Council OKs lesser rate hike

Atmos customers to see their bill increase

By THOMAS JENKINS

Despite its request for a 7 percent rate increase, it appears Atmos Energy is going tohave to settle for less than half that amount.

The Big Spring City Council voted unanimously Tuesday night to accept the first reading of a 2.93 percent rate hike from the utility provider, accounting for 41.6 percent of the increase Atmos was seeking.

The compromise came as a result of negotiations between Atmos Energy and a coalition of more than 60 West Texas cities, aided by a consultant, that began in September of 2003. Lubbock and Amarillo settled their rate cases outside of the coalition for 54 percent of Atmos Energy's original request, or a 3.78 percent increase. In January, the coalition members, including Big Spring, declined that settlement.

The accepted rate, assuming gas costs $4.96 Mfc, would mean the base residential rate will increase to $8.50 per month, if approved during final reading in two weeks. Commercial base rate would be $14, small industrial gas service $55, public authority gas service $42 and state institution $40.74.

City Manager Gary Fuqua said he's pleased the coalition was able to get a better price for the citizens it represented.

"Through the consultant and the steering committee, we were able to reach a suitable agreement with Atmos," said Fugua. "I'm pleased we were able to get the price down for our citizens, and we did understand they

Longtime Vincent area farmer receives conservation award

HERALD Staff Report

A long-time Vincent resident was named the Howard Soil and Water Conservation District Farmer of the Year Tuesday night.

"I am very appreciative they chose to recognize me," said Binie White, recipient of the award. "I always feel I could do more. I think it's important we do more to make sure we preserve the land for future generations."

Given annually, the award honors a farmer or rancher who recognizes the importance and demonstrates the desire to conserve the natural resources that exist on their farm or ranch.

Big Spring City Council gave the go-ahead for West Texas Water Ski Club to use Moss Creek Lake once again, but on a very stiff condition.

The council passed the first reading of an ordinance that will allow the club to use the lake for water skiing at an annual fee of $500, plus $100 for each new member. The club currently has five members. However, the council also decided to add conditions to the contract that will force water skiers with the club to

Big Spring man pleads guilty in district court

By THOMAS JENKINS

It was finished before it began, as 23-year-old Anthony Lee Evans of Big Spring pleaded guilty to two counts of deadly conduct this week, only hours before jury selection in the 118th District Court trial was set to begin.

Howard County District Attorney Hardy Wilkerson said a last-minute witness prompted Evans to enter into plea negotiations late Monday afternoon, ultimately earning the young man two 10-year sentences.

"There were certain details we needed to work out with a witness," said Wilkerson, "We had to locate him and make sure he was going to be in attendance. Once we located that witness. we made sure the defendant was aware of it and he became rather amiable to plea negotiations.

"He plead guilty to two different cases involving deadly conduct. In these cases, deadly conduct was the deserve an increase because there has been inflation, but we felt the amount they were asking for was excessive. That's the reason we formed the coalition.

"It's a very technical and difficult matter that we had to look into, and it's easy to get confused, but our consultant led us through it and helped us a great deal. I'm just glad it worked out for both parties."

Fuqua said he hopes the process of proposing artificially high rate increases won't become the normal procedure for these types of matters in the future, as they come with a fairly hefty price tag.

"I hope this doesn't become the norm," said Fuqua. "As the mayor pointed out tonight, it would be so much nicer if Atmos would come to us with what we feel is a reasonable amount so we could just sit down and work it out. We had to spend quite a bit of time, energy and finances on the consultant and it would be better for everyone if we could forego that expense.

"The cost of the consultant was between $75,000 and $100,000, and all of the cities that joined the coalition will be expected to pay a portion of that based on our populations. We haven't received that bill at this point, so I really don't know how much it will be yet."

Mayor Russ McEwen said he believes the practice of inflating rate increases has already become procedure for Atmos, and he certainly isn't happy about it.

"It has absolutely become the norm," said McEwen. "Because we come in with a number that's artificially inflated so they have a fall-back number to go to. It's just not a good way to do business in my opinion. It cost the cities $100,000 to hire a consultant, and that is $100,000 that the cities and our area could spend on water lines and streets and other things that are important, as opposed to making sure that Atmos is giving us the best deal." McEwen said only time

"It's going to take a different way of doing business," said McEwen. "We're always going to be in a position where we don't trust them, and therefore we're going to have to find out. If we go really need, then over a period of time we'll feel like we can trust them.

"The real frustration is that they have a monopoly. These are supposed to be our partners and I don't think when they say they want to be good citizens they should come in with an artificially inflated rate. We're settling at less than 50 percent of what they were asking. It's crazy.'

discharge of a firearm in the direction of a person and a vehicle. One occurred in September of last year and the other in January of 2004."

Wilkerson said both deadly conduct cases involved the discharge of a firearm by Evans.

