Fire Boys Will Get Benefit of a Course In First Aid Work

Dr. Kermit R. Jones, First Aid Chairman of the local Red Cross Chapter, has announced that he will begin a course of instruction in First Aid Treatment tonight in this course Dr. Jones will teach the local Fire Department the fundamentals of first aid treatment. This does not mean that the instruction will pertain solely to first aid to fire victims but all phases of first aid will be discussed.

The outline is furnished Dr. Jones by the American Red Cross and the texts are being furnished by the local chapter of that organization. This same course is being taught in many of the larger cities throughout the country and is being taught from the universally accredited text.

Dr. Jones estimates that some twenty firemen will enroll in the first aid class.

Prominent Grain Man Of Coryell Succumbs From Heart Attack

Christopher C. Edwards, 52, of Gatesville, prominent grain man of this section, died at his home on Leon Street yesterday morning following a sudden heart attack.

Mr. Edwards became ill shortly after 1:00 a. m. A local physician was called to his bedside and at five o'clock Mr. Edwards passed away.

He is survived by his wife and three children.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 9:30 this morning, interment at the Osage Cemetery.

The true university in these days is a collection of books.

Coryell Wins Honors At District Meet; Goff Breaks 1933 Record

The interscholastic entrants from Coryell County who went to Waco last week to participate in the District Meet won for themselves, their respective schools and Coryell County many laurels, for which the citizenship should be indeed proud.

Sid Goff, young Evant athlete, won the single honor of breaking the only record that was shattered during the Waco meet. Goff set a new record when he cleared the bar in the pole vault at 11 feet and three inches. He also won first place in the broad jump at 21 feet.

Martin Donaldson of Gatesville won first place in extemporaneous speaking, while Freide Wood, also of Gatesville, won second place in the girls division.

Coryell County will see a fourth opportunity of winning a first place when Lloyd Neil Kirkpatrick meets Waco this week in the finals of the tennis singles. Young Kirkpatrick, Gatesville, defeated Marlin in the semi-final round.

In the mile event J. L. Rogers of Gatesville won second place in a large field of contestants, while Maynard of Gatesville tied for third place in the high jump.

Miss Villa Holmes' Gatesville dramatists took third place in the one-act play tournament. Louis Woodall and Beverley Chamlee were given second place respectively for their dramatic interpretations. This honor was bestowed upon the young couple for their individual performances.

White Cross Seals for Benefit Cripple Kids Now on Sale in Texas

A campaign is now underway in Texas to sell White Cross Seals. The proceeds from the sale of these seals is to be used to supplement State and Federal appropriations for rehabilitation of the crippled children of the nation. State Senator Marjie Neal is heading the movement in Texas.

This work for crippled children includes free clinics, free medical and surgical attention, free hospitalization free vocational training and free employment service to those who are crippled.

Senator Neal avers that State and Federal allotments amount to $25,000 per year less than is necessary for the work to be properly carried on. To meet this deficit the sale of White Cross Seals has been instituted. These seals are being offered through the schools at present and will be offered through other organizations and clubs at a later date.

Several crippled children from Coryell County are taking advantage of this free service offered by the State Department of Education.

Emergency Crop Loan Office Opened With W. G. Moore in Charge

The News has just received word that an emergency crop loan office has been opened on the second floor of the Courthouse here, and farmers desiring loans should apply between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. W. G. Moore is in charge of the local office.

According to the regulations under which the crop loans are to be made this year, any farmer who secures a loan must obtain a statement from the county production council, where one exists that he does not intend to increase his acreage or production in violation of the Agricultural Adjust Administration Program.

In counties where a county production council has not yet been set up, before any application for a loan will be considered the farmer who is applying will have to give satisfactory evidence that he is cooperating with the production control program of the A. A. A.

The maximum amount of an emergency crop loan that may be obtained by any one individual is $250, the minimum is $25.

Application for loans in any amount from $25 to $150 may be accepted by the emergency loan office provided the farmer does not have sufficient security to obtain a loan elsewhere.

A farmer applying for $150 or more must first make application to the Production Credit Association for a loan from it. Rejection of this application by the P. C. A. will be considered sufficient evidence that other credit is not available and the applicant may then make application to the emergency crop loan office.

"These Thirty Years" Free Picture Given by Coryell Motor Company

"These Thirty Years", an all star talking picture, is to be presented at the Regal Theater here on Wednesday and Thursday of this week at 2:30 each afternoon. The picture will not be shown at night.

