Kiwanis Club celebrates 75 years

By LYNDEL MOODY
 Staff Writer

A long-time civic organization celebrated a major mile stone last week by honoring 75 years of existence in Howard County

About 40 Kiwanis members and guests celebrated the club's anniversary Thursday during a dinner in the Howard College Cactus Room.

"Civic clubs are a foundation of a community. What good things happen in our community is driven by people filled with passion," said Big Spring Mayor Russ McEwen, before reading a proclamation declaring last Friday as Kiwanis Club Day in Big Spring. "The Kiwanis Club has great passion. You have great passion for kids."

The Kiwanis Club of Big Spring was formally organized on a Tuesday, 75 years ago, during a meeting held in the Methodist Church basement.

At that time, Walter C.

Hampton of Boston, an official representative for Kiwanis International, addressed the members on the aim and ideals of Kiwanians.

Throughout the years, the Kiwanis Club has honored those ideals by supporting a number of civic programs such as the Big Spring High School Key Club.

During the banquet, D.D. Johnston, lieutenant governor of Kiwanis International Division 22, and club member Don McGonagill spoke — both relating stories that reiterated the club's dedication to community service.

"You never know what influence you might have," McGonagill said. "Things like this make it really worthwhile being a member of this club."

ONE STOP FOR WELLNESS

From free cholesterol checks to inflatable air games — there was something for everyone at the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce Health Fair Saturday.

"We had a line all the way from the entrance waiting for the free cholesterol screenings before we opened," said Debbye Valverde, chamber executive director. "I think we'll probably hit our goal of 2,000 people who attended the fair."

"We've actually gotten some clients from the health fair in the past and already we have some potential clients come in to see how we can improve their lifestyle," said Aaron Goswick, physical therapist with the Big Spring Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Center — one of the 60-plus organizations promoting services and handing out information.

"I've been to many health care events and marketing events for health care facilities and, for this size of town, this is really a state-of-the-art type of event. Big Spring really goes all out when it does something."

Free health screenings, exhibitions, games for children and all kinds of information ranging from on how to take better care of a loved pet to how to take better care of your self were available throughout the day for the crowds who packed the coliseum.

"Really, this is terrific," said Dolores Carpenter of Big Spring who attended the fair to take advantage of the free cholesterol test given by VA Hospital employees.

Corporate sponsors were Big Spring RSVP, Express Medical

Supply, KBST Radio, KBYG Radio, Mountain View Lodge, Paradigm Physical Therapy, Scenic Mountain Medical Center, West Texas VA Health Systems, Warren Chiropractic, Big Spring Physical Therapy and West Texas Centers for MHMR.

Sin taxes

Political genius or unstable way to fund schools?

By BOBBY ROSS JR.
 AP Religion Writer

DALLAS — Sin is a politician's friend.

Politicians know that wrapping a tax around a societal vice — be it smoking, gambling or even topless dancers — is usually an easier sale than an across-the-board tax on everybody's home, income or groceries.

From that standpoint, Gov. Rick Perry's focus on taxing "unhealthy behaviors" as he seeks to fix Texas' school financing system is a brilliant move, experts say.

"Americans always talk about taxes as if they were a kind of sin," said James Morone, a Brown University political scientist. "So for a politician, the way to inoculate yourself is, you find a bigger sinner and you turn it on them."

In a special session that starts Tuesday, lawmakers will debate Perry's plan to eliminate the share-the-wealth system known as Robin Hood, which redistributes property tax revenue from wealthy school districts to poorer districts.

Among Perry's proposals for lowering property taxes: a $1 per pack increase in the state's cigarette tax, up from its current 41 cents per pack; a $5 state tax on admissions to adult entertainment; and the legalization and taxation of video lottery terminals at race tracks and Indian casinos.

In the last few years, many states have looked to "sin" as a salvation for budget woes, from raising taxes on cigarette and alcohol sales to loosening restrictions on gambling. In Utah, lawmakers last year imposed a 10 percent tax on sexually explicit businesses — nicknamed the "topless tax" — to generate money for treatment of sex offenders.

"The electorate simply does not get as up in arms over a sin tax on the whole as it does on a one-tenth of 1 percent increase in the sales tax," said Verenda Smith, spokeswoman for the Federation of Tax Administrators, a Washington-based group of tax and revenue department officials from all 50 states.

Nineteen states increased cigarette taxes last year, according to the National Conference of State Legislatures. And liquor also has been a frequent target, as in Mississippi, where state Rep. John Mayo last month said he wasn't proposing anything he wasn't willing to pay himself.

"You are looking at a confirmed beer drinker," Mayo told a House committee.

Tennessee this year began a state lottery to fund college scholarships and education projects, becoming the 48th state with some form of legalized gambling. The lone gambling-free zones are Utah and Hawaii.

