Day of Prayer participants say power of faith keeps them going

Prayer is the answer to all that ails. That was the reoccurring theme during Thursday afternoon's National Day of Prayer, held at the Dora Roberts Community Center.

A number of community officials, business owners and religious and community leaders took to the stage of the community center to tell how prayer has influenced their lives and ask those in attendance and following on the radio at home to pray for Big Spring.

"We need prayer right now," said Big Spring Mayor Russ McEwen. "There are a lot of things going on that would be wonderful if God's hands were on them. One of those things is the situation with the VA Hospital and what's going to happen with it. We need your prayer for that."

"As we speak right now, there are meetings going on right now in our community with our community leaders looking at our bid for the introductory flight training school. It would be a great thing for our community. There are a lot of things happening here, and the Lord is really touching our community in a great way."

McEwen was quick to point out the hurdles Big Spring has recently overcome, saying the city has become an example of the power of faith and prayer.

"I think I have a guardian angel. I think the Lord has placed one with me and it's been there all my life."

—Rich Anderson, area rancher

"We've become a place where the Lord shows his favor," said McEwen. "Because of our prayer. Therefore, we can be in a position where people ask why we're enjoying the things we are in Big Spring. And we can say it's because of the Lord, Jesus Christ, and the things that he does for us."

"Abraham Lincoln, many years ago, asked us to do this on a National Day of Prayer," he added. "I'm asking you, as your mayor, to pray for our community — pray for your leaders on a national, state and local level. Pray for us to

Big Spring High School earned its first medal at the state University Interscholastic League academics meet Thursday.

BHS senior Tony Emerson placed third in Class 4A feature writing during the first day of the state academics meet, held at the University of Texas at Austin. Emerson also competed in headline writing, but results were not available at press time.

The Big Spring academic team made school history this year when it won its first-ever district title. It followed up that performance by claiming high-point honors for the second year in a row at the regional academic meet in San Angelo two weeks ago.

The state UIL academic meet shifts into high gear today, with one-act play, and speech and debate events highlighting activities.

Big Spring's drama department, making its first appearance at the state one-act play competition in 15 years, will seek its first-ever gold medal when it presents Steve Martin's "Picasso at the Lapin Agile" at approximately 4:50 p.m. today at the Bass Concert Hall on the UT campus.

Pony Express fund-raiser planned here Saturday

By THOMAS JENKINS
Staff Writer

The Howard County Sheriff's Posse will get its annual Pony Express fund-raiser under way Saturday, and area residents could walk away with some historic stamps and a piece of artwork in the process.

Howard County Sheriff Dale Walker said the Posse, along with "Red" Harmon Hann, general manager of KHOB 1390 AM radio in Hobbs, N.M., and organizer of the annual Pony Express West Ride, will be at the local Wal-Mart Supercenter Saturday in an effort to sell stamps for the annual ride.

"Around 10 a.m. we're going to be in the Wal-Mart parking lot, on the north end where they normally hold the vet clinic," said Walker. "We'll be there until about 3:30 p.m. We're going to have a horse trailer there that has been decorated especially for the Pony Express, and if all goes well, we'll have a horse there for the kids to see and pet."

Walker said the Posse will be offering a special "artistic" incentive for stamp buyers during Saturday's effort.

"We'll be selling the stamps so people can mail their letters and have them sent through the Pony Express," said

Walker. "We also have a special planned for the event. If you purchase $10 in stamps, you'll get a free caricature drawn by our artist, Mr. Hann of New Mexico. He's an excellent artist, and he'll draw the portrait of you or your child — whoever is with you."

The stamps being sold will be used to post mail through the annual Pony Express West Ride, which will travel from Big Spring to Hobbs, N.M., on horseback.

Hann, who has coordinated and supported the annual trek for many years, said the recreation of the ride is an important part of West Texas heritage.

"We have to keep our heritage alive," he said. "That's the whole idea behind my station and my group. We want to keep the history alive and keep reminding people that we had a Pony Express. Out here in the West we did have settlers and we rode horses and that sort of thing."

"We want to keep the western heritage alive. That's what we have out here in Big Spring, Midland, Odessa, Hobbs and the other areas. Someday I would like to see a ride all the way from Austin to somewhere up in New Mexico."

Walker said he wants to see the history of the event come alive, saying the western heritage and the history of the Pony Express is far too important to be lost forever.

"It's a good thing to be able to teach your kids," he said. "This is the way the mail started, and I think it's a good thing for our community to get involved in and get behind. It's good for our local businesses because they will get some attention out of it, and just a fun event for everyone."

Hann, who is also a western artist, said his first involvement with the Express began more than 30 years ago and has since become a way of life for him.

"My first Pony Express was in 1972 at Fort Stockton," said Hann. "It's changed a lot over the years. We have a lot more traffic now and the area has grown up a great deal. It's kind of like we were talking about tonight, and how you have to trailer across viaducts."

"This is modern day Pony Express. We try to look as authentic as possible, but we have to work with what we have, which means lots of traffic."

"This is a multi-cultural event. It's a family event... What we're trying to do is bring about a cultural unity, to bring the people in our area together to celebrate our community. We want to uplift everyone and give them a place to take their families and just celebrate being from Big Spring. There just aren't enough opportunities to celebrate who we are, and this is a big part of who we are as a community."

The festival, which is sponsored by the West Texas Producers and Farmers Market and LULAC (League of United Latin American Citizens) Council 4791, begins this evening at 6 p.m. according to Dear, and has something for everyone in the family.

"We'll begin with a little bit of light music. There's going to be lots of vendors with all kinds of food. There's going to be rides for the children as well," said Dear.

At 8 p.m. local tejano band Xtremo is slated to perform a street-style dance. Those planning to attend are encouraged to bring lawn chairs, with the performance continuing from 8 p.m. until midnight.

Dear said the festival will take up a large portion of historic downtown Big Spring, will play backdrop to some rather interesting modes of transportation Saturday morning.