The Coryell Motor Company, R. R. Anderson and Walter Stewart managers, in cooperation with the Ford Motor Company have brought this free show to this city. Those who care to see the show may call at the office of the Coryell Motor Company and receive a free ticket.

The picture is a portrayal of the advancement and progress of the last thirty years interwoven with a charming romantic thread and filled with thrills and excitement. The picture was made with a cast of more than one hundred artists among whom Robert Strange, K. Elmo Lowe, Frederick Forrester, Alice John and Donald McDonald are featured.

Two Widely Reputed Baptists Will Lead Revival Meeting Here

The annual revival at the First Baptist Church here will begin at the morning service on next Sunday. The visiting evangelist and the singer will not be here, however, until Monday following the opening Sunday.

Dr. T. C. Jester of Houston, one of the most outstanding pastors of the Southern Baptist Convention, has been secured to do the

Large Attendance to Avail Selves of Free Evant Barbecue Feed

According to the Evant News, 3,000 people are expected to attend the all day picnic and barbecue at that place on Saturday April 14th.

Plans are underway for an elaborate program which will be made up of a parade at 10 o'clock, speaking at 10:30, barbecue dinner, negro minstrel, livestock exhibition, needlework exhibition and a display of relics.

It has been announced that there will be a buyer on hand to purchase livestock.

The affair is being staged under the sponsorship of the Evant business men.

Fems Lose Tight Game; Firemen Defeat Ward's Bunch 36-29 by Sunup

Score indications might lead readers to believe that the soft ball used in the Friday night games might have been a tennis ball since it was hammed over and about the diamond at will.

The headline game last Friday night took place between the female sports and their stag rivals. The latter club won a narrow margin over the women with a 9-7 victory. Clara Belle Everette, pitching for the ladies, held the mens team to but few hits during the game. Such capable players as Grace Blackstock, Dixie Matthews, Thedra Mounce (manager) and Thelma McGilvray, won great applause from the spectators. The men's team was managed by Oscar Gloff and was composed of local business men.

In the second game of the double-header program the Firemen met "Candy" Ward's double horse aggregation. His fell like pellets over the left field fence. At the end of the first inning the players were "winded", the score standing at 20 to 15 with the firemen leading. The game ended, 36 to 29 (near dawn). The firemen were the victors.

Batteries for the winners were: Alvis, pitcher and McCurry catcher. Ward's goup featured two pitchers, Joe Ricketts and Luke Walker with "Bugs" Rutherford on the receiving end.

The almond is a native of Asia, Barbary and Morocco.

MAD DOGS

Reprinted from The Dallas News

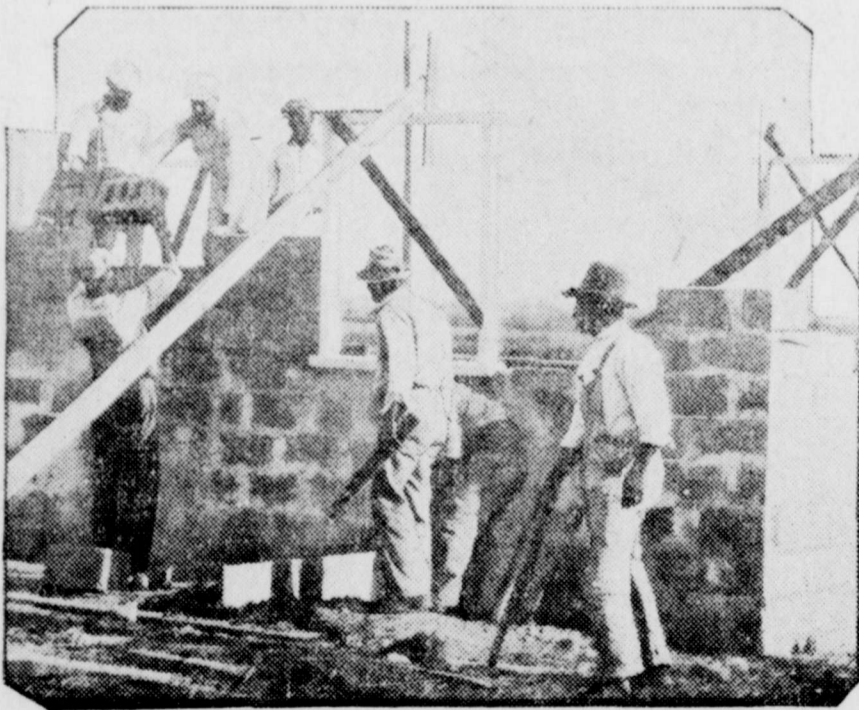

Lee Simmons, general manager of the Texas prison system, voiced on a Dallas visit a few weeks ago an opinion that has been repeatedly proven correct. "The life of a peace officer," he declared, "is worth nothing to today's criminal. He slits to kill without warning." The was given bloody confirmation in Sunday's brutal murder of Highway Patrolmen E. B. Wheeler and H. D. Murphy, attributed to Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker.

