FIND DILLINGER'S CAR

CHICAGO, Ill., May 2.—A Ford V-8 sedan stolen by John Dillinger in his escape from a Federal trap at Mercer, Wis., ten days ago was found abandoned here Wednesday, the driver's seat stained with blood.

Several empty .45 caliber shells were found in the car.

SOAP KING IS DEAD

CINCINNATI, O., May 2.—A two-family dynasty founded on soap that floats came to an end today with the death of Col. William Cooper Procter, 72, whose humane industrial innovations made his passing mourned by every Procter & Gamble workman. He will be buried Friday.

PLAN WHISKEY POLICE

WASHINGTON, May 2.—A self described "tetotaler" from Kansas arrived in the capital today to organize a whiskey detective force of 1,800 men for crushing repeal's bootleg trade.

Upon this new army which Arthur J. Mott will direct, the administration apparently placed full reliance for checking the illicit liquor flow. At least a White House word ended talk of trying lower taxes and tariffs just now.

JOHNSON DEFENDS NRA

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Hugh S. Johnson took a vigorous defense of NRA Wednesday night to the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which already had heard an admixture of high praise and crackling censure of the recovery agency.

The day brought so much discussion of governmental affairs as to give the meeting the general atmosphere of an open forum on the administration's recovery program.

JUNE STILL MISSING

TUCSON, Ariz., May 2.—June Robles, 6, kidnaped a week ago today, still is missing.

The ransom demanded—$15,000 in notes of small denomination—is ready and relatives awaited hoped-for acceptance by her abductors of their offer to pay for the child's safe return.

Bernabe Robles, white-haired grandfather of June; Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Robles, her parents, and others of the family circle grimly kept their own counsel in furtherance of their promise of secrecy to the kidnapers.

No inkling as to whether a reply had been received to the family's appeal and ransom offer, made two days ago, was allowed to escape.

Information from reliable sources was that June's relatives were convinced she is not dead.

Bob Jones Withdraws Name From Ballot in Race for Co. Sheriff

The News is in receipt of the information from Bob Jones who recently announced for sheriff, to this effect:

Owing to unforeseen circumstances which have arisen only recently I have decided to withdraw my candidacy from the race for the office of Coryell county sheriff.

I want to take this opportunity to express my appreciation for the consideration already extended me by friends. I am aware of the fact that some of my friends have already spoken in my behalf concerning my candidacy and I trust that my withdrawal will not cause them any undue embarrassment.

Respectfully,
R. L. (Bob) Jones.

EGG LIKE A PEANUT FOUND INSIDE AN EGG

Mrs. Edwin Clawson, of The Grove, planned to have eggs for breakfast Thursday morning and did have eggs, but the strange part of it was that she had an extra egg she couldn't account for.

In breaking open one egg Mrs. Clawson found on the inside another egg, shell and all. It is about the size of a large peanut with two kernels. The inner egg is still intact and from all outward appearances must have a complete egg within its small wrinkled shell.

The natural freak is now on display in the News office.

Waco Softball League Will Send Crack Team To G'ville for Match

Weather permitting, the Waco Linen Supply softball team will be the guests of the local league Saturday night when that team will play a team of Gatesville All-Stars in an exhibition game.

Bob Arnold will probably act as manager of the local aggregation and in such event will send the same lineup on the diamond against the visitors that played last Saturday under the lights. It is probable that Sasse, young Highway pitcher, will start on the mound for the locals.

The Waco Linen Supply club boasts of one of the strongest teams in the Waco League, having lost very few games this season. The Waco claim possession of one of the best softball pitchers in this section in John Waddell.

The game will start at eight o'clock.

WACO, May 3.—The Waco Linen Supply Co. downed the Hill Printing Co. in easy fashion, 13 to 5 here Wednesday. J. Teaft of the Printers was the star of the game, smashing out two home runs. Brose Bunting got a non-stop blow for the Linen Supply crew.

'round the square

By The Snooper

One can't tell just what all a man can do. Just the other day I saw N. Pederson standing in front of his place of business with a dust rag in his hand which means that he's a cleaner as well as a presser. Mrs. George Bean and young son "Wimpy" were among the early morning town duffers. That boy has everyone speaking to him wherever he goes. Gladys, Westerman and Nola Mai Weaver indulging in an eight o'clock "coke" and chatting between sips. George Gilmore has already acquired the air of the new business man, only he isn't the white color type; he has overalls and everything that looks like real work. Walter Moore may be seen most anyplace around the square with his papers, etc., assessing city taxes. Mr. & Mrs. George Perry have the natural hospitality necessary in building cafe business. It's a pleasure to be in such company.

