Scenic Mountain Medical Center will not begin a new class of radiological technician students in the fall and instead hopes to turn the program over to a university or college.

"We're going to continue with the existing students we have," explained hospital CEO Mike Pruitt. "We have significant increase in our volumes and we're going to concentrate on taking care of our core business first and foremost."

"Both the program and the hospital have the capability to grow and both are growing, so we feel like we need to move

According to hospital Assistant CEO Derrick Yu, the hospital turns away several applicants for the program each year, which is limited to only five students per class.

"We know there is a big demand," Yu said. "Students come from all over Texas because there are limited schools. There is such a demand, but we have such limited capabilities, so we should

Texas obesity rates among highest in nation for children

HOUSTON (AP) — The rates of obesity in Texas children are among the highest in the nation, with black and Hispanic kids exhibiting the highest risk for being overweight, according to a study released Thursday by the University of Texas School of Public Health.

Deanna Hoelscher, the study's principal investigator, said researchers were surprised to discover the rate at which Texas fourth-graders were overweight was 46 percent higher than children of similar age elsewhere in the country.

"Parents do need to watch this in their kids," she said. "What this means is being overweight is a health risk for kids. Parents need to look at that as something they need to take some measures to prevent."

Researchers collected data from more than 6,000 students in 30 schools districts and 132 schools throughout Texas from 1999 to 2001. Hoelscher said the study is one of the first to gather statewide data based on measured height and weight at the elementary and secondary level. Data from the study's first year was released Thursday.

The study will be published in next month's American Journal of Public Health.

the master of the Coahoma Masonic Lodge 992. "It's an award given to a citizen who shows dedication to excellence."

Bibb, a 1977 Coahoma High School graduate, has been teaching for more than 20 years at schools in Eastland, Stanton and Coahoma. She has taught at all levels of public education.

She is also very active in her community, serving as a youth leader at the Coahoma Church of Christ and adult leader of the Howard County 4-H Club.

"It's a very difficult choice," Horn said, noting that Bibb was chosen from a field of nominees. "You have many people who are very worthy."

The Coahoma Masonic Lodge has presented the Mirabeau B. Lamar award to a Coahoma student or teacher for at least eight years, Horn said.

"Free Masonry has long supported schools from day one in Texas," Horn said. "For years as the frontier advanced ... when most communities came, the first building or one of the first buildings built were Masonic Lodges and most were two-story buildings."

"Many times the Masons would utilize the second floor and encourage people to use the first floor for community events, church events and primarily for schools."

Bibb joins Forsan ISD retiree Zimmalew Boeker and Big Spring ISD teacher Barbara Tarpley in receiving the honor this year. Boeker and Tarpley both received the award from the Staked Plains Lodge 598 of Big Spring.

Several Coahoma teachers were honored for their years of service during the luncheon.

Five-year pins were given to Carrie Averette, Betty Barnett, Joyce Baumann, Kim Bridges, Elvira Gomez, Sheila Holt, Sharon Nachlinger, Karen Reagan, Altie Winn, Robert Wood, Sonia Wyrick and Superintendent Dr. Bill Kingston.

Ten-year pins were given to Albert Mier and Charla Walker.

Twenty-year pins were given to Gwen Stanislaus and Lois White.

Twenty-five-year pins were given to Cheryl Green and Mark McLean.

Also honored were retirees Mary Anderson, Cindy Fowler, Sue O'Daniel and Dottie Rogers.

really move the program into an academic setting."

Students attending a university or college also have more access to financial help, Yu added, while those students attending the hospital's program are limited in this area.

"Our core business is taking care of patients and while it was OK several years ago to have schools in hospitals, it's no longer the case," Yu said. "We need to focus on patient care."

"On the flip side, we also feel like the radiologist tech profession is in great demand," he said. "Having it in an academic setting will enable the program to expand its capabilities. While we graduate only five students here, a college or university has the capabilities of graduating 20 to 25 students."

Currently, the hospital is in early talks to possibly transfer the program to Howard College, Pruitt said.

"We're seriously looking at the possibility, due to the fact this has been a program in our community for almost 30 years," said Howard College President Dr. Cheryl Sparks. "We will seriously consider the program in order to fill the gap which will be left. First, we must determine if it is feasible to move forward."

Sparks said college administrators are researching several possibilities, including the addition of an associate of applied science degree or a certificate program as radiological technician.

First, the college must determine if there is a need before applying to the college coordinating board, Sparks said. A radiology program is already in demand at the San Angelo campus, Sparks added, and that factor will be taken into consideration.

"The students will still come through SMMC for clinical rotations like nursing students do now," Pruitt said. "If they are in an academic setting, they can grow the program much larger. There is a large need out there."

More than 16 million Americans served in World War II, more than 400,000 are estimated to have been killed and more than 700,000 military men were wounded or disabled.

Hospital officials said veterans are encouraged to gather in the second floor hospital activities room at 12:45 p.m. before the simulcast which will begin at 1 p.m.

OUR VIEWS

We salute:

Each week, the Herald salutes individuals and groups from our community and area who have been recognized for special achievements or accomplishments.

We recognize these special people for working to help make our region a better place to live, work and play

This week we salute:

- Former Texas Senator Teel Bivins, who received U.S. Senate approval to become the U.S. ambassador to Sweden.

- Longtime Forsan Independent School District educator Zimmalew Boeker, on her retirement as well as receiving the Mirabeau B. Lamar Award for education excellence from the Masons.