It is time for the general public to size up the situation and demand the remedy. The fugitive Barrow and his companions are only one of several small groups roaming the country with the instinct of mad dogs, the only remedy for their ailment is extinction. They must be hunted up and disposed of—efficiently and completely—according to law. Their lives are forfeited by every rule of human justice and of the preservation of society.

The penalty is as clear in the minds of the community as it must be in the brute sense of the murderous hide-outs themselves. But it can not be inflicted until the law proves more resourceful at capture than has so far been the case. If the failure is due to unintelligent police work, we should have intelligence at any cost; if due to lack of co-ordination for detection and pursuit, that must be obtained. The first great need in this country today is centralized police administration, intelligently directed and intelligently served. Back of this must stand efficient courts and conscientious juries to assure swift and condign punishment. Even then, society will have no protection, until it assures to itself the service of clear thinking pardon and parole authority that will loose no mad dogs to ravage and kill.

Until these elements are co-ordinated, men like Wheeler and Murphy will pay with heroic lives for the failure of society's support.

THE FATE OF CIVILIZATION

By
LEONARD A. BARRETT

The discoveries of the past century have been almost entirely in the field of science, much of which has brought practical benefit to the race. In medicine new cures have been discovered for old maladies. Marvelous results have been accomplished in the field of surgery. The application of electricity to modern devices has lessened the strain and time of labor. Fancy the consternation in the modern home if the electric current would no longer make available the refrigerator, vacuum cleaner, percolator, toaster, heater, curling iron, oil furnace, door bell, radio, to say nothing of the telephone, electric lights and the spark plug of automobiles! In his essay on "Revolution of Science," Mr. George Santayana writes: "We are invited to conceive organisms within organisms, so minute, that the heart of matter seems to explode into endless discharge of fireworks." Especially is this true when our scientists are endeavoring to split the atom.

In spite of the tremendous progress made possible by scientific discovery and the speed with which, by use of machinery, it is possible to accomplish results, the question still remains—how much better off is the human race because of this progress? Has it brought a permanent increase of happiness and security? Quite the contrary condition is true. The entire human race has passed through a depression, worse than in any period in history, with a lowering of its morale and a diminished confidence in the security of material things. Science has utterly failed to save the race or secure the permanency of modern civilization.

What is the next step? Is not the answer found in the words of the late Woodrow Wilson: "Our civilization can never be redeemed materially until it is redeemed spiritually?" Discoveries in the realm of moral and spiritual values must be proclaimed from the house tops. Scientific research must be directed to laboratories of human experience. We need to know the meaning of integrity, honesty, sincerity, honor, faith, hope and love. The fate of civilization depends upon realities such as these and not upon split atoms.

FIRST STERILIZATION HEARING APRIL 18

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 3.—The first hearing for enforcement of Oklahoma's sterilization law, which applies to the cases of certain insane persons and to habitual criminals was set today for April 18 by the State Board of Affairs.

The hearing will be at the Central Hospital for the Insane, Norman. Dr. D. W. Griffin, superintendent of the hospital, has presented applications for the sterilization of 14 women and one man.

No applications have been filed as to habitual criminals.

WORLD FAMOUS DOCTOR DIES

VIENNA, April 5.—Professor Herman Schlesinger, 67, world famous physician who was head of the general hospital here since 1905, died yesterday.

WORLD FOREIGN COMMENT

A PROMINENT Texas daily characterizes Chancellor Dollfuss' new constitution for Austria as turning back the clock. The constitution really does repeal all the principles upon which the Austrian Republic in 1918 was founded.

Under the new constitution, all power "will emanate from God," the ruler being responsible to no one. The Vatican will determine the forms of education, and four "advisory councils," representing the provinces, the church, the industries, and the ruler's friends will advise the ruler.

