GATESVILLE FIREMEN TAKE WACO CLUB FOR 14-4 RIDE

The local Firemen that rank high in the league here crushed a crew of Waco All-Star Firemen here Saturday night 14 to 4.

The local Firemen were too much for Pat Boyd's bunch. The Waco team put up a good fight until the beginning of the sixth inning when the locals started a rally that last the rest of the game. Until the sixth inning the score was one and one.

The local Fire Fighters proved their hitting ability in this game more so than ever before. They all seemed to be able to connect with the pellet.

Ray, pitcher for the locals, pitched his greatest game of the season, allowing the Waco gang to get but few hits. Ricketts, the Waco hurler, who ranks as one of the three best pitchers in the Waco Softball League, also pitched a good game, but the entire team being handicapped, playing with a 14-inch inseam ball, and playing under the lights for their first time.

Clyde, Bonnie Spend Sunday P. M. Visiting With Central Texas Friends

The Sabbath might not have been spent with such tranquility if the residents of this section had known of the presence of two notorious individuals Sunday afternoon, who visited in this section.

According to news from Temple Monday morning, Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, his female accomplice, stopped for a brief stay in that city just long enough to have their car serviced, and sped on. What was the destination of the pair upon leaving Temple is not known but it is a practical certainty that it was the much sought-after desperado and his girl friend who were identified by the car attendants.

The following account is a reprint from the Temple Telegram: "Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker paid Temple a hurried visit early Sunday afternoon, had their car serviced, and disappeared again.

"The two most-sought fugitives in Texas, in a Terraplane sedan driven by a man about 22, speeded up Adams avenue from the Rosebud highway or from Eight street, and whirled into the filling station of Buddy Neatherlin at Fourth and Adams.

"After they had the gas tank filled, they sped out of the station, up Fourth street one block, and then to the right. That is the last that was seen of the car.

"Neatherlin immediately notified police, and Highway Patrolmen John Yarbrough and Lloyd Wyatt and City Motorcycle Officer John Wicks scoured the surrounding country but failed to find a trace of the car. L. W. Sheppard was the investigating officer.

"Yarbrough and Wyatt said the description of the two identified as Barrow and Bonnie Parker tallied perfectly. Officers of all surrounding towns were notified immediately to be on the look out.

"Ervin Gregory, salesman, attended the car and as he looked into the front seat he saw a .45 automatic beside the youthful driver, two automatics in the woman's lap, and a half pint of whiskey. In the back seat he saw a man he identified as Barrow from pictures in the filling station. Barrow was reclining on the back seat with a small portion of a machine gun showing from under his shirt.

BIBLE PRINTED IN 1657 GIVEN LOCAL MAN BY FATHER IN 1890

W. T. Caruth, of Gatesville, is the proud possessor of a family Bible, probably the oldest in this section of the country.

The Bible was printed in London in the year 1657. It is written in the old dialect.

The valued book was presented to Mr. Caruth by his father in 1890, a year before the senior Caruth expired. It contains the family record as far back as 1792.

The old Bible is about the size of a modern unabridged Webster's dictionary and its binding is made of wood covered with leather.

SPEAKING IN CONFIDENCE

The following was sent to the News by a sympathetic subscriber, an act of unusual kindness. The article which is reprinted below expresses without any equivocations the sentiment of literally thousands of country newspaper publishers throughout the country. The poem (if that's what it is) is so good the publisher of the Coryell County News feels that it should be passed on to the paper's readers.

Getting out this paper is no picnic.
If we print jokes, people say we are silly;
If we don't, they say we are too serious;
If we clip things from other papers,
We are too lazy to write them ourselves;
If we stick close to the job all the time,
We ought to be out hunting up news;
If we go out and try to hustle,
We ought to be in the office,
If we don't print contributions,
We don't appreciate true genius;
And if we print them, the paper is filled with junk.
If we make a change in the other fellow's write-up,
We are too critical;
If we don't we are asleep.
Now like as not some guy will say
We swiped this from some magazine.
WE DID!

MUST WE STILL RULE OUR SCHOOLMA'AMS?

The big worry of most school boards these days is the question of when and how they are going to be able to pay their teachers.

There is an older worry, though, which has been exercised a good many school boards in the past; and Dr. John Carr Duff of New York University called attention to it the other day by taking time off to denounce "outmoded, Puritanical traditions" that require school teachers to be goody-goodies.

