Teens help circulate petition in support of Big Spring VAMC

Churchwell.

A report released Aug. 6 recommending a study on closing Big Spring's VA Medical Center has many local residents worried about the future of the facility.

A group of local high school students is concerned enough about the problem to do something about it.

"If we lose it, Big Spring turns into a ghost town and people will be leaving in droves," said Big Spring High School junior Logan

"It'd be just like losing the (Webb Air Force) base all over added Churchwell's friend Corey Green, also a junior at the high school.

The teens, along with another BSHS junior, Manoj Thangam, spent most of the day Thursday in front of the Big Spring Post Office busily collecting signatures to try to convince officials to keep the hospital open.

The three said Logan's mother, Laurie Churchwell, an employee at Big Spring's Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center, started the petition and then enlisted their aid.

"I started it," Mrs. Churchwell said. "I felt like somebody should do something, so why not start something? I started the petition at Dora Roberts and I got about 200 signatures, and I felt like we needed more help. So here they

Public offers no comment during BSISD's tax hearing

A public hearing on the Big Spring Independent School District's 2003-2004 budget and tax rate Thursday night drew no interest from the public.

Trustees will now move forward on the $403,000 surplus budget based on expected revenue generated from a tax rate of $1.50 per $100 valuation.

"I recommend you approve a budget with a substantial surplus simply because the legislation is planning a special session in the spring on school finance," said BSISD Superintendent Michael

"The legislature will research school finance. What it will look like? I don't know but we will be in a situation to withstand a negative impact."

During the meeting, Downes updated trustees on two additional items placed into the budget since the last workshop in July.

The district is negotiating with the Big Spring Country Club to lock in rates for the next 20 years for use of the club's golf course. The Big Spring High School golf team currently uses the course, which will soon undergo an upgrade, Downes said.

The one-time payment for the contract is estimated at $40,000. The other item is an estimated

Town Hall meeting on VA situation set Monday

By THOMAS JENKINS

The Veterans Administration will hold a town meeting Monday in hopes of dispelling the myths surrounding a recent recommendation that could place the Big Spring VA Medical Center on the government chopping block. "The important thing HANSLIK right now is to get the facts out to the public. said VA Medical Center Community Coordinator Iva Jo Hanslik. 'We're at a very critical point in this. The Big Spring VA is not on the list of facilities to be closed, but it has been recommended by the CARES (Capital Realignment Enhanced Commission.

The meeting will be held Monday at 5:30 p.m.. in the Fireplace Room of the Howard Student College Building. Speakers will include VA Medical Center Director Carey Brown and Big Spring Mayor Russ McEwen. "This meeting will be a combined effort between the VA Medical Center and the city of Big Spring," said Hanslik. 'The entire purpose of this is to educate the public on what's going-on, and what could hap-

This is a very serious issue," said McEwen. "We have to work hard to keep our VA off the closing list, and I hope the people of Big Spring will do just that.

"What we need badly right now is letters, faxes and emails going out to the CARES commission and our congressional and senatorial representatives. Our representatives say they're overwhelmed with the lack of response from the Big Spring area."

McEwen said he's spoken with senatorial and congressional figures concerning the issue, and the response from area residents thus far leaves much to be desired.

"I just met with some of our senatorial and congressional representatives on this, and right now the news isn't good," said McEwen. "They tell us the response from the citizens of Waco has been tremendous concerning this issue, and the response from Big Spring has been next to nothing.

Hanslik said the response from Waco will naturally be greater when you consider its position in comparison to that of the Big Spring VA Medical

By 1:30 p.m. Thursday the total was up to more than 1,000. 'We've been having vets coming out in groups with their hats on, telling war stories," Logan said.

"I guess it gives us some faith in this town," Manoj added. "We're doing it for a worthy cause and that's what's important, the cause."

The petition, which Mrs. Churchwell typed up herself, reads simply, "We the undersigned oppose any action to close the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Big Spring, Texas." The message was popular enough to win the support — and signatures - of most of the people entering and exiting the Post Office.

"I moved here in 1990 because my husband is a veteran," said Rosebell Meek, who took time out to sign the petition. "He was retired Navy, a survivor of Pearl. The best veterans hospital in Texas was here, so we here," Smith said. "We the age of 80 but he died with very good care, caring people. It would disturb me very much to see younger veterans not havthat he did. I think it's very unfair."

Big Spring's Carol Smith also added her name to the list.