The festival will be ready to go again starting at 10 a.m. Saturday morning with music from Los Familias Leos, which will be performing on the music stage from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Dear said the bike and car show will also begin at 10 a.m., featuring a number of different displays for people to enjoy, as well as a silent auction and giveaways.

At 11:30 a.m. the Folklorico Dancers Troop, which is a touring dance troop, will perform.

members of the dance troop are from all over Texas, and they tour together and perform Folklorico and mariachi dances, featuring authentic costumes.

While Folklorico Dance will be the focus just before noon, Dear said something just as fun awaits festival goers at 1 p.m., when several area rock and alternative metal bands are scheduled to take the stage.

"At 1 p.m. rock music will begin at the music stage, which will be located at the corner of Second Street and Scurry," said Dear. "Adrian Calvio of Sour Hand is going to kick things off, performing some solo acoustic songs until 2 p.m. Then, from 2:30 p.m. until 3:30 p.m. These Wounds Will Heal from Midland will perform."

"A local band, A Tragic Theory, will perform from 4 p.m. until 5 p.m. I also understand The Four Stones will also be performing along with A Tragic Theory. After that, at approximately 5:30 p.m., our headline act, Rustic Circle, will perform until 6:30 p.m."

Dear said special guest speaker Randy Neugebauer is expected to make a presentation following an introduction from city council members Stephanie Horton and Woody Jumper at 7 p.m.

El Charro Negro and his band, La Formula, along with Conjunto Hilario will all perform between 7:30 p.m. and midnight to close out the afternoon of fun and music. Conjunto Hilario will open the street dance at 7:30 p.m., with El Charro Negro and La Formula headlining shortly after.

While the number of male religious leaders often overshadows those female officials, Pam Steel, who was asked to speak about prayer from a woman's perspective during the event, said it has a lot to do with our stations in life.

"We are caretakers of our neighbors, loved ones and friends," said Steel. "We are mothers, grandmothers and aunts. We are wives, or we may be single or widowed. We may be bosses or employees, or leaders in our churches... we find ourselves throughout the day taking on many different roles and a more appropriate title for us might be chief multitaskers."

"With all of these different roles we find ourselves in many different life circumstances and we find ourselves praying for many different needs."

Steel said it took little more than the miraculous recovery of her son, who was born with a heart condition, to see and understand the healing power of prayer.

"As new parents, my husband and I found ourselves praying for our newborn son as he underwent heart surgery," said Steel. "Now, as we watch our son grow, we see God's miraculous healing touch on his life. I'll have you know that God is most certainly still in the miracle business today."

Also among the speakers during Thursday's event was Borden County rancher Rich Anderson, who said seeing life on the tight, tensile scale of a ranch teaches you many things about prayer and God.

"I believe in miracles and I believe in prayer," said Anderson. "I see miracles every day on that ranch. Mares born, colts born — I see life started and the grass growing. I see what the rain can do for us."

"The Lord has placed me there to take care of his land. That's right, it's his land. And it's my responsibility to turn that land over to my children for generations to come in better shape than I found it. That land is not mine. It's just loaned to me to take care of."

Anderson said he's felt the influence of prayer and faith in his own life, claiming God's healing touch is what allowed him to "stand" at the podium during the community-wide prayer meeting.

"I think I have a guardian angel. I think the Lord has placed one with me and it's been there all my life," said Anderson. "The shape I've been in at times on that ranch, it would amaze you that I'm still standing here today. With two artificial knees and two artificial hips, it really is a miracle I'm standing here today."

High school student accused of terrorist threat

SAN ANGELO (AP) — A 17-year-old Lake View High School student is accused of making a terrorist threat against classmates and teachers, a Tom Green County criminal complaint shows.

A Lake View teacher called the student April 26, and the student told her he had a "hit list of eight people that he wanted to kill," according to the complaint. The list included "people who attend or work at Lake View High School."

Police Lt. Curtis Milbourn said that the teen is "at a secure location that we're aware of." He declined further comment.

San Angelo school system spokesman Jamie Highsmith told trustees in an April 29 e-mail that the student had been disciplined, but did not elaborate. She said it was a confidential matter.

Principal Don Levinski said the student has not been back at school since the incident.

The student's attorney, Shawntell McKillop, said Thursday that the student has never been in trouble with the law and "denies that any expressed threats were made to any person at Lake View."

She said the junior has a high grade point average.

OUR VIEWS

We salute:

Each week, the Herald salutes individuals and groups from our community and area who have been recognized for special achievements or accomplishments.

We recognize these special people for working to help make our region a better place to live, work and play

This week we salute:

• The 200-plus performers for "A Spring Gala," put on by the Big Spring Symphony and Chorus, along with the All-City Choir and others. What a great concert that was.

• The Workforce Network of Big Spring, Howard College, the Rural Community College Initiative, Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce and the Big Spring Independent School District for their sponsorship of the Howard County Job Fair. The event was well-attended and highly successful.

• The Big Spring and San Angelo kennel clubs on the Big Spring kennel club Dog Show, which is going on right now at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. Be sure and get out there this weekend through Sunday. It's really something to ahem... bark about!

• Everett Bender, coordinator, and everyone else who took part in Thursday's National Day of Prayer at the Dora Roberts Community Center.

• Crossroads area students who are competing in University Interscholastic League academic and athletic contests in Austin this weekend as well as Monday and Tuesday. Good luck!

Is there an individual or organization in our community that you feel should be saluted? If so, please send us their name and why you think they should be recognized. We must have your name and telephone number and you must provide it in writing.

Veterans flocked to McCain in 2000

Editors note: Roger Simon is on vacation. The following column was first published in February 2000.

A bar is not usually a good place to watch a presidential debate. You have one drink and then a second and maybe a third, and pretty soon the candidates start making sense to you. This should be considered a warning sign.

But John McCain decided to have a big debate-watching party in a downtown bar, and I went to see what kind of crowd it would draw.

As it turned out, it was like the audiences at McCain rallies: a mix of young and old, pretty well-dressed and almost entirely white.

