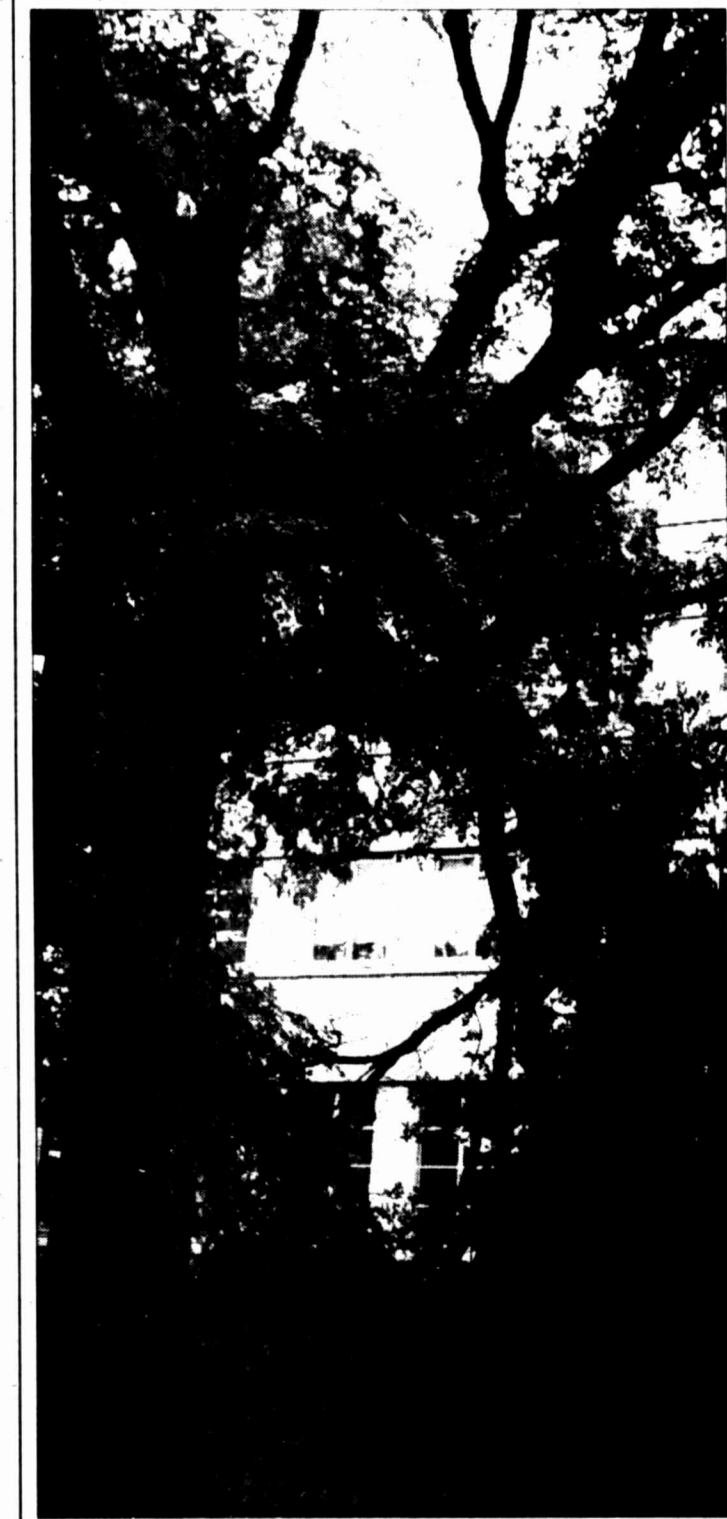

"I was on the side, the other deputy was in front and Midland was behind us," Heflin said. "We got her down to 45 or 50 miles per hour when she tried to ram my pickup. There was a little gap and she tried to get into that."

According to Heflin,

Sample's car ended up in the median and the pursuit ended at mile marker 158 on Interstate 20.

The Midland County Sheriff's Office was unable to provide information about the chase this morning by press time.

NEWS BRIEFS

Bank robber apologizes for rudeness

FORT WORTH (AP) — Fort Worth police were looking for a thief who politely apologized while he robbed a bank of about $3,200 Thursday.

