Funeral Services for Slain State Boy Held At Bee House Cemetary

Hobert Huff, age 16, died Thursday afternoon in the infirmary at the State Juvenile Training School as the result of having been struck over the head by another inmate of that institution. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oat Huff of Gorman.

Hobert was born near Hamilton and for most of the years of his life lived an upright life. He was converted in early youth and united with the Missionary Baptist Church. He had been an inmate of the institution for only one month at the time of his murder and had given the authorities and his parents every reason to believe that he had made new resolves for his life. He had been at the institution only a few days when he was made a trusty.

Oat Huff, father of the boy, was born and reared in Coryell county.

Funeral services were held at the Bee House cemetery at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon with Rev. V. F. Lemons and Rev. Ben Reynolds officiating.

Morton Scott returned to Gatesville Saturday from Dallas where he went to market.

During Mr. Scott's visit in Dallas he had a part in the embalming of Clyde Barrow's body. Mr. Scott stated there were nine bullets and sixteen slugs in Barrows back besides more than fifty holes over his body which was riddled. The back of his head was shot away.

Although Mr. Scott had no part in the embalming of Bonnie's body, "she was shot up worse than he," stated Mr. Scott.

Home Demonstration Agent Appointed; to Assume Duties June 1

A letter from Gertrude L. Blodgett, district home-demonstration agent at College Station, addressed to County Judge Rob't. W. Brown, and bearing the date of May 22, brings information which should be considered very valuable especially to the women of Coryell county.

According to the letter, Miss Gladys Martin will arrive in Gatesville on the morning of June 1, to assume the duties of home-demonstration agent of Coryell county. Miss Martin will work in connection with the economic clubs of this section, of which there are between twenty-five and thirty.

The invocation was said by Rev. Marcus M. Chunn. Rev. J. W. Dunn delivered the benediction.

The High School Orchestra, directed by D. W. Diserens, played the processional while the members of the class marched down the aisles to the five rows of pews which had been reserved for them. The class was ushered to their seats by two young men members of the Junior Class.

Shortly before the service began parents and relatives of the seniors began to take seats near the graduates' pews in a section which had been reserved for them. They were designated by ribbons of blue and white, class colors, which they wore.

The Seniors wore for the first time in the current history of the school caps and gowns which added a dignified air highly becoming to the occasion.

GATESVILLE WINS GAME FROM WACO CHURCH TEAM

A crowd of enthusiastic spectators was on hand Saturday evening to watch a team of picked All-Stars turn back the Herring Avenue Methodist softballers of Waco 13-2, under the flood-lights at the local fair-grounds.

For the first few innings the game appeared to be a nip-and-tuck situation with both teams turning in splendid demonstrations of softball technique.

The visitors displayed almost perfect fielding in the early part of the contest, but weakened toward the end.

Batteries: Gatesville, Blanton and Culbertson; Waco, Smith and Grevelle.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Rogers, who reside on the Cow-House Creek in the Arnett community, have won a distinction that probably has never been accorded any other couple in Coryell County, so far as records reveal.

The Rogers are the proud parents of triplets—three young "huskies"—and they are all boys.

The first of the trio was born on Thursday, May 24, and the other two brothers arrived Saturday morning, May 26.

Arrival of the canning equipment is expected in the immediate future.

CROWD GATHERS TO GET NEWS ON DEATH OF BANDIT PAIR

When the report first reached Gatesville by radio about 10:30 Wednesday morning of the death of Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker the news spread like wild fire; a later radio flash came about noon but still no particulars of the death of the two desperados. By evening local residents were almost in a frenzy of excitement and curiosity.

About five-thirty a crowd began to gather at the City Drug awaiting the arrival by bus of the evening papers from Waco. By the time the newspapers came, around 6:15 o'clock, a much larger crowd had gathered who almost stormed the local drug store trying to get their hands on the latest news.

With papers in hand, the throng quickly dispersed.

THE TEXAS CENTENNIAL

It has been said that the two most important historic events in the history of the United States are the signing of the Declaration of Independence, which is celebrated on July 4, and the building of the Texas Republic which won its independence March 2, 1836.

That statement might have been made by a Texan, but even at that it must be recognized as a true statement by the loyal sons of other states.

A centennial is that date or period which punctuated the biography of an institution or a commonwealth. Texas has laid the foundation for a Centennial celebration in 1936 as a panorama of its remarkable history for the past 100 years.

