Seventeen Nolan County 4-H club boys and girls recently marketed 16,520 pounds of beef calves for average net profits of $22.55 per calf at the annual club show and sale in cooperation with Sweetwater business men. First place calf fed by Henry Bennett sold for 9 cents per pound.

It cost 75 farm women an average of $26.42 to dress appropriately last year in Parker county, the home demonstration council reports after a study of clothing accounts kept by these women in cooperation with the home demonstration agent. The low cost was made possible by watching sales, making clothing budgets, and by making clothes at home.

It cost William Deck of Ochiltree county one gallon of gas per acre to terrace one of his wheat fields last year, not counting use of machinery or labor. His wheat made 3 to 5 more bushels to the acre on terraced land, the county agent reports.

Ninety cotton street dresses, tailored for correct street wear, were made at costs ranging from six cents to $2 by Childrens county home demonstration club women and shown in their annual dress contest this summer.

Buying a farm abandoned because of poor yields on the banks of the Rio Grande near Laredo three years ago, Chester Smith has brought up production by use of manure until he recently filled a trench silo 40 feet long and 8 feet wide and 11 feet wide from 8 acres of corn. He is a dairyman aiming to produce milk cheaply.

Irish potatoes grown on fertilized land doubled the yield of unfertilized potatoes for W. V. Ellis, Ola Community, Kaufman County. He produced 95 bushels on less than two-thirds of an acre. The No. 1 potatoes brought $85, says the county agent in reporting the demonstration.

Wichita Falls—As one result of his week spent at the A&M short course at College Station Edwin Muller, Wichita County, brought home a piece of good quality leather which he had made working in the leather demonstration which was a part of the Short Course program. The Wichita County farm demonstration agent, G. O. McGowan, is planning with Mrs. Muller to give several demonstrations in hide tanning during the coming fall and winter months. A number of farmers who have seen this leather have expressed interest in learning how to convert cheap leather into a similar article.

Clarksville—Of the slightly more than 2,800 farms in Red River County where land was signed up for cotton reduction about 2,000 have already planted land to feed crops, according to the report of C. M. Knight, Red River county farm demonstration agent. Grain sorghums early maturing corn, peas and soy beans are among the favorite crops planted. Due to previous dry weather the usual feed crop in the county was cut about 75 per cent which makes this use of the released acres especially valuable in the county, Mr. Knight states.

Madisonville—Terraces came victorious out of another test, in the cotton acreage reduction campaign, according to U. J. Poole of the Green Brier Community of Madison County, who says that his terraces were worth at least $3 per acre to him this year because cotton planted on the terraced land brought $3 more per acre in the cotton retirement campaign than the same variety of cotton planted on un-terraced land.

Dallas—Four bare walls celled only with weather worn corrugated boxes, window openings closed only with cotton sacks and a front door that wouldn't stay shut against the north wind was used into a real home by a Dallas county family of six whose energy determination and faith was supplemented by a flock of white leghorn fryers which were used as a medium of exchange at a local store. Evelyn Bolen, 13, Seagoville 4-H club bedroom demonstrator, started the work when her club selected her for this honor, but all the family worked on the job in between school and field hours. The chickens contributed $4.72 in trade-in value. Window frames were built from the strips of lumber about the place. The recalcitrant front door was replaced by one inside that was stronger and in good shape and the front steps were built. All this was done by Mr. Bolen.

Mrs. Bolen tackled heavy mosquito insulation paper given by the State Department of Health for demonstration purposes, on the walls. This served as canvas as well as for strength and warmth. The ceiling and rafters were calcimined and the wood-work was painted. Evelyn made and dyed an Indian tied rug from old mattress tickings bought from the mattress factory for 15 cents per pound. She and her mother oiled and waxed the floors and added the finish to a complete bedroom demonstration began at once on the remainder for Evelyn. After which they of the house.