Lt. Jesse Hernandez of the Fort Worth Police Department said a man wearing a baseball hat, white shirt and blue jeans entered the Frost Bank and used the bathroom. The unidentified man then approached a teller and pulled a gun. According to Hernandez, the robber said, "I don't mean to be rude, but I am robbing you."

The teller put some cash in a trash bag and gave it to the suspect.

Hernandez said the robber excused himself again — saying he didn't mean to be rude — and ran out. "Evidently it was not a scene that drew a lot of attention," Hernandez said.

Federal search role questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fed up with being ignored, Texas congressmen relied on a seldom-used House rule to force the Homeland Security Department to disclose information about the search for a missing state legislator's plane last month.

The lawmakers on Thursday also said they want more information about a Corpus Christi FBI agent's call to a lawmaker for help in the search.

Meanwhile in Texas, a motion was filed Thursday to dismiss a lawsuit that alleges the Texas Department of Public Safety improperly destroyed documents related to the search. The attorney representing DPS said there's no evidence that the agency's officials continued to destroy documents after they were told to stop.

U.S. Rep. Chris Bell, a Houston Democrat, and six other members of the House Government Reform Committee invoked the "seven-member rule."

The rule allows at least seven members of the committee to compel an executive agency to provide information. In this case, the committee has given Homeland Security Secretary Tom Ridge until June 18 to comply.

Judge ends desegregation

DALLAS (AP) — Decades of federally mandated desegregation at the Dallas Independent School District were ended Thursday by a federal judge, who ruled that the school system's racial divide no longer exists.

Retests confirm DNA results in seven cases

HOUSTON (AP) — Retesting in seven cases, including one death row case, confirms previous DNA tests by the embattled Houston Police Department's crime lab, the Harris County district attorney's office said Thursday.

"Each one we see that they confirm the previous results, it makes me feel a little bit better, but we still have a long way to go," said Assistant District Attorney Marie Munier, who is in charge of the case review.

Retesting so far has been conducted and returned in 20 of the 213 cases sent by the police department to an independent DNA lab.

Woman wants to take it a little slower

Dear Prudie: I am 20 years old and dating a 23-year-old man; we'll call him "Patrick." I met him through work, and we see each other periodically at work. (We don't work in the same office.)

DEAR PRUDIE

My problem is that he has a 7-year-old son who doesn't live with him. He is truly a reformed rebel (he is actually very responsible now), and this child was just one of his many youthful indiscretions.

I have never had a "real" relationship before, and Patrick is pressuring me to be exclusive with him. How do I slow this down? I like him, and we get along really well, but I am definitely not ready to be in a serious relationship with anyone now, let alone a guy with a child. — Troubled

Dear Troub: There is no reason for you to feel you're at the mercy of Patrick's wishes. To slow things down, you just say that's the way it's going to be: slower. If he doesn't like it, well... you finish the sentence. And it would be most unusual for a 20-year-old woman to feel comfortable making a commitment to a reformed rebel and his youthful indiscretion. By all means, take your time, and if he doesn't see it that way, c'est la vie. — Prudie, glacially

Team sets out to recapture Iraq's national treasures

By REBECCA TROUNSON

The Los Angeles Times
Galvanized by the ransacking of Iraq's National Museum, computer scientists, archaeologists and art historians at the University of California, Berkeley, are hatching a plan to help the museum — and the war-scarred nation — resurrect at least some of what was lost.

The project, still in the planning stages, would use computers to re-create the museum's smashed or stolen vases, statues and cuneiform tablets from archived photos and historical records.

The project would include images, for example, of such priceless artifacts as a 5,000-year-old marble head that is believed to be the first sculptured portrait of a living person.

The life-size Warka head, a bust of a woman from the Sumerian city of Uruk, remains unaccounted for since the looting, although scholars hope it may be with other treasures in vaults that are still inaccessible. Also included would be a 4,000-year-old lyre decorated with the golden head of a bull that was excavated from the site of the ancient city of Ur. It has been badly damaged.

Scholars at UC Berkeley also hope to record and preserve other elements of Iraq's cultural heritage, including imperiled archaeological sites and historical monuments, by creating a comprehensive "virtual museum" of the nation's treasures.

"The dream is to create a kind of virtual atlas of these cultural gems, and help keep any more of them from being lost," said Ruzena Bajcsy, the director of UC Berkeley's Center for Information Technology Research, which is leading the effort.