The mineral water crystal business is relatively new in Texas, but is annually producing a couple of million dollars worth of merchandise.

RUMORS WOULD HAVE CLYDE AND BONNIE AROUND HERE

Whether there's any truth in it or not, it makes a good story, so local rumor mongers agree.

The actual facts are that three automobiles of armed officers, including some from McLennan county, some from Bell and a few special rangers made an early morning entrance Thursday into the Owl Creek vicinity between Mound and Flat.

The mission of the peace authorities to Coryell county was not known at press time Thursday.

The rumor has it that the officers are on the trail of Clyde Barrow, youthful desperado and his cigar-smoking moll, Bonnie Parker. Heavily armed with rifles, revolvers and sub-machine guns, the officers sped across the county line west of Oglesby, turned off the highway and headed straight into the Owl Creek section.

The news is not authentic but rumors have made a good story of it.

Joe White, Sheriff's Acting Deputy Enters Race for Co. Office

To the Voters of Coryell county:

I desire to take this opportunity to announce that I am entering the race for Sheriff of Coryell county. In doing so I am not unmindful of the responsibility, nor of the duties attached to this office. However, if elected to this office I will, to the best of my ability, accept the responsibility and discharge the duties of this office with one, and only one purpose in mind, to make you a faithful and efficient servant in the enforcement of the law.

I was born and reared in Coryell county, having lived in the Pidcoke, Harmon and Copperas Cove communities most of my life, having acted as Deputy (Continued on last page)

All cotton acreage reduction contracts submitted to headquarters last week have been approved by the State Review Board at College Station, according to information received by county agent, D. W. Sherrill here this week.

The contracts will be sent to Washington immediately where national agriculture authorities will act upon the recommendation of the state board. This means that final approval is already assured.

Coryell is the thirty-fifth county to receive state approval.

Seventeen hundred contracts total the number to be sent to Washington from this county. Originally there were 1,713; seven of these who hesitated to take the necessary adjustments withdrew and six were cancelled by the County Committee due to ineligibility.

Value for Coryell producers from the reduction program will aggregate in the proximity of $175,000, benefit payments. The checks to the individual producers will be made and mailed from Washington, expected to arrive at Gatesville not later than June 1.

The Bankhead Bill, designed to cut down over production of cotton acreage, will govern the producers who failed to sign the reduction contract, and those in- (Continued on last page)

These seven seventh grade students are: Jerome Benner, Bobbie Niemeier, Lois Niemeier, Don's Johnson, Dovie Warren, Earl Schulz and Pierce Richards.

Community Votes Barbecue

For several years it has been the custom to have a barbecue on the closing day of school but little had been said concerning it. Someone suggested a community meeting and at this meeting which was held at Britain's Store on Thursday night of last week, the vote for a barbecue was unanimous. The date is May 18 and we are expecting you to help us make it a "big day".

Picnic

The Fifth, Sixth, and Seventh grade students, accompanied by Misses Hoff and Hall, went on a picnic last Wednesday afternoon. They chose as their picnic grounds the beautiful Bohne pasture. Everyone certainly enjoyed the afternoon and we ate well but not wisely. All kinds of games were played and when we had to go home, we left wishing every day could be picnic day.

Sports

The school baseball team has had several games lately. They were unfortunate in losing a game to Turnersville last Friday afternoon. The games played last Saturday with Crawford resulted in a victory for both teams. We still contend that we can play baseball.

Lower Grades

A closing program is being prepared by the first four grades. If you are looking for fun, watch for the date and come. It will be announced next week.

The first and second grades miss little Melvin Jacobs very much and we are hoping that he will soon be with us again.

Pearl School News

Primary News

We have been very busy working on a Mother's Day Program and also a closing day program.

We have quite a few out with the measles, but twelve that have been out with them, returned to school. Every body is hoping that they will be through with them before the closing day and Mother's Day Programs.

Freshmen News

The Freshmen are doing very well in all their studies.

They have been reviewing their General Science book which they finished. They are having some trouble with their algebra. In English they are studying the different kinds of sentences.

The Freshmen helped out lots in the selling of the ice cream and other things. The boys helped in freezing the cream and donating the cake and pie.

Junior News

All the juniors are back in school after a hard struggle with the measles. There were only three in our class that had the measles but it seemed to us that the whole class was absent.

We are planning to stage our play one night next week.