"The particular case we were getting ready to go to trial on involved the victim, Colby Ford, whose vehicle was shot up by the defendant and another suspect," said Wilkerson. "In the second case, which Evans was indicted for previously, the defendant was driving away when he popped two shots back at the victim.

"Both of the cases of deadly conduct were third-degree felonies, which carry a sentence of two to 10 years in prison. Evans took two 10-year sentences, one on each charge."

As a condition of the plea, Evans also agreed to testify against 19-year-old Marcus McVea, who allegedly masterminded the home invasion and robbery of an elderly couple in November of 2003.

"The home invasion case has been very difficult from both the investigative and the prosecutorial aspects," said Wilkerson. "The case is really dependent on the testimony that the individuals involved made, some of it incriminating themselves and some of it incriminating others. The sole remaining defendant we have in that case is Mr. McVea, and we really didn't have that much on him. "The victims cannot identify the attackers. We know Evans drove the vehicle and parked, and we needed his testimony to put McVea at the house and involved in the home invasion. In addition to the two 10-year sentences, Evans agreed to testify against McVea as to what his involvement was in the home invasion and

assault that occurred."

Wilkerson said he's glad the plea with Evans has strengthened the state's case against McVea, but for a prosecutor the decision to let go of such a good case to try wasn't an

"I really wanted to try him," he said. "We had it set up as a second-degree felony because we had it enhanced and it was a really good case to try. There was just too much to gain for the bigger picture to simply sacrifice it on this one case.

"We need to get McVea in prison for what he did to the victims during the home invasion and that is one of our priorities, and if I can ultimately get Evans and McVea on both

OUR VIEWS

Watch education funding special session closely t's coming. Gov. Rick Perry on Tuesday called for that long-anticipated special legislative session on school finance, ordering lawmakers to return to work April 20.

Lawmakers have been working since last spring to reach a consensus on how to overhaul the so-called Robin Hood system of public school finance that redistributes property tax revenue from wealthy districts to poor districts - a system that virtually nobody liked from its inception.

Perry has said any replacement plan should be able to eliminate Robin Hood, lower property taxes, maintain funding equity to schools and foster a healthy job climate that doesn't discourage businesses from relocating to the state.

It's a nice thought, but where will the Legislature find the money it needs to do all these things and make everyone ... or at least most of us ... happy?

It seems highly unlikely.

Of course, who'd have ever thought we be see ing Republican administrations at both the federal and state levels overseeing every-increasing budgets?

Last week, Perry publicly proposed a plan that would lower property taxes for homeowners and businesses while shoring up additional revenue from an increased tax on cigarettes, video lottery gambling and an admission fee on adult entertainment events among other sources.

Ah, yes, increasing the so-called "sin taxes" always seems to make sense. You generate revenue, but place it on a small percentage of the population that's already hooked on an unhealthy habit or can be introduced to a new

Some have questioned why the governor didn't propose an increase in the state tax on alcoholic beverages as well. But that, of course, would have affected a much larger percentage of the population — something that rarely plays well at the ballot box.

And that is one of the reasons we find the governor's proposal unacceptable.

Increasing "sin taxes" simply isn't a workable, long-term solution to Texas' public education

Furthermore, we have to be concerned with any tax plan that calls for lowering tax ceilings at the community level, while taking away local school districts' ability to tax businesses.

Perry's proposal calls for businesses to be taxed by the state and equalization funds for school districts be provided from that fund.

We fear such a scenario simply brings us much too close to public education being shortchanged. and much closer to that slippery slope in which public funds could be used for private school vouchers.

While it seems that everyone wants the public school finance dilemma solved sooner than later. we have to question whether a special session held during an election year is the time to be seeking a truly fair and equitable solution.

We wish our legislators luck in the endeavor, but believe all of us should watch closely what comes out of Austin in the next few weeks.

Radio standards need revising

Then it comes to indecent language, I don't care how bad radio news. At Arlington Heights High School in Fort Worth I worked on the Jacket Journal and was on the annual staff. I had a paper route and threw Amon Carter's paper. Except I didn't throw it. I handed him two copies ing at a quarter to six:

In college, I studied writing. When I got out of the army I wanted to do newspaper work. I wanted to do it in Corpus Christi because an army buddy from there told me how pretty the city was. When I went there looking for work, I didn't find any. I ended up in broadcast newsrooms in Big Spring, Houston, Columbia, Missouri and Des Moines, Iowa.

of the Star-Telegram every morn-

I went to graduate school at the University of Missouri and earned a master's degree in journalism.

My major field of study was communications law. I later enrolled in Drake University law school to study criminal and constitutional law as they would apply to broadcasting. The reason I chose that field of study is because I wanted to find out what you could get away with while speaking on the

At the time, in the 1960's, the Federal Communications Commission was a looming figure in the broadcast world. It had clout and respect. Newton Minow was chairman of the FCC. I did my master's thesis on him and his thoughts on broadcasting. He called TV a "vast wasteland."