The center's project would expand on other scholarly initiatives worldwide aimed at preserving the images of treasures in the Baghdad museum, home to one of the world's richest collections of early-civilization antiquities.

At least 38 of the national museum's major treasures are known to be missing, along with thousands of smaller, less valuable pieces. The facility is said to be so badly vandalized that it may take months or even years to figure out just what else was lost.

Academic and cultural institutions — from the University of Pennsylvania to the British Museum and the United Nations — are contributing to efforts to build a virtual catalog of the museum's holdings. The process has been hampered by the lack or loss of records at the site, including even photographs of some artifacts. But the outside researchers hope to solve that problem, at least in part, by delving into their own archives. The University of Chicago, which carried out excavations in Iraq dating to the 1920s and has among the most extensive photographic collections of such items in the world, launched a Web site with a slide show of artifacts soon after the looting, in part to help prevent the sale of stolen items.

Besides helping to catalog what was lost or looted in Baghdad, UC Berkeley's center wants to do more. It seeks to build a much larger database, incorporating photos, maps, drawings and text to showcase the full range of Iraq's treasures.

The team would include 3-D images ranging from tiny art objects to whole monuments and archaeological sites. The database would be interactive and within reach of anyone with a computer.

Bajcsy said a scholar or student, for example, might be able to plug into the database to obtain the inventory of furniture, art and other items known to have been in a specific room of an Iraqi palace at a certain time.

A scholar might also be able to take a virtual tour through time by traveling through history while standing at a single spot in an Iraqi fortress or temple, Bajcsy and her colleagues said. Or the person might choose instead to tour the building as it existed in a particular era.

The database also might boost scholarship by recording where and when a particular object was found and what period it dates to. That would allow a person to search, for example, for similar kinds of vases from the same period found at different sites.

"We want to make this easy to use, not only for teched-up scholars but for students and anyone else," said Robert Price,

UC Berkeley's associate vice chancellor for research. "The idea here is to put the best information technology at the service of the arts and humanities."

Bajcsy's cross-disciplinary center may be uniquely suited to the task. She is a pioneering researcher whose interests stretch from computer science to engineering and neuroscience. Her center is based at Berkeley but also draws on faculty from other University of California campuses.

The center wants to preserve not just what was lost, but what could be in the future. It might take advantage of technology developed by the Berkeley faculty, including 3-D laser-imaging equipment that can scan and record precise measurements — down to 2 millimeters — of archaeological ruins and historic monuments, said Alonzo Addison, director of the university's Center for Design Visualization.

The equipment already has been used to document part of the Colosseum in Rome, and this summer a Berkeley team will travel to Peru to record millions of measurements of the earthen remains of an Inca palace that is steadily disappearing.

"The conditions are very similar to those in Iraq," said Addison, who also is scientific adviser to the head of the world heritage center at UNESCO, the United Nations' cultural arm.

"This particular complex has stood for almost 1,000 years, but climate changes, rain and an increase in visitors are taking a toll. Just touching the fragile walls can bring chunks of earth falling off. We want to record it before it's gone."

Of course, the task isn't the same as actual preservation of artifacts. But Addison noted that it often helps. For instance, it is now helping engineers figure out how to save a "leaning minaret" in Afghanistan by recording extraordinarily precise measurements of the building's shift.

Beyond Iraq, Bajcsy dreams of building many such databases of the world's cultural heritage, from excavations at the ancient Mesopotamian city of Ur to the contents of the Louvre.

"So someone could say, 'Show me all the cathedrals of the world' or 'Show me Delhi in 1920' or 'Show me all the objects in the Baghdad museum' and we could make that happen," she says.

Bajcsy said she and other UC Berkeley officials are reaching out to archaeologists and Middle East experts at other institutions, hoping to collaborate.

Such a project requires funding. To that end, Bajcsy and her colleagues have contacted political leaders to seek their help in tapping the U.S. government, perhaps the multimillion-dollar USAID budget for Iraqi reconstruction.

With an estimated start-up budget for the project of about $1 million, the researchers also are seeking private and corporate contributions, Bajcsy said.

HC women add Colorado star to fold

New Howard College head coach Lorin Miller continued to revamp his Lady Hawks' lineup this past week by inking another game-breaking guard.

Miller, a former NBA assistant who was recently hired to resurrect the HC program, added one of the nation's top guards to his roster when Denver

South High School stand-out Adriana Johnson agreed to a scholarship offer.