Four-Square Club

The four-square club met in regular session Friday night. Plans were discussed and decided upon for the last of school.

Miss Laura's room was in charge of the program. The had two plays, "Raspberry Red" and "Possum 'n 'Tatters."

Ice Cream Supper

There was almost consternation in camp last Friday, because we thought we were going to have hot chocolate instead of ice cream. Everyone was howling, "Ice Cream", even if the air did have icicles in it, and everyone shuddered under their coats. You could hear such remarks as, "I can eat ice cream, no matter how cold it is," and eat it, they did, for we sold eleven gallons.

The girls mixed the cream and the boys froze it. Cake or pie was sold with the cream. These were donated by the different classes. We realize the sum of $19.25 which goes to the athletic fund.

SPORTS SET A PRECEDENT

Sports predominated on the front and inside pages of the last issue of the News. Readers probably noticed this unusual feature without having it called to their attention.

By an elementary analysis the most plausible principal of the "sport edition" was the fact that the inter-locality activities served as a medium for developing a closer relationship between this locality and neighboring communities.

It is seldom indeed that any sort of inter-community affair is promoted here and when it is the benefit of such should not be over looked. There is always some criticism to sports and athletics, based on the contention that keen rivalry between towns is not the best in business ethics, yet when it comes to plain business judgement there is nothing worse than becoming an isolated town and ostracizing neighbors.

Towns all about Gatesville are profiting by various forms of celebrations, such as barbecues, rodeos, etc., that tend to bring business and popularity to their respective townships. Fairs and "old settlers days" are popular occasions with communities throughout the state and all about us, and it is logical to believe that they are worthwhile.

Living in a rut is the worst form of habitation. This is a personal principal as well as a community axiom. Good clean sport in which neighboring localities participate is the very thing for the promotion of friendly feeling and the results that follow should be an incentive for Gatesville to take up the idea on a larger scale.

Why not undertake some sort of activity in which the entire populace can take part and enjoy?

BEAUTY OF CENTRAL TEXAS

Never has the countryside been more beautiful than it is right now.

Every wild flower seems to be in bloom, with a variety greater, it seems, than ever before.

All the beauties of springtime passed me in a pleasant panorama as I drove to Lampasas and back yesterday.

The fields, freshed by a late afternoon rain, were never richer. Field and orchard combined to contribute a rare picture that would have inspired the most caloused.

While the hills were covered with every variety and shade of green that a Texas springtime could produce, the open fields along the road presented a springtly coloring from an assortment of flowers that had me puzzled.

How well it would be if every person, closed in on his own job, within his own circle of friends and inside his own shop, could drive through the country shortly after dawn or at sunset . . . to freshen his own vision from the inspiration of the nature which is so close about us.

Texas is beautiful at all seasons. Central Texas is particularly so.

But no season compares to the springtime in Central Texas, and right now, spring seems to be at the height of its glory.

You don't have to travel to the mountains of Colorado, to the blue grass of Kentucky, or to the orchards of California set off by their snow-capped peaks, to find real beauty and inspiration.

It's right at our door.—The "Home Tower", Temple Telegram.

Texas mineral production in 1932 had a value of $389,963, 183, second only to Pennsylvania with a total of $424,734,073. California, in third place, showed $286,629,150. Figures from other Southwestern States were: Oklahoma $185,120,909; Arkansas $15,540,325; Louisiana $60,920,829; New Mexico $20,263,883.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Seeking death by throwing herself from the summit of Lone Mesa, to escape dishonor, at the hands of a drunken desperado, Sonya Savarin allows herself to be rescued by her suddenly sobered, and repentant attacker. The girl is a self-appointed physician to the Navajo Indians, living on an Arizona sheep ranch with her brother, Serge, his wife, Lila, and their small daughter, Babs. For a year she has been engaged to Rodney Blake, wealthy New Yorker, but her heart is with the friarlike Navajos and she evades a wedding.

CHAPTER III.—In the desert village, shopping, Sonya again meets the man whose advances she had repulsed on Lone Mesa. He tells her he bitterly regrets his action and has never had a minute's peace since that day. Sonya is affected, but unforgiving. She hears rumors of a Border bandit "El Capitan Diablo," who crucifies his "double-crossers" and has a dire reputation as a despoiler and murderer, vaguely connecting him with her attacker.

CHAPTER IV.—Sonya pays a visit to Little Moon and finds her well on her way to recovery. On her return she rides to the top of Lone Mesa. There she again comes upon the strange young man, but she no longer fears him. When he reiterates his sorrow over his misconduct she indicates forgiveness and assures him a man can always change for the better.