"They have spent a tremendous amount of money to renovate our hospital. We have our veterans nursing home here which they built because of the veterans hospital ans here because of the Air Force base that we used to have here. They retired here because they like this area and because ing the same facilities of the VA facilities here. I feel that this is a political issue that has come up and that it's just like the government to spend a dollar to save a dime."

Mrs. Churchwell urged other area citizens to circulate petitions of their own.

"They don't need to just depend on one certain group to do it," she said.

OUR VIEWS

We salute:

Each week, the Herald salutes individuals and groups from our community and area who have been recognized for special achievements or accomplishments.

We recognize these special people for working to help make our region a better place to live, work and play

This week we salute:

 Bebe McCasland and employees of the South Plains Wildlife Center, who put on an entertaining and informative program for children at the Howard County Library.

 Counties, agencies and individuals who worked diligently to form a Crossroads area Sexual Assault Nurse Examiner program. Their efforts culminated in Wednesday's signing of a cooperative agreement.

· • Members of the Big Spring Steers football squads, who are raising funds to help teammates Shamar Myles and Brock Pittman, both critically ill at hospitals in Lubbock and Midland, respectively.

• Big Spring Independent School District employees, who signaled "back to class" with an annual luncheon Wednesday.

Is there an individual or organization in our community that you feel should be saluted? If so, please send us their name and why you think they should be recognized. We must have your name and telephone number and you must provide it in writing.

A SMALL PRAYER

by K. Rae Anderson

May we never lose sight of our hope and dreams of a wonderful heavenly future with you, Lord.

The day I fell for Mary Sue Turner was in Stamford a while ago for a family reunion. Everytime I go back, I feel compelled to drive around a little, rekindle some memories. See the old house. stuff like that.

On this particular trip, I drove by Bulldog Stadium. I have lots of recollections about the place, but the memory I was looking for wasn't on the field or in the stands, it was around back, behind the bleachers.

That's where I last saw Mary Sue Turner.

The whole world was about to explode. Just over the horizon was the Vietnam War, long hair, flowers and beads, bellbottoms, protest marches, sit-ins, free love and psychedelic music.

But in the early '60s in Stamford, cars were the rage. White T-shirts, blue jeans and black high-top tennis shoes were the "in" look. Boys wore their hair above their ears and collars, and girls wore dresses to school — no jeans or pants. My favorite song was "Dance to the Guitar Man" by Duane Eddy.

In those days, the area behind the bleachers was a place to hang out. There were weights, bars for chin-ups, and ropes to climb. The boys went there to work out. The girls went to watch the boys.

Mary Sue was a brunette with a button nose and full lips. She was cute. No, she was beautiful.

She was 16 and looked 21. I was 12 and looked 10.

At least half the boys in town were in love with Mary Sue, and I was one of them.

Just mentioning Mary Sue's name along with your own brought envy.

"I saw Mary Sue in shorts!" "You did not!" "I did too, in the gym."

"They don't let boys in the gym when the girls are in there, stupid!"

"I know. They left a window open and I peeked in during recess. And I saw her! In shorts!"

"Really? You really did? What coldr were they?'

Everyone had a Mary Sue story like that and all of them were lies. I wanted something else. Not a story, but something real. The one thing I wanted, more than anything in the world — more than her brother's '56 Chevy, even was to kiss Mary Sue Turner. And time was running out. My family was about to move to Austin.

Mary Sue and her best friend, Cindy, weren't interested in "kids" like myself and my friend, Gary. They were looking for real men seniors. But on that day, there weren't any around. Just the four of us were there, and Mary Sue and Cindy were about to leave.

"Hey, Mary Sue," Gary said, "Let's cruise the Super Dog," referring to the burger joint where, come dark, all the teenagers would congregate.

"There's nobody there yet, and besides, you kids aren't going anywhere with Cindy and me," Mary Sue said with a huff. "C'mon. Cindy, nothin's shakin' here." And they started to leave.

As they got into the Chevy, I noticed car keys laying on the ground, near where Mary Sue had been sitting. I grabbed them.

"Mary Sue," I called, waving the keys in the air. "You left something."

"Well, bring 'em here," she said, leaning out the car window. This was my chance. I had to take it.

"I'll give 'em to you, if you'll do something for me," I said.

"You can't have a ride, peabrain," Cindy shouted from the other side of the car. 'What?" said Mary Sue.