"I think we're pretty fortunate to get her," said Miller. "I talked with the people who coached her and they speak very highly of her abilities and as a person."

"We needed guards and that's what she is, plus she can score a bit, too," he added.

Johnson's signing helps the Lady Hawks shore up a glaring hole at guard in Howard College's arsenal last season. Battered by injury and the midseason loss of point guard Alexis Britt, the Lady Hawks struggled to a 10-20 record and a tough 0-10 mark in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play.

Johnson, along with Miller's first signee Alison Lopez of Colorado City, should help alleviate some of the guard woes.

Both are quick, sure-handed players who can shoot from the perimeter. Johnson was a first-team All-City selection as a senior.

"Adriana is an extremely smart player who's teachable and enthusiastic about the game," said Ned Bishop, who coached Johnson in Colorado's premier summer league action. "She has exceptional speed and quick-

Diamondbacks continue 'Cindarella' run with a stunning 6-3 win over White Sox

The Big Spring Diamondbacks came into the Big Spring Little League City Tournament knowing they were in the classic role of Cinderella.

Coming off a 3-11 finish, the No. 13 seed continued to dance around the bewitching hour Thursday afternoon by claiming a tough 6-3 win over the Big Spring White Sox in the third round of the city championship series. Adam Guzman paced the Diamondbacks effort on both sides by tossing a two-hitter and hitting an inside-the-park home run.

With the victory, the Diamondbacks improved to 2-1 in the tournament and move into a fourth-round matchup against the Mariners on Saturday in Coahoma.

"We're still playing and that's all that matters to us," said outfielder Matt Dawson. "We know we weren't supposed to be here but we're playing pretty good now."

The Diamondbacks, despite a solid effort from Sox starter Joseph Morelton, managed to grab an early lead, turning a two-out fielding error and a wild pitch into a quick 2-0 lead. Clean-up hitter Caleb Gonzales collected the Snakes' only hit of the first inning, lining a single to center.

The White Sox, who had downed the Phillies 9-7 Wednesday in a game that was split over two days because of inclement weather, opened the bottom of the first with a big fireworks display. They cut the Diamondbacks' lead in half with a lead-off home run to the fence in left field.

The Sox threatened to blow the game open from there. They drew three walks to load the bases before Guzman managed to work his way out of the jam with a strikeout and then enticing the ensuing White Sox batter to hit into a fielder's choice to shortstop Brett Bethel.

The Sox, who had defeated the Diamondbacks by a 10-1 score earlier in the year, erased their deficit in the second by pushing another run across the plate. Morelton tallied the game-tying run on a throwing error by the Snakes' third baseman after being caught in a rundown between second and third.

The Diamondbacks answered back in the third. Aaron Guzman and Gonzales, who finished 2-for-2 from the plate with two runs batted in. Both hammered out RBI singles in the inning, helping up the Diamondbacks' lead to 4-2.

Adam Guzman sealed the win in the fourth with his first home run of the season — a two-run shot to center.

Orioles move into first with unusual 7-6 victory

By TOMMY WELLS
Sports Editor

The Big Spring Orioles had to wait a bit longer than normal Thursday to find out if they had won. In the end, however, they got to celebrate.

A controversial call at the plate on the game's final play forced officials to leave the field to review a play at home. Officials discussed the play for more than 10 minutes before ruling Brandon Ontiveros safe and giving the Orioles a 7-6 come-from-behind win in Teenage League baseball. Julian Garcia scored right after Ontiveros to secure the victory.

With the win, the Orioles moved into sole possession of first place in the division standings.

The Orioles, who have lost just three games all season, were led offensively by Jacob Cerda, second baseman Jacob Martinez and Ricky Dominguez.

Defensively, the Orioles were paced by Lance Fitzgibbons.

No Kidd-ing

Nets' star not playing well in Alamo City

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Playing in San Antonio hasn't been much fun for Jason Kidd lately.

While Tim Duncan and the Spurs' defense might have something to do with that, the New Jersey point guard is having trouble with the Spurs' new home, the SBC Center. His shots aren't falling.

In two games in the building, Kidd is 8-of-36 from the field.

"I'm on fire," Kidd quipped Thursday before the Nets practiced for Game 2 Friday night.