It was twilight when they came out into the ranch yard, and some one was coming into the round stockade corral where the big tanks shimmered with sweet waters from the well under the windmill. This was a strange creature if ever there was one, that sat wearily on his little gray burro, leading another and hazing a third ahead of him—a thin, stooped figure in rusty black garments that bore about them something of the dignity of chancel and sacristy. A wide-brimmed black hat sat squarely on the head of long white hair that fell in dusty ringlets to his shoulders. The tired burros drank as if famished, and the master stepped off the one he rode, standing patiently beside it while it slaked its thirst.

Myra laid down her pan and went toward this newcomer, her hand extended.

"Hello, sir," she said. "We're glad to see you. There's plenty of feed in th' barns yonder. Put up your stock an' come on in. Supper'll soon be ready."

"Good day, my daughter," said the old man, shaking hands with her. "I'm glad to be here, too. The road is long sometimes. I've come from Juniper Tank today."

"Whew!" whistled Myra. "That is a long trail, an' a hard one, especially for burros."

"Oh, they do well, my little fellows. They're true servants of the Word, never complaining, always willing. Their reward is certain, I'm sure. If I weren't, I'd be unhappy; they are so patient, so gentle."

He looked at Myra anxiously with his faded old dark eyes.

"Sure," said the woman hastily, "sure they'll be rewarded. Just as sure as anything."

The Servant smiled relievedly.

"I knew you'd understand, Mrs. Little," he said. "Some people don't. They smile when I tell them that. Now I'll go up."

A little later they all sat down to a simple meal, and Sonya studied him with careful glances. She had heard so much about him.

Where he had come from, the country did not know, or where he made his habitat, or if he ever had one. In rain and shine, summer's heat and winter's cold, he rode the lonely stretches on his tiny mounts, carrying his Bible and his first-aid kit. Many a life he had saved in emergency; many a difference he had patched. Many a bit of courage he had put in some falling heart. They called him far and wide the "Servant," shortened from "The Servant of the Lord," and he had no other name but that fantastic soubriquet. He was very old, and the rigors of life had leaned him to the bone; his suns had burned his wrinkled skin to the color of old leather. But there was in his face a flame that shamed the evil out of men beholding, hard, cynical as they might be.

They put him up and fed his burros, and listened quietly, these dark, hard-riding men of cattle camp and sheep camp, while he told them of their sins and the Hope of the World that never died. How much of it went in he never knew, since they are a silent lot, but it was not his job to know. That was to give the Word, that only.

So now Sonya watched him, smiling a little in gentle sympathy, and recalled the stories of his goodness and his unbounded courage which she had heard. A strange little old man, filled with undying zeal, his spirit a fire of evangel, like those amazing padres who had walked the West in an earlier day, he commanded the respect of all who came in contact with him—the gentle, mad old Servant of the Lord.

The sun went down entirely, and the vast spread of the sandy levels clothed themselves in royal purple beyond a painter's dreams. The world was a lovely place, the Servant said in his soft old voice, fit footstool for the feet of God. There was no evil in it of itself. Only man made evil. Man, with his greed and his cruelty.

Beelzebub was abroad in the land—Beelzebub and his henchman. He had seen them with his own eyes, he the Servant of the Lord in humble places. They traveled together by night, and danger waited on them, death and danger and disaster. It had struck just across the Border in that stark form hung upon a cross. It was no common thief who rotted there in the windy sun, but one who had betrayed his master. Beelzebub himself, that master, dark and cold and wicked as infernal fire. He was a power and a force not to be reckoned with or questioned. Though several hundred miles lay between the Border and this sheltered spot, still the finger of the Wicked One could reach even here. The old man had seen shadows. Many shadows. Chief of them the Master's blue-eyed henchman. No good stayed where the Blue-eyed One went by. He had heard of him across the Line last year, the tall one with bronze-colored hair who was always seen when disaster was to follow. A sign and a symbol of disaster, this tall one with the wild eyes. And he had seen him three days back riding down the trail to Red Rock canyon on a horse of solid gold. So did the Wicked One mount his followers.

Well, it was growing late, and he was tired. The old were always tired. So he would find his blankets and sleep, if his friends permitted.