"Uh...a kiss," I said, stepping closer to the car. "Just a little

"A what, you little creep?" "Just a kiss."

I actually imagined her saying "sure." I wouldn't have brushed my teeth for a month, maybe two.

Instead, she came flying out of the car with a growl in her throat. The chase was on.

Going the only place I knew she couldn't reach me, I started climb ing one of the ropes hooked to the top of the bleachers. Halfway up, I stopped and looked down at Mary

"Just one kiss?" I pleaded. "Did I tell you I was leaving town? It could be a goodbye kiss."

"I'd kiss dirt first, brat. Give me those keys.'

I climbed farther, almost to the

"You have to come down sometime, you creep," she said, shaking her fist in the air at me. "And when you do, I'm gonna' bash your head in!"

Realizing that Mary Sue probably wasn't as much in love with me as I was with her - and not wanting my head bashed in -Idecided to pull myself over the back of the bleachers and run down the stands.

I turned my head around to finish climbing the rope when Cindy's face suddenly filled the sky in front of me. "Boo!" she yelled.

I let go of the keys first, then the Mary Sue could have tried to catch me, tried to break my fall or something, but she didn't. She did do one thing. She screamed.

"Aiiiieeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeee! Aiiiieeeeeeeeeee...'

On the way down I had two thoughts. One was the realization that Cindy had gone around, climbed the bleachers and snuck up on me. The other was that Mary's screaming was scaring the heck out of me.

Democratic candidates need passion ll nine Democratic presidential candidates are gathering down at Navy Pier, the biggest names in the American labor movement are over at the Drake Hotel, and Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley has other plans.

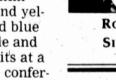

"I'll be watching the White Sox," Daley says.

So no drop-by to let the candidates kiss his ring? No appearance to let labor leaders kiss his ... mistletoe?

"The Sox are playing Kansas City," Daley says in a tone that suggests that if you don't get that, you just don't get him.

With a large fish tank behind him where blue and yellow tangs and blue damsels circle and dart, Daley sits at a paper-strewn conference table in his fifth-floor working office at City Hall. He has no desk. There is a desk in his ceremonial office next door, but that is his father's desk and Daley uses it only when dignitaries visit.

In his fifth term, Daley is the second-longest-serving mayor in the city's history, ranking just behind his late father, Richard J. Daley. Though the current Daley was originally dismissed as a "dese-dem-and-doser," who would quickly be swamped by racial divisions, failing schools and rising crime, he now presides over one of the few cities in the nation where the population has grown, median household income has gone up and home ownership in the city is increasing at a faster rate than in the suburbs.

Daley turns his chair away from the conference table and talks be mayor in 2030, he throws back his head and lets loose a series of booming laughs. But, gee, he'd be only 88. Though not the kingmaker his father was — the rules of the game have been changed, and today primary elections, not party bosses, pick presidential nominees -Daley is a force to be reckoned with in American politics. Illinois almost always picks winners in presidential elections, though in 2000 George Bush became the first Republican in history to win the presidency without winning Illinois. (He had a little help from the Supreme Court.)

Daley says all the Democratic candidates have come to see him except Al Sharpton and Dennis Kucinich (maybe they're afraid he wouldn't take their calls), and though Daley will not endorse in the primaries, he will work for the party's nominee.

He will not watch the nine Democrats debate at the AFL-CIO forum at Navy Pier this evening (the White Sox will beat Kansas City 5-4 to Daley's delight; he grew up a few blocks from where the Sox play), but there is no need. Since most of these presidential forums have been sponsored by Democratic special interest groups labor, minorities, gays and lesbians, etc. — they have become pander-fests, with the candidates elbowing each other to see how much they can promise how fast. But even this is getting harder, as the special interest groups (though not necessarily the candidates) are growing more sophisticated. Andrew Stern, president of the Service Employees International Union, the largest union in the nation, is in Chicago to watch and listen to the candidates, but he is looking for more than pander and promises.

"We want to try to take a look at candidates in a more vibrant forum than lining them up in a row on stage," he says. "So we found a group of young, struggling, independent filmmakers, gave them a budget and asked them to spend a day with the candidates and try to make a film to express who this person really is."

In September, the films will be shown at a meeting of the union's political activists. Stern specifically told the filmmakers that he was not interested in the policy positions of the candidates. (He already knows them.)

"We want to know what makes them tick," he says. "Who are they? What values do they hold? Can they connect with people? These days, people want to know who their presidents really are."