The first century of the independence of this great state will soon draw to a close. The 1936 celebration should be one in which the patriotic and impulses of every citizen of this state will be stirred. All loyal sons and daughters of Texas should feel a certain sense of obligation and duty to make the Texas birthday anniversary one that will reflect great credit upon the state and demand the respect and praise of not only the remaining forty-seven states of the Union but the entire world.

It is an unmistakable fact that the people of this state are beginning to see through a gradually lifting mist of uninformed ideas the importance of a great event just "beyond". The people of Texas are also beginning to realize the infinite future of their own state.

It will become the privilege of Texans in 1936 to pay respects and homage to such great men as Houston, Austin and many others. It will also be time to commemorate such events as the adoption of Texas Independence, the sacrifice at the Alamo, the massacre at Goliad, the battle of San Jacinto and the inauguration of the first president of the Republic.

Texans should hold the history of this state in utmost reverence and at the same time herald the future era of progress prosperity and achievement which is in store for the "greatest state in the Union".

SOFTBALL SYMPTOMS

By TEDDY

Arnold's bunch defeated a poor looking crew of Firemen Thursday night 5 to 2. The hurlers were evenly matched, but the Firemen's fielding proved to be lower than par.

Ward's gang had more trouble defeating the much improved Methodist bunch than the score indicates. Up until the fifth inning the score was 4 and 3 in favor of Ward's crew. In the sixth inning Ward's gang shot a rally and tallied eleven times to defeat the hard-fighting Methodist crew 15 to 3.

The Baptist had no trouble in licking the State 17 to 0 Friday night. The churchmen played their best game of the season, fielding the pellet with ease, and getting many hits off of Hicks.

ODD THINGS AND NEW—By Lane Bode

The hard hitting Methodist bunch gave the Road-Gang plenty of trouble Friday, but fell before the Highwaymen to be defeated 6 to 2. Joe Powell, Methodist hurler, pitched a good game, and may give any team trouble.

The Firemen were doped to defeat Arnold's gang, but had the trick turned on them to be defeated 5 to 2. This game proved to be a thriller in every way.

Ward's bunch was doped to defeat the Methodist with little trouble. Ward's crew had plenty of trouble in defeating the Methodist 15 to 3. Diserens weakened in the sixth inning, when Ward's gang rallied to win the game.

The Baptists were doped to defeat the State, and they did without trouble.

The Road-Gang was doped to defeat the Methodist without trouble, but the Methodists surprised the Highwaymen and gave them plenty of trouble.

—MY—DOPE—

Today—The Highway will have no trouble in licking the State.

Ward's bunch will defeat the steady-going Arnold crew by a small margin. Arnold's gang may turn the trick, but will have trouble in defeating Ward's gang.

Thursday—The Highway will defeat the Baptist by a small margin. This game is doped to be a thriller, as well as the one between Arnold's and Ward's teams.

Arnold gang will defeat the Methodists.

FARM INCOME INCREASES UNDER FIRST YEAR OF ADJUSTMENT

Cash income of American agriculture increased more than 39 per cent during the year which ended May 1, 1934. This marked improvement was cited by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration last week in a general summary of the first 12 months' operation under the Agricultural Adjustment Act passed May 12, 1933.

Estimated farm income, exclusive of the value of products used on the farm, was $3,979,000,000 for the year ending May 1, 1933. For the year just ended the cash income was estimated at $5,530,000,000. The increased income was more than one and one-half billion dollars. Rentals and benefit payments to farmers who cooperated in adjustment program accounted for more than 12% of this increase.

At the close of the first year under the Adjustment Act, farmers have signed more than 2,860,000 contracts to restrict acreage. In addition about 800,000 farmers are benefiting from marketing agreements put into effect during the year.

Definite progress has been made toward "parity" for farm prices, which is the object of the Adjustment Act. A year ago the ration of prices the farmer received to the price he paid was 52. It now has advanced to 62.

ON TEXAS FARMS

By W. H. Darrow
Extension Service Editor
A. & M. College

Fort Bend county sheep raisers have organized to grade, classify and pool their wool for market this season. The county agent says 18 men have pledged more than 15,000 pounds to the pool.

Texas dairyman will be glad to know that the Lassiter tradition in Jersey breeding is to be carried on by the son of the late Ed Lassiter, Garland Lassiter, who recently exhibited his herd of 56 heifers in Falfurrias. These heifers represent the pick of the calves retained when the famous Lassiter herd was disbanded two years ago.