A few weeks ago the House of Representatives called leaders of the broadcasting industry on the carpet and scolded them for putting such trash on the air.

Maybe, just maybe, the FCC will get back in the saddle and start riding herd on some of the language being broadcast today.

On the eve of the House hearing on broadcast indecency the nation's largest radio station chain, Clear Channel Radio, suspended Shock Jock Howard Stern's show, saying it did not meet the company's newly revised programming standards. Although Stern's show was carried by only a handful of Clear Channel Stations (his show is distributed by VIACOM's Infinity Broadcasting which has 120 stations) the company made a strong statement.

The day before Clear Channel took Stern off the air, the company gave the heave-ho to the DJ known as "Bubba the love Sponge," whose show drew a record fine of $755,000 from the FCC. The show aired in four Florida markets and the DJ, according to the FCC, designed his show to pander, titillate and shock listeners. A couple of weeks ago a DJ in Washington DC was fired for his inappropriate remarks about drugs and sex.

Under pressure from legislators and federal regulators, broadcasters are revising their indecency standards and delaying live broadcasts so they can delete offensive material. A house subcommittee has voted to increase the fine for indecency from $27,500 to $275,000. In 1995, Infinity paid $1.7 million in fines for Stern's show, the largest cumulative fine to date.

Perhaps what has brought about all this attention to broadcast standards is the public outrage about what happened during half-time at the Super Bowl.

Commission just swatting at flies

he National Commission on Terrorist Acts Upon the United States ostensibly has been exploring how the deadly Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks could have happened and how they could have been prevented. In light of national security adviser Condoleezza Rice's testimony, I, like so many others, have figured out an easy answer: Get the panel to construct a time machine so that all those geniuses who now believe that Sept. 11 easily could have been averted can wave a magic wand

SAUNDERS and reinvent the past. That's sort of what is going on anyway. Some commissioners seem to have forgotten what life was like before the Sept. 11 attacks. They're ignoring the fact that the security policies made sense and fit the circumstances, until the circumstances changed. And they're ready to point fingers at Rice and President Bush for not pushing for changes that America never would have accepted until after Sept. 11.

Rice began her testimony by citing terrorist incidents that predated the Bush presidency. These included the half-blundered bombing of the World Trade Center in 1993, attacks on U.S. installations in Saudi Arabia in 1995 and 1996. the bombing of two U.S. embassies in Africa in 1998 and the 2000 attack on the destroyer Cole. The Clinton administration responded to these attacks by relying on local law enforcement - New York and Saudi Arabian — and the occasional aerial bombing.

It is now clear that the Clinton response was inadequate. Law enforcement couldn't stop al Qaeda from plotting more violence. The military didn't get lucky and take out al Qaeda. Instead, feckless bombings contributed to the legend of an Osama bin Laden who could laugh at America's high-tech weaponry.

That's why, Rice testified, President Bush came to dismiss the Clinton approach as "swatting flies." Too bad it turned out that the Bush response to the Cole attack - to not swat flies while trying to woo Pakistan - was inadequate, too.

But in the context of the times, it is not realistic to have expected more from either administration. No one with a memory would suggest that President Clinton could have been considerably tougher on al Qaeda. While the losses at the embassies in Africa were deplorable, al Qaeda had not inflicted enough damage to outrage the American public to the point where voters would accept boots on the ground.

Ditto after the Cole. If Bush had called for war within months of taking office, after a bitter election finale, critics would have called him a warmonger and warned darkly that he was only fueling the fires of Muslim martyrdom. The outrage wasn't there. He would have failed.

Simply put, the death toll hadn't hit the tipping point.

Commissioner Bob Kerrey, the former Democratic senator from Nebraska, has been the man to watch during the commission hearings. Kerrey has been tough on both administrations. And unlike almost everyone else in Washington, Kerrey was pushing for a military response to the Cole attack - against Iraq, no less when it wasn't a popular move. You have to respect the man and his convictions. That said, Kerrey's not being realistic if he thinks Bush could have won support for a military response — other than ineffective aerial bombings - to the Cole. It was hard enough for Bush to win support after al Qaeda thugs attacked Washington and New York, killing 3,000 people and leaving a smoking hole in the American landscape.

That's what makes the whole exercise of the commission hearings so revolting.

Critics who fault Bush for being pre-emptive on Iraq do not hesitate to fault Bush for not being pre-emptive when it came to attacks that were unexpected and unimagined. Some behave as if they believe the president is supposed to be a superhero who can smell threats, including risks that intelligence staffers haven't been able to pinpoint.

Kerrey faulted the Bushies for having a phobia about their "mword" - mistake. Granted, Bush League has been too slow to release information, too defensive and not very savvy in its refusal to simply say that the administration wishes it had known more and acted on it.

The Bushies also can't come out and say what everyone knows that America was too busy, too happy and too peace-loving to pounce on al Qaeda.