We have used "ruler" instead of "president" because henceforth Austria will have a ruler and not a president, even though the ruler may not be a Hapsburg.

By the recent evacuation of their castle in Belgium, the Hapsburgs evidently intend to return to Austria some time in the near future. Further strengthening such a rumor is the fact that tenants of the former royal palace in Vienna have been ordered to move by August 1.

It is well known that a Hapsburg restoration, in the person of young Archduke Otto, son of the last Austrian Emperor, Charles, would provoke a European crisis. The states that have been formed out of former Austrian territory and the state, that received additional territory at the collapse of the old Dual Monarchy would oppose with all their power the return of the monarchy in Austria or Hungary.

Especially is this true of Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia. The former Bohemian state was under the control of Austria for hundreds of years. Naturally a Hapsburg restoration would cause repercussions in this new nation. As for Yugoslavia, the Croats and Slovans, who have long been discontented under Serbian rule, very likely would try to join their Catholic brethren, provided a strongly pro-Catholic Hapsburg

Wins O. Henry Prize

Miss Nancy Hale, a granddaughter of Edward Everett Hale and daughter of Philip Hale, painter, is the winner of the special prize of $100 for the best short story of the year. was in power in Vienna.

It has been whispered that Austria and Hungary may again combine and form a new but greatly reduced Austro-Hungarian Monarchy.

In case of a restoration in Austria or of a combination of the two states, the burden of a glittering court such as the Hapsburgs are used to would greatly increase the enormous debts under which these poverty nations now labor.

The majority of Austrians probably would, however, welcome Otto into Vienna with open arms—the Nazis excluded. Even though Dollfuss may be turning back the clock, the Austrians have never been used to anything but a strong, centralized monarchy. That is the reason the republic has failed.

The people of Hungary want a king but not one who will rule them from Vienna. The Hungarians would undoubtedly accept a Hapsburg if one would agree to live and rule from Budapest, the average Hungarian peasant does not want to unite with Austria.

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

The Management of the News wishes to take this opportunity to correct an impression which seems to exist in the minds of several business men and concerns in the county.

It has been brought to the attention of the News that it is the impression with some that the circulation on Tuesday is smaller than on Friday, which is not the case. Every subscriber to the News receives the Tuesday edition just the same as he or she does the Friday paper.

The lower advertising rate on Tuesday is meant to stimulate mid-week advertising among business men and is NOT in force because of any decrease in circulation on that day.

FIFTH SUNDAY MEETING AT THE GROVE

There will be an old time fifth Sunday meeting at the Grove on April 29. Everybody is invited to come and bring a well filled basket. Good preaching and singing throughout the day is expected.

Critic Praises Poet of This County on Volume Recently Published

Walter R. Adams, whose home is at Ireland, has risen rapidly in the realms of classics. This young Texas poet has devoted the recent years of his life to the writing of poetry. The following review of his most recent volume appeared in the Fort Worth Star Telegram Sunday and does Adams and his work great honor.

"THE DEAD LIE DOWN, by Walter R. Adams; the Kaleidograph Press, Dallas.

"Walter R. Adams well known young poet of Ireland, Texas has given a most provocative title to his first published volume of verse. "The Dead Lie Down" is a collection of poems that have first appeared in such magazines as Holland's, the Kaleidograph, the Carillon and others.

Mr. Adams writes with the brevity of one who has something to say. His poems are sincere and clear-cut. Many of them in this book possess an emigramatic quality. More than any other Texas poet, he finds his material in his own environment. This is particularly evident in the "Pasture Sketches," forming the first section of the book. To such bits of loveliness he gives an individual touch.

To one who has observed trees standing bare and unfruitful, there is a tragic poignancy in the poem from which the title is taken "To a Dead Tree Standing"

Bedouins New at 1934 Chicago Fair

A Lunisian village, reproducing the color and atmosphere of Northern Africa, will be one of the novel features of the coming summer's Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago, opening June 1. Fierce Bedouins, Arab Sheiks, North African craftsmen demonstrating their arts and handicraft, and native merchants displaying their wares will lend a picturesque aspect to the village. Street bazaars, a mosque, an Arab theater, and towers and buildings reproducing North African architecture will be features.

If Mr. Adams writes only briefly of love and with an almost austere reticence we may lay it to the fact that he has chosen to enjoy the beauty of his Plum Creek Farm in solitude. In "Lovely Lady" he says "If I am to know beauty you will have to go away."

