"LOST LAUGHTER"

The country press has produced many distinguished figures. The daughter of one of the most distinguished of them all is now proving that the talent that makes a good editor is sometimes passed on to the next generation.

Years ago, a young man started a newspaper in Atchison, lignce. Kansas. He called it "The Atchison Globe" and made it one of the best known newspapers in the country. After working hours and that, too, in time became an American classic. The heroine he wrote a novel which he called "The Story of a Country Town" of the novel is named Mateel, and when a daughter was born to the author she was given that name. The editor and author is Ed. W. Howe, "The Sage of Potato Hill". Ed. W. Howe's fame as an author rests upon the single novel, but the daughter, Mateel Howe Farnham, has just completed her fourth, "Lost Laughter", to be published soon.

Within a short time Financial Independence Week will be observed throughout this country. It is sponsored by the life insurance industry for the purpose the name implies-to show the American people a safe and certain means of obtaining financial independence for themselves and their families when age lowers their earning power.

An apt question is, Who'll reap the benefit? The obvious answer is that the life insurance companies will. And so they will—the sale of policies will doubtless be stimulated.