I sat down at the bar and started watching the debate on a row of TV screens set into the wall. Almost immediately, the guy sitting next to me said, "You old enough to remember Kennedy?"

I admitted that I was, although I was a kid when he was killed. "He was more than a politician," the guy said. "He had character. Real character."

I guess so, I said. We shook hands and exchanged names.

He said his name was Gary Cadle, he was 52, had been in the Navy, in the Seabees, for 28 years, had served two tours of duty in Vietnam and now had a travel agency with his wife in Columbia.

He was, like many people to be found at McCain rallies, a Democrat.

"I'd never vote for a Republican," Cadle said.

McCain is a Republican, I pointed out.

Cadle shrugged. "He's different," he said. If John McCain has any hope of defeating George W. Bush, it is by "expanding the universe," which means he must draw independents and Democrats into the Republican primaries.

This is not possible in many states, but it was possible in New Hampshire, where McCain slaughtered Bush by 19 percentage points, and it is possible in South Carolina, which votes this Saturday.

Bush has the support of the Republican leadership in the state and that of many religious conservatives. McCain is supported by many veterans — South Carolina has more veterans per capita than any state in the union — and by some independents and Democrats.

Who will win will depend on how many people vote. If the numbers are small, with only Republicans going to the polls, Bush will almost certainly win. If the numbers are large, with all sorts of voters going to the polls, McCain will probably win.

But why should independents and Democrats vote for a man like McCain, a man with a very conservative voting record?

"Character," Cadle said. "And McCain just seems more ... adult. Presidential. And he is the only guy willing to reform the system. He is the only guy, I think, who is willing to put the country ahead of his party."

Bush is telling voters that Democrats like Cadle are going to vote for McCain in the primary only to give Al Gore, should he win the Democratic nomination, an easier target in the fall. But Cadle says that is not true.

"I'm voting for McCain this Saturday, and I'm voting for McCain in the fall," he said. Cadle pointed up at the TV screen where the candidates were still debating. "Everybody is a patriot now," he said. "But when the Vietnam War was going on, McCain volunteered. He didn't dodge the draft. (Bush was a pilot in the in the Air National Guard in Texas.) He was a patriot back then, and he is a patriot now."

About an hour after the debate ended, McCain came to the bar where about a hundred supporters were still on hand to greet him.

"If we win here, nobody is going to stop us," McCain said. "The same way that Ronald Reagan governed with Reagan Democrats, that's what we are reconstituting here. This used to be a campaign. Now it is a crusade."

Cadle stood in the crowd and applauded.

"I've never volunteered to work before in a political campaign," he said. "But I'm volunteering to work in this one. This campaign is different. This campaign is about character."

Bush on right track with Social Security

Last week I encouraged Democrats to start putting the pieces of their shattered party back together by leveling with us about the painful sacrifices that we need to make to fix Social Security. It turned out we did get some cold, hard truth about Social Security out of Washington this week, but we didn't get it from a Democrat.

President Bush finally let the other shoe drop when he revealed that part of his plan to reform the program included a new way of computing future yearly increases in benefits that would result in substantially reduced payouts for future middle- and upper-class retirees. Under Bush's plan, yearly increases would be computed using an index tied to inflation rather than the current method that uses increases in wages as its basis.

The president deserves some credit for finally breaking the news to us that we can't seriously discuss a solution to the Social Security mess without talking about raising taxes or reducing benefits. Of course, he'd be due a lot more credit if he'd had the backbone to level with us about this during his first term, when he still had a re-election to worry about, but better late than never.

And what about those beleaguered congressional Democrats I was trying to advise? They are, sadly, still trying to resurrect their fading political fortunes by throwing rocks at our lame-duck president while presenting no real alternatives of their own.

In a news conference this week, House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi took Bush to task over his admission that there are no real assets in the mythical Social Security trust fund and that the government has no means for reimbursing this fund. With this concession to reality, Pelosi huffed, Bush is violating "our moral and legal obligation to pay it back."

Pelosi and her ilk are either incredibly stupid or alarmingly dishonest when they suggest that the government can rely on the trust fund to keep Social Security afloat. The only means the government has to pay back the debt to the trust fund is by raising taxes, borrowing more money, or (even less likely) seriously curtailing its own discretionary spending. If Rep. Pelosi would care to enlighten us about which of these unpleasant options the Democrats favor, we might be able to take her seriously. Otherwise she is just wasting our time.

Even more disturbing are public opinion polls that show that many Americans believe that more tax increases are the answer to the Social Security dilemma. Fifty-three percent of respondents in a recent poll said that raising taxes is the best way to rescue the program while only 38 percent avored scaling back future benefits.

People who favor jacking up taxes to keep the program afloat obviously know little about their own country's recent history. We've already been down that road in the '80s when steep increases in the Social Security tax rate were passed to address the program's impending meltdown. The extra money has since disappeared, spent just as quickly as the rest of the trust fund, and we are in even worse shape than before those "reforms" were passed.

Speaking as one who will have to suffer either way, I'd rather the government scale back its future obligations to me rather than have them continue to take a bigger and bigger bite out of my paycheck. I would rather keep more of my money in my own hands, where I can manage it and save for retirement as I see fit, rather than trusting Nancy Pelosi and her pals in Washington to take care of me in my golden years.

Gee, I'm starting to sound awful-ly Republican here, aren't I? And come to think of it, so is President Bush. Finally.

Keep Big Spring Beautiful

Loyce Phillips reported there was excellent attendance at the Waste in Place workshop April 30 at the Monday meeting. Todd Darden and Perry Hall also were leaders in this effort to get anti-litter information out to school children.
Members reported that the community-wide flea market was a huge success. Lots of complimentary remarks were heard, as well as hopes the club will hold the flea market again in the fall. Willa Ledford, Brenda Conciene and Verna Davis headed this project. Future events include a golf tournament May 21 at the Big Spring Country Club. This will be a scramble format, so players of all categories are welcome. Brenda Conciene is in charge of this project.

Members discussed having a booth at Pops In The Park. Various award books, Junior Master Gardeners, city workers and the Governor's Award, were passed around for suggestions. Members were hopeful they can again win a first-place award as they did last year with the Paschal Odum-Harold Davis landscape project.