Such titles as "Buzzards" and "Drouths" give evidence that the writer is not always concerned with beauty. The book is not a volume for readers who want poems lush with dripping beauty and fervid with passionate longings; rather it is a choice pleasure for the more cultivated, critical taste. To such this reviewer recommends it without reserve.—Lexie Dean Robertson."

One whole summer he was the golf partner of Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein. Coming to this country he saw 5,000,000 golfers spring up where 500 had existed before.

NUMBER OF RAILROAD WORKERS INCREASING

Washington, Apr. 6—The Interstate commerce commission today reported 998,812 men working on first class steam railroads on March 15.

The figure was an increase of 5.58 per cent as compared with March 1933 when 919,881 men were employed, but still is below the 1933 peak reached last September when 1,030,215 persons were on the payroll.

"What about Webster Spears?" This time Peter turned to the girl. "When you came to see me, I thought you were worried about him, too."

"There was no way we could help Web by remaining here," Rylie answered for her.

"I'm asking Miss Shipley."

"Rylie is right. We considered Web, but realized that remaining in the city wouldn't help him."

Until they were dismissed, Rylie to be taken back to police headquarters by a waiting officer, Callis to return to her home, the young couple stoutly maintained their story. No amount of questioning by Kilday could shake it.

"Just the same," growled the sergeant after they were gone, "I know I've got the murderer under arrest. It's either Webster Spears or Rylie Carmody. First I thought it was Spears and that Carmody and the girl were trying to help him. Then I thought it was Carmody and the other two were trying to help him. Now I don't know which it was, except that one of the two is guilty."

"And you think Callis Shipley knows?" Peter asked.

"Of course."

"Well, I don't," Peter spoke with conviction. "Ever since my interview with her the other afternoon I have been convinced that, personally, she is innocent, although Carmody and Spears may be guilty. But if they are, she doesn't know it."

Kilday did not share this conviction. He reviewed the evidence against each. "Spears was in love with Doris Carmody and was moving heaven and earth to keep her from marrying Jim Franklin. We know he told Rylie about Choo Choo Train, hoping that he would stop the wedding. Some one telephoned Ambrose Carmody telling him about the actress. First Spears denied that. Now he admits making the call. Some one telephoned Choo Choo and told her to be at the church. Spears still denies he did that, but I don't know whether to believe him or not."

"He left the church, just before the murder, inquiring about Rylie Carmody and declaring that if he were there, there wouldn't be any wedding. Later he denied making that remark but we've since been able to prove that he did. That night Callis Shipley visited Spears' home. Both she and Spears denied that visit, at first. Now they both admit it. The girl told us what Spears said when he left the church. Then she denied it. Now she admits it."

The detective was restlessly pacing the floor as he summed up the case. "You can't tell me innocent people were trying to deceive us this way. That isn't natural. They had something to conceal. What was it? Well," he smiled significantly. "Spears had a motive for the crime and he can't account for his time at the hour it was committed."

"Then take Rylie Carmody. He admits trying to stop the wedding, after Spears told him about the actress. We know he quarreled with Franklin in the study. He left, but we know he came back, because Callis Shipley rode home with him. Either the girl told him there had been a murder or he already knew it, apparently, when he returned to the church. If she told him, how did she know? If she didn't tell him, how did he know? Then he gives a detective the slip in time to search Franklin's apartment and attack you in that office." He shrugged. "Oh, I know we don't have any proof of that—yet. But he escaped in time to do it, and he can't give a good reason for shaking my detective the way he did. He turns up with an alibi full of holes, and tries to explain his battered appearance by telling us he was in an automobile accident. Huh, I've got enough on both of these birds to send them to the chair, and one of them will talk before he takes the trip. The fear of that is the best cure for a silent tongue I know."

"But, Kilday—" Peter began.

"Oh, I know. You're going to hand me that theory that Spears couldn't have taken the dagger from the wall—at least not while he was struggling with Franklin. Well, perhaps he couldn't, but maybe he slipped in there and got the knife before Franklin saw him. Maybe it was Rylie. He's taller. There are a lot of things that don't fit yet, and that may be one of them. But they'll all fit before I'm through."

"That wasn't what I was going to say," Peter again interrupted. "If either Rylie or Web Spears committed this crime, the motive seems to be obvious. It was to keep Franklin from marrying Doris Carmody. And if that was the motive, why should either of them have visited Franklin's apartment or office? I can't make that fit."