Texas approved gambling on horse and dog races in the mid-1980s after the oil bust caused a state budget crisis. A state lottery, sold to voters as a boon to education, was passed in 1991 as Texas

Estelle Hancock Foster

Services to celebrate the life of Estelle Hancock Foster will be today, April 19, 2004, at 2 p.m. at the First Baptist Church in Lamesa. Her nephew, Chris Winford will officiate, with the Rev. Jerry Wilson and Cecil Foster assisting. Burial will follow in Lamesa Memorial Park.

Estelle was born Sept. 18, 1925, in Lamesa to Harry and Thoma Winford. She graduated from Lamesa High School in 1942. She retired from Lamesa Federal Savings and Loan Association after 41 and a half years of service.

She was a devoted Christian and a diligent Sunday school teacher who assisted her husband, Cecil Foster, with their ministry at Fluvanna Baptist Church. She also loved being a part of the Good News Choir at Southeast Baptist Church in Lubbock.

She was preceded in death by her husband, J.A. (Shorty) Hancock and her parents.

She is survived by her husband of eight years, Cecil Foster; her daughters, Judy Mills and husband, Larry, of Oklahoma City, Okla. and Diane Purcell and husband, Rick of Spring Creek, Nev.; a stepson, Greg Foster of Arlington; seven grandchildren and 10 great grandchildren.

She is also survived by three brothers, Kenneth Winford, Jimmy Winford and Richard Winford, all of Lamesa; and four sisters, LaVerne Hensler of Odessa, Ann Tuttle of Lamesa, Lou Cherry of Monahans and Sandra Parrott of Big Spring.

In lieu of flowers, memorial gifts may be sent to Angel Tree, a Prison Fellowship Ministry for the children of inmates, in care of Judy Mills, P.O. Box 122, Bethany Okla. 73008.

Arrangements are under the direction of Branon Funeral Home in Lamesa.

TEXAS NEWS BRIEFS

Neighbors horrified after boy found in oven

BEAUMONT (AP) — Catherine Fayson has barely slept since Friday when she awoke to her next-door neighbor frantically ringing her doorbell and screaming.

"Oh Lord! My baby's dead! Somebody please help me! My baby is in the oven! He killed my baby!"

Fayson quickly opened her front door and saw her neighbor, Kathy Jo Odoms, running away from her home and across the street to another neighbor's house, still screaming in horror.

"It's something I can't describe," Fayson said this weekend, less than 48 hours after Odoms found her son in the oven.

Odoms' boyfriend, Kenneth Lee Pierott, 27, remained jailed Sunday on suspicion of capital murder.

Colleges raise standards to combat flood

DALLAS (AP) — A flood of applications for colleges is prompting more rejection letters.

"Demographics tell us there are a growing number of college-bound high school graduates for the next seven to 10 years," said Ron Moss, executive director of enrollment services and dean of admissions for Southern Methodist University. "There continues to be a growth in the number of students applying to schools, but more schools aren't being created."

Many universities have reacted by being more stringent in their admissions policies.

Applications from first-time freshmen at SMU reached about 7,000 for the fall semester, but only 3,500 of those will be accepted. The others will be denied or put on a waiting list, Moss said in Sunday's edition of The Dallas Morning News.

Similarly, about 7,000 students applied to the University of Texas at Arlington last fall. Only about 4,400 were admitted, said Hans Gatterdam, director of undergraduate admissions at Texas-Arlington.

Report: Dallas at tipping point

DALLAS (AP) — Surging crime, weak schools, job loss and civic leaders who seem not to notice the compounding problems have plunged "the city that works" into a crisis that can only be reversed by bold shifts in strategy, structure and services, according to a report by The Dallas Morning News.

Dallas — lulled by past successes, cushioned by North Texas' robust growth, blinded by a lack of self-examination and hobbled by a legacy of racism and neglect — is at a tipping point, where wrong moves could precipitate decline, the News concluded, based on a far-reaching statistical comparison of Dallas and 14 other large U.S. cities by Booz Allen Hamilton.

"Dallas does not see itself as a city in crisis. ... But the data indicate that Dallas is a city in crisis," the firm concluded.

The Booz Allen study, commissioned by the News, used dozens of measures — from life expectancy to library visits — to produce a comprehensive picture of each city's performance.

Among the 14 peer cities, only three have worse violent crime rates, only four have lower student SAT scores, and none saw less economic expansion in the 1990s.

Houston crash rate exceeds national average

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston area far exceeds the national average in the number of serious traffic collisions, contributing to skyrocketing medical costs and giving Harris County the most expensive auto insurance rates in Texas.

County officials said one reason drivers in Harris County are at greater risk of collisions is because the area is growing faster than roads can be improved or patrolled. Now area drivers are even crashing into the new MetroRail trains, putting Houston on course to top the national high for light rail collisions.

"We lead the state in crashes no matter how you define them," said Ned Levine, transportation safety program coordinator for the Houston-Galveston Area Council. "We are among the worst in the country. I haven't found a metropolitan area that's higher than ours."

TAXES

faced another budget shortfall. The lottery generated roughly $900 million for Texas schools last fiscal year.