Toward that end, Stern instructed the filmmakers to capture "the soul" of each candidate.

And there better be at least one thing lurking in those souls, Mayor Daley says: passion. "It can't be just a job to you," he says. "It can't be just bureaucratic. If it is, people sense that." But can George W. Bush be defeated by any Democrat? "Without passion, anybody can be defeated," Daley says. "Even myself."

A call to holiness

by Richard and Linda Light

Why does it seem that our days are too full and move too fast to enjoy them the way we once did as children? For most of us, a time of freedom from responsibilities and cares has faded away into a distant memory.

We are chasing the American dream of success-money in the bank, a beautiful home, luxury cars, name-brand clothes, vacations that come with a large price tag and all the latest technology. Since most of us were not born rich, something has to give in our quest for success and it is usually our freedom.

Now you may say, "I could have thought of many things that would be sacrificed in the drive to succeed, but freedom was not one of them."

Let us explain what we mean by that. We are created by God to live in relationship to Him and each other. A relationship defined by Jesus and His sacrifice on the cross. We are to live a life defined by love.

As Paul wrote in I Corinthians 13:4-"Love is patient, love is kind. It does not envy, It does not boast, it is not proud. It is not rude, it is not selfseeking, it is not easily angered, it keeps no records of wrongs. Love does not delight in evil, but rejoices with the truth. It always protects, always trusts, always hopes and always perseveres."

What God ultimately expects of us is to be totally sold out to Jesus in every way with an uncompromised love. Jesus is to be the center of our thinking and our universe. In Mark 12:30 we find, "Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul, and with all your mind, and with all your strength."

Now, how can this kind of living bring freedom? We are free from worry because we know that God is our protector and our provider. (Matthew 6:25-34). This freedom does not mean that we do not work to provide for ourselves, but it does mean that we know that "in all things God works for the good of those who love Him, who have been called according to His purpose. (Romans 8:28).

We are freed from the need to amass material wealth in the form of the latest technology, newest cars, biggest houses and many other things that people feel they must have in their lives-even at the cost of financial and personal ruin. We know that each day's labor brings it own reward and blessings from God. We have no need to fear answering the telephone because angry creditors are calling night and day.

In 1 John 2:15 we are told to "love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man loves the world, the love of the Father is not in him.'

We are a generation who need instant gratification. If the work is hard and the road is difficult, many of us find ourselves giving up. God changes that when we accept Jesus as our Lord and Savior. We are given the strength to walk as Jesus walked-humbly, caring more for others than for ourselves, needing no praise or adulation for our good works, not desiring power for its own sake.

How are we given this strength? We are provided with a faith community call church, we have the Bible to teach us and give us examples to follow, we are given the Holy Spirit as a comforter, guide and gifter of charisms. We are given the Lord's Supper or Eucharist to sustain us. He is our living bread of heaven. (John 6:51)

We are called to serve God in whatever way He needs us. There is an old saying that goes something like this, "God doesn't call the qualified, He qualifies the called.

In other words, we need not fear that God will ask us to do something impossible. He gives us everything we need if we just move forward in faith and say, "Yes, Lord."

There is a story about a man who came to the Lord and agreed to give up all his possessions. He sat down and wrote out a list of everything he owed. He brought the list to God who promptly told him to tear it up. When the man complied, he asked God, "What do you want from me?" God told him He wanted his heart. God said, "I want you to love me enough to trust each day in my care. Give me all you possess, and I will give it back again to be used for My glory and My kingdom. You need never fear for I walk beside you and will never leave you."

And at the end of our lives when our earthly time is past, there is no need to fear what lies ahead. For we can say as Paul did, I have fought a good fight, I have finished the race, I have kept the faith. (2 Timothy

Electronic voting devices shake some states' trust

By BRIGID SCHULTE

The Washington Post

The Virginia State Board of Elections had a seemingly simple task before it: Certify an upgrade to the state's electronic voting machines. But with a recent report Johns Hopkins University computer scientists warning that the system's software could easily be hacked into and election results tampered with, the once-perfunctory vote now seemed to carry the weight of democracy and the people's trust along with it. An outside consultant assured the three-member panel recently that the report was nonsense.