He rose and bowed with a lean grace, vague remnant of some forgotten time, and went away toward the camp he had made with his packs and his weary burros, and Sonya Savarin sat still in every atom of her body with a strange stillness. It seemed as if a bushing hand had been laid upon her spirit, something cold and sinister came down upon her like a cloud. Evil seemed to fall with the night drunken now. He had said he could not drink, and she believed him. And why should she believe him?

Gravely, in a sort of cold fear, she searched her inner depths, and what she dimly saw appalled her.

It was his eyes, she told herself, the look of his eyes when he spoke of these things. They were deep eyes, strange eyes, filled with a wild spirit, and under this wildness, this old devil-may-care which had characterized them, was something so desperate, so anxious, that Sonya would have staked her life on its truth.

Frightened to her foundations, the girl straightened in her saddle and lifted Darkness into his stride. She would forget this man, his eyes and his hands and the heady intoxication of the scent of him. She would write to Rod tonight, a long, good letter. She had neglected him a bit of late.

The next day Sonya went to town to mail her letter. She felt very virtuous and calm. All the strife and unease of the day before had gone from her. She had written dutifully to Rod and told him all the trivial happenings of every day—that is, all but those pertaining to the rider on the golden horse. These were of too small import, she told herself, wouldn't interest him. And besides, he wouldn't understand. At the store Mr. Parks was urbanity itself, bustling about to wait on her, smiling unctuously, rubbing his fat hands together.

"Good morning," she told him politely.

"It's always a good morning, Doctor Sonya," he said richly, "when we see you here. You don't get down too often. You goin' to the dance over to th' Neidingers next Sat'day night? Bill Pingle from Big Town an' two others is goin' to furnish th' music. Accordion an' two fiddles. Ought to be good. Think you folks'll git over?"

"Why, yes," said Sonya. "I shouldn't wonder if we did. The Neidingers always have such nice times at their ranch. Nice people."

"Sure are. An' th' more th' merrier, I always say."

In the room behind the store a man stood where the first sound of Sonya's voice had stopped him. The cigarette he had just rolled hung unsealed in his fingers. Until the girl had gone out, until the last sound of her feet on the boards had died away, until the sputter and roar of the old flivver lessened in the distance, he remained so. Then he flung the cigarette into the refuse barrel and went out the back door.

Sonya Savarin loved the dances of the region.

Although liquid contraband flowed freely, and the cowboys from the upper country sometimes raised the rafters with their noise, there was something elemental and very young about these gatherings of the folk of the lonely land. The sheep men brought their wives and daughters, the whole family, in fact, down to the littlest ones, who slept in ranks on the wall benches as the night wore on, and everybody danced.

Serge Savarin and his womenfolk came a little late, having to drive 28 miles over roads that left a lot to be desired, and entered in the midst of a number.

Sonya, in a new dress, her dark face sparkling already, laid her wrap on Lila's shoulder and swung out on the floor in the arms of a perspiring cowboy.

She met these people only at the dances, but she remembered everyone and danced with all who asked her, provided they were not too far gone in the common hilarity. If so, she would merely laugh and shake her adorable black head with its shining curls and say gently, "No, Billy, I'm too tired to hold you up. Come around earlier next time"; or, "You're silly, Bob, just plumb silly. I think you're lit."

And young Bob, weaving on his booted feet, would tell her anxiously that he wasn't near drunk, but he knew how she felt about it and didn't blame her a bit, not a shingle bit. Neither did he, nor anyone else whom she refused a dance. It was enough that she was there to look at, the most beautiful woman in all the country, the highest-up, yet the sweetest to everyone that a man could ask for. Everyone knew of her and her work among the lowly. Her little fame was sweet in the land.

So Sonya danced and laughed and listened to the music of the violins, the gay accordion, with her arm on this lean shoulder and that, and was extremely happy. She forgot the sorrows of the world and lived her youth to its full extent. Forgot Rod Blake and New York city and the man of Lone Mesa, all of which had troubled her of late.

Lila was dancing, and so was Serge, and Babs was already dead to the world on a bench in the corner, covered with Lila's cape. The music was waxing more "hot" and furious. And by the door a man came suddenly into her range of vision, a tall man, slim-hipped and graceful. He was in store clothes, and the eternal cigarette hung in his fingers, its spiral of smoke ascending in a tiny stream, but she knew him instantly. As instantly the almost terrible thrill shot through her from head to toe, blurring her eyes a bit, catching her throat with a little pain.

Suddenly the music changed, some one yelled "Paul Jones!" and the circling couples broke like the colors in a kaleidoscope. They strung out in a huge oval, all hold, and the old man's words, and presently she shivered and wrapped her arms across each other as if to shut it out. Then she shook herself and listened to Myra, who was saying how mad the Servant was. A strange old creature. Gentle and kind and quite, quite mad, so Myra thought.