His 4-for-17 shooting in the Nets' 101-89 loss in Game 1 of the NBA Finals on Wednesday night was his best game at the arena this season. He was 4-for-19 in early March in a 92-78 loss.

"I used to love playing in the Alamodome," Kidd said. "It's just a different background here. I played two games here and I haven't hit the side of the barn. So hopefully sooner or later, I am going to have to make some shots if we're going to have a chance to win."

The Spurs' defense forced Kidd to take more jumpers than he would have liked, and he didn't go to the basket much with Duncan and David Robinson waiting inside to block shots. They combined for 12 blocks in Game 1.

Kidd tried to make some adjustments after a couple shots went in and out, but nothing seemed to work.

Teammates aren't worried about Kidd, whose scoring average dipped to 19.6 points with his 10-point effort Wednesday night. It was his second-lowest point total in a playoff game this season.

Backup guard Lucious Harris said Kidd had a quiet focus Thursday.

"I think he is going to come out in Game 2 and see FINALS, Page 9

The Big Spring Panthers scored twice in the top of the fourth inning Thursday and rolled to a 5-3 win over the Lady Hawks in the 2003 regular season finale for both squads.

The Lady Hawks finished the year at 7-3.

In other BSUGSA action, the Mama's Girls scored three times in the bottom of the seventh to take an 11-9 come-from-behind win over the Big Spring Reds.

Spurs assistant P.J. Carlesimo said Parker and the rest of the San Antonio defense put pressure on Kidd. Carlesimo noted Kidd missed some of his normally hits.

"He can go 0-for-10 every player in the building when it comes down to the fourth quarter he is going up," Carlesimo said. "You know and he is going to miss a shot."

The problem with the Nets in Game 1 was they were never the fourth quarter. The Spurs decided to go in the third by a 15-point lead.

Kidd's shooting made it easy to ignore. He had 10 assists and 10 rebounds in 44 minutes. He left him two rebounds of a triple double.

Game 1 was Kidd's first since spraining his ankle late in the game of the Nets in Detroit in the Conference final. Harris said that the fine.

"If it was (broke) him, he would be anyone know, but his teammates are a trainer," said Howard Donny Miller who is not on the roster.

Spurs assistant coach P.J. Carlesimo said Tony Parker and the rest of the San Antonio defenders put pressure on Kidd, but Carlesimo noted that Kidd missed some shots he normally hits.

"He can go 0-for-15, and every player in the league knows when it comes down to the fourth quarter he is going to step up," Carlesimo said. "You know and he knows he is going to make the shot."

The problem for the Nets in Game 1 was that they were never close in the fourth quarter. The Spurs decided the game in the third by opening a 15-point lead.

Kidd's shooting woes made it easy to ignore his 10 assists and eight rebounds in 44 minutes left him two rebounds shy of a triple double.

Game 1 was Kidd's first since spraining his right ankle late in the final game of the Nets' sweep of Detroit in the Eastern Conference finals. Kidd has said that the ankle is fine.

"If it was (bothering him), he would never let anyone know, not even his teammates or our trainer," said Nets forward Donny Marshall, who is not on the playoff roster.

We're Always There

BY JOYCE JILLSON

Uranus goes retrograde between now and Nov. 8. This planet is the rebel without a cause, the role model for bad behavior that does good in the world, the instigator of civil disobedience. The retrograde motion could cause a freakish obsession with the rules, sticking to them and punishing those who don't. It'll pass in a few days.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You're making progress toward your crazy goal, so don't stop now. What you need is faith. Someone younger has a stronger belief in you than you have in yourself. See yourself the way this person does.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You'll feel like vegging out in front of the television, but this isn't going pay the bills. If you can't seem to whip yourself into shape, whip someone else into shape instead.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Aren't you glad you stashed that cash away when you had it? While you're sleeping, the interest is building in the account you since forgotten about. What's that? You never saved the money? Then what are you waiting for?