Colorado—Practically every farmer in Mitchell County who signed the cotton acreage reduction offer signed also the special permit to plow up his cotton early so that feed crops could be planted, according to the report of W. S. Foster, county farm demonstration agent. Because of this there are many good crops of feed now growing where the cotton was plowed up. Some farmers planted feed in the middle before the cotton was plowed under in order to save time.

Waxahachie—In co-operating with the Waxahachie Chamber of Commerce and the R. F. C. Farm Demonstration Agent W. M. Love and Home Demonstration Agent Irma Ross have helped to establish a community canning center at Waxahachie for the purpose of providing work and food for the unemployed. The equipment consists of 13 steam pressure cookers with plenty of gas stove space, nearly 90 feet of table space, automatic sealers and the necessary pans and knives for the work. From July 1st to 22nd 10,195 No. 2 cans of corn, black-eyed peas, and hominy were canned for 80 families who did not have equipment at home but did have food to be preserved from their gardens. Most of the canning was done on a fifty-fifty basis which has provided more than 5,000 cans of food for the R. F. C. Commissary.

The Roosevelts are considerate of the newsmen who accompanied them to Hyde Park. They had an open air press party one afternoon. Mrs. Roosevelt cooked over an open fire. Mr. Roosevelt was noticeably tired when he left Washington for his vacation, but apparently fully recovered when he returned here.

Dogs are most apt to suffer from rabies in spring, not in hot weather as many people believe, says a University of Michigan professor.

Coit Tower Goes Up

San Francisco soon will have one of the most spectacular observation towers in the world, for the Coit memorial on Telegraph hill, is nearing completion. From its top balcony sightseers will have a wonderful view over the city and the bay. The tower will cost $200,000 and is being paid for from the estate of Mrs. Lillie Coit as a tribute to the memories of the firemen of San Francisco's early days.

Llano Man, Poloist, Arrested on Charge Of Attack on Nurse

Chicago, August 19.—Cecil Smith of Llano, Texas, second ranking polo player in the United States, was arrested today on a criminal attack charge preferred by Miss Eugenia Rose, 23, a nurse.

The daring and hard-riding luminary of the West polo team which tomorrow meets the Eastern quartet in the deciding game of the national tournament, was released on a cash bond of $2,500.

Miss Rose told Police Magistrate Willis R. Brightmire that Smith attacked her on a lonely country road last night.

Smith denied the accusation, branding it a "frameup". "I can't understand it at all," he said. "The whole thing must be a frameup. I met the young lady last night all right and offered to take her home, but we did not stop on the way and I never so much as touched her."

Miss Rose met the athlete, she declared while she was attending "Rube" Williams, a teammate of Smith, who is in a hospital at suburban Lake Forest suffering from a broken leg incurred during a polo match several days ago.

"I was told my services were no longer needed and Mr. Smith offered to drive me to my home in Evanston," she said.

She was accompanied to court by her fiance, Dr. Gray M. Baker, an optician. It was he, she said, who insisted upon her taking the action against Smith, despite her remonstrance at resultant notoriety.

Magistrate Brightmire explained to her the seriousness of her charge and warned her she would be liable to prosecution if she were unable to furnish substantiating evidence when the case was brought to trial.

Smith was arrested in a fashionable North Shore Inn while dining with Maj. Fredrick McLaughlin, widely known sportsman.

Earlier in the day he had played golf with McLaughlin and Silas Strawn, financier and attorney.

The two appeared before Magistrate Brightmire with Smith and provided his bail.

Strawn said he had acted as the polo player's guarantor because he believed he was innocent and because he wanted Smith to be able to compete in the East-West match tomorrow.

Smith has been the backbone and captain of the West polo team during its attempt to wrest supremacy from the East where it long has been entrenched. He is unmarried and acquired his mastery over ponies at Llano. He is a former member of the Rainbow polo team at Dallas and before coming to Chicago for the national polo tournament was associated with George Miller at San Antonio, raising and training polo horses.

Hoboes Voice Spirit Of Co-operation in NRA and Adopt Code

Chicago, Aug. 14.—While they lost no time in drawing up a code of fair practice, the hoboes of America as represented at their annual convention find modern conditions none too attractive for their profession.