This older worry has to do with the way the schoolma'am shall behave when she is not in the classroom. In many localities, as Dr. Duff points out, teachers "have to live up to a moral standard that would put a strain on a thirty-second degree saint."

Dr. Duff cites a pledge required to all teachers in a certain North Carolina town: "I promise not to fall in love, to become engaged, or secretly married."

In another case applicants for teaching positions had to sign such promises as these:

"I promise to abstain from all dancing, immodest dressing, and any other conduct unbecoming a teacher and a lady."

"I promise not to go out with any young man except in so far as it may be necessary to stimulate Sunday School work."

Attempting to regulate the private lives of school teachers in this way are not exactly uncommon in the United States. There are towns where prim and priggish behavior seems to be valued even more highly than teaching ability.

And it is hardly surprising if educators like Dr. Duff demand that a halt be called.

The request that a school teacher lead a model life arises naturally enough, of course. If parents want to be sure that their children are entrusted only to young women of high moral character, that is easily understood.

The point is that in many cases the school board does not stop there. It goes on and erects standards of conduct which, as Dr. Duff complains, turn the teacher either into decided that a discussion of the war debts with our foreign debtors has been deferred long enough. Despite official denials, unofficial negotiations are taking place with nations which owe war debts to Uncle Sam. President Roosevelt is well within the scope of the representative powers given to the head of the nation by the Constitution. Nevertheless, Presidents before Mr. Roosevelt have lacked the courage to exercise the rights conferred on the Executive by the Constitution.

When the Armistice was signed, the U. S. had made cash advances totaling $7,077,000,000 to her associated Allies in the war. Loans subsequent to the Armistice amounted to $2,521,000,000. These debts represented the purchase of war supplies, relief credits, government flour, and credits extended by the Shipping Board. The grand total of all these advances was $10,388,000,000.

As you all know, interest payments ceased soon after the Armistice and were not resumed until the several war debt funding agreements were signed. The addition of this accrued interest brought the principal funded in the war debt agreements to $11,599,000,000.

Under the funding agreements, the average interest rates to be paid by the debtors was to be determined by their ability to pay, taking into consideration their resources, etc. Great Britain and certain other debtors, including Finland, was to pay 3.3 per cent. That to be paid by France was 1.6 per cent, and that by Italy 0.4 per cent.

Now, Great Britain has repaid $2,025,000,000 interest, as the first payments go toward interest more than toward principal. Great Britain now owes on account of principal $4,565,000,000.

The only logical way, in this writer's mind, to compromise the war debts deadlock is to hold the debtor nations responsible only for the amount originally lent, with interest renounced. Payments made so far would be credited against principal. That arrangement would work out to leave Great Britain owing approximately $2,252,000,000; France $2,918,000,000; Italy $1,547,000,000; and others $785,000,000. This would leave a total of debts a hypocrite or a goody-goody.

Compared with the issues of the day, all this is a minor matter of course. But our school system as a whole will be a lot sounder when we give up some of this unwarranted meddling with the private lives of our schoolma'ams. —Mineral Wells Index receivable by this country of $7,502,000,000, instead of the $10,388,000,000 called for in the settlements.

ON TEXAS FARMS

By W. H. Darrow
Extension Service Editor
A. & M. College

For reducing market hogs and corn acreage, 222 Williamson county farmers will receive about $48,000 this year in Government benefit checks.

Going in strong this year for farm yard beautification, 20 Young county home demonstration clubs have planted 5 yards each according to landscape plans.

Badly needed feed crops are being planted on rented cotton acres in Morris county, with half the plantings devoted to peas or other legumes which will enrich the soil and at the same time give some feed.

The proceeds from 1 1/2 acres of sweet potatoes paid the farming expenses of J. H. Gonzales in Jim Hogg county last year, the county agent says. He harvested 465 bushels which sold for 50 cents per bushel, and had several hundred pounds of culls left for pig feed.

To meet the need of fruit twice a day to give an adequate diet, home demonstration club women in Lamar county put out 1380 fruit trees and 1809 grape vines early this spring.

Ninety per cent of the feeder calves produced in Menard county are dehorned in the same manner as the 4-H club calves that were exhibited in livestock shows this spring. Club boys made an average net return of $71.40 per calf on 27 animals exhibited and sold at San Angelo and Fort Worth. The calves averaged 864 pounds.