Perry estimates cigarette and tobacco tax increases could generate $2.4 billion in Texas' two-year budget cycle, and the video lottery tax $2 billion. The adult entertainment tax would bring in a projected $90 million.

Overall, Texas spends about $40 billion, or roughly $10,000 per student, on K-12 education. State money accounts for about half of that. The rest comes from federal and local sources.

Still, Perry's proposal raises a tricky moral quandary: How can government officials condemn certain behaviors while at the same time depend on them to fund important programs?

"The thing you allegedly want to do with a sin tax is reduce the activity," said William K. Black, a University of Texas public finance professor who has written about the "twisted morality" of sin taxes. "Of course, if you reduce it too successfully, you cut off your revenue stream. You end up with no money and then your fiscal projections go all to hell."

The unstable nature of

Lawmakers' group is meeting in advance of special session

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Ahead of a potentially divisive special session on school finance, about a dozen House members have been meeting for weeks on how to change the way Texas funds and manages education.

Rep. Kent Grusendorf, who has led the gatherings of Republican leaders and a few Democrats in an office building near the Capitol, called the group "Kent's Kids Brigade."

"A few of us are trying to get a head start," said Grusendorf, R-Arlington, about reaching common ground bolstering education while cutting school property taxes and dismantling the "Robin Hood" system, which requires property-rich schools to share with others.

The special session called by Gov. Rick Perry on taxes and education begins Tuesday.

Most lawmakers in Grusendorf's group already serve on the 29-member House Select Committee on Public School Finance, likely to be entrusted with developing the first House draft of a funding plan. Many legislators also serve on the Joint Select Committee on Public School Finance, scheduled to hear Perry and others address the governor's finance proposal.

Grusendorf, co-chairman of the Joint Select Committee on Public Finance, said he has avoided having more than 14 members in the room to keep the "brigade" from having a quorum of panel members. If that occurred, the meetings would have to be public and posted in advance to comply with open government laws.

Aside from expert staff, visitors have included Mike Toomey, Perry's chief of staff, and David Thompson, the Houston lawyer representing hundreds of school districts challenging the adequacy of school funding in a lawsuit scheduled for trial in July.

"Everybody's taking this very seriously and feeling like we have an opportunity to make a difference," Rep. Jim Pitts, R-Waxahachie, told the San Antonio Express-News in Monday's edition. "The few of us in that room can help solve the school finance problem for years to come."

Senate leaders have said they will await House action before finalizing their approach, especially because tax changes must originate in the House.

"It's a big deal," said Rep. Fred Hill. "We're analyzing the finance side and also the educational philosophy side. We're coming to some agreements on that, but it's all going to be hashed out in public meetings."

The executive director of the Equity Center, Wayne Pierce, said he was unaware of the meetings.

"I would prefer discussions that affect schools across the state where people can listen and know what's going on or have public input, because decisions are sometimes made in people's minds before you get into public (sessions)," said Pierce of the Equity Center, which represents property-poor districts at the Capitol.

Hill, R-Richardson, said the discussions could allow the 150-member House to vote on school funding legislation as soon as the second week of the session though others called that scenario overly ambitious.

Senators last spring unanimously sent the House a plan to cut local school tax rates in half, creating a state property tax and raising and expanding the state's sales tax. At the time, House leaders and Perry called such action premature.

Perry last week said he would keep members in session as long as it takes to fix the system under which nearly 500 of the state's more than 1,000 school districts have reached a tax cap of $1.50 per $100 valuation. That means they cannot raise more money without legislative action or cutting their budgets.

The past chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, Rep. Rene Oliveira of Brownsville, questioned the wisdom of slashing local taxes when many districts, including those challenging funding adequacy in court, seek more aid.

"It's going to be very hard to go back to poor school districts and teachers and say we didn't have the money to give you a pay raise, help with facilities or address the other needs you have because we gave this much in property tax relief," Oliveira said.

Some political observers have called Perry's plan to change school finance and jettison the share-the-wealth method of education funding a risky venture.

"It's D.O.A.," a Capitol source who plays at the highest levels told the Austin American-Statesman in Monday's online edition.

"Nobody will be working off of Perry's plan. I don't think there is one senator for it. There may be three or four in the House, but none in the Senate."

But supporters believe it's a no-lose deal for the governor.

"You go in there, and you put out your proposal, and you have a debate on it, and, if people won't go for it, at least you tried," said Perry's pollster, Michael Baselice.

Fort Hood prepares for celebration

FORT HOOD (AP) — At the Army's largest post, a welcome-home celebration for members of the 4th Infantry Division and other returning units is planned as relatives of other soldiers wounded or killed in Iraq deal with suffering and grief.

Texas cattle raisers are donating about 30,000 barbecue sandwiches for the "Task Force Ironhorse" bash on Thursday.

Scheduled entertainment includes Drew Carey, Jessica Simpson, Ludacris, Lynyrd Skynyrd, the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders and the New England Patriots Cheerleaders. Some organizers claim it will rival Woodstock.