Katherine Wiseman presented ideas for a club mascot and hopes to have this completed soon.
Aluminum can sales are going well, members reported. Contact Janell Davis at 267-2656 to donate, or take cans directly to Big Spring Salvage, marked for "Keep Big Spring Beautiful."

A souffle can lift meal past the routine

By The Associated Press

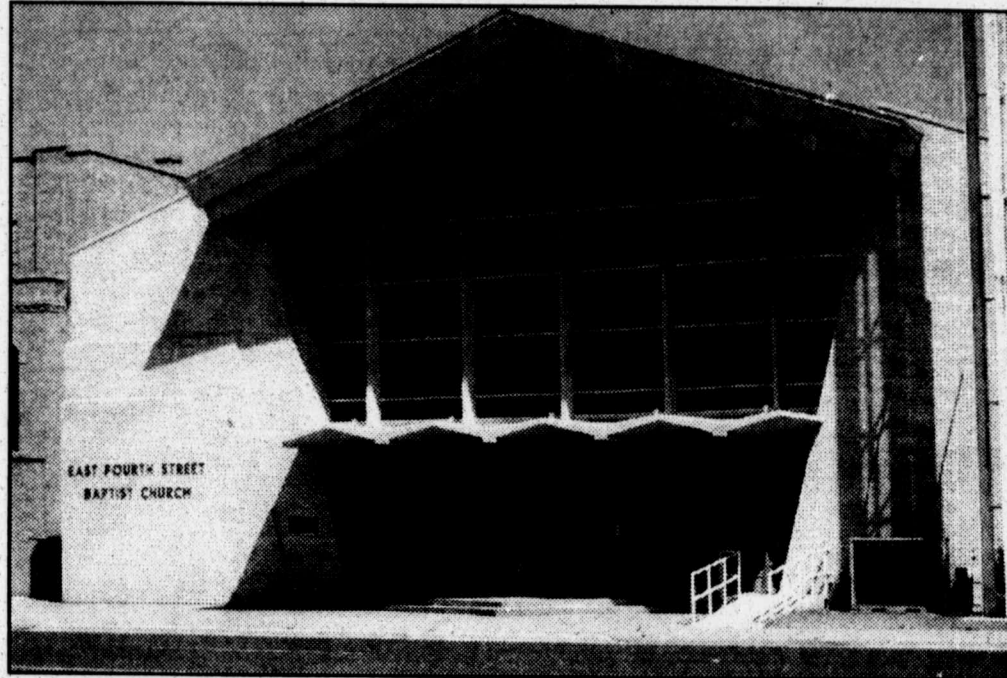

The idea of a souffle can seem appealing, something rather special and beyond routine to choose on a menu — but intimidating, perhaps, for the home cook to try. Well, spare the idea more than a thought. Primed with a careful read-through of the following simple recipe, you may be tempted to give it a whirl. This light and airy dish is a classic, after all; people around the world have managed to whisk up both savory and sweet souffles for who knows how long. This version is made with cheese and spinach, a favorite combination, and it calls for two cheeses, Jarlsberg and Parmesan, for rich flavor. You can make the souffle in individual ramekins or in one larger dish. Either way it will puff up airily as it cooks (the souffle's name comes from the French word for breath), and may start to fall slightly when taken from the oven — but this is quite natural and makes no difference to the taste. Serve the souffle as a main course for lunch or a light supper, perhaps with a green salad.

Cheese Spinach Souffle
(Preparation about 15 minutes, cooking time 15 to 30 minutes)
4 tablespoons butter, plus extra for greasing souffle dishes
1/4 cup flour
1 1/2 cups milk, warmed till hot
6 eggs, separated
2 tablespoons minced onion
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 cup cooked, drained and chopped spinach (see note)
1/3 cup chopped dill
1 cup grated Jarlsberg cheese (about 4 ounces)
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese (about 2 ounces)
Preheat oven to 400 F. Grease 6 individual souffle dishes (4-inch ramekins) or one 2-quart souffle dish.
Melt butter in medium saucepan over medium heat.
When it foams, add flour and turn heat to medium-low. Cook, stirring, until mixture darkens a bit to a light brown — about 3 minutes.
With a wire whisk, whisk in milk gradually and cook, stirring, until mixture thickens, 2 to 3 minutes.
Turn off heat and stir in egg yolks, salt, pepper, onion, spinach, dill and cheeses.
Beat egg whites with a pinch of salt until they form soft peaks.
Stir a couple of spoonfuls into spinach mixture and very gently, with rubber spatula, fold in remaining whites.
Pour batter into prepared dishes or dish, and bake until souffle has risen and is browned on top: 15 to 20 minutes for individual dishes, Thirty minutes for the 2-quart dish.
Use a thin skewer to check inside for moistness (it should be creamy enough for a few bits to stick to skewer).
Serve immediately.
Makes 6 servings.

New Hope teacher Emma McCullough, left, with Wendell Moore, Ashley Miramontes, Angela Carillo, Tracy Hernandez and Chelsea Carillo construct the paperclip chain representing 6 million Holocaust victims.

Students find memorable way to honor Holocaust victims

New Hope Chrstian School decided to create a project to honor victims of the Holocaust.

An idea received by Director Vickie Parnell offered the students a chance to copy efforts of Norwegians during 1933 to 1945.

The Norwegians wore a single paperclip, which the Norwegians invented, attached to their cuffs or collars to show their opposition to the Nazi party.

Another school imitated the activity and collected one paperclip to represent each person who died in the Holocaust.

That school filled a train car.

New Hope students, led by teachers Emma McCullough and Merlene Brown, collected paper clips and decided to make a chain to signify the 6 million lives lost during the Holocaust.

May 1 through May 8 have been set aside as Days of Remembrance.

Each paperclip chained by the students represents 4,000 deaths of Holocaust victims.

The students also researched the event by purusing library books, interviewing family members and talking with friends.