The big complaint was against present day construction of box cars "Riding the rods" has become even too hazardous for the new single rods and high trucks now in use, they lamented.

But the hoboes still scorn the hitch hiker and do not seek something for nothing.

Jeff Davis, of Cincinnati, "king of the hoboes", Ose Routt of New York and his father, James Routt of San Francisco, drew up the code for the itinerant workmen as they call themselves. It provides:

Hoboes will not wash dishes or otherwise work in a restaurant for his meals—such might take work away from a man with a family.

Pay for cleaning snow off walks shall be 50 cents an hour and the same rate applies to shoveling coal or cleaning windows.

Hoboes may chop some wood on exchange for a bed in the barn or a meal but shall not chop all day for these rewards.

BILLIONS OF DOLLARS TO BE SPENT ON THE RECOVERY PROGRAM.

Out of the three billion, three hundred million dollars to be spent by the Federal Government in order to restore prosperous times, a large portion of it will be spent for its administration. Or, to put it another way, millions will be used to pay for office workers, such as book-keepers, accountants, stenographers, clerks, office assistants, etc.

The far-sighted young people will see in this plan the dawn of a new day for office workers, and will at once prepare themselves accordingly. If you have finished your high school course, communicate with us and let us tell you just how we can help you in your plans.

We will give you the benefit of our years of experience in helping young people plan their business career. For those who can pay their tuition in cash, but do not have the funds with which to pay their board, we have a very unique plan to assist them in their finances. It is our information that we are the only business school that offers aid to students in their boarding problem.

We publish a beautifully illustrated catalog to mail to the serious minded young people. If you contemplate a business training, we would be glad to place your name on our mailing list and furnish you with the desired information about our school.

For your convenience, fill out the coupon below and we will mail you one of these catalogs immediately.

Local People Are Interested In Ways For Preserving Food

Indicating the growing interest in electric refrigeration throughout the country, I. O. Scott, local representative of Frigidaire, revealed today that there had been a large increase in the number of persons visiting the showrooms here to inquire about this modern method of preserving food.

Most of these visitors, he said, were greatly interested in economies that can be effected through the use of electric refrigeration.

That this interest is general in all parts of the country was shown, said Mr. Scott, by reports received at the company's main offices at Dayton showing large crowds had been visiting the showrooms of the country throughout the United States.

Proving the economy that can be effected through use of electric refrigeration, Mr. Scott quoted from a study recently conducted by the Frigidaire Corporation which revealed that owners in all parts of the country had been able to save an average of $7.70 each month, or nearly $100 per year, on food through use of a Frigidaire.

"After almost every meal," said Mr. Scott, "there are perishable foods that are left over. Old fashioned methods of refrigeration, which cannot be depended upon to keep these foods fresh and appetizing, often result in a waste of these foods. But with a Frigidaire, these left-overs can be kept safely and in an appetizing state until they are needed."

"The Frigidaire owner also buys in larger quantities and is thus able to take advantage of better prices and week end bargains because such foods as are bought in quantities can be kept indefinitely in a Frigidaire."

BUY YOUR COTTON GOODS NOW THURSDAY August 31 Is the Dead Line AFTER THIS DATE ALL COTTON GOODS Will Be Taxed IF IT'S MADE OF COTTON Buy it Now---Save the Tax

At the close of business Thursday, August 31, all merchandise in our store that we received prior to August 7 must be weighed and the Federal Government will collect a tax on this merchandise at the rate of nearly 4 1/2 per cent per pound. This is a ruling of the N. R. A. and will apply to every retail establishment in the United States. On some merchandise this tax will be very small on other merchandise the tax will be a big item; for example, on a 3-lb. linter cotton batt retailing at 29c, the added tax will be about 14c; on a standard overall the tax will be 9c or 10c per pair, and cotton blankets will be increased from about 7c to 17c by this tax.