- Area high school students who are graduating tonight, including those from Coahoma and Big Spring.

- Relay for Life volunteers, who held their wrapup party this week. The job you do is absolutely outstanding.

- ALON USA, Big Spring Refinery employees and retirees. Congratulations one more time on a wonderful celebration — and even more importantly, 75 years of dedicated service.

Is there an individual or organization in our community that you feel should be saluted? If so, please send us their name and why you think they should be recognized. We must have your name and telephone number and you must provide it in writing.

A SMALL PRAYER

by K. Rae Anderson

Let me hear some more of that ice cream truck music

Do you think people who drive ice cream trucks are crazy or just nuts about really bad music?

I'm talking about those folks who drive highly decorated vans through neighborhoods, encouraging already obese children to become even more obese. Aww now, don't write or call, I'm just having some fun here. I know ice cream is really good for you.

I like it myself; I just can't afford it.

But seriously, how many times can you listen to a really bad rendition of "Lullaby and Goodnight" before you lose your mind completely? And why would you play that song? Is there a study somewhere that shows a relationship between that song and ice cream?

Is there an ice cream peddler's school somewhere where you learn the tricks of the trade?

1. Don't run over children, they are your business.

2. Always play that version of "Lullaby and Goodnight" at triple speed so it will stick in the minds of little children.

3. Play it LOUD so that kids four blocks away have time to start begging their parents for money before you arrive.

4. Keep the freezer door closed. Is the point here to hypnotize sweets-starved children out of their nickels and dimes? (OK, fives and tens; so I come from a different world.)

Or is the sound aimed at the parents, so that they'll pay off the kids just to get the truck to move out of earshot? It is pretty annoying, the same song, over and over again.

I wonder, do ice cream sales people just tune it out after a while? Is it possible to do that? I'm thinking it would be ringing in their minds 24 hours a day... until they snap.

Of course, there have been ice cream trucks for as long as there has been ice and a way to move it around. Now I don't go back THAT far, but I do recall ice cream trucks making their rounds each summer. Back then, the top song was "Pop Goes the Weasel." Someone needs to encourage technology in the ice cream truck industry. Or at least use a recording that doesn't sound like it's been left out in the hot sun too long.

In rural Texas, you'll frequently notice that you'll see these trucks one summer, then you won't the next. Or the trucks will change or the drivers will be different. I've always sorta thought of it as a part-time sideline kinda thing, something to bring in extra money. Sorta like operating a fire-works stand a few times a year. No amount of money would get me in a box, 100 degrees in the shade, surrounded by gunpowder.

I wonder if they ever get a visit from the ice cream truck?