"Not unless Callis Shipley is the woman in blue you've been talking about," Kilday persisted doggedly.

"But she isn't," exclaimed Peter. "I'm sure of that. Think back, Kilday. Our woman in blue went there to prevent the wedding. Dan Bullis heard part of her conversation with Franklin. She only consented to leave the church after Franklin promised her that his marriage was going to make no difference in their relationship. If Bullis told us the truth about that conversation, and I see no reason why he shouldn't, then that woman is heartbroken over the murder. Does Callis Shipley act or look like a woman who is grieving over Franklin's death? Not to me, she doesn't. Her one thought, throughout the whole affair, has been for Rylie Carmody. No, she is not the woman in blue. And if she isn't, then I say Rylie had no reason for visiting that apartment. I have another reason for being convinced that he isn't the man with whom I struggled in the apartment. A few minutes ago, the boy lunged at you, here, in a rage over a question asked of Miss Shipley. You caught him by the wrists and held him, easily. I am sure you couldn't have done that with the man I ran up against the other night. That fellow was far more powerful. Whatever doubt lingered in my mind about Carmody's innocence was dispelled then. He is innocent. I'm as sure of it as I am of this broken leg of mine, and it's paining me a lot."

"If we accept this theory of yours it looks as though we're farther from a solution than ever," complained Kilday. He drew moodily on his stogy. "You've made a good point," he admitted, "but if we follow your lead we're right back where we started. I haven't even got a good guess left. Webster Spears was under arrest the night of your fight in the apartment. If that has a place in the crime, then it couldn't have been him."

"It has a place," declared Peter with conviction. "The man I fought was the murderer. I'm convinced of that."

He glanced at Kilday, a whimsical smile playing about his lean lips. "Have you ever had to lie in bed for three consecutive days?" he inquired. "Try it some time, when you have a particularly knotty problem to solve. I recommend it. You can do a lot of thinking."

The detective was not misled by the apparent inconsequence of the novelist's remark. He leaned eagerly forward. "Have you doped something out?" he demanded.

"I think I have."

"You mean you know who killed Franklin?"

"Perhaps," declared Peter. "You might call it a guess, because I still lack definite proof, but there's only one person who could have done it.

It was the same fellow who helped me along when I took that dive through the window the other night."

"You see, Sergeant," he continued, "we have been hitting pretty close to the truth almost from the first. Ever since I've been lying here, I've been going over the evidence, trying to make it fit. I couldn't get away from that woman in blue who visited Franklin in Doctor Abernathy's study, just before the crime. The very fact that she was the only one of the visitors that we couldn't locate, in spite of all our efforts, made me doubly suspicious of the part she played in the crime. Still, that was only supposition, until the night Franklin's apartment was searched. The prowler passed up a few jewels of value while ransacking the place. It seemed obvious that he was no ordinary thief and that his search had some connection with the crime. But we have been over that. I need only point out that our previous search of those rooms made us reasonably certain that nothing had been found there. I felt sure, then, that the search would be extended to the office. Whatever the murderer wanted, he wanted pretty badly."

"That was a lucky hunch, although it nearly proved the finish of me. And it proved another thing—this was a hot trail."

"The murderer had admitted himself to Franklin's apartment with a key—a key given him by, or taken from, the woman in blue or Choo Choo Train. We can discover nothing against Choo Choo, so let's follow up the other lead. If the key came from the woman in blue, the motive for the crime was established, but I was still as far from identifying this woman as ever, apparently."

Peter brushed his hand wearily across his eyes. His face showed the strain the events of the afternoon were imposing upon his limited strength.

"Then there is the matter of the phone to Choo Choo Train, just before the wedding," he continued presently. "She thought it was Fletcher calling, by Franklin's order. We know that Franklin didn't tell Fletcher to make such a call, because Nick Royce tells us of the man's surprise when she appeared at the church. Fletcher denies he called. Then who did call?"

"Webster Spears!" Kilday suggested.

Peter shook his head. "I think not. Spears was interested in getting the Carmody family to stop the wedding. Besides, he has admitted his conversation with Rylie and his anonymous call to the elder Carmody. But he denies calling Choo Choo. What reason could he possibly have for not telling the truth on that score, as well?"