WE ARE PREPARED TO SAVE YOU MONEY IF YOU BUY NOW

Last Spring when the wholesale market was at the very bottom we contracted for thousands of dollars worth of merchandise at the lowest prices of the century . . . we had these goods shipped early and have more than 95 per cent of it in the house without paying any tax or extra production cost because of the shorter hours and higher wages in the textile and manufacturing industry set forth in the N. R. A. Code. More than 95 per cent of our stock is tax free and will be until the close of business Thursday, August 31.

There are hundreds of dollars in savings here for our customers who anticipate their needs and buy from our present stock. RETAIL PRICES WILL GO HIGHER. When we go into the present wholesale markets for replacements we will have to raise our prices to you. We are increasing our prices ONLY when forced to by the upswing of the wholesale market; we are only trying to keep our prices at about replacement costs.

SYNOPSIS
Chapter I.—A pretty young woman finds herself in a taxicab in New York with a strange man who addresses her endearingly and speaks of "an awful shock." When he leaves her for a moment at the drug store she drives on, for she fears him. She stops at the Biltmore, still wondering who she is. Her memory is gone. From the evidence of her clothing and wedding ring, inscribed "H. L. V. to D. M., May 19, 1932" she concludes she is married to a wealthy man. At the Biltmore the nameless girl meets a young woman who speaks of her desire to go to Reno for a divorce, if she can get the money. The woman vanishes with the nameless girl's purse, and $900.

Chapter II.—An elderly woman, Mrs. Oscar Du Val, cordially greets the nameless girl, addressing her as "Doris" wife of Mrs. Du Val's son, Rocky. Rocky is abroad, and Doris, still bewildered, is taken to the home of Mrs. Oscar. Doris falls in love with Du Val and her sculptor husband, Rocky's photograph but cannot remember having married him.

Chapter III.—Doris, discovering a trademark in her clothing, visits a New York store, and is astounded when a saleswoman insists she hide from observation. She goes back to the Du Vals more mystified than ever. Rocky returns, to discover the deception.

Chapter IV.—He demands to know who she is and why his wife sent her to his home to masquerade in front of his innocent parents. She cannot tell him. He assumes she is some form of gold digger. They agree for the sake of the parents, to pretend for the time being, they are husband and wife.

CHAPTER V
Doris had a heavy sense of guilt. Now that she had found that she did not belong there, where should she go? She thought confusedly of Rocky—Rocky as he was, Rocky as she had imagined him—of Mrs. Du Val and her kindness in the past few weeks, of Mrs. Du Val when she learned the truth. At last she slept.

When she woke, the sun was shining. The birds were singing. The paper flowers on the wall were gay and friendly. Rocky's picture was still arranged so that she could see it from her bed. "He's too wonderful," she thought. "Handsomer than the picture, and more desirable—but—he despises me."

Doris meditated. The situation between Rocky and his wife seemed very odd. Why was it that he did not want to expose his false position to his family at once? Why was he not more worried about the whereabouts of the real Doris?

She opened her eyes. Rocky stood at the foot of the bed. How long had he been there? She went hot all over.

"Well?"

least I think so now."

"You mean the real Doris told you she was going to have a baby?"

He nodded.

"And she's somewhere now having it? And you don't even care enough about her to look it up. You ought to be with her this minute instead of sitting here talking to me."

He smiled lazily. "But I'm so crazy about you."

Doris bit her lip angrily.

He rose. "Here's breakfast. I'll help you Estelle." He took the table from the maid and placed it at Doris's bed.

"I'd like to get up and get my too bath before breakfast," said Doris.

He answered with mock tenderness, one eye on Estelle. "Shall I help you, Beautiful?" His hand touched the coverlet.

Doris could hardly speak for a minute. Then she raised herself suddenly. The comforter fell from the lace bodice of her gown. "You're behaving like a boy of six." She snatched her lavender kimono lying over the foot of the bed. She got into it, hardly taking her eyes from Rocky's face.

The maid left the room as she faced him.

"If you're embarrassed," he began, grinning—

"I'm not embarrassed," she surveyed him calmly. His grin became lifeless, awkward. He reddened. "Isn't this all rather unnecessary?" she asked him.