To develop a supply of high quality turkeys for dressing and selling on the best markets, the county agent of Cochran county has three turkey demonstrators cooperating with him to show what can be done with farm turkey flocks.

Franklin—Another peach crop is expected this year by Calvin Petty, a Robertson county orchard demonstrator in the Henry Prairie community who now has 500 bearing trees. Developed from a small start several years ago in cooperation with the county agent, Mr. Petty prunes and sprays his trees regularly. "Many failures that are described to unsuitable soil, nematodes and other so-called incurables are really the results of farmer neglect," he says. "Failures due to freezes and other weather conditions can often be avoided by using an assortment of varieties, so that at least a part of the fruit will reach maturity each year," he adds.

Memphis—Three Hall county farmers are reported by James A. Jackson, county agent, to be developing a system of level terraces turned up slightly at each end to catch and hold run-off water from adjoining pastures, fields and roads. The idea is to avoid the danger of damage from flood waters and also to give the fields free irrigations to insure crops in dry years.

Falfurrias—Cull market beets fed to a herd of 40 Jerseys increased butterfat production 8 pounds per day and saved two-thirds of the ensilage ration furnished the cows by Clarence Burdett, Brooks county dairyman. He grew a field of beets for market and after picking it over found that many beets remained. The beet ration is good in every respect, the county agent reports.

Fredericksburg—Preparing wax cloth for distribution to Gillespie county farmers who bud native pecan trees to improved varieties has been a hobby of County Judge Herman Usener of Gillespie county for ten years. Every year he has prepared enough cloth to protect 25,000 buds. As a result of this service in connection with county agent work, every community in the county has improved pecan trees coming on. The total runs into the thousands.

Roby—Five hooked rug demonstrators of Fisher county have developed the art of making hooked rugs in their homes for market purposes and find it to be a very pleasant and profitable home industry, valuable to them and their families, according to the report of Miss Velma Hearld, Fisher county home demonstration agent. These women have organized a hooked rug and met association for the purpose of improving the quality of rugs and to further the marketing of the products. Since organizing the association they have made 61 rugs valued at $488. Thirty-one of these rugs have been sold for $263.50, 18 have been given as wedding and Christmas gifts, 10 rugs have recently been completed for sale, and 4 other rugs are under construction. New markets are being located by the association at local furniture and department stores. Up-to-date rugs have been sold to department stores and to individuals in Abilene, Anson, Roby, Brownwood and Longworth.

Mrs. Robert Scott of Newman has made and sold 16 rugs at a $112 profit which she used to buy a washing machine, to pay a dental bill and to buy part of her daughter's graduating clothes.

Mrs. G. F. Hood of Syvester has sold 14 rugs at $93 profit and used it to buy bed linens, clothing, permanent hair waves for herself and her daughter and to pay for a set of teeth. She also financed a trip to the College of Industrial Arts with rug profits.

Mrs. Sim Chapman of Sylvester says, "I find rug work to be very fascinating. Since I have been studying color harmony and designs for my rugs I find beauty in everything about me. I even have my family interested in looking for designs and they often help me criticize my rugs." Mrs. Chapman has made 10 rugs. She used the profit from 3 of them to pay fare for a trip to visit her daughter and her only grandson. She has bought clothing with others profits from her rugs.

Vernon—By using her imagination, a small amount of lumber, two extra windows, and some paint and wall paper, Mrs. Erta Randel, bedroom demonstrator for Farmers Valley Club, has enlarged a very small, dark, poorly ventilated room into one that radiates comfort and gracious charm, she reported to Miss Doris Leggett, home demonstration

FAN DANCER RIGID FOR 70 MINUTES WHILE CAST IS MADE

Sally Rand, the Fan Dancer, has gone through the strange ordeal of standing absolutely rigid for an hour and 10 minutes while a plaster cast was made of her body, but for a reason none would ever guess.

Brought to Hollywood to bring her famous fan dance to the screen in Paramount's "Bolero," coming on Thursday to the Palace Theatre, she has found a dress-maker she likes and she is having the statue of herself made so she need never appear in person for a fitting. She needs only to select materials, and to be assured of a perfect fit. Success of the idea, of course, is contingent upon her figure, remaining unchanged, but she says her weight, as result of her dancing, hasn't varied more than five pounds in the last five years.