Meanwhile, family members of recently deployed soldiers who may be stationed in Iraq more than a year watch and listen for word of their loved ones. And there's sorrow for the 96 Fort Hood troops killed and many more who were wounded in the conflict so far.

In Houston and other cities, funerals will be held for some of the 17 soldiers recently lost by the 1st Cavalry Division, which also is based at Fort Hood.

President Bush, over the Easter weekend, had described a "tough week" of military casualties.

After four days off, returning members of the 4th Infantry undergo a mandatory program that helps them deal with issues such as post-traumatic stress disorder and alcohol safety or communicating with spouses and children. The division is almost completely back at Fort Hood after an 11-month deployment.

"There is a certain degree of reintegrating with a family, and that's what all the training we're doing addresses," division spokesman Lt. Col. William MacDonald.

Volunteerism
alive and well in Big Spring

Perhaps there's no better community anywhere better qualified to celebrate this week as National Volunteer Week than Big Spring, Howard County and the surrounding area.

Simply put, volunteerism is a staple of life in this area.

It's not hard to see the work of volunteers in our community. Nor is it difficult to discern the impact they have had on the lives of countless people.

As a matter of fact, the examples seem almost endless — the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP), Big Spring State Hospital Volunteer Services Council, Victim Services, Howard County Volunteer Fire Department and the individuals and organizations that volunteer at the VA Medical Center and at Scenic Mountain Medical Center immediately come to mind when the subject is discussed.

There are countless others — those who serve on advisory boards for organizations like the Salvation Army, the Boys Club, YMCA and local units of the American Cancer Society and the American Heart Association.

In fact, the list is almost endless and any attempt to name all those who volunteer in one form or another in this community would certainly leave someone out.

That's why the Herald wants to take this opportunity to thank all those in our community who give of themselves, because they make this the place we want to live, work and raise our families.

YOUR VIEWS

TO THE EDITOR:

The Big Spring High School Key Club would like to thank the Big Spring community for its help and support with all of our fundraisers which allowed us to attend the 55th Annual Texas-Oklahoma Key Club convention in Houston, April 1-4.

We attended many forums and learned lots of new things about Key Club. We met and visited with more than 1,300 other Key Clubbers who were representing 313 Key Clubs throughout Texas and Oklahoma.

We would also like to take this chance to let you know how much we have appreciated your support with our various other projects like Unicef, The Ronald McDonald House, March of Dimes and the many other projects Key Club has done this year.

Thank you for allowing us to help out in the community and be of service to you and your many projects. That is what Key Club is all about.

The war that's waged on people

"You know I support the war against drugs. I myself used to sale drugs to support my habit and to get money. I'm in recovery now, and I have changed my life. What I don't understand is, it's a war against people, not drugs" began a letter from a former San Francisco Bay Area drug offender and young mother named Yvette.

She was writing in support of Assemblyman Mark Leno, D-San Francisco, whose Assembly Bill 1796 would allow California to opt out of a wrong-headed federal regulation, enacted in 1996 as part of the Welfare Reform Act, which prohibits former drug offenders from receiving food stamps.

Other federal rules disqualify former drug offenders from student loans and welfare benefits — although, as with food stamps, adults can receive benefits for their children.

How is this for justice? Convicted murderers, child molesters, rapists and former white-collar crooks face no such sanctions. But if you have a drug felony in any of the 19 states that haven't changed or opted out of the food-stamp sanction, noted Glenn Backes of the Drug Policy Alliance, you essentially serve "a lifetime sentence."

Maybe the law started with good intentions. There is a public interest in ensuring that adult welfare recipients don't blow their welfare grants on drugs. It's not good for the kids and not good for the adults.

But the 1996 regulation doesn't address current drug abuse. It punishes adults — and indirectly their children — who already have been punished and may be cleaning up their act.

While murderers get food stamps, those denied food stamps because of a drug conviction could be guilty of simple drug possession. Since 2000, when California voters approved Proposition 36, which mandated treatment in lieu of incarceration for drug possession, the number of felony incarcerations for drug possession has dropped appreciably. But in 2000, more than half of those admitted to California prisons for drug crimes were convicted of possession — not possession for sale. Before Proposition 36, said Margot Bach of the state Department of Corrections, "the largest percentage of women in prison were in for drug crimes." So the 1996 provision hurts not only low-level offenders but aging low-level offenders.

Worst of all, the state is withholding food. A group of Bay Area chefs founded a program, Nextcourse, to teach San Francisco County Jail inmates about nutrition and cooking good food. "Before we went into the jail, we had this whole thought of being in a room full of criminals," said Larry Bain of Jardiniere restaurant in San Francisco, who works on the project. Instead, "We looked around, and these are kids. Most of the women are in their early 20s. Most of the women are moms."

The chefs tried to advise women where they could get nutritious food with food stamps, only to find out that some mothers who were cleaning up their act couldn't qualify for food aid.

The do-gooders — and letters from Nextcourse attendees — argue that when recovering addicts are hungry, they are more likely to revert to their old, bad ways. I think that argument can be exaggerated, but Assemblyman Leno noted that addicts are more likely to relapse when they are hungry, angry, lonely or tired. (The acronym is: HALT.)