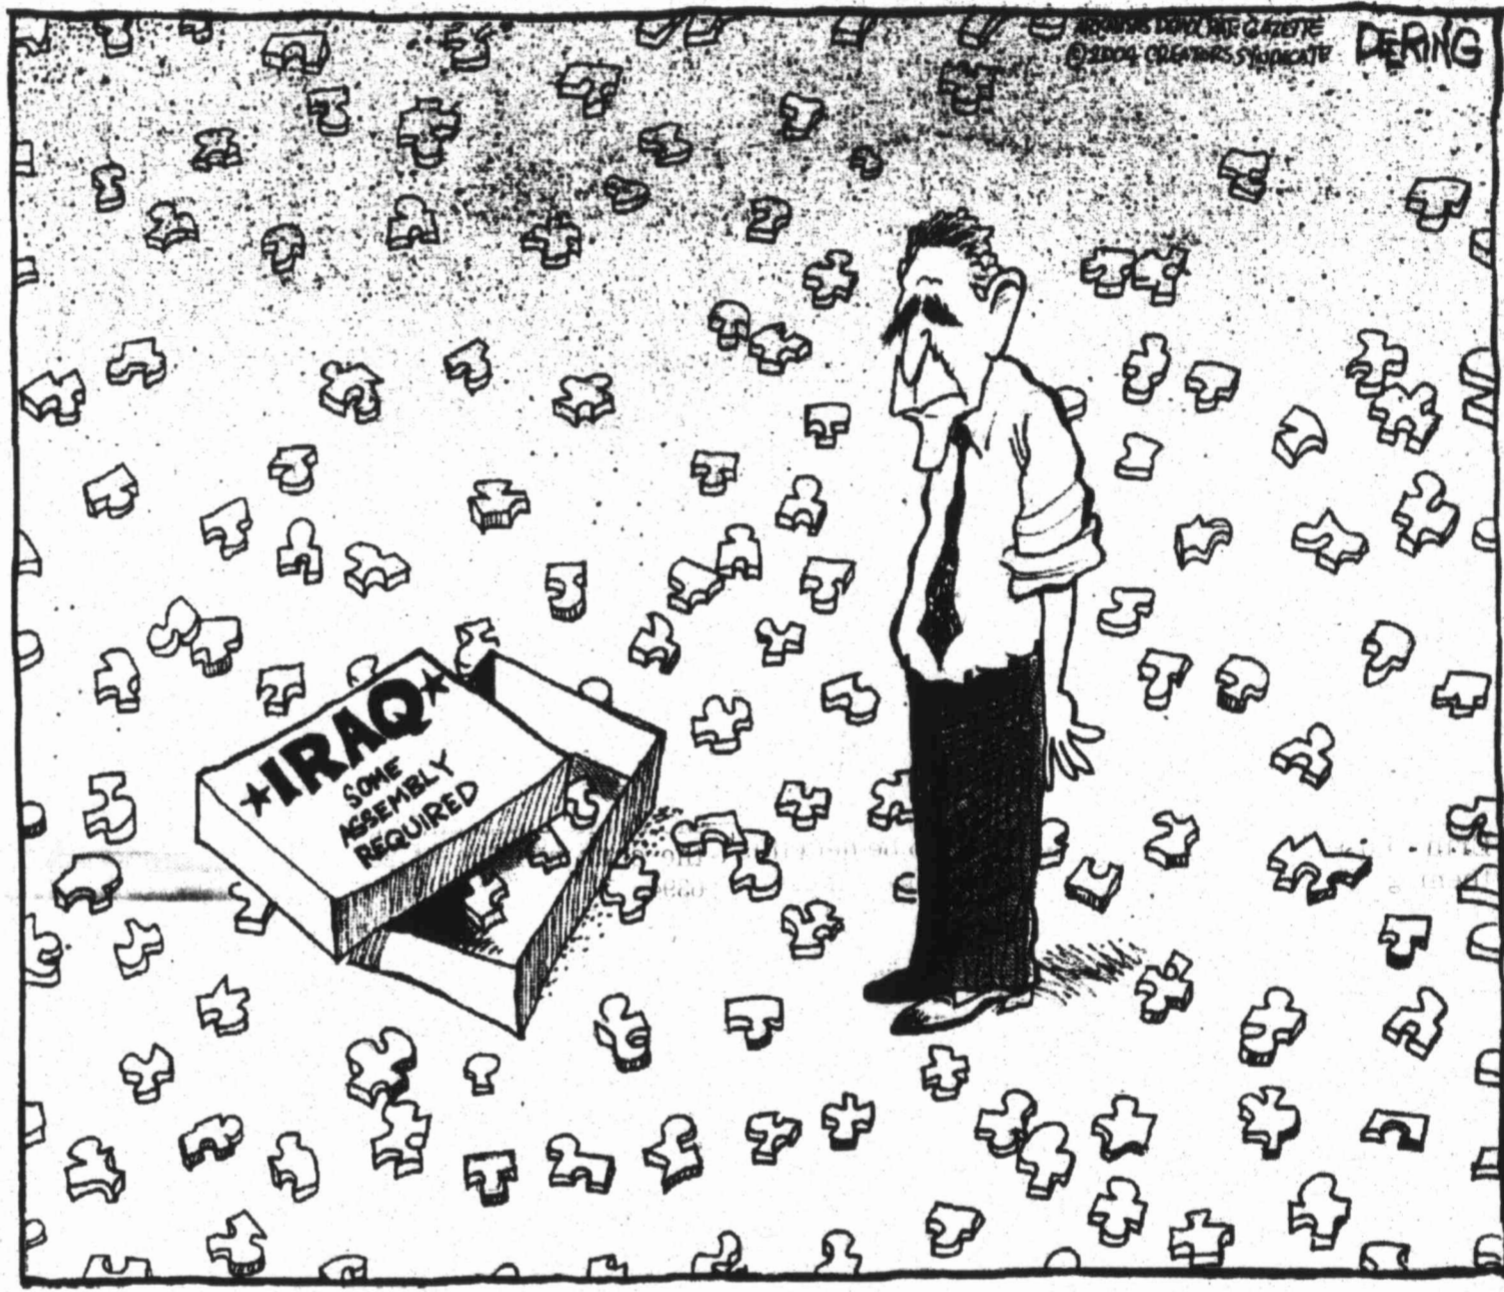

In more populated areas though, ice cream trucks are a full-time, big-business deal. Competing franchises frequently clash over "territories." It's very serious stuff.

Serious stuff, bad songs.

YOUR VIEWS

TO THE EDITOR:

The recent horrifying images from Iraq are overwhelming. The disgusting pictures of the cruelty of some U.S. soldiers are surpassed by the grotesque beheading of Nicholas Berg and the abhorrent claim that his murder will redeem the dignity of the Iraqi prisoners.

The abuse and torture of Iraqi prisoners has brought shame upon our nation, is an affront to our most basic ideals and will undermine legitimate efforts to confront the very real threats faced by our nation and the world. This shameful conduct will damage America's credibility with the Muslim world for years to come.

As our nation expresses its revulsion at the crimes committed in its name and undertakes the essential task of determining the nature, extent and responsibility for the abuses, we should never lose sight of the hard truth of the moral obligation to uphold the basic rights even of our worst enemies who, show contempt for such rights.

The gravity of the threats we face might tempt us to tolerate an ends-justify-the-means morality. The inherent justice of our cause and the perceived necessities involved in stopping terrorism can lead to a minimalist morality that accepts a "permissive" interpretation of international law, the "inevitability" of mounting civilian casualties in Iraq, and the "realism" of an over-reliance on military responses to the problem of global terrorism.

The universal condemnation of what has taken place at Abu Ghraib is a hopeful sign that, despite the unspeakable evils done to us and the terrible threats we face, our nation is committed to acting in full accord with fundamental moral norms and America's cherished ideals of liberty and justice for all. In doing so, we will uphold international law, strengthen the moral fiber of our nation and best honor the memory of victims of Sept. 11 and the soldiers and civilians who have died in Afghanistan and Iraq.

MOST REV. MICHAEL D. PFEIFER,
OMI
CATHOLIC BISHOP OF THE DIOCESE OF SAN ANGELO (20 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS)

TO THE EDITOR:

We are writing concerning Friday's, May 21, paper. Right on the front page, in dark letters, was the sentence, "It's going to be a h-- of a night." The article was quite long, yet of all the things that were said in it, Bill McClellan chose to highlight that quote. What was the purpose? Why did he feel it was necessary?