"I hope you're right," Chairman Michael Brown said, taking a leap of faith and approving Diebold Systems' Election upgrades. "Because when they get ready to hang the three of us in effigy, you won't be here." Since being released two weeks ago, the Hopkins report has sent shock waves across the country. Some states have backed away from purchasing any kind of electronic voting machine, despite a new federal law that has created a gold rush by allocating billions to buy the machines and requiring all states to replace antiquated voting equipment by 2006.

"The rush to buy equipment this year or next year just doesn't make sense to us anymore," said Cory Fong, North Dakota's deputy secretary of state.

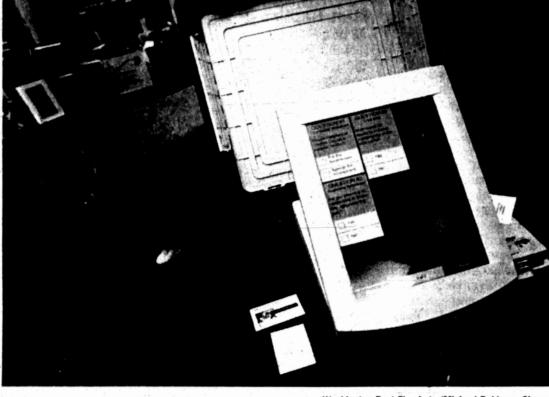

The report has brought square into the mainstream an obscure but increasingly nasty debate between about 900 computer scientists, who warn that these machines are untrustworthy, and lion weren't counted improbable. But it's not state and local election because of registration completely out of the officials and machine errors or problems with question," said Larry manutacturers. insist that they are.

"The computer scientists are saying, 'The machinery you vote on is inaccurate and could be threatened: therefore. don't go. Your vote doesn't mean anything,'-" said Penelope Bonsall, director of the Office of Election Administration at the Election Federal Commission. "That negative perception takes years to turn around." Still, even some advocates of the new system are thinking twice. The Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, which pushed for electronic machines to help visually impaired and disabled voters, says the Hopkins report has given them pause. They're calling on President Bush and Congress to convene a forum of experts to hash it out. "We have become concerned about these questions of ballot security," said Deputy Director

Nancy Zirkin. Her group and others supported passage of the $3.9 billion Help America Vote Act in November. Of the $1.5 billion appropriated so far to replace old machines, rewrite outdated equipment standards, encourage research to improve technology, train poll workers and update registration lists, about half has been released. And that has all gone

The remaining money is to be released once an Election Assistance Commission is appointed. By law, the board was to have begun work in February. Names of the four commissioners, two from each major party, have yet to go to the Senate for confirmation.

The stakes are high. The 2000 Florida presidential election showed the current system's shortcomings.

Frustrations with the old machines have turned many local election officials into staunch supporters of the new electronic models. caused a 7,000-vote error and clouded the outcome of the gubernatorial race for two weeks. But more critically, computer scientists charge that the software that runs the machines is riddled with security flaws.

"Whoever certified that code as secure should be fired," said Avi Rubin, technical director of the Information Security Institute at Johns Hopkins and co-author of the report. Rubin analyzed portions of Diebold software source code that was mistakenly left on a public Internet site and concluded that a teenager could "smart" manufacture cards and vote several times. Further, he said, insiders could program the machine to alter election results without detection. All machines had the same password hardwired into the code. And in some instances, it was set at 1111, a number See TRUST, Page 7A in and the problem was laughably easy to hack, Rubin said.

Because there is no paper or electronic auditing system in the machine, there would be no way to reconstruct an actual vote, he said.

In a 27-page rebuttal, Diebold dismissed the findings. Officials said that the software Rubin analyzed was old and that only a portion may have been used in an actual election. "Right now, we're very, very confident about the security of our system," said Mark Radke, a Diebold executive. "If there is a way to make it more secure, we're open to that from good, reliable, knowledgeable sources who don't have a previous agenda."

That doesn't satisfy some critics. "The most important thing about the Hopkins report is not the security holes they found, but irrefutable proof that all this stuff that the machines are secure is hot air," said David Dill,

A massive power blackout retreated stubbornly Friday as power officials struggled to understand why the historic outage spread in minutes through the northeastern United States and southern Canada. Lights flicked on and air conditioners restarted for some, but millions of others baked in stuffy rooms.

Cleveland weathered its worst water crisis in history as the blackout shut all four major pumping stations. The pumps which serve more than 1 million residents in the city and 20 suburbs began operating Friday morn-

Kenneth Klapp, an ISO spokesman, said the problem was detected from information on power usage and transmission prior to, during and after the blackout. The ISO had not determined the exact location of the problem by early Friday.