It's an old story that a country's strengths are its weaknesses. It is a national strength that Americans are reluctant to go to war. It is right that America has been slow to use its unmatched clout as a club to bend others to our will. It is just and admirable that the world's most powerful nation has to be provoked before it counterattacks.

It was an approach that worked. Until it didn't.

Bush braces nation for 'difficult' days before Iraq mission completed

WASHINGTON (AP) -Giving no ground despite casualties. President Bush says more American troops may be heading for Iraq with authority to use decisive force in a mission that "may become more difficult before it is finished."

Bush said America's will was being tested by violence that has turned April into the deadliest month in Iraq since the fall of Baghdad a year ago.

"Look, nobody likes to see dead people on their television screens," Bush questions Bush fielded said. "I don't. It's a tough offered him the chance to time for the American admit a mistake or people to see that. It's gutwrenching."

markedly. Nonetheless, the president expressed confidence he would win over voters this fall.

"I don't plan on losing my job. I plan on telling the American people that I've got a plan to win the war on terror. And I believe they'll stay with me," he said.

Though nearly half the express regret for his administration's actions The president went in Iraq or on the 2001 attacks, he never did except to apologize that he couldn't come up with any example of a failing.

A recent spike in violence has killed at least 83 U.S. troops this month as U.S. forces fight Sunni Muslim insurgents in the city of Fallujah, Shiite militiamen in the south and gunmen in Baghdad and on its outskirts.

In response, Bush said he has told military commanders to be prepared to "decisive force" against insurgents and that he was ready himself to allow an increase, rather than the planned decrease, in U.S. troop strength in Iraq.

He promised "evidence in the months to come" of progress in Iraq, for both Iragis and Americans growing weary of the instability and violence plaguing the country. But he also warned that success could come at an even higher cost than already is being paid.

"Our work may become more difficult before it is finished," the president

Looking longer-term, he tried to answer critics who have said the Iraq operation is too dominated by the United States. He touted efforts to devise a more formal role for NATO and to win the involvement of additional countries by giving a U.N. envoy the power to help decide which Iraqis would be placed in charge when power is transferred June 30 from the U.S. occupying authority.

He repeated his resolve to see that the June 30 date is met, saying to do otherwise would lead Iraqis to feel betrayed and "those in Iraq who trade in hatred and conspiracy theories" to gain strength.

Sen. John Kerry, Bush's Democratic rival, said the president failed to explain how he would stabilize

Villareall, Shroff breeze into finals at district tourney

By TROY HYDE

Sports Editor

There was no surprises in the singles competition at the District 4-4A tennis tournament held at Figure 7 Tennis Center in Comanche Trail Park yesterday.

However, the doubles tournament for both the boys and girls got a little messy.

The Steers top two singles players — Vishal Shroff and Veronica Villareall — breezed their way through the first three rounds and will both play for the district title today.

After receiving a first round bye, Shroff, the tournament's top seed, stormed through the quarterfinals and semifinals without dropping a single game.

Shroff took Andrews' Colby Chesshire, 6-0 and 6-0, in the second round before departing Seth Brown of Levelland in the semis by the same score.

Villareall also had no trouble getting to the finals, beating Andrews' Staci Gillispie in the second round, 6-0 and 6-1, blasting past Kristen Frenship's Tasker in the semifinals, 6-1 and 6-1.

"It's going pretty good so far," said Coach Sarah Corse. "I am looking forward to seeing what happens tomorrow."

Big Spring's Jason Vela was eliminated in the second round by Andy Cariens of Levelland and Gariepy Alex knocked out Levelland's Kyla Coleman in round two, as well.

Both Cariens and Coleman, who is the topseeded girl in the tournament, each reached the finals of their respective divisions. The two-seeded Cariens will challenge Shroff and Coleman will try to hold off Villareall.

Unlike the singles tournament, doubles did not pan out according to seeds.

Big Spring's upset of the day came when unseeded Heather Parnell and Natasha Neighbors took out the top-seeded team of Smith and Moceo from Frenship.

Parnell and Neighbors will play for third place today, however, after failing to record a win in the semifinals. They lost to the fourth-seeded team of Chesser and DeLaCruz of Andrews, 6-1 and 6-4. Parnell and Neighbors will to try to knock out its second Frenship team of the tournament when the Lady Steers combo battles Bray and Edwards. "Now we are just hoping to to win the third place match and have a chance for a playback,"

Clemens dominates Cards, earns second win this year

By JIM SALTER

Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS, MO - After dominating the American League for two decades, Roger Clemens is on his way to doing the same thing in the National League.

The six-time AL Cy Young Award winner allowed just two hits Tuesday and extended his scoreless streak to 13 2-3 innings before giving up a run in Houston's 5-3 victory over St. Louis. The win was No. 312 for Clemens, moving him past Tom Seaver into 16th place on the career list.