He spoke slowly, the awkwardness disappearing. "I was just thinking it would have been better if I guess if Doris hadn't sent me one as pretty as you. I had all sorts of thoughts looking at you a minute ago."

She smiled gently. Her hand rested where the robe lapped over at her throat. The other hand held the soft folds together on one hip. She half wanted to add "But you know Doris didn't send me to you." But there was something vaguely pathetic about him now. Poor fellow! He didn't know why she was here any more than she did herself. And anyway she wouldn't start the inevitable argument until she had to.

"You know I could almost believe whatever you might happen to tell me about yourself right now." His lips moved slowly inward to a cynical expression. "You women!"

Doris escaped into the bathroom, locked the door.

When she came out she found the breakfast table heavy with coffee, oatmeal, grapefruit, pancakes, bacon and sausages. In the center a bowl of early roses lent the bridal touch. Rocky was standing at the window, whistling.

Doris stood still, severity in her expression. "It hasn't occurred to you, I suppose, that I might like to be left alone for a minute." Her hair was pinned back quaintly but becomingly. Her face was carelessly dusted with powder, and judging from the way she held the robe closely about her she had very little on.

Rocky pulled a chair up to the table and sat down. "Draw up, dream girl," he said gleefully. "Rather, darling, let me arrange your pillows for you."

There seemed nothing else she could do about it, so Doris scrambled into bed. Rocky poked pillows behind her.

"Jolly, isn't it?"

"What?"

"Oh—having our own little love nest like this and being so fond of one another!"

Doris' spoon poked tremblingly into her grapefruit. She felt a little reckless about where the juice splattered. "It may be jolly to you." She looked at him unsmilingly.

Rocky opened his eyes in pretended surprise. "You mean to say it isn't to you—with your love of adventure? Fickle woman, and on our wedding day you were so crazy about me!"

Doris was scarlet. For a moment she thought that Rocky meant they had had a wedding day. It was too confusing. If only he would stop teasing. It was baffling enough not to know what had happened to her.

"After breakfast we'll drive 'I want to call up Doris without Mother finding it out."

"Go alone."

"You don't crave my company."

"Frankly I don't."

He looked at her. She saw that his captious mood was gone. He was hurt inexplicably, and angry.

"Well, I'm not so d—n keen about you either. It's to save Mother's feelings that I'm going to take you." His face looked grieved, childishly so. "She thinks that we can't bear to be out of one another's sight."

Doris didn't know what to say. His making fun of love infuriated her. She looked at him in stunned helplessness.

Who was she? What was she doing? Where was the real Doris? Why wasn't she here instead?

Mrs. Du Val rapped on the door and came in. "Ah my children—like quiet little love-birds you sit!" She glanced at Doris' plate. But you do not eat!" She shook a finger. "You are too excited. Rocky has talked to you more until he opened the door of the car for her to alight.

Doris retreated from his extended hand. "I can get out of the car quite well without assistance."

He seized her arm and pulled her out roughly. "Stop acting like a fool."

They stood eye to eye, Doris on the step above him, outraged, panting with fury. At that moment nothing but physical violence could have satisfied Doris. This man had her so completely at his mercy. She was so helpless. She had no place to go—no one to turn to. And he insulted her, humiliated her. She couldn't think of words to express her fury. Everything else had gone from her mind.

He too was filled with hate. His mouth was drawn into ugly lines. His eyes looked at her mercilessly.

"You—" he began.

The cheery voice of Oscar Du Val boomed at them. "Ah, my children, home again! Good. I thought you might be late for lunch."

Rocky reached out his hand toward her, smiling hypocritically. It was the last straw. She raised her fist in the air and struck out desperately. In her madness she hit the umbrella stand. It knocked over, hitting Rocky violently.

Taken by surprise, he uttered a loud "Ouch."

"I hope it hurts!"

Rocky whispered, venomously, "This is the limit. This ends everything." He rubbed his wounds tenderly.

"And not too soon for me, either!" said Doris.