More generally, industry and government experts blamed a system composed of interconnected grids that has not been demands.

The disruptions were as diverse as they were widespread.

A small explosion at the Marathon Oil refinery 10 miles south of Detroit was blamed on the outage which cut power to a pump, allowing a buildup of gasses that ultimately exploded in a smokestack. No one was hurt but police fearing additional explosions or possible release of toxic gas evacuated hundreds of residents from a one-mile upgraded to meet power radius around the refin-

I hit flat on my back. The red Stamford dirt swirled up around me. For several seconds, I was numb. No pain, no feeling at all. My eyes were open, but the only thing I saw was that rope, reaching far up into the sky. I wondered if I was dead.

"Well, he's not dead," I heard, and suddenly Gary's face was hovering over me. Mary Sue was there, too, And Cindy.

"Are you all right? Are you all right?" Mary Sue kep saying. "Oh, I'm so sorry, I'm so sorry."

"Go over to that house and call an ambulance!" heard Mary Sue shout to Gary.

"No, no wait," I said. Slowly, I sat up. Mary

Sue was right beside me on her knees, tears running down her cheeks. She was beautiful even when she cried.

And I smiled, right at Mary Sue. My mother said a smile is the most wonderful gift you can give some-Mary Sue never met my mother. She got up and kicked me. "You're not hurt!" she said. And she kicked me again.

And she bent down and picked up the keys laying there beside me and she whispered, "Billy McClellan, you scared the #&@%! out of me, you little #&@%!" And she and Cindy stormed off, jumped in the Chevy and drove away.

What Mary Sue said shocked me more than the fall. I had never heard a girl say words like that before, not even my sister, and I gave her a lot more reason to. I told Gary what Mary Sue had whispered, but he didn't believe me.

"You fell," he said, like maybe the fall caused my hearing to go askew.

I didn't get a kiss from Mary Sue, but from that Wednesday morning until the weekend, when we moved, I had the best Mary Sue story.

"Me," I could say, and point right at my chest. "Me, I was kicked and cussed by Mary Sue Turner.'

And Gary would back me up. "I was there! I

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON TAX INCREASE

The City Council of the City of Big Spring will hold a public hearing on a proposal to increase total tax revenue from properties on the tax roll in the preceding year by 6.17 percent. Your individual taxes may increase at a greater or lesser rate, or even decrease, depending on the change in the taxable value of your property in relation to the change in taxable value of all other property and the tax rate that is adopted.

The public hearing will be held on Tuesday, August 26, 2003 at 5:30 pm in the City Hall Council Chambers located at 307 E. 4th Street, Big Spring, Texas.

FOR the proposal: Russ McEwen, Woody Jumper. Jo Ann Staulcup, Gloria McDonald,

Joann Knox and Greg Biddison

AGAINST: the proposal: None

PRESENT: and not voting: Stephanie Horton

ABSENT: None

The following table compares taxes on an average home in this taxing unit last year to taxes proposed on the average home this year. Again, your individual taxes may be higher or lower, depending on the taxable value of your property.

This Year Average residence homestead value $29,738 $31,016 General exemptions available (amount available on the average homestead, not including senior citizen's or disabled person's exemptions) $5,000 $5,000 Average taxable value $24,738 $26,016 Tax rate $.6563/$100 $.6963/$100 Tax $162.36 $181.15 (proposed)

Under this proposal, taxes on the average homestead would increase by $18.79 or 11.57 percent compared with last year's taxes. Comparing tax rates without adjusting for changes in property value, the tax rate would increase by $0.04 per $100 of taxable value or 6.09 percent compared to last year's tax rate. These tax rate figures are not adjusted for changes in the taxable value of property.

Cubs drop Astros into tie for NL Central lead

CHICAGO (AP) - Six weeks left and the NL Central can't get much closer. The Chicago Cubs have a simple plan for the days ahead: stick around.

"The way the season has been it's been somebody up and somebody down, but never really ever out of it," Chicago right-hander Clement said after the Cubs tightened the race by beating Houston 7-1 and knocking the Astros into a first-place tie with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"It looks like all three teams have the talent to stay in this thing or win this thing," said Clement, whose team is one-half game back.

"We knew no matter what happened, good or bad, coming into this series, that there are 41 games left after these,' said Houston's Craig Biggio, who was 1-for-16 as Houston won the opener and dropped the final three at Wrigley Field.