"Two games does not mean dominance," Houston manager Jimy Williams said. "Certainly, we're very happy he's pitched as well as he has in those two games. You need those kinds of performances if you're going to win against good teams."

Clemens (2-0) struck out three, walked three and hit a batter in 6 2-3 innings. Last week in his debut with his hometown Astros, he allowed one hit in seven shutout innings against San Francisco.

Fans at Busch Stadium gave Clemens a standing ovation when he left the game.

"That was special," Clemens said. "Every time I see new fans, new cities, it's icing on the cake. Every time I come to the ballpark now, I'm thankful."

Adam Everett, Lance Berkman and Richard Hidalgo hit solo homers for Houston, and Jeff Kent doubled in two runs. Octavio Dotel gave up back-to-back homers to Jim Edmonds and Scott Rolen to lead off the ninth, but held on for his first save.

Clemens threw 105 pitches in shutting down the Cardinals, who entered hitting an NLbest .309, and had scored at least five runs in each of its first eight games.

A scoreboard radar gun reading showed the 41year-ol Clemens consistently hitting 94 mph with his fastball early on, and 93 mph in the sixth inning. But Cardinals manager Tony La Russa was more impressed with Clemens' command.

"How many balls did he throw over the middle of the plate or up in the zone? Not many," La Russa said.

Houston catcher Brad Ausmus agreed.

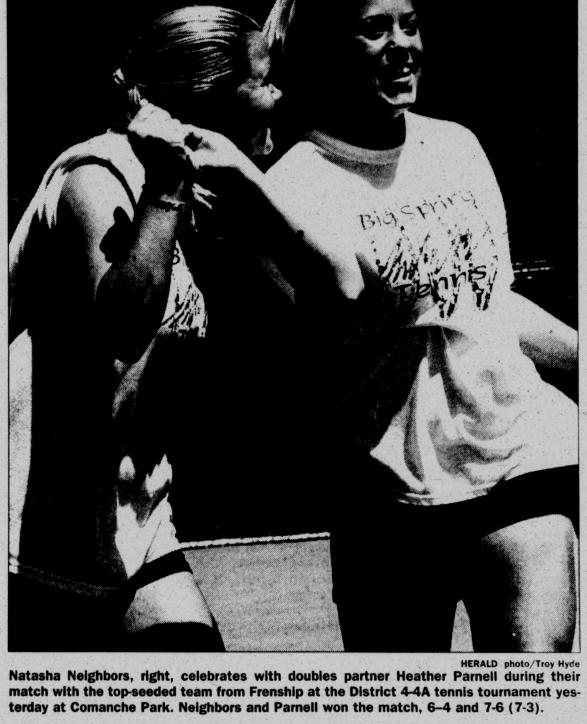

"His location has been impeccable," Ausmus said. "He's really hit the corners."

Cardinals outfielder Reggie Sanders said Clemens remains a difficult mix of power and precision. "He's still got some oomph on it, no doubt," Sanders said. "He's low and away. He can make it rise when he wants to. "Yeah, he's still Roger."

The Cardinals didn't get a hit until the fourth, when a base-running mistake cost them a chance at a run.

St. Louis finally scored in the seventh. Rolen walked with one out, went to second on a fielder's choice, and scored on a single by Sanders, who was 1-for-2 with two walks and two stolen

Players tell city council softball fee 'just too high'

By THOMAS JENKINS

Staff Writer

While we find ourselves saying "it's just a game," controversy over fees charged by the city to local adult softball leagues certainly didn't seem like a laughing matter during Tuesday night's Big Spring City Council meeting.

Council member Woody Jumper brought the issue before the council after he was approached by several local residents who said the city's $25 per player annual fee was just too high.

"Several people came to me and were very concerned about the hike in fees last year for the industrial and church leagues," said Jumper.
"They told me the $25 per person was way out of reach because a lot of people had as many as two or three family members playing, and you're only looking at 10 to 12 weeks for the season.

"That's why I brought it up tonight, because there were concerned citizens that feel like they should be able to play on city property that they are paying taxes for and their forefathers definitely paid for, and not have to pay that high of a fee."

According to Mayor Russ McEwen, the fee was enacted approximately two years ago to help pay for improvements made to city fields being utilized by both youth and adult leagues, and while he wants to encourage these types of activities, there is the simple matter of economics to consider.

"Regardless of whether it's $25 per head or $200 per team, we're subsidizing," said McEwen. "Then you hear from a person representing the Little Leagues here tonight and she says if we'd provide the same thing ($25 per player) to us and we'd be tickled to death have the money.

"There's a level of frus"I can see it bringing tration because we're trying to provide good quality fields for the adults and the youth of our community and there is a cost associated with that. Just like there is a cost associated with golf. "Golf fees are necessary so we can maintain the course properly. The golf course is self sufficient. It's not subsidized by one nickel, but to provide softball fields for adults we have to subsidize it. It doesn't make a lot of

The council agreed to look at a $200 per team charge during the next council meeting, but Jumper said he feels like that's still just too steep a price to pay.