The California Narcotics Officers

Association and California Police Chiefs Association argue along similar lines. Both groups support Leno's bill. "The federal prohibition on eligible persons receiving food stamps due to a prior drug conviction is not only silly," wrote the narcotics officers, "but increases the possibility that the individual will return to the same illegal drug behavior that got them in trouble in the first place."

There are strong money arguments in favor of Leno's bill, too. An Assembly analysis predicted that the measure would bring "several million dollars of food stamps benefits" to the state — all bankrolled by the federal government. If Gov. Schwarzenegger is paying attention, he should grab this opportunity to get Washington to send more tax money back to the state.

While committee votes have been split along partisan lines, with the Democrats mostly voting yes and Republicans on the no side, conservative lawmakers should consider the fairness issue involved here.

Yvette got it right when she said the war on drugs has become a war against people. For some reason, Washington pols decided it was their mission to marginalize drug users, to keep them from getting ahead, to ensure that they remain on the outside looking in. Hotshot drug dealers aren't hurt by these tactics; such sanctions instead sabotage vulnerable people who have to fight for a place in the secure mainstream of America.

Bully for the drug war.

Specter's friends include Bush

George W. Bush's journey to Pittsburgh Monday to stand with Sen. Arlen Specter in the political battle of his life puts the president in unusual company. Specter's supporters, as he faces conservative Rep. Pat Toomey's challenge in the April 27 Pennsylvania Republican primary, have included George Soros, Harold Ickes Jr., Ron Carey, Arthur Coia, Richard Ben-Veniste, Alan Dershowitz, Barbara Kennelly and the International Association of Fire Fighters.

That's a left-wing all-star team, validating Specter's long career as a political broken-field runner. He will become chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee next year as a Republican in good standing who is also a favorite senator in liberal-labor circles. When organized labor has needed a vote, Specter has been there, explaining why many of Bush's enemies are Specter's friends.

Why then has President Bush not only endorsed Specter but gone to Pennsylvania to campaign for him? While Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936 blundered when he tried to purge anti-New Deal members of Congress, Bush backs any lawmaker with an "R" beside his name. Simultaneously, Democratic activists and financial contributors support Specter despite his party designation.

Heading the list is billionaire investor George Soros, who so far has spent $15.5 million to defeat George W. Bush. Soros has plenty left for Specter, contributing $50,000 to the Republican Mainstream Partnership as part of its earmarked $200,000 against Toomey. In the 1998 election cycle, Soros and his wife gave Specter the $4,000 legal maximum.

With a Republican primary approaching, Specter does not want public association with Bush-bashers. When Rush Limbaugh reported the Soros contribution on his radio program, Specter telephoned the conservative talker last Wednesday to stress that he is "very, very strongly supporting" Bush. The senator said he has "nothing to do" with the Republican Mainstream Partnership or Soros's donation, though he is listed on the organization's Web site as a member.

There are many other sources of Specter support who despise Bush:

— The fire fighters union contributed $2,500 to Specter last September, the same month in which it became the first labor union to endorse Kerry for president. Specter has received contributions from two big left-leaning unions, the Service Employees International Union (SEIU) and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME). The Pennsylvania AFL-CIO and the Pennsylvania State Education Association also have endorsed him.

— In the last election cycle, Specter was given $10,000 by the Teamsters under the leadership of Ron Carey (whose election to the presidency was voided by court order). He received $8,000 from the Laborers Union under President Arthur Coia, who then was under investigation for ties with organized crime and later was barred from active union leadership.

— The National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, headed by Democratic former Rep. Barbara Kennelly of Connecticut, gave Specter $1,000 last fall. The organization fights Bush's plan for private investment accounts.

— Harvard Law Prof. Alan Dershowitz, a fierce critic of the way Bush was elected, has contributed to Specter in the current and previous election cycles.

— Harold Ickes Jr., the former Clinton White House aide who runs the Media Fund putting anti-Bush advertising on television, gave Specter $1,000 last year.

— Richard Ben-Veniste, the high-powered Washington lawyer serving on the independent 9/11 Commission, is a Specter backer. He contributed to Specter in 1997 when Ben-Veniste was representing Terry McAuliffe, now the Democratic national chairman, in connection with the Teamsters scandal. Ben-Veniste is generous to Democrats, but Specter is the only Republican on record as being helped by him.

"Arlen is with us on votes that matter," conservative Sen. Rick Santorum, the other Pennsylvania senator, says in a television ad for Specter. Specter did vigorously support Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas's confirmation. But he was not "with us" in opposing Robert Bork for the Supreme Court, in failing to support the full Bush tax cut and in voting against President Bill Clinton's removal from office.

Sen. Charles Schumer of New York, a leader in establishing a liberal litmus test on judicial opponents, last year wrote Bush listing Specter among desirable Supreme Court nominees. If the president can accept George Soros's choice for the Senate, could he go along with Chuck Schumer's suggestion for the Supreme Court?