The activity proved to be an unforgettable way of teaching and remembering a historic event, according to the teachers.

Students participating in the activity include Traci Hernandez, Trevor Strickland, Chelsea Carillo, Adam Canales, Travis Waid, Morgan McKinney, Nathan Nalley, Ashley Miramontes, Kayley Granger, Wendell Moore, and Jonathan Williams.

Two no-hitters are better than one

• Bulldogettes take out Crane with mercy rule in five innings

By TROY HYDE

Sports Editor
MIDLAND — The Bulldogettes successfully began an expected run to the state tournament with strong hitting up and down the lineup and dominating pitching by junior Kali Roberts.

Sixth-ranked Coahoma defeated former district rival Crane in the Area Championship, 10-0, in five innings at Freddie Ezell Softball Complex (Mugs Field) in Midland. And they did so with ease.

"I was happy up and down the lineup, but I thought the wind held up some of our shots to the outfield," said Coahoma coach Robby Dickenson. "Crane competed better today than they did the last time we played them."

Coahoma defeated Crane 17-0 in five innings earlier this year at the Snyder Tournament.

Thursday's game at Mugs Field was not as convincing, but Crane never really had a chance at the plate as Roberts shut down the Lady Cranes. She threw a no-hitter and struck out 10 hitters in the process. Crane struck out twice in the first, second and fourth innings and Roberts retired all three by strikeout in the third. The Coahoma defense also never fielded a ball outside the infield.

The only blemish to Roberts' numbers was three walks, which placed three Lady Cranes to get into scoring position — all of which were stranded on base. She walked one batter in each of three different innings, but the three who reached base stole five bases between them.

"She was typical Kali," said Dickenson. "She had some walks, but that happens sometimes with her. She hadn't pitched in nine days so I was very proud of her effort."

Coahoma got on the board offensively in the second inning. Junior Liz Conley reached base on a single to start the inning and then got to third base on two straight stolen bases. She eventually scored on Drew Wells' RBI sacrifice fly to center field.

Freshman Krista Kerby kept the offense going in the second as she reached base with a single. Senior Cheyenne Grice later knocked in Kerby with an RBI double.

The Bulldogettes got two more runs in the third. Ashle New and Roberts began the inning with back-to-back singles. Coahoma's two runs came later after Crane committed two errors in the field. Coahoma (19-9) broke the game wide open in the fourth as they crossed homeplate five times.

Kerby and Grice began the inning with a single and a reached on an error, respectively. Kerby then stole a base and wound up at third base before sophomore Ami Martinez sent her across the plate with an RBI bunt single. New then drove in Grice with an RBI single of her own. Martinez also scored later on a bases loaded RBI walk by freshman Christie Rich. The final run of the inning was scored by Roberts as she was knocked in by junior Drew Wells. The Bulldogettes also scored a run in the inning off an error by Crane (16-10).

The final run of the game was scored in the top of the fifth inning. Martinez opened the inning with a walk and then with one out New was also given a free base. A Roberts single loaded the bases and Martinez eventually crossed the plate on a past ball.

"I am just glad we broke the ice for the playoffs and got this first game out of the way," said Dickenson. "We are right where I want to be at this point in the season."

New led Coahoma at the plate as she went three-for-three with a double, a walk and two runs. Kerby also had three hits and scored two runs as well as stealing two bases.

Conley went two-for-three, scored twice and had two stolen bases. Roberts added two singles, while Grice and Wells had an RBI double and an RBI single, respectively.

"We are healthy right now and looking forward to the next round," said Dickenson.

The Regional Quarterfinal round will be played against another familiar opponent. The state-ranked Bulldogettes will meet district rival Hawley — a team they have beaten twice this year — next week.

Dickenson said the Lady Cats have several good hitters and their pitcher has good control.

"If we don't show up and play they could beat us," he added. "We have beaten them twice, but we are expecting a battle."

The game will most likely take place in Snyder, but another possible location is Abilene. The schedule day for the game was unknown at press time.

• Lady Steers blank El Paso Andress in Area Championship

By TROY HYDE

Sports Editor
ALPINE — It was not as easy as the Lady Steers had hoped, but it was enough to advance to the Regional Quarterfinals.

Third-ranked Big Spring did not have trouble stopping El Paso Andress from scoring, but its offense struggled at times to drive in runners as the Lady Steers needed all seven innings to defeat Andress, 8-0.

Big Spring got 13 hits at the plate, but stranded 12 runners on the bases — including seven in scoring position.

"It wasn't as good of a win as I had hoped, but we got the job done," said Big Spring coach Phillip Pearce. "We hit the ball hard from the start but a lot of our shots were right at them. The girls couldn't believe we left 12 runners on base."

Big Spring used a couple of errors to get its scoring going and then were able to find gaps in the field, according to Pearce.

"Them committing errors helped us get the offense rolling, but we should have scored more runs," he added. "We had a couple of base running mistakes which cost us, too. We hit into two double plays."

The offense could have scored one run and won as senior Alex Watkins was unhittable on the mound — literally. She threw all seven innings, struck out 12 batters and gave up no hits. Only two runners reached base — one on an error and one on a hit by a pitch — but neither runner advanced past second base.

"Alex pitched a great game even though she was hitting her spots and not getting some calls," said Pearce. "They weren't very strong hitters and I don't think Andress has seen pitching that fast at any point this year. When they did make contact, we were able to make the plays in the field."

The game was scoreless through two innings, but Big Spring broke open the scoring with two runs in the third inning. It also crossed the plate two times in the fourth, sixth and seventh innings.

Sophomore Amber Sides had three hits, two runs and four RBIs at the plate to lead Big Spring, but the best shot of the day came off the bat of senior Chelsea Abner.

Abner, who according to Pearce had been in a little bit of a slump of late, got a hold of a pitch in the seventh inning and sent the ball 250-feet to straightaway centerfield over the fence against the wind. It was her only hit of the game.

"The home run was good for her because she had been struggling a bit at the plate," said Pearce. "She had been working hard the past couple of days to try to improve things and she got a pitch she could do something with."