"No, it wasn't Spears. The murderer called Choo Choo. He did it because he knew her relationship with Franklin, of course, and hoped that her presence at the church would divert suspicion from himself. I believe that was the only reason she was called. Of course, this tells us very little. It does reveal that the man knew Franklin well enough to know his habits. But half of New York knew of his infatuation for this actress. Nevertheless, this man was no casual acquaintance. He had either visited in Franklin's apartment, or talked to him by telephone, there."

"How do you know that?"

"He knew Fletcher's name and was familiar enough with his voice to imitate it when he talked to Choo Choo over the telephone," Peter explained. "A mere casual acquaintance couldn't have done that. Besides that, we have another proof of the fact. When the murderer entered the rear door of Doctor Abernathy's study, Franklin turned to meet him. He was not surprised to see his visitor. If he had been, it would have been only natural for him to have made some exclamation that would have attracted the attention of Nick Royce, standing only a few feet away. He didn't. Royce never knew when the murderer entered. Franklin is bound to have considered his murderer one of his intimate friends."

Peter paused to light a fresh cigarette and inhaled it, deeply, several times, before continuing.

"There is another very vital clue which we must not overlook. That is the revolver. Unless we believe that Franklin thought his life was in grave danger, it is ridiculous to suppose that he carried a revolver to his own wedding. I prefer to think that he had no warning of his danger. In the first place, if he had, he would never have permitted his assailant to approach him near enough to stab him, without firing. He was stabbed from in front, remember, not from behind. Again let me remind you that Royce was only a few feet away in the next room."

"No, if Franklin had been armed, it would have been because he suspected danger. And in that event, he would have used his weapon when the murderer entered the room. I am convinced that the revolver was carried to the church, not by Franklin, but by the murderer himself, who intended, by slaying the man with his own gun, thus to escape detection. You will argue, of course, that he used the knife, instead. I believe that was an afterthought, suggested when he saw the knife hanging on the wall as he entered the room. It suggested a silence, and greater time for escape, that he could not hope for if he used the gun."

"Another point which puzzled me was why the revolver should have been discarded in the shrubbery of the garden. Of course, the murderer had already taken the precaution to leave Franklin's own fingerprint upon it, but nevertheless, this revolver has been a significant clue

ON TEXAS FARMS

By W. H. Darrow
Extension Service Editor
A. & M. College

Honey June sweet corn, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station bred corn for Texas conditions, succeeded so well in Palo Pinto county last year that 16 of the home demonstration club pantry demonstrators there are planting it this season.

A feed bill on cattle of about $1500 was replaced last winter by 200 tons of hegari ensilage put in a trench silo by Joe Culver of Gregg county. In following the county agent's suggestion to do this he thought he was taking a big chance. Instead he made about $300 on the deal as the silage cost $6 per ton delivered to the cow. Mr. Culver says he will double his silage acreage this year.

Celery started in a hot bed last spring by Mrs. S. R. McClure, farm food supply demonstrator of Nep Hope Home Demonstration Club in Ochiltree county, furnished the family tender, crisp celery late last winter.

A. C. Goodnight of Hays county, who has been operating by Extension Service methods several years, lets cows and hogs harvest the crops. His 219-acre farm is fenced and cross-fenced. The most profitable land on the farm is a permanent pasture, he states. He keeps a trench silo filled, and has sweet clover, alfalfa and peanuts in his fields to balance up the other feed crops.

In Shackelford county 86 home demonstration club women will take the guess work out of gardening this year by planting for each member of the family 584 feet of vegetables, divided equally between the four classes; green or leafy, garden fruits, starchy, and other vegetables.

College Station—To supply a family of five for one year with fresh vegetables a garden should yield at least 2912 pounds of produce which means, roughly, 2912 feet of garden rows, says J. F. Rosborough, extension horticulturist at Texas A and M College. To get the right amounts of the different kinds of vegetables he advises having at least 728 feet of row for each of these four classes: leafy or green, starchy, "other" vegetables, and garden fruits. One-half acre will supply a family of five, but one acre is still better, he adds.

Examples of green or leafy vegetables are mustard, spinach, lettuce, Swiss chard, cabbage, English peas and rape. The chief starchy vegetables are potatoes, corn and parsnips. Other vegetables include such ones as turnips, beets, carrots, radishes, onions, cucumbers, egg plant and squash. Garden fruits are tomatoes, melons, rhubarb, citron and roselle.

For help in planting a garden to fit family needs the Extension Service has a leaflet known as Garden Demonstration Record D. 81 distributed by county farm and home demonstration agents to those conducting live-at-home demonstrations.