But Sonya thought he was somehow akin to her in this quixotic crusade against suffering. Only he had added sin as well.

And he seemed to have a vision. It was this prophetic vision, fitting so closely with her own sense of disaster concerning certain things, which seemed to fall upon her with so chill a touch.

Piffle! She was getting old herself! It was the night and the silence of the vast country under its great stars. What were rumors of a Border bandit to her? A dark renegade who crucified his double-crossers! Nothing. She would forget the chill it gave her. She'd be all right by day.

And so she was, visiting with Myra, laughing and happy, watching the Servant ride away, his saddlebags bulging with Myra Little's generous gifts of food.

She stayed two days at the Black Sheep and left early on the third, much to Myra's dissatisfaction, who held her hand as she leaned from Darkness' saddle and talked till the last minute.

SOFTBALL SYMPTOMS

By A. C.

The Baptists lost heavily to a hard hitting, errorless, bunch of ball players in Ward's team last Monday night. Blanton seemed to be at his lowest form and got little support from his teammates. Had the Baptists been up to par spectators might have witnessed a better game but those infernal "ifs" are always in the way. Ricketts and Walker took the mound for Ward and both did worthwhile duty. The visitors pulled the second triple-play of the season on the last play of the game.

Arnold's club fell before a heavy hitting bunch of highway-men Monday and trailed in scoring throughout the seven innings. The Highway team has shown more hitting improvement than any other club thus far. Although their fielding is nothing to write home about one must admit they are getting their batting eye on the 14-inch pellet.

The Methodists, State, Baptists and Roundtable chalked up ½ game won and ½ game lost due to rain ad muddy field Tuesday.

attitude, we will be fed spiritually.

Some one has said, "Not Failure but Low Aim is Crime". Our high aim this year is for a Standard Sunday School. You can help by your presence, labor and prayer. Remember the hour 10 A. M. Sunday morning.

We think our junior choir is one of the best. They are planning to learn some new songs. If your boy or girl is not in this choir they are missing the great joy these children get from praising the Lord in song.

You feed your body. Why starve your soul. Come to the B. T. S. where you will receive Christian Training and Christian Culture. Meets each Sunday evening at 7:30.

We are thankful that our new Tabernacle which has been under construction for several weeks will soon be completed. We are greatly handicapped because of the lack of room.

COTTON CONTRACTS—

dividuals will be governed accordingly. The News will publish at a later date details pertaining to the relation of the Bankhead Bill and local farmers who will come under its jurisdiction.

Corn-Hog Program

The 166 corn-hog contracts executed in Coryell County have been duly filed with the Review Board at College Station. Action on these contracts is pending the receipt of contracts from other counties.

Wheat Program

Wheat acreage inspection will begin the early part of this month, according to agent Sherrill. A training school for inspectors will begin within the next two weeks.

There are fifty-one wheat reduction contracts already signed in Coryell county.

The method of measuring wheat acreage is very unique. It consists of pushing some kind of old wheel about the sides of the field and recording the number of revolutions. The wheel is properly calibrated and clicks off each revolution loud enough for the inspector to count. As 100 revolutions are counted the inspector shifts a marble from one pocket to another and thus gets the total for each side of the field. The angles at each corner of the field are also measured by a home-made device. These figures together with notes on the crops growing on contracted acres are delivered to the county wheat allotment committee for checking.

This same system of measuring acreages and of checking compliance with contracts will probably be used with cotton and corn, it is thought.

JOE WHITE—

Sheriff at Copperas Cove, for two years before coming to Gatesville. For the past ten months I have actively engaged in the enforcement of the law, as a regular deputy under the late W. W. Hollingsworth, and am now acting in same capacity under Mrs. Hollingsworth, your present Sheriff, thus having a working knowledge of the office and its duties. I feel that I am in a position to render efficient service to you as citizens of this county.

To those of you that know me I solicit your earnest consideration, to those of you whom it has not been my privilege to meet, I invite your investigation as to my qualifications and personal fitness for this office.

It is my desire to make an active campaign and I intend to do so in so far as the same will not conflict with the duties that I now perform as Deputy Sheriff.

If elected to this office I pledge to the voters of this county a fair and impartial administration of the duties of this office, at the same time I assure each of you that any favors shown me will be highly appreciated.

Respectfully yours,
Joe White.