When I looked for the name of the writer, I wasn't surprised, as Mr. McClellan wrote another article recently that said something like, "Pet owners have hair on their butt that isn't theirs." Does he think that's funny?

We think it and the statement in Friday's paper were in poor taste and did not belong in a newspaper, or anywhere else for that matter.

It's bad enough that the misspellings and incorrect grammar in this newspaper are so numerous, but there really is no excuse for swear words and distasteful comments. It certainly shows that a person has a very limited vocabulary.

BRUCE AND MARTHA MYERS
BIG SPRING

TO THE EDITOR:

On May 22, approximately 200 motorcycles and several chase vehicles arrived in Big Spring on their way to Washington, D.C. They placed a wreath at the Vietnam Memorial and fellowshiped for about an hour.

On behalf of Rolling Thunder participants we would like to thank the local law enforcement for donating their time to escort these bikes in and out of Big Spring without a problem. We would like to thank the newspaper for its coverage, and to David and Bonnie Lambert for refreshments that they handed out at the Memorial.

Thanks also go to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Committee for its support and to the local Cossacks for their help.

Thanks to everyone who turned out to show support for this group on their trip across the country. This was the 16th year for the ride to remember those who can't ride; The MIAs and POWs and all other vets.

TO THE EDITOR:

I wanted to say thank you for promoting our special events at the Big Spring State Park.

The seventh annual "Master the Mountain" Fun Run and Walk went quite well this year.

Your news promotions benefit our local state park and we really appreciate it.

Thank you again for your contribution to the state park.

Economic impact of equine disease
too early to gauge

Horse groups and livestock experts said it's too soon to gauge the economic impact three cases of a contagious but rarely fatal disease could have on Texas' equine industry.

But there is concern among the owners of Texas 1.1 million horses, as summertime horse shows and racing at the state's five tracks bring thousands of visitors and millions of dollars.

State animal health officials last week confirmed three horses on a farm near Balmorhea in far West Texas have the viral disease vesicular stomatitis, the first U.S. cases since 1998.

The disease is a cause of concern because symptoms are similar to the highly contagious foot-and-mouth disease, which has been eradicated in the United States since 1929.

Childcare provided Free evening GED and ESL classes beginning Tuesday

By MEGAN KNIGHT
Staff Writer
Howard College is offering free GED and English as a Second Language (ESL) night classes starting June 1. "You can join at any time, just come to one of the classes, and the teacher will sign you up right then," said Debbie Klepper, Howard College director of adult education. Klepper said the classes are Monday through Thursday from 5:30 to 9 p.m. in the Practical Arts Building. The GED class will meet in room 111C, and the ESL class will meet in 108. The program, funded through a Barbara Bush Literacy Grant received by Howard College, also provides free childcare for all participating parents at Howard Cottage, the college's licensed childcare provider. Howard Cottage will also be participating in literacy activities in conjunction with the classes. The GED and ESL students will go to Howard Cottage to interact and practice with their children. Howard Cottage is located right beside the Practical Arts Building on the Howard College campus.

Howard Cottage Director Becky Moughon said, "We need the regular enrollment information and a shot record. If the child is school aged, you can just tell us what school they are enrolled in and the school's phone number. But if the child is younger, we will need you to fill it all out." Moughon recommends stopping by Howard Cottage prior to signing up for classes. For more information about the program, contact Debbie Klepper at 432-264-5014. For more information about Howard Cottage, call 432-264-5185.

CHICAGO, Ill. — Mark Buehrle's follow-up performance gave the Chicago White Sox back-to-back shutouts for the first time in nine years.

One night after Esteban Loaiza and Shingo Takatsu blanked Texas on two hits, Buehrle and two relievers shut out the Rangers again as the White Sox rolled to a 9-0 win Thursday night.

"You always want to go out there and do better than the guy did before. So I joked with (Loaiza) and said I couldn't do that — only two hits," Buehrle said.

"So with this good offense out there, you just got to go out there and try to throw as many zeros."

Buehrle (5-1) won his fourth straight start, allowing nine hits in seven innings before Jon

Adkins and Billy Koch completed the shutout.

It's the first consecutive shutouts for the White Sox since they blanked Kansas City-Sept. 26-27, 1995.

Texas, which entered the game with a .284 team batting average, hadn't been shut out all season before Wednesday.

"I think we just ran up against Chicago's 1 and 2 pitchers," said Eric Young, who was 4-for-4 for the Rangers. "They are not going to let anybody come in their house and score a lot of runs."

Buehrle's ERA during his four-game winning streak is just 0.65 (two earned runs in 27 2-3 innings) and he's been showered with run support.

Jose Valentin hit a three-run homer in the first Thursday night and Juan Uribe added solo shots in the fifth and seventh innings. The White Sox have scored 43 runs in Buehrle's last four starts.

"I'm dialed in. But the offense seems like they score seven or eight runs at least every start," he said. "It's easy. If you can't pitch with leads like this. ..."

Carlos Lee had a strong night for Chicago with two singles, extending his hitting streak to 14 games, and a sacrifice fly. He also made a great throw to cut down Chad Allen at the plate when he tried to score from second on Eric Young's single in the second. Lee also made a nice slide around catcher Ken Huckabay to score on Paul Konerko's sacrifice fly in the fifth.