They went in to lunch. Mr. and Mrs. Du Val noticed nothing amiss.

The meal seemed long and unendurable. Rocky was silent and brooding. Doris felt depressed. Where did she belong? Where should she go?

She considered taking Mrs. Du Val into her confidence. Rocky's mother had been so kind—had seemed such a refuge. Yet had that not been partly because she was Rocky's wife, because she was supposed to have the Du Val seed flourishing within her?

Doris felt more unhappy than ever. She had known, at least, all along that she was not going to have a baby. Mrs. Du Val would be very angry when she found out how Doris had taken advantage of her sympathy and love.

What should she do?

Rocky had said that the limit had been reached. Yet why did he not expose her to his parents? But the kindly Du Vals were preceiving at last that something had gone wrong with the newly-weds. Doris did not eat. Rocky glowered.

Oscar Du Val pushed back his chair. "Rocky do you go off somewhere with Doris for a few days where you can be alone together."

"Yes, yes," said Mrs. Du Val eagerly. "It is not good for young people to be always with us old ones—"

"We love it," Doris spoke impulsively.

Rocky glared at her.

"As a matter of fact, Doris and I are leaving for New York this afternoon, if you don't mind," he said.

Doris' heart leaped with fear. So she was to leave this place—leave Mrs. Du Val, her only friend in the world. And where should she go in New York?

She rose. "I'll go and pack," she said. "What time does the train leave?"

"I'll drive you in my car," said Rocky.

Doris walked swiftly out of the room so that they would not see her tears. Rocky's bitter taunt recurred to her—he seemed to think she was some kind of evil woman. His eyes were so unfriendly and cruel. If he knew the truth he would turn her over to the police. Perhaps he would anyway. The least he would do would be to put her away in an asylum.

She packed quickly. What the future held in store for her she could not guess. This adventure had turned out to be farcical. "To anyone else it would be farcical although it doesn't seem funny to me," she thought.

Doris accused herself unmercifully. She ought to have known that Mrs. Du Val was not acquainted with her. One does not run into friends so easily when one is lost in New York.

How, now, would she find her friends, it meant finding that man again.

Of course he was her husband. She looked at herself earnestly in the mirror. She was dressed in the tweed that she had worn on the day of her meeting with Mrs. Du Val. The face, young and anxious, looked back at her. She was absolutely alone in the world. And now she was

T. F. HORAN.

T. F. Horan, 81, died at his home east of Gatesville, Sunday morning, August 20. He came to death as a result of a gunshot wound inflicted by himself.

Mr. Horan was married to Miss Ella McCord in 1870. To this union were born three children, one dying in infancy, a daughter dying at the age of fourteen and a son who lived to maturity and died, Mrs. Horan died in 1926 leaving Mr. Horan alone.

Mr. Horan came to Texas in 1892, stopping at Clarksville one year and then moved to Gatesville in 1893. He was converted when a mere boy and joined the Presbyterian Church of which his father was an Elder. When he married, he joined the Methodist Church with his wife. Mr. Horan was devoted to his church and served it faithfully many years, even up to the close of his earthly life he was a constant reader of the Bible.

Everyone who knew Mr. Horan speaks in highest terms of his life, his Christian faith, and his neighborliness. For some years he has brooded over the loss of his wife. It is felt that such brooding led to this act that took his life.

County Trustees Will Classify Schools at Board Meeting Soon

The County Board of School Trustees will meet Friday Aug. 25 to classify the schools of the County as to the number of grades each school shall teach. This classification is very important to all high school students of the county.

If, in any school, the Board classifies it to teach a high school grade the high school pupils of that district do not have any right to attend high school of some other district and expect his tuition paid or to get transportation help for that grade.

It has been the custom for the County Board to classify some of the best unaffiliated schools of the county as eleven grades, in these cases high school students of these schools cannot attend an affiliated school and draw high school tuition or transportation.

Kurth Lumber co., Keltys, will locate a mill to employ 200 men in Red River County, at either Bagwell or Clarksville.