Two of Sides' four RBIs came on one swing, as well, as she knocked in two runs in the sixth inning with an inside the park home run. Senior Neisha Heinis also scored on the play.

Junior Krista Chesworth — the team's leading hitter throughout much of the season — got three hits in the game for Big Spring. She also scored two runs.

Sophomore Katy Abner and Watkins each had two hits. Abner added two RBIs and a stolen base, while Watkins doubled and walk. Junior Courtney Rodriguez and sophomore Brenna Phernetton each went one-for-three. Phernetton added two runs and each player also contributed a sacrifice bunt.

The Regional Quarterfinal game will take place next week, but final information on the game is not yet available. The Lady Steers will either play Pampa or No. 14 El Paso Ysleta, who face off Friday and Saturday in a best-of-three series. If Pampa wins, Big Spring will play one game against them Friday in Plainview at 6 p.m. The scenario if El Paso Ysleta wins was not known at press time. The location for the game will most likely be Alpine.

Ask Lynda

DEAR LYNDA,
I enjoy my job and get along well with my boss and co-workers. My evaluations have been excellent, yet every time a promotion comes along, it goes to someone else. I've mentioned to my boss that I'm interested in moving ahead, but after five years, I don't think it's ever going to happen. How can I convince my boss to give me a chance?
SIGNED,
TIME FOR A PROMOTION

It may be time to sit down with your boss in a formal, honest meeting and discuss future career plans. Before the meeting, do some research. Be specific about where you want to go. Find out what the qualifications are for that position, and then honestly evaluate your competency level in terms of that job. If you have skill deficits, develop a plan to close that gap. When you talk with your boss, ask how he or she would rate you on those skills. If both of your assessments are different, that provides a good starting point to discuss your future and may explain why you've been passed over for promotion. Jointly develop concrete actions that you can take to get you ready for that future promotion. And don't forget to keep your boss informed on your progress. You'll be ready to move up the career ladder in no time!

Emily, Jacob still most popular baby names; Jacob, Joshua tops for twins

By LAURIE KELLMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The biblical name Jacob, the most popular choice for baby boys for the sixth straight year, also tops the first official ranking of names given to twins. Parents like to pair it with Joshua.
Even more durable is the name Emily, which for the ninth year in a row claims the top spot among newborn girls, according to the Social Security Administration's tally for 2004, released Friday.
What's the staying power of Jacob and Emily? Hard to say, according to experts, but it has something to do with appealing to multiple ethnic or religious groups and having no widespread negative cultural connotations.

Jacob is the name of the biblical figure who fathered the founders of the twelve tribes of Israel.
"Jacob is number one because it has a long tradition," said Cleveland Evans, associate professor at Bellevue University in Nebraska and president of the American Name Society. "Old Testament names are popular with both Christians and Jews."
Emily, No. 1 on the girls' list since 1996, is harder to pin down. Meaning industrious or striving, the name has strong literary associations including authors Emily Dickinson and Emily Bronte.
"The images of Emily are such that you can think easily of a woman who is both beautiful and smart," Evans said.

Neither name has a negative association that could topple it, the way Jason became unpopular after the widely seen "Friday the 13th" movies featured a maniacal killer by that name, Evans said.
This year for the first time, the agency also compiled a list of most-popular twin names. On the coed list, the top-ranking feminine pairing is Hope and Faith, ranked fifth. Taylor and Tyler, who could be either sex, came in second after Jacob and Joshua.
New to the single-baby top 10 are Isabella and William, both rising from 11th on their respective lists in 2003. Anthony and Alexis each dropped out of the top 10.
Just in time for Mother's Day, the agency updates its most popular 1,000 names by tallying applications for Social Security cards for children born during the previous year.

Almost every state lists as its most popular name some moniker that appears on the national top 10. A notable exception is New Mexico, which lists Alyssa and Alexis first and third for girls.
And Jose was the most popular boys' name last year in Arizona and Texas, which border Mexico and are heavily Hispanic. Anthony edged out Jacob atop Nevada's list.
Number 1,000 on the national list for 2004: Fisher for boys, Johana for girls.
The agency lists separate entries for different name spellings.

Cotton going back onto Texas Tech seal

LUBBOCK (AP) — Cotton is still king around West Texas. Just ask Texas Tech University officials, who were thinking about taking cotton bolls off the university's seal.
One day after announcing that the bolls were off, university officials said Thursday that school will develop new designs of the school seal that include symbols representing cotton. It wasn't immediately clear how cotton would be presented.
"We've decided that we are going to put cotton plants back into the seal," Associate Vice Chancellor Lynn Denton, the system's head of marketing, said in Friday's Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.
On the old seal, cotton bolls formed a cross in the middle of the school shield and represented 10 cotton-producing counties around Tech. The new design has a more general "vine-like" image to represent all of agriculture.

The change is part of a broader marketing campaign set to begin early next year that Tech officials hope will improve the university's reputation nationally.
"It is not undoing tradition, it is not undoing pride," Tech Chancellor David Smith had said of the original changes. "We need a platform to celebrate what Texas Tech is accomplishing as a system."
But Eddie Smith, chairman of the Plains Cotton Cooperative Association and a Tech alumnus who was honored as an outstanding agriculturist last year by the university, said the omission ignored the major contributions cotton made to Tech.
He called it "a mistake."
"There's a lot of us that are tied to this university that are not going to let it slide by," Smith said.
"Vines are weeds in my cotton fields."

Smith was cautious but pleased with Thursday's decision.
"I think that's an excellent first step and then we'll just see how it develops from there," Smith told the newspaper.
"I think it just shows that Tech officials are, as they should be, sensitive to the alumni and the surrounding community."
Steve Verett, a Tech alumnus and executive vice president of the Plains Cotton Growers Inc., said he told administrators during a meeting Thursday that the best solution would be to make minor improvements to the existing seal.
John Johnson, spokesman for the Plains Cotton Cooperative Association, said he preferred that the old shield remain.
Campus master planner William Watkin designed the seal in 1927, and it gained formal adoption in 1953.