Texas starter Ryan Drese (2-2) lasted just 4 1-3 innings, giving up seven runs and eight hits.

Buehrle gave up singles to the first two hitters of the game before retiring the side and surrendered another single and a walk in the second before Lee's strong throw bailed him out.

It was the second straight night a White Sox outfielder threw out a Texas runner at the plate. Aaron Rowand did it Wednesday.

"Lee made a great throw," Texas manager Buck Showalter said, adding he would have been upset if third base coach Steve Smith didn't send the runners. "You make them make those throws, tip your hat and move on."

With two outs in the first, Frank Thomas and Lee singled before Valentin hit a long homer to straightaway center, his seventh of the season. Valentin had struck out seven straight times before singling in his final at-bat Tuesday.

Chicago loaded the bases in the third and scored two more on Lee's sacrifice fly and an RBI single by Konerko.

The White Sox made it 7-0 and drove out Drese in the fifth as Uribe led off his with his sixth homer, Lee and Valentin singled and Konerko delivered his sacrifice fly. Uribe homered off Rosman Garcia in the seventh.

Uribe is now batting .348 and has been the biggest surprise of the season for Chicago.

"This kid will be in the lineup no matter if he has to be behind the plate," Chicago manager Ozzie Guillen said. "I never thought my best hitter was going to be Uribe when I got this job. And he is right now."

Lightning even Stanley Cup series with Calgary

By ALAN ROBINSON

AP Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. — When a star player clashes with his coach, one of the two often goes. With the Tampa Bay Lightning, a demanding coach and a sometimes recalcitrant player both stayed.

Look where it's gotten them — three more victories and a team called the worst in American pro sports only a couple of years ago will win the Stanley Cup.

Vincent Lecavalier, a player whose moodiness and perceived me-first attitude had the Lightning considering trading him 2 1/2 years ago, set up two goals and was a physical force throughout Tampa Bay's series-tying 4-1 victory over Calgary on Thursday night.

Lecavalier played much like Calgary's Jarome Iginla did in the Flames' 4-1 decision in Game 1, displaying creativity at one end of the ice and a nastiness at the other in what essentially was a must-win game. Game 3 is Saturday night in Calgary.

"If you lose two in a row in a seven-game series, you are in deep trouble," coach John Tortorella said after the first Stanley Cup final win in the Lightning's 12-season history. "You do the math."

Lecavalier did, and he determined the Lightning's lethargic, uninspiring effort in Game 1 didn't add up. He decided to do something about it.

Lecavalier didn't score the all-important goal about seven minutes in that ended Calgary's streak of not allowing a first-period score in nine consecutive games. But he was largely responsible for it.

Lecavalier skated the puck out from behind the net after faking Stephane Yelle with what effectively was a pass to himself and fed it to Jassen Cullimore in the right circle. His shot rebounded to Ruslan Fedotenko, who swept it past Miikka Kiprusoff as it lay in the crease for his seventh goal in nine games and 10th of the playoffs.

"It wasn't the moves that were the most important part of his game. I thought his presence was the most important thing," said Tortorella, who long ago smoothed over his relationship with Lecavalier. "I thought he showed a physical presence, and you could just see him maturing, saying to the team, 'Follow me.'"

Lecavalier was about the last person Tortorella expected to emerge into a leader a couple of years ago, during a rift that ultimately led the Lightning to replace general manager Rick Dudley with Jay Feaster.

On this night, Lecavalier indeed resembled the player former team owner Art Williams predicted would be the "Michael Jordan of hockey" when the Lightning drafted him No. 1 overall in 1998.

"Throughout the game he was physical," teammate Brad Richards said. "It kind of brings everybody on the same page. You saw it happen in the last series with (Philadelphia's Keith) Primeau and that just makes everybody believe they can do it."

Or just like Iginla played in Game 1. Iginla was relatively quiet in Game 2 as Calgary never found an offensive rhythm while going 0-for-5 on the power play during the first two periods.

After that, it was all but over when Richards, Dan Boyle and Martin St. Louis scored in the first six minutes of the third period. Dave Andreychuk, the Lightning's 40-year-old captain who is playing in his first Stanley Cup final, and Lecavalier both set up two goals.

Boyle scored only two nights after his house was substantially damaged by a fire that broke out late in Game 1.

"Well, Vinny is a special player obviously, and he tries a lot of things most players don't," Boyle said. "He gets away with it. We like to see that, as long as it ends up in their net."

Right now, the Flames' challenge is to get some pucks into the Lightning's net in Game 3.

Russian youngster advances at French

By STEVEN WINE
AP Sports Writer

PARIS - Basking in her latest victory Friday, Maria Sharapova grabbed a pinch of red clay at Roland Garros and gave it a rub. She'll be back for more. A Siberia native who lives in Florida, the 17-year-old Sharapova advanced to the fourth round of the French Open by beating fellow Russian Vera Zvonareva 6-3, 7-6.

Precocious and photogenic, Sharapova has drawn comparisons to a young Anna Kournikova. Sharapova reached the fourth round at Wimbledon last year and is seeded 18th, and the victory over Zvonareva was her second this month against a top-10 player.

She'll next face Marlene Weingartner, who beat No. 8-seeded Russian Nadia Petrova 6-3, 6-2.

Petrova, a semifinalist last year, had five double faults and lost her serve seven times.

"I'm very disappointed," Petrova said. "This French Open is screwed up. It's a very open draw this year."