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You'll be pondering whom you'd like to add to your network to push your project to the next level. It's probably someone who loves the art of the deal as much as you love the art of, well, the art.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Between your career, your love life and your family's demands of you, it's hard to put enough time into the education you value so much. Being up on current events and social trends helps you feel connected to the world.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 6). Your original ideas are very valuable if you take action and follow through. Your love life sizzles with new offers in July. There is no time to waste in August, when a job occupies you more (and pays you more, too) than it usually would. October brings surprisingly strong feelings; marriage is not far behind. Libra and Capricorn are harmonious lovers. Your lucky numbers are: 3, 8, 6, 36 and 31.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). As the guardian of the neighborhood, you report what you see and, as a result, ensure the safety of your area. Whether or not others give you due recognition, take pride in yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Make sure you're privy to the inside scoop at work -- that's where all the fun is. Break the routine, reach out to someone you don't usually talk to, or respond to someone you normally try not to engage.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You'll be obsessed with attaining a career goal. It's clear that in order to do this, you'll have to invite a business-savvy person to complete your team. Singles hook up with someone from school or the internet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). People see you as capable, strong and able to protect. That's why they may show you a weak side now. You'll be around some real complainers today. Listen to higher-ups and colleagues without responding.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The perfect living situation opens up at a deal you can't refuse -- though you might spend some time reminiscing about when the prices used to be affordable. Maybe you need to let that rich Taurus chip in to help you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You're simply not trying to be anyone but yourself. Your support of your family speaks well of you. In fact, new folks who meet you will be struck most of PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Make a play for what you want. Whether or not you get it might seem out of your control, but the truth is, there's little that can stop you once your competitive spirit kicks in. So, let it loose.

WEEKEND LOVE REPORT: With Uranus going retrograde, the rules of dating temporarily seem stricter than they've been lately. Cancer aspects are also encouraging us to go out of our way to nurture and protect loved ones. Acts of chivalry and valiance will be well received and indeed expected.

ARIES: A romantic matter requires you to be tenacious.

TAURUS: Caution: You could confuse love with a quest for achievement.

GEMINI: A new love makes huge concessions to spoil you.

CANCER: It's wonderful to have someone to share the little things with, but now, you're too concerned about getting some big things accomplished to think about that.

LEO: Future plans are set, and your family's attitude is enthusiastic.

VIRGO: It's a terrific weekend for romantic transformations of all kinds.

LIBRA: Jealousy makes otherwise upright citizens behave like children, but you can handle whatever comes up.

SCORPIO: Consider throwing a party for the old gang; love matches will rekindle.

SAGITTARIUS: A split-second decision brings romance to you.

CAPRICORN: When the love of your life asks for special time together, go ahead -- other things can wait.

AQUARIUS: Holding a grudge never helped anyone. Let go and be free.

PISCES: If you can't beat them, join them.

COUPLE OF THE WEEKEND: The excitement that Pisces and Aquarius share grows as these two are feeling confident, self-expressed and able to take risks. Lots of flirting but very little follow-through might be the game, but this only builds the romantic tension to dizzying effect when these two finally decide to come together.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Mayor Rudolph Giuliani and fiancée Judith Nathan beamed as they picked up their marriage license, five days before they plan to tie the knot.

The couple breezed into the city clerk's office Monday, walking past other prospective husbands and wives.

"They were very excited," said Sunny Mindel, a spokeswoman for the ex-mayor, who now runs a consulting firm, Giuliani Partners.

The lovebirds plan to marry Saturday evening at Gracie Mansion, the mayor's official residence, in a ceremony with Mayor Michael Bloomberg presiding.

They've been mum on details: Giuliani's teenage son, Andrew, reportedly will serve as best man.

Giuliani, 58, proposed to Nathan, a 40-something former nurse, during a business trip to Paris in November — five months after finalizing his divorce from Donna Hanover, his wife of 20 years.

Under the divorce settlement, Hanover received more than $6.8 million. Besides Andrew, Hanover and Giuliani have a daughter, Caroline.

Hanover, 53, is host of a syndicated television show, "Famous Homes and Hideaways." Last month, she and her fiancé — an old high school sweetheart — invited the press along as they shopped for wedding bands, saying they plan to marry in the New York City area this summer.

The Giuliani-Nathan nuptials will be a first for Bloomberg, who's making an exception from his policy of not performing weddings, said Bloomberg spokesman Ed Skyler. Giuliani regularly officiated at weddings while in office.

Giuliani's first marriage — to his second cousin, Regina Peruggi — lasted about 14 years. The Catholic Church annulled it because the couple hadn't obtained a church dispensation required when second cousins marry.

Nathan divorced wallpaper salesman Bruce Nathan in 1992. They have a teenage daughter.