Agriculture Department envisions mandatory livestock ID by 2009

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators never located all 80 of the cattle that crossed the Canadian border with a dairy cow that brought the first known case of mad cow disease into the United States.
Eighteen months later, the government is proposing a national tracking system that would pinpoint an animal's movements within 48 hours after a disease is discovered.
"This is where we start really talking about changing how the industry operates," Ag Secretary Mike Johanns said.
The discovery of the infected cow in late 2003 had Agriculture Department investigators trying to track down other cows that also might be infected.
Four weeks later, they could account for only 19 of the 80 other cows and never did find them all. Still, officials assured the public that the meat they were eating was safe.
Cattle ranchers are concerned about mandatory tracking because they want records kept confidential and do not want to pay for the system, which the industry has estimated could cost $550 million over five years.
The government's plan to register and report the movements of cattle, hogs, poultry and other livestock from birth to slaughter will be voluntary at first. It becomes mandatory by January 2009.

Under the plan, cattle would be identified individually with tags or other devices. There are high-tech ways to monitor their movements, such as using radio-frequency ear tags, retinal scans of their eyes or even DNA testing.
Hogs and poultry could be registered in groups because that typically is how they move through the chain of production, according to the proposal.
"A system that will allow us to pinpoint, track and isolate threats to health is enormously important, and this issue is too important for us to get it wrong," Johanns said. "The threat to animal health and thus our food supply, both unintentional and intentional, are very real."
A consumer group, the Center for Science in the Public Interest, wants the administration to move more quickly. Canada, which has confirmed three cases of mad cow disease, took just one year to switch to a mandatory system, said the group's food safety director, Caroline Smith DeWaal.
Efforts to keep documents confidential are an important part of the proposal, which seeks to exclude records from the federal Freedom of Information Act.

ASK THE PRO

Q: I've played golf for 18 years. I improved steadily during my first 15 years, but for the last three years my handicap has remained at 17. Recently, I read your book "The 30-Second Golf Swing" and, as you suggested, I calculated my strength and weakness profile. I was surprised to find out that I lost many of my shots from the 55- to 65-yard range. I was surprised because I thought my full gap wedge (53 degrees), which I used from that distance, was one of my best shots. I want to get better from this distance. Do you have any suggestions? —
Mary B., from the Web

Dr. T.J. Tomasi is director of instruction at Lyman Orchards Golf Club in Middlefield, Conn. To ask him a question about golf, e-mail him at: TJInsider@aol.com.

A: Your percentage of acceptable shots from this distance will increase greatly if you use a swing with fewer moving parts for more accuracy. Here is what to do:

- Grip the club 1 inch down the handle (shorten the club length).
- Narrow your stance.
- Start with more weight anchored on your front foot.
- Swing with minimal weight transfer, but take care to turn your shoulders behind the ball.
- Finish with almost all your weight on your front foot and your belly button facing the target.

This stroke requires an early "wrist set" — by the time your hands are hip high on the backswing, the club head should be directly above your hands.

The key is to start, swing and finish on your left foot. Fewer moving parts equal more consistency. You can use this finesse swing to create special shots with all your irons (5 through the wedges).

Once you have the technique, experiment with various clubs to learn the different trajectories and flight/roll ratios. Mastering this shot will surely lower your handicap.

THE GOLF DOCTOR

The truth about lies

The lie angle of a club is measured by a line from the center line of the shaft to the ground when the club is soled correctly.

There are two aspects to lie angle: One is the lie angle that's created as the club sits unmoving on the ground. The other is the effective lie angle, which changes as you swing because the shaft bows downward, causing the toe of the club to get closer to the ground. This is the dynamic aspect of lie and it is the reason why irons are fit with the toe slightly up in the air.

The club head is called "flat" when the toe of the club moves downward toward the ground; when it moves toward the sky, it's called "upright." When you physically add length to your club shaft, the club head gets more upright (toe up) as you stand farther away from the ball. As you shorten the club, you stand over the ball more and the toe flattens.

The rule of thumb is that adding half an inch of length makes the club more upright by about 1 degree. But you can also influence the lie of your clubs by how far you stand from the ball without altering the length of the shaft.

Simply standing farther away from the ball raises the toe in the air, so you will need to use irons with flatter lie angles. When the toe of the club is too far off the ground, the heel of the club will have a tendency to get "caught" by the grass at impact. This will send the ball off to the left. And even if the heel does not get caught, the toe up at impact causes a slight pull left.

On the other hand, standing close to the ball forces the toe into the ground, so you'll need a more upright lie or the ball will leak to the right of the target even with a good swing.

The truth about lies is that because your stance and the lie of your clubs are intimately related, don't change one without changing the other. Visit your PGA teaching pro and make sure that the distance you stand from the ball is correct, then have your pro check your lies.

COMMENTARY

JAY JANNER / Cox News Service

Tom Jenkins was one of about 50 players who chose to ride carts last week at The Hills Country Club. Heat and humidity caused the tour to temporarily lift the ban on carts.

Senior golfers taking up sides on cart path

By KIRK BOHLS
Cox News Service

Austin, Texas

The heat index was way up last Friday.

So was the blood pressure of some of the golfers.

More than half of the 78 golfers in the FedEx Kinko's Classic at The Hills Country Club got their wheels back for the first time all year, but only because the rising temperatures, stifling humidity and the heat under Ed Fiori's collar were high enough to temporarily lift the season-long ban.

After players had a ticket to ride for 24 years, golf carts were banned on the Champions Tour in this silver anniversary season for these golden oldies of golf.

And that has gone over about as well as you'd expect with a group of wheezers with arthritis and back problems and artificial hips.

"They're trying to run the older guys off," charged Fiori, who rode in a cart during Friday's first round. "About 11 of 'em have retired since they pulled the carts. Guys like Chi Chi Rodriguez and Miller Barber. They can play and they want to play, but physically they can't do it. I don't think much of the rule, but that's my opinion."