Perhaps it will be Sharapova. Born in Nyagan, Russia, she moved to the Black Sea resort of Sochi at age 2, began playing tennis at 4, started training at Nick Bollettieri's Tennis Academy in Florida at 9 and had an agent by 11.

Plus she can play, smacking aggressive shots with a shriek that has sometimes drawn complaints from opponents. Sharapova raced to a 4-0 lead against the No. 10-seeded Zvonareva, then wavered in the second set but closed out the victory with a solid tiebreaker.

Sharapova hit a service winner on set point, then emitted one final shriek and hopped with glee.

Weingartner, 24, matched her best Grand Slam performance by reaching the fourth round.

"She's the type of player who can play unbelievable, and the next day she can play the worst," Petrova said.

Another Russian eliminated was 17-year-old Maria Kirilenko, who came up just short Thursday in pursuit of the biggest victory yet for women's tennis in her nation. Kirilenko lost to Serena Williams 4-6, 6-2, 6-4 in the second round.

Russia had seven women reach the round of 32 — more than any other country, and a reflection of the nation's recent progress in the sport.

Six Americans remained. That included Williams and her sister Venus, and Jennifer Capriati, thanks to a trio of come-from-behind wins Thursday.

Second-seeded Serena had the toughest time. By the seventh game, she was screaming at herself. In the third set, when she fell behind 4-2, she threw her racket.

"I think I made like a thousand mistakes," said Williams, the 2002 champion. "I made a ton of errors. I was spraying the ball. I wasn't moving up to the ball."

Williams did well to advance in an upset-filled tournament that has already lost both defending champions.

Juan Carlos Ferrero's bid to repeat ended when he was beaten by Russian Igor Andreev 6-4, 6-2, 6-3.

Henin-Hardenne, the 2003 women's champion, lost Wednesday. Venus Williams, seeded fourth, beat Jelena Kostanic 6-3, 6-3. No. 7 Capriati, who won the tournament in 2001, defeated Kveta Peschke 7-5, 6-3. Both Americans overcame first-set deficits by winning six consecutive games.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

BY JOYCE JILLSON

We're trying to wrap up work and enter the weekend, but the moon void of course seems to drag things out. This evening, the moon enters Libra, which usually would drive us into the arms of loved ones, but with Venus retrograde, it focuses more on the sort of "Greatest Love of All" Whitney Houston once sang about, the one found "inside of me."

ARIES (March 21-April 19). The reason you'll win is simple. You know how to touch others emotionally, which is a greater gift than any amount of money could buy. Unexpected travel is highlighted. If a friend has been treated unfairly, take a stand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). If someone is on the down low, you figure it out because you are aware, observing what makes people tick. Before you go to bed tonight, remember to forgive the one person who needs it the most — possibly yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Atmosphere affects your mood. Put thought into creating your surroundings. Business affairs go swimmingly, which helps your personal life, too. You can multiply your dollars through buying and selling, media and advertising.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Check out the local scene — get to know your community resources.

Chances are that what you need most to get business on track is listed in the yellow pages. Your dreams will be beautiful.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). New ideas are flying in from all over the world — you're an open vessel, ready for the next big thing. Consider getting corporate sponsors for your project. Tonight cements a romantic bond. An old relationship turns over a new leaf.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You've got style. Steer clear of narrow-minded people. Watching your diet makes a difference in how sexy you feel tonight. You can take back the control in a relationship by accepting responsibility when appropriate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Bad behavior is part of the equation, and your temper, as mellow as it usually is, will flair! Is it any consolation to know that this outburst happened because you make others feel so comfortable?

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). The success of an enterprise is vital to your self-esteem. It's worth figuring out how to reach a compromise that benefits everyone involved. You are dealing with conservative views. A Virgo helps you sort it out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Someone intoxicating lights up your universe. That's why you should take extra time getting ready before leaving the house. Old possessions break down — the excuse you needed to make a change!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Positive things flow from an orderly environment. Little details fall into place, and coincidences work out splendidly. There's room for gradual progress in a tough work relationship. Don't push your agenda all at once.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Just because you're qualified to do certain work doesn't mean it's the best use of your talent. Do what makes you shine. Dates are better when you invite friends along — sexy people around you add to your intrigue.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Talk over educational possibilities with someone who knows. Remember the old adage: Water goes to its own level. Pick your company carefully. Release your energy on a project that improves your household.

Adjust tee height to club selection

By T.J. TOMASI

A good rule of thumb whenever you use a wood is to tee up the ball so the top edge of the wood bisects the middle of the ball, as I'm demonstrating in the first photo here, where I'm getting ready to hit my 7-wood on a par 3. This is because your goal is to hit the ball slightly on the upswing to produce the correct trajectory and full carry for all your wood shots.

Examine the three teed balls in photo 2. The one in the middle is teed correctly for my 7-wood, while the ball on the right (the one that is teed the highest) is correct for my driver. Because the head of the driver is bigger (higher from top to bottom and longer from back to front) than my 7-wood, the ball must be teed higher to allow the top edge of the driver to bisect the middle of the ball.

This is especially important with today's big-headed drivers because they have a "hot spot" (a desirable point of impact that maximizes carry and distance) that is above the traditional "sweet spot" on the club face. You'll never hit the ball on the hot spot if the ball is teed too low.