"They are knocking at our doorstep, they are right behind us. I still think it will come down to the last weekend," Biggio added.

Alex Gonzalez, in a 2for-46 slump when the series began, had three hits, including a homer, and drove in three Thursday.

The Astros managed just eight runs in the four games as some of their top hitters, especially and Lance Berkman (1-for-15 in the series with four strikeouts Thursday), struggled.

"We had chances. We had base runners on with the right people up. We just didn't get those hits," manager Jimy Williams after Thursday's Clement (10-10) lasted 5 2-3 innings, allowing three hits and a run, but walked four and made two throwing errors. The Cubs bullpen gave up just two hits over the final 31-3 innings.

Hee Seop Choi hit a two-out, two-run double in the first off knuckleballer Jared Fernandez (1-2) to get the Cubs started.

Kenny Lofton had a sacrifice fly to make it 3-0 and Gonzalez added an RBI double for a four-run lead in the fourth.

Reliever Rick White, who'd been designated for assignment by the White Sox earlier in the month and then signed by the Astros, joined Houston on Thursday and the rust showed in his one inning of work. He hit two batters and walked two to force in a run as the Cubs went ahead 5-0.

Gonzalez hit a two-run homer off Brad Lidge in the eighth.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) regulation. Phil Mickelson was in the unfamiliar position of co-leader after the opening round of the PGA Championship. Woods was frustrated again.

Mickelson shot a 4under 66 Thursday and shared the first-round lead at Oak Hill Country Club with Rod Pampling, a favorable spot as he bids to win his first major in 42 chances as a pro.

Woods, meanwhile, struggled to a 4-over 74 and showed no sign of He also bogeyed No. 17 snapping his string of five and seconded birdies at majors without a victory. Nos. 10, 12, 13, 18, 2 and 4.

Fred Funk was third, 3 under after six holes. Defending Masters champion Mike Weir finished at 2-under 68, and was tied with Aaron Baddeley and Peter Lonard, both still on the course.

It wasn't Woods' worst round at a PGA Championship _ that was a 75 in the third round in 1997. His worst round in a major was an 81 at the cut. British Open last year.

But he needs to improve if he hopes to win his ninth major.

"I just didn't drive very well and put myself under a lot of pressure because of it," Woods said.""It didn't matter what club I hit off the tee. I couldn't keep it in play."

Goodrich says he couldn't see accident until it was too late

DALLAS (AP) -Dwayne Goodrich, a former Dallas Cowboys defensive back on trial for manslaughter in the hit-and-run deaths of two people who stopped along the highway to free a motorist from a burning car, told jurors Thursday that he didn't see the fiery freeway accident scene until it was too late.

Goodrich testified that a sport utility vehicle in front of him had blocked view approached the accident. He said he slammed on his breaks when he came upon a stalled vehicle in the road and was forced to swerve to the left, fatally hitting "Joby" Wood, 21, and Demont Matthews, 23, and injuring another The 25-year-old, who became emotional a few times during testimony, he originally believed, or hoped, he had hit debris, but his reaction was to flee the scene.

"I just panicked and got scared," Goodrich said. "I've never, ever in my life been in any kind of situation like that and didn't know how to handle anything.'

Goodrich testified that he went to a friend's house, called his mother and returned to the accilast 14 cuts. He matched a dent scene to see the damcareer-best by finishing . age he had caused, but the fourth at last month's did not surrender to law officers until consulting with a lawyer.

Prosecutor Fred Burns tried discredit to Goodrich's testimony by pointing out that he never mentioned in a police statement that an SUV had blocked his view or that he had returned to the scene.

Burns probed Goodrich about why he had panicked if he initially believed he hit only debris.

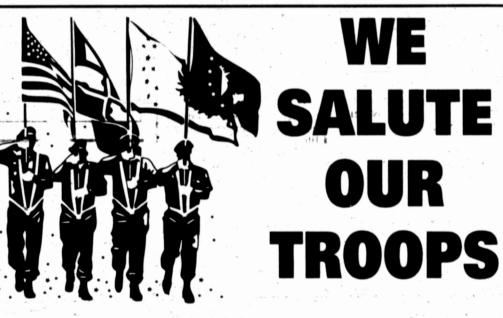

"You panicked because you saw the faces of the men who bounced over your windshield - the men you killed," Burns said.