Glover wins title in team roping

By TROY HYDE

Sports Editor

The final night of the Howard College Rodeo saw the Hawks from Howard College in the top-five in four different events.

The Hawks' best finisher was Ty Glover in the team roping competition. Glover teamed up with Kyle Logsdon of Odessa College to capture first overall with two seven second runs. Also competing in the team roping competition was Trey Hale and Ryan O'Donnell. This Hawk tandem scored a 7.3 on their last run, which was enough to put them in fourth overall in aggregate (average). Hale and O'Donnell's first time was recorded at 8.7.

Glover and O'Donnell are now tied for fourth in the regional standings. The top three athletes in each event qualify for the National Rodeo Championships in Casper, Wyoming, which will take place June 13-19.

"It now comes down to this weekend," said Coach Greg Kernick. "It is sudden death at this point. If you are not in the top three then you are staying home."

This weekend, the Hawks take part in the Tarleton State Rodeo in Stephenville, Texas.

Neelley Riley entered Saturday's final run with the best breakaway time of the rodeo as she recorded a 2.8. Her time in the finals was clocked at 3.7, giving her a total time of 6.5, which was good enough to place her third overall in aggregate, behind Kelcey Foreman and Justine Owen.

Riley also started the night off by singing the National Anthem in front of a crowd of over 200 people.

Patrick Freeman also competed for Howard College Saturday night. Freeman took part in the bull riding competition and finished fourth in both the final round and in aggregate.

Freeman's best score entering Saturday was an 80, while his final run's score equaled 66.

"He rode good," said Kernick, "but his bull probably wasn't good enough to back him up."

Zack Cobb and Shank Edwards each participated in the tie-down roping portion of the rodeo. Cobb entered the final run with the best time of the bunch (9.8), but a final run time of 11.7 dropped him to fourth overall in aggregate. Kyle Crick and Ryan Watkins finished just .10 seconds apart as each took first and second, respectively.

Edwards' best time entering Saturday was an 11 flat. His time Saturday, however, was a little slower at 15.7, which in turn did not place him in the top-five.

O'Donnell also competed with Lester Jourdan in the team roping competition, but received a no time Saturday.

"Our bunch did a tremendous job," said Kernick. "The effort they put into things, you really won't see in any other sport."

"The community support and volunteer help was also great. It is huge what they do for us."

South Plains' Justin Nevarez takes down his steer during the finals of the steer wrestling competition at the Howard College Rodeo, which took place at the Howard County Rodeo Bowl Saturday night. Nevarez entered Saturday night with the fastest overall time. However, after recording a 5.4 second time in the finals, Nevarez dropped to third overall.

Mavericks lose shootout to Kings

By GREG BEACHAM

AP Sports Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif.

— After finishing the regular season with an ugly collapse, the Sacramento Kings got back to what they do best: shooting, scoring and looking awfully good in the process.

Peja Stojakovic scored 28 points and Chris Webber added 26 points and 12 rebounds, propelling the Kings to a 116-105 victory over the Dallas Mavericks in Game 1 of the best-of-seven playoff series Sunday.

The Kings made a franchise-record 11 of their 21 3-pointers, including five by Stojakovic to tie Sacramento's individual playoff best.

The Kings were energized from the opening tip, and not even Dirk Nowitzki could keep Dallas close in the fourth quarter of a fitting opener for the NBA's two highest-scoring teams.

Nowitzki had 32 points and 13 rebounds but battled foul trouble for the Mavericks, who have never won a playoff series opener on the road. These Mavs struggled away from Dallas all season, going 16-25, and the Kings were just as inhospitable as their cowbell-ringing fans.

Game 2 is Tuesday night in Sacramento, with Game 3 on Saturday in Dallas.

Sacramento opened the fourth quarter with a 19-7 run keyed by the defense of Doug Christie and Webber, who endangered his gimpy knees and ankles by diving on the floor to retrieve a loose ball. Stojakovic and Anthony Peeler hit 3-pointers, and the Kings scored 11 points off four consecutive Dallas turnovers.

Antawn Jamison scored 18 points in his first career playoff game, while starting Dallas guards Marquis Daniels and Steve Nash managed just 13 points apiece on 11-for-29 shooting. Michael Finley and Antoine Walker also struggled, shooting 7-for-24.

Neither team led by more than seven points in the first three quarters, but both played frenetic offensive basketball.

Clemens still winning; Astros thump Brewers

By JOEL ANDERSON
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — At this rate, Roger Clemens might not want to consider a second retirement for quite awhile.

The Rocket still has plenty of fuel left.

Clemens has won all three of his starts this season, and was as dominant as ever Sunday in pitching the Houston Astros to a 6-1 victory over Milwaukee.

"I'm getting tired of saying the same thing about him over and over, but it's been the same for three starts in a row," catcher Brad Ausmus said. "He was strong. His velocity really never changed. He was in the 93-95 mph range the entire day. He used all his pitches — it was a carbon copy of his first two starts."