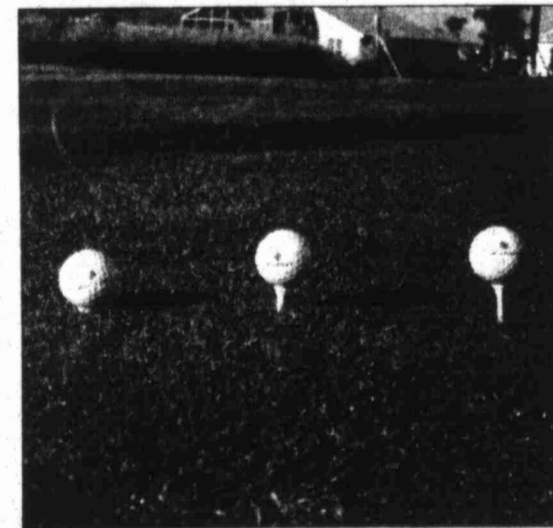

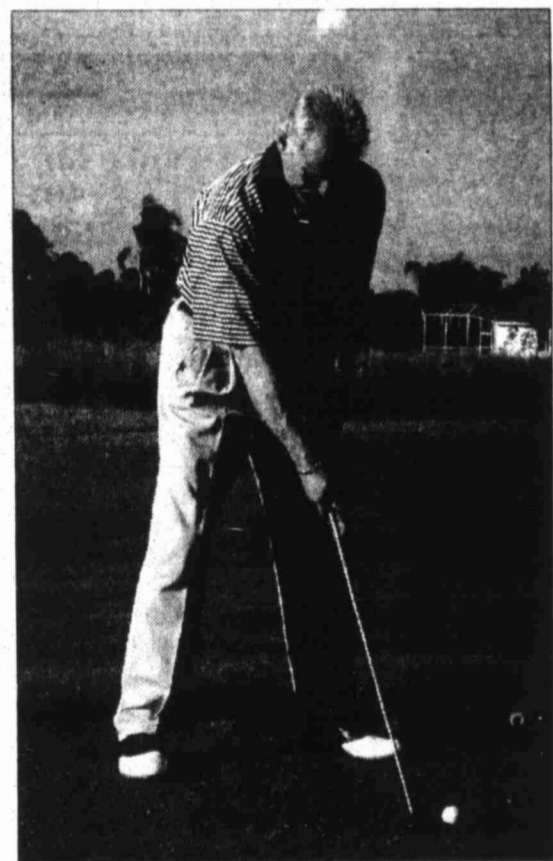

Golfers who pop-up their woods when they tee up the ball often resort to teeing the ball too low, but this is the wrong approach. The problem is an excessively steep swing where the club comes to the ball with a vertical angle of attack that causes the club head to cut under the ball. If you have this problem, you should work on shallowing out your swing so it bottoms out just before contact.

The ball on the left in the photo, the one that is teed so low, is perfect for an iron shot. Only the head of the tee is visible. There's just enough room to fit the thin section of a tee between the ball and the ground.

Remember that an iron shot is meant to be hit at the bottom of the swing arc. If you tee an iron too high, you'll make off-center contact, ensuring that the ball won't achieve its full carry because the center of gravity of the club head isn't behind the ball.

This begs the question, "Why tee up the ball at all if you are going to hit an iron?" The reason is simple; you want to eliminate hitting a "flier" — a shot where you trap grass between the club face and the ball, causing the ball to fly farther than anticipated.

So tee the ball up every time the rules allow, and make sure it's teed up the right amount.

Tee heights should be determined based on what club you are using. The examples above are for (from left): an iron, a wood and a jumbo driver.

'Slump' proves Tiger judged by different standard

By GLENN SHEELEY
Cox News Service

Atlanta
Each time it airs, the irony deepens. In a Buick commercial, Tiger Woods searches for his ball in thick, jungle-like vegetation and proclaims, "So this is what the rough looks like."

In real life, he's starting to know it, vine by vine.

Woods, golf's No. 1-ranked player, is hitting fairways so infrequently he's ranked 157th on the PGA Tour (56.4 percent). Even John Daly, who is more famous for hitting adjacent fairways, trails him by only two percentage points.

Still, the amazing Woods came within one stroke of making a playoff on consecutive weeks, even with a three-fairway final round at the Byron Nelson Championship two weeks ago.

How is he doing it? By leading the PGA Tour in the unofficial RSR category (Ridiculously Successful Recovery Shots), Woods is getting to greens when it does not seem possible, flailing against tree trunks and from ankle-deep rough, muscling balls from bogey-land to possible birdies.

By putting superbly — he climbed 20 spots in putts per round (28.47) to 28th on tour — Woods is staying in contention when his ball-striking indicates otherwise.

While such adventures are exciting evidence of the depth of the man's talents, every time Woods is examined by TV experts or quizzed in news conferences, you'd think he was missing cuts instead of just missing out on victories.

Are there legitimate questions to ask Woods? Definitely. "If you can't hit fairways with your driver, then why not hit a club which allows you to, even if it's a 5-iron? ... And, by the way, why can't the best player in the world hit a fairway?"

Are there questions that reporters are unqualified to ask? You bet. Any that begin like: "Tiger, your club position at the top of your swing to me looks like ..."

Meanwhile, Vijay Singh imploded for two consecutive Sundays and was virtually ignored. Now Woods is 2.27 world ranking points ahead after Singh had closed to 2.14.

At the Byron Nelson, Singh finished quadruple bogey, bogey for a 78 and dropped from fifth to 59th. Had Woods done the same, hysteria surely would have resulted.

"I remember back in 2000, when I was winning quite a few tournaments, the question was, 'Am I bad for the game because I was winning all the time?'" he said. "Now I get the criticism, 'Why aren't you winning?' ... [But] that's just part of the deal." What more could golf provide for its fans? Isn't this what everyone wanted, for Tiger Woods to be challenged after so many years when he seemed unbeatable?