Goodrich denied the accusation. He said he regretted not stopping after the accident, and said it wasn't in his character to flee.

"I've went over this thing a thousand times in my head and I've stopped all thousand times,' Goodrich said.

Goodrich also said alcohol was not a factor in the accident and said he had not had anything to drink for three hours prior to it.

He faces two to 20 years in prison for each count if convicted. He's also been indicted on one count of aggravated assault and three counts of failing to stop and render aid. The current trial is only for manslaughter charges.

Judge rules in favor of fired Permian coach

ODESSA (AP) - An Austin judge has ruled that West Texas education administrators did not allow a Permian High School coach to adequately defend herself when she lost her job two years

State District Judge Jeanne Meurer's decision this week on Helen O'Neal's case reversed a former education commissioner's decision. The case will now go back to the state commissioner of education.

"We ordinarily see in a case like this that reinstatement and back pay is very common for the commissioner to order for a teacher," Kevin Lungthe Texas State Teachers Association.

Although district officials are aware of the situation, they will not take action until they have received the signed judgment. Then they will have 30 days to decide whether to appeal.

Efforts to contact O'Neal

witz, general counsel for for comment Wednesday were unsuccessful.

District trustees terminated the Permian volleyball coach's contract in 2001 after the athletic department gave reasons, said Wendell Sollis, the district's assistant superintendent for human resources.

Carter and Hutchinson have split snaps almost equally in practice through training camp, but Parcells said the only true evaluation is how they respond in games.

Repeatedly asked about the situation, primarily concerning Hutchinson, the starter the final nine games of 2002, Parcells finally laughed and likened the immediate speculation to "a mushroom ... the clouds are billowing."

"Don't read anything into it," he repeated. "I'm just going to play (Romo).

Romo said he found out about the decision when him Parcells told Wednesday. The coach didn't tell Hutchinson until Thursday.

"I do what I can on the field and he makes the decision." Hutchinson said after Thursday's practice. "I've still got to think of it as I get better every day, keep working, doing what I can to take care of myself."

Hutchinson, obviously disappointed, said Parcells didn't elaborate on why he made the decision or what it means long term. He was told to be ready to play, but didn't know if he would get in the game.

It seems certain that Parcells won't determine his No. 1 starter before the Cowboys break camp from San Antonio next week. And there are only two preseason games left after the Texans.

"I don't want to be premature, that's for sure," Parcells said. "I'm going to do it as soon as I can, and bedon't know when that will be."

Parcells has never indicated what his plan would be after the first two preseason games if he didn't have a starter in place by then. He has also said he doesn't have another quarterback in mind such as free agent Ray Eucas, who once played for him with the New York Jets.

- In the preseason opener, Hutchinson was 5-of-10 passing for 43 yards, with a fumble after being sacked. Carter was 8-of-13 for 81 yards with an interception in six possessions, and Romo was 4-of-8 for 51 yards and an interception the last two drives.

By Parcells' count. there were only two legitimate scoring chances in 13 possessions.

'We want to forget about what happened last week and start over,' said receiver Joey Galloway. "It's a good thing it's the preseason and it doesn't really count yet."

Running back Troy Hambrick wasn't able to show much in his first chance as Emmitt Smith's successor. He lost a yard on four carries against Arizona, but Parcells said two blown blocking assignments likely prevented gains.

The Texans lost their preseason opener 20-12 against Denver, and two weeks ago in a controlled scrimmage against the Cowboys allowed eight sacks and didn't score until their fifth possession. That was when Carr threw a touchdown on his only completion.

".What we did in the scrimmage was Little League ball. We don't want to do anything like that," Carr said. "I think we got our guys back and ... we've been playing together last week and half, so it'll definitely be an improvement."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 Dec. 21). The way to happiness is simple today Improve yourself, and help others. It's lucky to contact friends from the past, neighbors and loved ones. Ancient history brings future money. A friend makes a proposal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 Jan. 19). Commitment isn't the kind of virtue that gets one big test — rather, it's a daily choice. If you feel like your dedication to a project or person is on trial, it is See beyond a family member's limitations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Someone of importance will be interested in one of your ideas, helping you get to the next step. Measure yourself against the best, or measure yourself against your own statistics. Generous actions will undo past mistakes.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You won't know your limits if you don't keep try ing. Leave employees with a prioritized to-do list to avoid the confusion. Ironically, an independent attitude is what attracts love. Your best signs for love are Leo and Virgo.