To make the statue, Paramount sculptors covered her with plaster of paris. When the mixture had set, the mold was stripped from her by halves. The two sections were put together and the mold filled with papier mache to make the final image.

George Raft is the star of the picture in which Miss Rand makes her film debut. Directed by Wesley Ruggles, the picture also features Carole Lombard and Frances Drake.

Flame of the Border

By VINGIE E. ROE

Copyright, Doubleday, Doran & Co., Inc. WNU Service

CHAPTER IV.—Sonya pays a visit to Little Moon and finds her well on her way to recovery. On her return she rides to the top of Lone Mesa. There she again comes upon the strange young man, but she no longer fears him. When he reiterates his sorrow over his misconduct she indicates forgiveness and assures him a man can always change for the better.

CHAPTER V.—Befriending the wife of Hosten Nez, a Navajo, she adds him to her circle of devoted friends. At a neighborhood dance she meets the mysterious stranger of the Mesa and demands that he tell her his name. Finally he confides to her that his right name is Starr Stone, that his mother believes him dead, and that he goes by a different name in this region. He departs with a tall, fierce Mexican, with whom he is mysteriously associated.

True to her plan, the girl was out on the desert next day before the sun was up. The thoughts which had milled in her mind for hours now beset her again. Where was this man who was her man? Where did he follow that monstrous master and why? What was the power which had turned him from her without a backward look? Was it fear, or some strange loyalty beyond the comprehension of a normal mind? What did it portend? And who was the master? Who but that one from across the Border whom the mad Servant called Beelzebub? The terrible prince of bandits who crucified those who double-crossed him, Sonya shivered in the coming day. What had he said to Starr Stone?

"Hombre, you disobey! Let's go." Where had they gone? What would he do to him? And why had he disobeyed, in what? With deep intuition she knew the disobedience had to do with her, with his arm about her in the public place.

It was a small thing. Not a double-cross. Yet the very thought of the sinister words chilled her to the bone.

"Come," she told herself, "snap out of it. There is something dark and terrible here, but Starr Stone"—again she thrilled at the mental sound of his name—"will take care of himself. He'll come back to talk again."

At Blue Water she found what she had expected, and a great deal more. Two Navajos, an old man and a young one, lay in the hogan hot with fever. From the shelter of a skeleton brush canopy over an outdoor cooking fire Yellow Buck, the medicine man whom she had seen at Two Fingers, watched her with flaming eyes in his wrinkled face.

Critically the girl studied the two sick men. With stethoscope on the hot brown breasts she knew her course.

The old man was beyond help, his lungs already stiff with congestion, sunk in coma. The young one not so bad.

"Bad business," she told herself. "Spanish flu—summer flu—or I'm very much mistaken. This one," she said to the women, pointing to the old sire, "is about to go on the Long Journey. I come too late. This one we'll try to hold. Get me hot water in the cooking baskets and cold water from the hole. Also a warm stone wrapped in cloth."

In two hours the ancient one was gone on that long journey and she helped the women carry him out and lay him decently under some blankets in the canopy's shade.

All day she worked in almost utter silence. The sick man could still speak, and once he asked after Two Fingers' wife, and again directed the women to cook and feed the Blue South Woman.

Here it was again, her sweet and mysterious name among them.

The day wore on, and night came cool and sweet, and still she stayed by the bed on the sand floor, making her mustard compresses for the laboring chest, using hot water and cold alternately, giving her drops to reduce the ghastly fever, and at two of the night by the watch on her wrist the sick man sighed and went to sleep, his temperature down to a hundred.

"Glory!" said Sonya to herself. "It's a great life if you don't weaken!"

She slept a bit herself, and dawn found things better in the hogan.

Noon found them better still, and late in the afternoon she went away, leaving strict instructions to her patient to stay in bed until she came again. If he got up he would die, she told them all flatly, and that was that.

At home she told Lila and Serge of what she'd found and disinfected herself from head to heel before stretching her tired body for sleep.

"I told you there'd be work for you," Serge told her soberly. "I heard of another case today."

"My heaven!" said the girl, sitting up suddenly on her bed in the room beyond. "Where? Is it going to be epidemic?"

"Up in Bad Canyon."

"That's a long ride. I'll need the car for it. Well, heaven help them, I've got to sleep now, or I'll be no good later."