Just two Masters ago, Jack Nicklaus was ripping competitors for self-destructing around Woods. Now that Woods is self-destructing, driving balls so far off the map and still almost winning, isn't this great stuff to watch?

Surely, it all makes next

CURTIS COMPTON / Cox News Service

Tiger Woods has frequently found himself in the trees and rough this year. Despite his poor fairway percentage (56.4), he's still the world's No. 1 player.

TIGER FACTS

Things you probably didn't know about Tiger Woods:

- He still washes and waxes his own cars, especially the Porsche. But he won't wash fiancée Elin Nordegren's Hummer because, "It's just too big."
- He requires only about four or five hours of sleep a night.
- He lost about eight pounds recently and has been unable to put it back on, "because my metabolism is so high."
- At every event he plays, a shipment of Nike One balls arrives at the practice range for his use. The Nike balls are separated from the other brands each day.
- He gives nicknames to many of his fellow PGA Tour players. One of his best goes to Atlanta's Stewart Cink, whom he calls "Kitchen."

— Glenn Sheeley

PHIL SKINNER / Cox News Service

Critics who claim fiancée Elin Nordegren is a distraction don't see that Tiger Woods is more relaxed.

month's U.S. Open at Shinnecock Hills potentially one of the most interesting ever. Now you will have Woods, who cannot hit a fairway in Texas on a TPC course, trying to win a U.S. Open, where the fairways are barely wider than a bowling alley.

But instead of being praised for still beating nearly everyone without finding the short grass, Woods is grilled about: 1) his personal life with a full-time girlfriend; and 2) his professional life without a full-time instructor since breaking with Butch Harmon two years ago.

People who think the presence of fiancée Elin Nordegren in Woods' life has affected his performance don't know the man at all. They are not yet married with screaming babies disrupting their sleep. Truth is, Woods never has seemed more relaxed or good-natured.

"I've been hearing ever since I started dating Elin that my game has gone downhill," Woods said. "She moved in with me and we started living together in 2002 and I won two majors that year, so I think I'm doing all right."

As for the Great Instructor Debate, it seems pretty obvious. Just like sampling a different driver every now and then, Woods enjoys the freedom of being able to glean something from a different instructor now and then. Right now that might be Hank Haney. When he's practicing in Orlando, Fla., it might be David Leadbetter or Rick Smith.

As for being No. 1, Woods never has considered it a career-long role. With Phil Mickelson and Singh becoming serious challengers, Woods said, smiling, "As long as you're still in that conversation, you're doing all right."

Women's Open grants Wie special exemption

By GLENN SHEELEY
Cox News Service

Atlanta
Hawaii's Michelle Wie, 14, Monday accepted a special exemption into the U.S. Women's Open, July 1-4 at the Orchards Golf Club in South Hadley, Mass.

The gesture by the United States Golf Association, which eased Wie's busy travel schedule, immediately created another opportunity — one with far-reaching possibilities.

Wie also has filed an application to qualify for the U.S. (Men's) Public Links, July 12-17 at Maple Grove, Minn., and has chosen the 36-hole sectional qualifier June 18 at Manada Golf Club in Hershey, Pa.

The significance? If she secures a spot, it's a tournament that sends its winner to the Masters. While it's certainly a longshot, the teenager has mentioned repeatedly her dream to compete as the first woman in the Masters.

Wie was practicing with her Curtis Cup team members this week at the Sea Island Golf Club in Sea Island, Ga.

It was the first time an amateur has been given a special exemption to the U.S. Women's Open, for which Wie qualified last year and tied for 39th.

With the exemption, the USGA already has guaranteed Wie's presence in three of its main summer events. She will play in the Curtis Cup matches in Merseyside, England, June 12-13, then will defend her title June 22-27 at the U.S. Women's Amateur Public Links in Williamsburg, Va. Prior to being awarded the U.S. Women's Open spot, Wie's father, B.J., said last week that her travel schedule, which then had to include a qualifier for the Women's Open, was too tight to attempt qualifying for the men's Public Links.

On a four-way roll

The "sole radius" of an iron refers to the curvature of the sole from heel to toe and from leading edge to back edge. Most irons made today have some degree of sole radius, also known as "four-way roll."

When purchasing a set of irons you should match this feature to the type of course(s) you play the most. The thicker the grass and hillier the course, the more four-way roll you need.

The reasoning is as follows: A club with more curvature has less drag as it cuts through the grass, an advantage when playing from thicker and heavier grasses — the Bermuda grasses of the South, for example. Also, facing awkward lies on hilly courses, most golfers find it easier to make the correct adjustments using a club with more curvature because the sole forms more easily to the demands of the terrain.

You don't hear much about four-way roll, but don't overlook this club characteristic when buying new

A: First, check your posture at address. You may be bent so much from your hips that it's impossible to return to the same spine angle at impact.

I use masking tape and a mirror with my students and mark a lower-back angle at about 20 degrees from the vertical. You should do the same. For golfers with average flexibility, this is about the maximum spine angle they can retain through the hitting zone.

Second, practice with the following drill: Anchor your head against a wall and assume your golf stance. You won't need a club because all you want from this drill is the feel of what happens when you make a swing and keep your spine angle.

Let your head swivel as you swing, but keep it in contact with the wall until just after impact. Once you have the feel, hit some balls, imagining that you're still on the wall.