Relief is on the way to 219 farmers in Hartley county in the form of $64,000 worth of corn-hog benefit payments during the year.

Cooperators in 8 girls' 4-H clubs in Harris county report having levelled 45 farm lawns and having set out 988 yard shrubs in their home beautification work this spring.

At least 70% of Burnet county farmers repaired their terraces last winter, and many of them are building pasture terraces. The county agent believes pasture contouring and terracing are going to show a big increase there this year.

Bit by bit the evidence mounts that alfalfa thrives in Texas. Some day folks will wonder why they ever doubted this great crop. Latest item: a demonstration field on the Everett Plantation in Colorado county recently cut one ton of beautiful alfalfa hay to the acre, at the first cutting, second year.

Ogie Hiett has moved his pasture. Failure to do so last year cost him the East Texas Permanent Pasture Contest. Now that the briars are cut and the water grass checked the good grasses and clovers have spread until he finds it necessary to get more cattle to keep the pasture in condition. Mr. Hiett has a large bottom pasture in Cregg county.

"I put in over 600 feet of concrete sub-irrigation tile and I wouldn't take $50 for it," declares S. P. Crawford of New Port Community in Archert county. He is only one of many "satisfied customers" in that county, the home demonstration agent reporting that 5650 feet of this tile have been laid this season, three times as much as in all of 1933.

Evidence that farmers are in better financial condition than a year ago is found in the reduced number of government seed loans. In Madison county, for instance, 75 men applied for loans this year compared to 339 in 1933.

Seymour—Nearly two miles of concrete sub-irrigation tile have been made and laid in Baylor county gardens by 73 people this year, reports Miss Marie Strange, home demonstration agent. This is several times the amount laid last year when the total for the entire year was only 1700 feet. So far this season 10,008 feet of tile have been put into gardens, not counting 262 feet of pipe and 50 feet of tin-can pipe. Of the 73 people sub-irrigating their gardens, 53 live on farms and 20 in town.

The great increase in sub-irrigation of gardens in West Texas is due to the cheap home-made method of constructing durable concrete tile at a cost of about one cent per foot, Miss Strange says. Gardens sub-irrigated in this way have yielded so bountifully, withstood drouth so well, and lasted so much longer that many are anxious to copy the system, she adds.

Pure line seed furnished farmers in Young county by a Graham service club last year produced 28% more feed than common seed, the county agent reports. Every farmer who received this superior seed free pledged himself to supply two farmers' this year with amounts equal to what he was given last year.

Wild life is in danger in Fort Bend county where Mrs. D. G. Brumbelow of Brown Home Demonstration Club announces her intention to can everything she can get her hands on, including squirrel, frogs legs, kerless weed, labs' quarter, fish, wild duck, and other native products in addition to regular garden products and farm meat.

Waxahchie — Church means more to an Ellis county farm wife since she went in for canning the home food supply by the 4-H pantry plan. "I can come home from church, fix dinner, and have it over with in something like an hour's time, while it used to take me until three o'clock," declares Mrs. J. M. Perryman demonstrator in the Milford, Home Demonstration Club. "A mother of seven children does not have time on Sunday morning to prepare the dinner and get the family ready for church-going without some canned products on hand," she says.

Livingston—Anxious that every family in their community get the benefit of home demonstration work, the members of the Southeast Livingston club in Polk county have helped 21 neighbor women who are not on the club roll to make a better living at home or to improve their homes. Demonstration methods have been passed along to help these neighbors make garden plans, secure seed, make garden budgets, make landscaped yard plans, start cutting beds, and make the family clothing. The home demonstration agent is Miss Ruth Causey who reports that this club helped 16 non-members can 2580 containers of food last year.

Conroe—Montgomery county dairymen are looking forward to better times since a recent Conroe ordinance limited to Montgomery county the area in which the city health officer may inspect dairies. The ordinance also specifies that no milk or milk products may be sold within the city limits until inspected by the city health officer, and a permit issued. This means, according to W. I. Glass, county agent, that the dairymen who own and operate grade "A" dairies in the county will have the business and be able to improve their herds and their profits. The dairy business has

San Saba—Because he says he doesn't want to have to work so much land, C. B. Wood, a San Saba county farmer living in the Richland Springs sandy section, is planting his contracted cotton acres to peas. He already has one of the best sandy farms in the county according to N. E. Scudder, county agent. During the time Mr. Wood has owned the farm its fertility has increased at least 50% by terracing, growing soiling crops and spreading manure from dairy cows. He is trying out Chinese red and brabham cowpeas this year as soil builders.