Albany—It is winter egg production that pays, and it is always found that profits are directly related to production, says Robert Bradford, poultry demonstrator of Shackelford county. From 267 hens he made 54 cents net per hen for the four months ending February 28th. The hens laid an average of 4 dozen eggs each in this time. The average feed cost per dozen was 8 cents, the selling price 21 cents.

Dilley—Rock walks and an indoor toilet will be built when the corn-hog money arrives, to complete the first year's yard and home improvement work of Mrs. Vern Sellers, Frio county yard demonstrator. From sales of hens she has bought shrubs for beautifying the grounds around the farm house.

WEDDING MARCH MURDER—
(Continued from preceding page) In the case, and marks an apparent mistake on the part of the man we seek. My only explanation for this action is that the murderer joined the throng in front of the church, after the crime, seeking safety in the crowd, rather than in flight. I think it probable that he even entered the church. That is quite likely, as I am sure his acquaintance with Franklin was such that he had been invited. That being true, he could not afford to have the murdered man's revolver in his possession. That explains this point, but it does not explain how and when he obtained that revolver. "That," declared Peter, with slow emphasis, "is the most significant point of all. Fletcher claims Franklin never kept a gun at the apartment. The man is telling the exact truth, or else he is protecting the murderer. And yet, we can find no motive that would cause Fletcher to pursue such a course. I think the fellow might protect the identity of a woman who had been indiscreet. I don't think he would protect the murderer. We have proof of it, in fact. Had he been in league with Franklin's slayer, it would not have been necessary to search the apartment, as was done. Fletcher could have accomplished such a search without any difficulty and without our knowledge.

"That means that Franklin kept the weapon elsewhere. Where? At the apartment he kept for Choo Choo Train? In another possible apartment kept for the woman in blue? At his office?

"Sergeant," Cawdigan spoke with evident conviction, "this evidence led me, ultimately, to two clues to which I did not at first attach sufficient importance. And those two clues, I believe, will prove not only the identity, but the guilt, of the murderer. They are the revolver and the key-ring we found in the murdered man's pocket."

Ireland School News

Graveling the drive way and school grounds about the building, almost completes a four year plan of progressive development. In 1929-1930 the School Board put up a new building for Farm Shop Work and have since equipped it with needed tools. The boys have made equipment for the school and community. These boys have made seats, tables, feeding apparatus, plumbing necessary about the building, and such concrete work as was needed in improvement of the grounds. This class of boys also do much community pruning, terracing, and land measuring in the farm adjustment program. The school board at the same time provided new quarters for the Home Economics Department. This group of girls do much practical work each year in helping with banquets, luncheons, and practical home cooking and dressmaking.

Boys and Girls Scouts

The Boy Scouts meet each week during the noon lunch period. A few scouts who have good daily lessons go to the camp ground at eleven thirty and start the camp fires. Lunch is served at twelve ten. Scout games and observations get thirty minutes. Twenty six scouts and cubs were present Tuesday. Stalking proved so interesting that those who were permitted to join the wading group left the water and worked in the general group.

The Girl Scouts meet on Wednesday some weeks. They hope to meet in the great out of doors as the weather gets warmer.

Basket Ball Teams

Immediately after County Meet all Basket ball teams organized for the next school year. Captains were chosen for the remainder of this school year. These games will be continued as physical training rather than selecting the best players in the respective groups.

Parent Teachers Association

The Ireland P.T.A. has proven its self a great community helping factor. Its friendliness to school and community interests has shown its wise leadership.

Fifth and Sixth Grades

The Fifth and Sixth Grade pupils are polishing off the year's work by going back over what they have studied and by emphasizing the essential point in Arithmetic; they are reviewing fractions, decimals, percent, commission and interest.

They are very proud of being able to take an active part in the County Meet at Gatesville. Those who went to Gatesville from the room were twenty in number. They took part in the Rythm Band, Spelling, Picture Memory, Basket ball and track.

The Room is unusually proud of Ruth Katherine Austin and James Eldson for winning first place in Picture Memory. Also those who went to the finals in junior girls and junior boys basket ball. Our junior girls won 2nd in the County.

The first grade has finished four books in reading. They are happy over their spelling book and to know they can make sentences.

The second grade has finished five books in reading. They are interested in story telling and drawing pictures to represent stories. Pictures have been brought from home and they write and tell stories from them.