"I understand from the city aspect of it that it's a business and we don't want to lose a lot of money on it," said Jumper. "But as a city we have to give back to our citizens, and that's what drove me to bring it before the city council.

"I think $200 per team is still a little too high. I think $150 would be good, and on most teams that would run about $8 or $9 per person. I don't think that's too outrageous."

Former Church League member Mark Tissue said the league disbanded shortly after the $25 per player fee was implemented, but if the rate is changed to the lower $200 per team fee, he believes the league will be able to reform.

"There is no church league right now," said Tissue. "It was mainly the cost that caused it to collapse.

"Most of the managers were having a hard enough time to collect the fees needed to pay the umpires and by balls and that sort of thing, so when the $25 per player came up most of them said their guys just didn't See FEES page B2 the league back to an extent. It will take some time to get it built up again. Two years ago we had twenty teams in the league. There's already been eight or nine churches that have expressed interest in getting something together."

Big Spring Girls Softball Association President Trevis Larson said he and his league can think of plenty of places to better utilize the funds they are currently paying as part of the $25 per player fee, including improving safety and equipment.

"It would allow us to buy some more equipment and spend some money on some other things," said Larson. "They are just upset that they have to spend their money on something they already pay taxes on and not being able to buy new equipment. I think this will help the association a great deal."

"I really feel like if you went to the adults in the church league and asked if they would pay $25 per year to make sure the youth have great facilities, almost 100 percent of them would say sure," said McEwen. "But if you ask them if they will pay $25 per year to play softball, they would say that's too high. It's a strange situation and it doesn't make a lot of sense to me."

McEwen said he wasn't sure if he was comfortable with the $200 per team fee that is expected to come before the council in two weeks, as it could possibly make other future considerations no longer an option.

"I need to think about it," he said. "You ask if we can do it, and I say sure we can. But when we do something like that it compromises the things

The results of the boys doubles tournament mirrored that of the girls.

One Big Spring team will play in the third place game and may get a chance to play back, while the other team fell in round two.

Justin Ferrell and Roshan Shoff will battle the second-seeded team of LeVick and Paxton of Levelland for third place today.

Ferrell and Shroff beat the fourth-seeded team. but fell to the top-seeded team of Armour and Armour from Frenship, 6-2 and 6-0.

Nick Rivera and Nick Paredez won their first round match, but fell to second-seeded LeVick and Paxton in round two.

It was the first time that Big Spring has hosted the distric 4-4A tennis tournament, said Assistant Coach Dennis Smiley. The finals and third place matches all started at 9 a.m. today, but results were not available at press time.

we can do. My opinion is if we do the $200 per team, then it kills any hope of building a multipurpose type complex, which the little leagues have said they want, as well as the youth football and soccer leagues. We have designs for a great facility, but it costs money. We would like to provide all of this for the community for free, but we don't have the money to do that."

Mavericks secure 'Mighty West's' fifth-seed

By JAIME ARON

AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) -

Although the Dallas Mavericks won the most home games in the NBA this season — and tops in their 24-year history - it hasn't earned them much.

The Mavericks beat the Memphis Grizzlies 110-103 Tuesday night for their 36th home win. While the victory secured the fifth seed in the Western Conference, that's one spot shy of where Dallas had to be to host a firstround playoff series.

The Mavs will be the first team with the league's best home record to open the postseason on the road since Utah in 1990-91.

Their undoing: a 15-25 road record going into the finale Wednesday night at Houston.

"For whatever reason. we seem to have more fire here," Dallas swingman Michael Finley said. "We have to find a way to carry that on the road, like we're capable of."

Memphis lost its third straight and fifth in six games to wrap up the sixth seed. It's not too disappointing for a club that's already won a franchise-best 50 games and made the playoffs for the first time.

First-round matchups won't be set until after the finales Wednesday night.

Dallas probably will play the Lakers and the Grizzlies the runner-up in the Midwest Division, either San Antonio or Minnesota. Memphis will have a say in how things work out because it plays the Timberwolves at home Wednesday night.

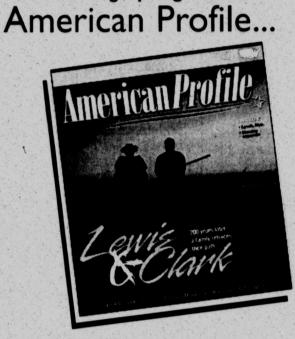

Dallas was up by 13 points after one quarter and led by at least nine until the final minute.

Marquis Daniels, an undrafted rookie, led Dallas with 30 points, eight rebounds and seven assists.