Canton—Six orchard demonstrations have upset the notion Van Zandt county farmers have had that it doesn't pay to raise fruit. Running for four to six years as demonstrations under supervision of W. D. Seals, county agent, these six orchards are said to be the only ones in the county that are paying their owners. The demonstration orchards are kept pruned and sprayed and properly cultivated. There are 475 trees in the demonstrations.

COLD-PAN MOVIE ACTOR REFUSES TO SMILE AT CAMERA

Ned Sparks, sad-faced screen comic has announced that no increase in salary is large enough, nor can any producer beg long enough to cause him to smile—on the screen.

Sparks, who has a leading role in "Private Scandal," the Paramount film coming on Thursday to the Palace Theatre, becomes gloomier and gloomier, the happier and more successful he is.

"I would be silly to smile after establishing myself as an unique character," Sparks told ZaSu Pitts, Mary Brian and Phillips Holmes, with whom he shares acting honors in "Private Scandal."

It is exactly twenty years since Sparks discovered the "cold pan" and introduced it to the public in a Broadway play, "Little Miss Brown."

"I was a juvenile on the stage," Sparks related. "And juveniles are ten cents a dozen, and their popularity lasts about as long as a bunch of spinach."

"I didn't want to become extinct as quickly as spinach so I gave thought to the creation of a new type of character. I hit upon what we now call 'cold-pan comedy' and in the first show, my idea was a hit. I have never smiled professionally since."

"Cold-pan" comedy is really a subtle form of character acting, it is asserted by Ralph Murphy, Sparks' present director.

Acts with His Eyes

The face is immobile, with only the eyes giving expression. True the "cold-pan" artist hasn't the use of the ordinary facial expressions employed by most actors, Murphy declares. He must act entirely with his eyes.

"Thus a smile in Sparks' eyes is funnier to an audience than facial contortions from the ordinary actor," Murphy said.

In "Private Scandal," Sparks plays the role of a detective who is so dumb he thinks a clue is some kind of paste. But it's his stumbling, awkward antics that solves the mysterious, and yet utterly hilarious, murder case.

CHAPTER V.—Befriending the wife of Hosteen Nez, a Navajo, she adds him to her circle of devoted friends. At a neighborhood dance she meets the mysterious stranger of the Mesa and demands that he tell her his name. Finally he confides to her that his right name is Starr Stone, that his mother believes him dead, and that he goes by a different name in this region. He departs with a tall, fierce Mexican, with whom he is mysteriously associated.

CHAPTER VI.—Sonya, with a feeling of shame, realizes she is falling in love with a man whom she can only class as a renegade and outlaw, knowing that under the circumstances she can never marry Blake. From an odd character of the desert, known as the "Servant of the Lord," Sonya learns Stone is alive and safe.

CHAPTER VII.—An influenza epidemic among the Indians keeps Sonya busy for many days. Stone greatly helps her in her care for the stricken Navajos. Sonya and Stone declare their love for each other, all doubt in the mind of the girl being ended.

CHAPTER VIII

Clouds of Portent.

IN THE hard days that followed, Sonya knew a fire of ecstasy among the dark shadows of disaster. Wherever suffering and death entered the lowly hogans, there the steady hands of Starr Stone were a bulwark and a help. They were gentle as a woman's with a hungry child, holding a cup to the parched lips, bathing hot dark faces with a little rag, and once he brushed and braided the black hair of a dead mahala before they buried her.

And that day Sonya wept against his shoulder for sheer misery at the tragic fate which had made of this man an outcast and a pariah.

So the hectic days passed, with little count of them and these two working together at their humble tasks. Once the girl told him, "You're no lost soul as you'd have me think. You're of that brotherhood of which Christ spoke when he said, 'If ye do it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye do it unto me.' Servers of the world." And he had made no answer.

They kissed each other now at parting, softly, as if the thing they held between them was so precious that a careless touch might destroy it utterly. To the man there was tragedy and stark sorrow in every touch of Sonya's lips, her hands, the tender brushing of her cheeks against him. He was blessed beyond all dreams, humbled beyond all imagining.

And he knew how fleeting this paradise must be, how soon life and its mandates must take him away from her forever. It was this knowledge which made the enchanted days so short, so unreal.