With the visit to Bad Canyon next morning Sonya Savarin knew she faced the coming of ordeal. Not one but three cases met her there, and she heard of five more in a nameless wash beyond.

The days that followed began to take on the semblance of a nightmare. The sickness which had descended on the Reservation grew and spread like some noxious growth. The girl traveled night and day, bumping on long drives in the ancient car, threading the inaccessible canyons on Darkness, stooping in the dark hogans to alleviate suffering, covering dead faces, trying to reason the living out of their superstitious custom of abandoning their dwellings where death had entered.

Sonya sighed and her heart ached more than usual.

It ached all the time, these days, anyway. She tried to think it was for all the fear and suffering she encountered among her lowly people, but she knew better. The deepest ache of all, the deepest fear, lying far down under all the rest, had to do with the memory of a man's haggard face above her head, the clasp of an arm that shook, and a harsh voice saying, "Hombre, you disobey! Let's go."

Weeks had passed since the dance at the Neidlingers' ranch, and she had had no breath of news about Starr Stone and the sinister figure which he had followed from the floor. The Servant of the Lord, whom she had come to draw toward as one who could tell her things, seemed to have vanished from the country.

She had forgotten Rod entirely. She had even forgotten the menace of his threat to let no people—no land—no man take her from him, ever in this world. Had she stopped to remember, she would have written him dutifully, as a shield between herself and his presence. But she did not remember, and in New York Rodney Blake was sending her a wire that very day. Serge, going into the little town for supplies, brought it out the next afternoon.

"What's wrong?" It read. "Write or shall take plane out by Friday, Rod."

Sonya herself drove in late that evening and sent her answer. "Nothing but epidemic," she wired. "Forgive me, Sonya."

And as she left the straggly small dot of civilization under the thin sickle of a new moon she came upon a tiny cavalcade plodding in the desert's dust. Three burros, their patient little feet shuffling in the white sand, bore two packs and a rider, the latter a thin old man in rusty black whose silvery hair shone in the dusk with beauty.

Her heart pounding, Sonya drew up beside him.

"Good evening, sir," she said. "How is all with you?"

"Good evening, daughter," he replied. "It is well. And you?"

"We have much sickness among the Indians," she said gravely, "and much work."

"That's bad. I hope you pray a good deal?"

"Well," said Sonya hesitantly, "yes, sir, I do. I have to—to carry on. One needs strength, you know."

"Just so. Just so. And strength will come to you, never fear. Take that One now, that Blue-eyed One, Three nights ago I saw him by a little stream, and he grasped my arm so hard it hurt. The old, you know, my daughter, are soft in the flesh, without resistance. And he asked of you, the dark-haired doctor woman, and called on God for strength. Just so. 'God,' he said, 'if I was strong enough! Just so. They all come to the knees of God, daughter, sooner or later.'"

Sonya swallowed painfully. Her eyes felt blurred again with the excitement suddenly in her.

"Tell me," she said slowly, "tell me again—where was he?"

The Servant waved an airy old hand, fine of line and yellow as parchment.

"By a stream," he said vaguely, "to the south. Three nights ago. Well, I bid you good night, daughter. We must be getting on."

He bowed politely, and the burros pattered. Sonya stepped on the starter and bounced ahead.

So. He was in the country again. He would be here, somewhere, sometime. Maybe tomorrow. Maybe next day. The winds that blew softly up from the south fanned her face with a perfumed breath; the little moon was fair as a maiden's brow; there were mystery and ecstasy in every shadow of the sage.

CHAPTER VII

Soul's Covenant.

BUT the morrow came and brought its flying trips to this hogan and that, and nothing happened but death and sorrow, and the sun went down and rose again on Sonya and her feverish work.

It was, at the end of another week, when the tide of life in her seemed at low ebb with all the monstrous labor and the strain of human suffering about, that she came face to face with Starr Stone once again. She had just ridden down the sounding aisle of Tall canyon to come out on the dusky levels, when she saw him. Un d'Oro stood like a statue against the great wall's lip, a dim and shining shape of gold, and the man in his saddle held his hat in his hand and looked at her steadily.

SOFTBALL SYMPTOMS

By TEDDY

The Firemen have made a habit of winning, defeating a strong much improved Methodist crew 8 to 5 Thursday night.