Steve Nash had 25 points, Nowitzki had 11 points and 10 rebounds and Finley scored nine after missing the last two games with bruised ribs. Antoine Walker added eight points., nine assists and seven rebounds. Jason Williams had 14 points for Memphis. James Posey, averaging well over 20 points in recent weeks, scored just 12 points.

ones need the same thing we do, but it's not true. Try and let loved ones pursue the path that's correct for them without guilt. What's seems terribly important could actually be nothing. Petty issues can be set aside.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Life gives you fodder for your already remarkable sense of humor you can spin jokes like nobody's business. As long as they don't come at anyone's expense, you're in the clear. Prepare for serious discussions this afternoon.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Life challenges you to be a leader. You're not required to know it all, but do take hold of your mission. You may have to strain to see the big picture. Parents need to consult one another to present children with a united front.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Average people accomplish genius feats because they dare to want more. Hang around a Sagittarius or Leo to get back in touch with your drive. Tonight, someone sexy is flirting with you for as long as you want to continue.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You're the self-proclaimed safety monitor and could even prevent accidents or save a life on your daily rounds. You know you are divinely protected, and therefore, it's easier for you to protect others. An Aries influences you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Want to know why you're always the one who has to try and bring people together? You've got ways of communicating with those people nobody else wants to reach. You might even be working on your telepathic skills!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept.

22). Breaking out of old thought patterns will energize you. If you're not making progress on a special goal, consider taking a class or hiring a coach. But, you think, this costs money and is extravagant. You're worth it!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). To make this day a 10, change your priorities from where they were yesterday. Suddenly, new doors are open to you. Keep doing more than most people and expecting better than average compensation, too.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). If you're afraid that success comes at too high a cost, you're still coming from a place of fear. Your success wants you to claim it and will encourage you along the way if you're opening to listening to it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Sure, you're serious about your task. But this only makes you laugh harder when things don't quite go your way later. Laughter is the best entertainment. Be careful, though -

Cancer and Taurus are especially sensitive!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Make any shift, however small, in your approach to work that will nudge it toward your value system. You'll be surprised what one small action can set off. You're back in the spotlight tonight - take your bows.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Love and work are intertwined for everyone's benefit. When you're confident about what you're able to do at work, your love life sparks, too. Nothing is sexier than a person in the "zone."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Your friends say you don't need to pay for help (in the form of classes, coaching or therapy), but what better use is there for your money than to expand your mind and possibly your horizons along with it?

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "My birthday is Sept. 7, 1977, and my husband's is Sept. 3, 1977. Our marriage is wonderful, but we always find ourselves in the position of taking on too many of our family's problems. We want out! Meanwhile, even though we work hard all the time to pursue our own creative interests, things never come together. Will we survive my demanding family and realize our dreams? Will we make financially?"

Two Virgos can be an incredibly loving pair, both nurturing and committed to improvement. You emanate a caretaking energy and are a safe harbor to troubled souls. It's beautiful to be charitable but not when it's an automatic response that keeps you living small. There's a dangerous cycle of being victimized in your chart now. You give your time, energy and power away on purpose because it gives you the feeling of being needed and a little superior, too. Then, you blame the situation when you don't move forward in life. You're afraid to make the sacrifices necessary to go into the unknown. The first step is admitting you are causing the cycle. The two of you share many astrological similarities and can help each other recognize and break the cycle. Yes, you'll make it!

CELEBRITY FILES: Jennifer Garner's toned body is an outward manifestation of her inner Aries strength. Indeed, many Aries have terrific bodies because of their constant need to channel intense energy. I wouldn't be surprised if the "Alias" star came out with her own workout DVD this year. Many women (and men) would love to be as powerfully toned as Garner!

Annie's Mailbox : Advice for those in need

Dear Annie: I am curious how many people have discovered their spouse having a long-distance affair by cell phone. A lot has been said about Internet affairs, yet communicating by cell phone is so much more immediate and intrusive.

My husband began by exchanging e-mails with this woman, then moved immediately to talking on the cell phone to his "friend" several times a day. She phoned him at our house, at his job, during our vacations, everywhere he went. (He said they were business calls.)

He flew out to meet her once and was planning a second visit before I caught him. Is this type of affair becoming more prevalent? Is this a growing trend? - C.A.

Dear C.A.: Do we think cell phones are used to aid and abet affairs? We think people who have affairs arrange to talk to one another any way they can. Your husband's cell phone was certainly more convenient than sneaking off to the nearest pay phone. The end result, however, is the same. Of course, the flip side of using a cell phone is that someone else can check the call log and find out who is calling

Dear Annie: This is in response to the letter from "Iowa Adoptee," who felt she didn't belong to any family. She didn't want to search for her biological parents, but asked if other adoptees suffer from the same depression and low self-esteem.