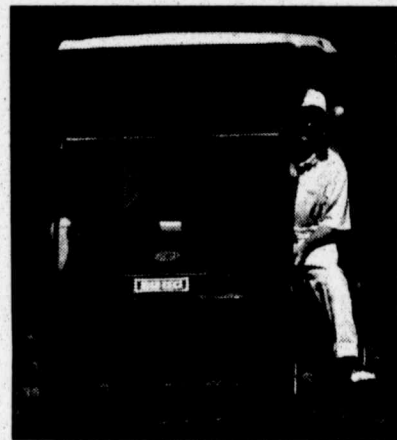

Some would say the older guys are running themselves off or are just aging, although it's impossible to substantiate Fiori's claims. Welcome to Barry Bonds' world. Except for Roger Clemens, few athletes can play a sport forever.

Still, the issue has created volatile camps in both corners and led to 19th-hole acrimony.

"I liked the cart rules the way they were," said Bruce Lietzke, an avowed walker who'd like to see the Rodriguezes and Barbers stick around. "I haven't seen any heated arguments, but it's divided the players some."

That's not likely to change. Potential litigation has been mentioned. According to recent surveys, up to 80 percent of the players on the plus-50 tour favor the use of carts. About 50 in the 78-player field rode at this weekend's event.

"I could come up with a survey of my own that says they don't," grouched Hale Irwin from the anti-cart camp.

Pete Oakley and his caddy also took advantage of the usage of carts last week at the FedEx Kinko's Classic.

The Champions Tour, of course, has commissioned yet another survey, one that will exhaustively interview golfers, sponsors, fans, doctors, probably even the BCS commissioners.

No one is exactly clear on the rationale behind the ban, whether it was done for aesthetic or competitive reasons or both? Did the Tour kick the tires off the course to produce a cleaner look and project a healthier image or did it do it to kick the over-the-hill golfers off the course altogether?

Don't tell the sponsors these are meaningless exhibitions. Not with $51 million in purses and more than 20 different winners for 14 straight seasons.

Trouble is many fans don't care if they see carts. They just want to see Lee Trevino. But many in the field want to see no-advantage competition.

"The right thing is to get rid of the carts," Joe Inman said. "At one point, it's time to move off the stage and let somebody else on, but there's got to be a balance. In the long run, if you want to live to be 100, you got to keep walking."

Chi Chi's not already 100? But how in the name of Casey Martin can any senior golfer in good conscience give his blessing to these motorized accessories, what with all the howls over that disabled golfer's lawsuit seeking the right to use a cart?

Without question, walking is a crucial part of the game. It could be the one thing that gives golfers any claim at all to being a real athlete. Besides, no one has yet written a book titled, "A Good Cart Ride Spoiled."

No less a golf authority than Jack Nicklaus vehemently opposed Martin or any other handicapped golfer from hitching a ride. To play 18, he and others cried, you must walk 18. It's hard to have it both ways.

Even Nicklaus knows he is no longer competitive and in April announced his retirement from the Masters. Arnold Palmer, too, has stopped playing at Augusta, and it didn't take a letter from the green jackets for him to step back.

As hot as it was, though, the Tour acted on the side of safety and allowed carts. Sure, there's still a 14-club maximum, and the Tour may have to start looking into a 14-shirt maximum if the cart ban continues.

Some don't care at all. Craig Stadler said he couldn't care less. Dana Quigley called the relaxation of the rule "a stupid change." Wayne Levi prefers walking and said there are "too many overweight people in the world."

Larry Nelson, last year's Kinko's champion, remains up in the air but thinks walking would increase viewership. Nothing like checking out Morris Hatafsky's backside to boost ratings.

Asked if he favored carts or walks, tour rookie Mark Johnson contemplated it and said, "I'm in favor of my being out here."

Good answer. And this is a guy who drove a beer truck out of Barstow, Calif., for 18 years, and he doesn't mind walking.

Mike McCullough made his own statement when he rolled up his green slacks high above his bare calves, knickers-style, for some ventilation. And he's from Scottsdale, Ariz.

"I have the legs for it," he said. "But we're not allowed to wear shorts."

Shorts? Careful, Mike. Carts are one thing. But if the tour wants to be punitive, it could order you guys into corduroy trousers.

Oh, and if the tour really wanted to get serious, it would take away the golfers' smokes.

"They haven't done anything about that," Floridian Don Reese said, puffing away on his cart ride to the putting green. "That's when we go to court."

IT'S GOOD FOR YOUR GAME

Swing analysis: Match elbow and hip for solid contact

By T.J. TOMASI
Universal Press Syndicate

The quality of your impact position is determined by the relationship of two factors: your trail elbow and your trail hip. The trail elbow (in my case, it's my right elbow) determines the path of the club head to the ball.

If your right elbow is even with your right hip, as mine is in the first photo below, your hands can get back in front of your body in time for impact.

The result is that you will start the ball at the target as I have in the second photo.

However, if your right elbow is trapped behind your right hip, the ball will start out to the right of the target. If your elbow is too far ahead of the right hip, the ball will start out to the left of the target.

How do you make sure that your hip and elbow are in sync? Do a little swing analysis:

If your elbow is in a position at the top of your swing where it must travel a long distance back to impact as a result of a long backswing, you want your hips to have some "wait" in them so your elbow can catch up. If you like the long backswing, simply slow down your hip turn and your hip and elbow motion will match up. If you determine that your backswing is too long, shorten it up.

It's just the opposite if your trail elbow doesn't swing up high enough at the end of the backswing. Since the elbow has a short journey to impact, it runs the risk of arriving too early, well ahead of the hip. In this case, you can lengthen your backswing or, if you like your short swing, simply speed up your hip turn.

Slow hips and fast elbows are mismatched unless you like to pull the ball way to the left. The fast hips/slow elbow duo isn't any better because your club head will be late for impact, causing the ball to go right of the target. To swing your best, you need to coordinate your elbows and hips so they match, slow with slow or fast with fast.

If your right elbow is even with your right hip (left), your hands can get in front of you in time for impact. As a result, you will start the ball at the target (right).