Clemens (3-0) struck out seven in seven innings, giving up just one run and four hits to lead the Astros to their seventh win in eight games.

He even added the second RBI of his career, driving in Ausmus with a single to right field. Clemens' other RBI came June 20, 2002, against Colorado when he was with the New York Yankees. The Rocket earned his 313th win, moving within one of Gaylord Perry for 15th on the career list.

It's been quite a stirring comeback for a guy who ended his Hall of Fame career — albeit for only 78 days — after the Yankees lost the World Series to the Florida Marlins last October.

"He just came right at us," said Milwaukee's Lyle Overbay, who went 0-for-3 against Clemens. "He can probably pitch this good until he's 60."

Or at least October, where Clemens hopes to lead Houston to its first World Series appearance.

The Astros certainly looked like title contenders Sunday, getting plenty of offensive help to go with Clemens' overpowering effort on the mound.

Houston finished with a season-high 16 hits, including a key two-out single from Clemens in the fourth that put the Astros up 3-1.

Ausmus homered in the second, Adam Everett had a two-run triple and Jeff Kent and Lance Berkman each had three hits and an RBI.

"You've got to go out and do your best to keep them from scoring, but then on the flip side they're such a good-hitting team, that's tough to do," Brewers manager Ned Yost said. "I can see why they're one of the favored teams in the division."

Berkman, in particular, made a couple of defensive plays in the fifth that showed the boost Clemens has provided for this long-overlooked team.

First, Berkman leapt high in the air to snatch away Wes Helms' fly ball before it hit the outfield scoreboard. On the next play, Berkman grabbed Ben Grieve's hit that ricocheted off the left-field wall and threw Grieve out at second base.

"You would run through a brick wall for the guy," Berkman said of Clemens. "He's has a lot of enthusiasm and it pumps the rest of us up. He appreciates a good play behind him and lets you know about it."

Brady Clark ended Clemens' scoreless streak at 17 innings.

TIRED OF LUGGING BOTTLED WATER?

THEN THINK ABOUT THIS . . .

Did you realize if the price of GATORADE is 2.6¢ per ounce...that's $3.33 per gallon and COLA at 5¢ per ounce is $6.40 per gallon.

Well, BOTTLED WATER can range from 1.9¢ to 7¢ per ounce . . . that's up to $8.96 per gallon!

HOLD ON because for only $5.82 per week you can have all the filtered R.O. water you want - fresh from the tap!

THAT'S RIGHT!

No more lugging those heavy bottles, no more storing empty gallon jugs to be refilled, no more running out of water at the most inconvenient times!

You can lease a Reverse Osmosis System from CLAIRE PURE WATER SYSTEMS for only $25.00 per month and get great-tasting, filtered water - anytime. You can also purchase a system from us!

Act now and CLAIRE PURE WATER SYSTEMS will install your leased or purchased R.O. for FREE!

CLAIRE PURE WATER SYSTEMS now carries the new "ZERO-WASTE" R.O. system so you can stop sending wasted water (and $$$) down the drain!

CALL CLAIRE PURE WATER SYSTEMS today for an R.O. unit in your home or office.

YOU CAN'T AFFORD NOT TO!

Tomorrow's Horoscope

BY JOYCE JILLSON
I wonder if the creators of Earth Day placed it during the early stage of the Taurus sun on purpose. Well, it's astrologically ideal, as the sun's annual passage through earth sign Taurus builds awareness of the elegant balance of nature. Taurus is a wake-up call for the senses. Use all six of yours to take in the gifts of our glorious planet.

Joyce Jillson

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You want to share all your boisterous, unabashed social energy. A complete stranger may strike up a conversation or initiate a friendship. Relationship dynamics come together quickly but dissolve if not maintained.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). It's easy come, easy go in matters of the heart. You initiate casual relationships and flirtations. Even platonic friendships hit new notes, increasing the sense of connection without making anything feel heavy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You refuse to conform to what's expected of you. Today is about activities that are engaging and fun, and when they cease to be that, it's over. An unconventional approach to work could open new doors.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You throw caution to the wind. It's safe to expect that risks that don't pan out will only hurt for a minute, and who knows how lucky you could get when they do? You're in the mood to brood tonight, but it won't last.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). A fresh start is favored in friendships and romance, but how can this happen without forgiveness? It can't. Decide what you're willing to put behind you, and then, don't look back. Unexpected guests show up tonight, so get ready.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Virgos like you enjoy and understand the concept of service as no other sign does. There is a larger purpose that must be served in order for you to feel truly happy on the job; your altruism cannot be denied.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Wins on the job come from being prepared for the hard-hitting questions. Straighten out a debt as soon as possible. For some of you singles, a matchmaker is plotting your next romance. Let your hair down tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It is important to feel adored, but at the same time, don't rely on others to set the tone. Take charge, and others follow suit. Some of you hire help with routine chores and free up your time for a lucrative business move.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Get outside, laugh, and love. Friendly chitchat sparks a date. You could fall in love with a most unlikely partner. Get a grip on careless spending because you will soon need extra cash to take advantage of an opportunity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). High rollers tempt you to draw down your cash reserves. Hold back. Spending to impress makes you appear foolish to level-headed people. Opportunity comes when you prove you are a good steward of what you have.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). It's a good day to be alone with your thoughts and a pen. If you've a rival for the attentions of a special someone, sidestep trouble. Focus on the relationship you want instead of being distracted by your competition.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Chart an independent financial course. Well-meaning family members may have advice that is out of touch with the times. You are more attuned when you do your own research. Revamp your wardrobe.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "I'm in love with an Aquarius, but does he really love me back? I'm a Cancer. Something seems missing in my life, and I think it's him, but am I right? He only says he loves me if I tell him first. We have a problem in that I'm always expressing my feelings with him and all he does is agree with whatever I say. Is he my true partner, or have I been wasting my time for the last three years?"