The Baptists won from Ward's gang Thursday night by forfeit. Ward seems to have trouble in getting his men out.

The game between the Methodist and the State Friday night was filled with many exciting double plays. The Methodists had no trouble in licking the State 14 to 6, and upsetting the dope as well. These churchmen have shown more improvement than any of the eight league teams.

Arnold bunch had no trouble crushing the Road-Gang Friday night 25 to 4. The Highwaymen took the worst defeat of the season when Sasse pitched his poorest game.

All of the pitchers in the league seem to be improving. It is this writers opinion that this is due to the support they are getting from their fielders. Summers gets plenty of support, while Ricketts has always been well protected, as well as Ray.

At press time the authorities had not reached a decision on the game that Ward's bunch defeated the State with eight men.

The Fire Boys were doped to defeat the Methodists. They did, but had some trouble.

Ward's bunch was doped to defeat the Baptist by a small margin. Ward forfeited the game because he did not have enough of his sixteen men out, and then got an all-star team that did defeat the Baptist by a small margin.

The State was doped to defeat the Methodist. This was a complete upset. The Methodist had no trouble in giving them a good licking.

Arnold's bunch defeated the Road-Gang with ease, as was doped.

Today—The Fire Fighters are doped to give the State another bad defeat.

Ward's bunch will defeat the Bachelors with ease.

Thursday—The Fire Boys are doped to defeat Arnold's gang. This game should be a thriller. Arnold's team can easily turn the trick.

Ward's crew will have no trouble in defeating the Methodist.

Horace Oldham, employee of the Gas Company, visited his mother at Eastland over the week end.

Mrs. Lockey Mann and Pat Boyd of Waco visited friends here Saturday night. They were accompanied by Miss Josephine Pennington, student in Four-C, who spent the week end with her parents.

METHODIST NOTES

There were fine audiences in evidence at all hours Sunday, the pastor preached two sermons of opposite type. 11 a. m. on "Light" and in the evening, "Concerning Hell".

The sermon at 3 p. m. was to the Plainview Graduates at the German Baptist Church.

H. E. LUCK

The many friends of the Luck family were saddened by the news of the death of Mr. Luck early Saturday morning.

Although they had not lived in this county for the past six years, for twenty-four years prior to that time they lived in Gatesville and at the Juvenile Training School. He was pastor of the Christain Church in Gatesville for many years and was employed as Chaplin in the school for twenty years.

Truly he was an example of the maxim, "Those who knew him best loved him best." His clean christian life and rugged honesty had a lasting influence on all who knew him.

His love of knowledge made him a student during his entire life. Several years ago he made a trip to the Holy Land and ever after he brought forth from the rich store house of his mind the many things he learned while there. He wanted others to see and know his Savior as he knew him. By trodding on the same soil Jesus trod he had a keener insight into his life while here.

Mr. Luck was truly the head of his house and his unselfish devotion to his wife and children was an inspiration to their many friends. Mrs. Luck worked side by side with him, helping him in work and cheering him along by her sunny disposition and optimistic view of life.

Mr. Luck won the respect of people by his determination in any given task, in spite of critic-

BIG SHIPMENT of TERRAPLANES and HUDSONS

When the steamship "Nitonian" pulled out of New York harbor the other day it carried with it a load of 215 completely assembled Terraplanes and Hudsons bound for London. These cars were complete in every particular with the exception of tires and bumpers. Within a few moments after they are unloaded in the Thames River they will be ready to travel over the streets of London under their own power. This is only one shipment out of the constant stream of these cars going to almost every important port in the world. During the period from January 1 to April 15, 1934, there has been an increase of 260 per cent in the export business of the Hudson Motor Car Co., as compared with the same period for 1933.

ism never gave up trying to help others. He never missed an opportunity to do a favor or help any one in need. He took no part in political wrangles. He believed in the scripture "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's." His daily duties left him no time for anything except the very best things in life. His motto was, "Let me live in a house by the side of the road and be a friend to man". Judging him by the many years we knew him he come as near living up to that motto as is humanly possible for anyone to do.

We know nothing about his last illness or the last few years of his life, but we do know that wherever he has lived and whatever he was doing, he was doing his best to live as the Master wanted him to live, and the wonderful influence of his life will live on and on. "That he truly lived in a house by the side of the road, and was a friend to man."