I am a 51-year-old woman adoptee, and I suffer from low selfesteem, but it stems from the way I was brought up. I was never close to my relatives, and when my mother died, I lost all contact. Fifteen years ago. I chose to search for my biological mother. She had the nerve to ask when my birthday was. Wasn't she there? I've lost contact with her, which is just as well. I would never recommend anyone look for those fairy tale parents who will welcome you into their arms. One thing I work on all the time is happiness within myself. I'd like to tell "Iowa" - make yourself happy, visit a nursing home, volunteer at your local animal shelter. I have found these things to be a tremendous help in making me appreciate how blessed I really am. - Still Working on It in Florida

Dear Florida: Thanks for your input. Read on:

From Colorado: I am a 53-year-old adoptee. I loved my adoptive parents, but I needed to fill the hole in my life. I found my biological mother and six siblings, and now I feel complete. My biological mom had tried to find me before, to no avail. I think "Iowa" is missing out on something that could change her whole outlook. Please let her know there are a lot of us out there who can relate to her.

Kentucky: I am a 50year-old man, adopted at birth. I never felt unloved, and I know I was my grandmother's favorite. When my legal parents passed on, I found my biological mother. This past summer, I drove by her house and it occurred to me to stop in, but the urge passed. Had this woman wanted anything to do with me, she could have called a long time ago. Here's what I feel emptiness about: I'd like to know who my natural father is, did he know about me, do I have any half-brothers or sisters, and I wish I could tell my own children about their family history.

Midwest: I just came home from spending time with my birth brothers, birth mom and her husband. It was awesome. My adoptive mom is still alive, and I have one adopted brother whom I love very much. They will never be replaced in my life, but I have added so much more. I know these stories don't always turn out well, but I am so glad to have the most amazing relationship with my three new brothers. Finding my birth mother has helped her reach closure, also. She always wondered where I was and if I was OK. Now she knows.

Dear Annie: I have two young children, ages 6 and 4. We live in a nice apartment community with a pool. Since I am a stay-at-home mommy, we practically live at the pool during the summer.

year and they use the pool as their personal motel room. They often make out and grope each other in the water. Even worse, the woman wears a thong. She takes every opportunity to bend over and bare her rear end in the direction of any man in sight. Friends of ours in the complex confronted this couple about their behavior, and things got nasty. I have called our apartment manager many times, but nothing has been done. I took a closeup photo of the woman at the pool, captioned it, "When good thongs go bad," and left it on their door, but even that did not deter them.

My children now refer to the woman as "The Butt Lady." I don't know what to do other than leave the pool when she shows up. This seems unfair. I don't want to confront these people in front of my children because their response is unpredictable. Any suggestions? - Rubbed the Wrong Way in Lincoln, Neb.

Dear Lincoln: Are there dress-code or behavior restrictions posted by the pool or distributed to tenants? Is this couple in violation? If so, the manager should be enforcing the rules, or you should notify the building owner. If there are no such restrictions, there's not much you can do other than avoid the pool when Mr. and Mrs. Butt

Dear Annie: Fifteen years ago, my brother married "Mattie," a woman our family never accepted for reasons pertaining to religion, education and background. I adore my brother. When a few of Mattie's relatives made negative comments about him at the wedding, I resented it but didn't say a word. Over the years, the anger resonated and I chose to keep my distance, which was easy since I live far away.

Recently, I was at a family event, and Mattie made a comment that set off the old grievances. She said I should participate more in the life she has created for them. I responded with all the venom that had built up in the intervening years, and my response was The problem is that a completely inapproprinew couple moved in last ate. She didn't, know what hit her.

> I apologized, but only half-heartedly. I fear a real apology would bring up all the old issues and make the situation worse. Is everyone better off if I just stay out of their lives, or should I try to gain her forgiveness? - Regretful and Confused

Dear Regretful: Try once more, only this mean time, Apparently, your brother has a solid marriage and those old grievances no longer matter. Mattie has done nothing to justify your hostility. Her relatives' comments at the wedding should not be held against her (not to mention it was 15 years ago). And wanting you to be a bigger part of her life ought to be a good thing, not a burden.

Call or e-mail Mattie as soon as possible. Don't rehash old arguments. Simply say, "I'm sorry about the horrible things I said. I've misjudged you, and I feel rotten about it. Please give me an opportunity to start over and get to know you better." We hope she's willing to give you a second chance.

MEDICARE Endorsed Prescription Savings Cards will be available soon. Before Choosing a Card

Make sure it's the one that is right for you

Soon you will be contacted by healthcare companies about the new "Medicare Prescription Drug Savings". Each company will try to sell you its discount card.

Not all cards are created equally. Some cards may benefit you and some may not!

How can you be sure the card you choose is the best for you?

Talk with us.

Your Medicine Shoppe Pharmacist understands the available card plans. And we're highly qualified to help you determine which is best for your health and budget.

PLEASE TALK TO US BEFORE YOU SIGN UP FOR A CARD.

We will have a Help Desk at the Medicine Shoppe starting May 3rd to help you with this process.

PLEASE VISIT US TO DISCUSS THE RIGHT PLAN FOR YOU!