Oh, boy. Your Aquarius is in your life right now -- therefore, the something missing is not him. Sweet Cancer, the something that is missing is, to quote the great song by K.D. Lang, "constant craving, has always been." Your sign is always plunging to the emotional depths and feeling them fully, including that most indescribable of all feelings -- the void. I'm sorry to report that you'll probably live your whole life never filling it, and that's the poignant thing about being you. This Aquarius guy is all in his head. He's terrified of the land of feelings, he doesn't know his own, and that's why he can't express them to you. He's not holding out; he's just afraid of saying the wrong thing. Yes, he loves you back. No, you're not wasting your time.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Renee Zellweger picked up an Oscar for her performance in "Cold Mountain" and soon stars in "Bridget Jones: The Edge of Reason." The lovely Zellweger has a lot of reason to celebrate, but she tends to keep her parties private. Can it be true that she's being romanced by Jack White of The White Stripes? Well, I predict nuptials for the couple before the year is out!

Annie's Mailbox: Advice for those in need

KATHY MITCHELL
MARCY SUGAR

Dear Annie: I am a Reserve Army officer stationed in Iraq. The year away from home has taught me a lot. However, I am concerned about my return. What worries me most is my father. Dad is a Vietnam veteran and fiercely anti-war. We couldn't be more different politically, and I have never had much emotional support from him, especially when I became an officer in the Army.

When my unit was mobilized, my father insisted I resign my commission. He said, "Choose between your family or the Army." Annie, my first loyalty is to my family, but I will not go back on my word, my duty and my obligation to serve. I believe in what I'm doing, and nothing can change my mind on this.

My father was furious when I left. He told me I was no longer welcome in his home, I should never write to him, and although he hoped I would come back safely, I was dead to him either way. He meant it, too. My father has not written to me even once. I was hoping he would calm down over time, but no such luck. I heard from my sister that he has no interest in seeing me when I get home and that I don't belong in his life until I admit the war was a mistake.

Annie, should I just lie to him? Is he being unreasonable, or am I just blinded by my duty as an officer? -- Seeking Acceptance Back Home

Dear Seeking: It's good to have principles, but no one's political opinions should require him to cut off loved ones who disagree. Sooner or later, the war will be over, but the damage to your relationship could last a son is an adult and this decision is his. In your home, however, you can set the rules. Having them sleep in separate rooms may seem old-fashioned to some, but you should not feel obligated to accommodate a request that goes against your religious beliefs. Do whatever makes you feel comfortable.

Dear Annie: This is in response to "Fed Up in Wisconsin," who thinks anyone with dogs should lock them in another room when she comes over. She needs to take into consideration that these pets, dogs or otherwise (in my case, cats and rats), are their "children." I would never expect you to lock up your human child when I come over. Why should I do it with mine? If you don't like my "children," don't come to my house. -- Proud Parent of Furry Children

Dear Furry: Pet rats? You don't have to lock up your furry children, but don't expect us to drop by any time soon. Thanks for writing.

Dear Annie: Should I warn my grandchildren that my 81-year-old mother, their great-grandmother, is likely to die soon, and quite suddenly?

Mom has a huge abdominal aortic aneurysm that could burst at any moment. Because she is a high-risk surgical candidate and the surgery would be difficult, Mom has elected not to undergo the operation.

Three of my grandchildren, ages 16, 13 and 8, live with me. I would like them to be forewarned, but I don't want them to look oddly at my mother when we visit or treat her like an invalid, which they might. Also, the 8-year-old girl is very dependent on me emotionally, and I know I will go to pieces when Mom dies. I don't want to frighten the child, but I want the freedom to grieve. A person can only be so strong. I need some advice quickly. -- To Tell or Not

Dear Tell: You can certainly inform your grandchildren that your mother is ill and that you are worried about her health. They may be overly solicitous at first, but that's OK. Let them see her often, and they will treat her as they always have.

Please consider grief counseling, now, to help prepare you for your mother's death. You also might want to enlist some help in caring for the children until you feel more able to do so. If the 8-year-old becomes traumatized by your reaction, talk to the pediatrician about appropriate grief counseling for her as well.