And by the end of that week the strain lessened. Everywhere her people were getting up from their hogan floors, thin brown shapes with big eyes in their dark faces, and no more were lying down. The epidemic was dying out. Those that were left began to be busy making new hogans before the summer should be gone, for they would not live in any house where death had been. They feared the tchindis, or ghosts of the dead, and malevolent spirits. But they looked at Sonya and Starr Stone with long looks, unfathomable looks, and sometimes a woman touched the girl's hand tentatively, or a man said some clipped, guttural word which the latter could not understand and Sonya interpreted.

"Hosteen Little Man says we are the Healing Winds," Or, "Our medicine is better medicine than Yellow Buck's."

And now Life made ready to take its reckoning. She had lived in these rushing weeks, lived very fast, very full, known the dark of sorrow, of pity, and the light of great joy, the pleasure of good work well done. She had bloomed in the glow of such love as she had never dreamed of, what time she could spare to it, and felt as though she were richer, more vital, in all the reaches of her nature. Now, with the cessation of the sickness, she turned her eyes toward the future and what it held.

"Now," she told Starr Stone, "we'll begin to think of us."

But Starr Stone shook his head. "I," he said, "must think of you. My reprieve is over—was over some days ago. I'll be going back—to where I belong."

But Sonya smiled. It did not occur to her that anything could be so dark and strong that she and her strength could not conquer it.

"We'll not talk of that just now," she said, "let's ride to the top of Lone Mesa. We owe it something—the mesa."

"I owe it something," he said passionately—"owe it my everlasting apologies, my undying reverence. It was there I saw creation as it was meant to be—in your white face on the cliff."

So they swung south from their trail that day and climbed the ancient path in the stark precipice.

There was the long stretch of the western edge where Darkness had fled full speed, a horse and rider at his flank. Where the wild face of a drunken man had blazed at the woman on his back with every evil passion of the soul. There was the spot where the man had pulled the slim girl from her saddle, where she had fought like a fury in his arms, where, at the last she had pulled free and flung herself, in one wild leap, over the mesa's brink. As they reined up at the great rock's edge they both sat silent, each with unspoken thoughts plain to be read.

"Sonya," said the man at last in a strangled voice, "I have no words—there is nothing I can ever say—nothing I can ever do—to wipe that memory away."

But Sonya turned and laid her hand on his, and there was a soft smile in her eyes.

"There is no need," she said. "No need! The greatest need I'll ever know! And it can't be filled! I'll have to leave you soon, forever, with that on my conscience, on my heart!"

"Leave me? No, you will not. Not ever, Starr Stone. You are my man—from the beginning."

"The soul in my body—if I have one—will stay with you while life lasts. I hope you know that. But the body itself—is another matter. I think we'll be saying good-by up here. Here where we met—in disaster—and I want you to know, Sonya, that if there is such a thing as redemption of a man's inner self, I have been redeemed by knowing you. All my instincts, all my desires, all my outlook on life itself have changed. The Border and all it has meant to me in my wildness, my devil-may-care, has lost its charm. I'd leave it—all—everything—for a different life, if I could."

"Oh, Starr," she said tremulously, "can't you tell me? Won't you tell me what it is that threatens you—us?"

"Impossible," he said quietly. "My lips are sealed—for your sake more than mine. What I know would be dangerous knowledge for you. What I have done—being with you, coming back to you again—against orders—has been a danger for you. I knew it, but was too weak to go my way, never to see your face again. I could not, in this strange transition which has been taking place in me. But strength has been growing in me of late, like a great tree, standing against the wind. Do you see, Sonya, what you have done for me?" he finished earnestly.

"I know," said Sonya. "I knew from the first, almost, that it would be so. That the good was in you under—under whatever it was that hid it. That some day it would come out, that the evil would fall away, leaving you as you were meant to be."

"You knew? How early? When?"

"The second time I saw you—at Two Fingers' hogan in Chee wash. I think I knew it then, dimly, when your face flushed red on seeing me. The good was struggling with the bad that minute."

"You're right. It was. And has never ceased to struggle since."

"And you're not going to go back!" cried Sonya, passionately. "Not going to throw it all away! I will not let you!"

The man sighed, wet his dry lips. Then he leaned toward her and took her against his breast.

"My darling," he said gently "please kiss me once more."

With a strangled cry Sonya threw her arms around him.

"Why? Why?" she pleaded. "Why will you not stay here and go forward with me into life? Don't you love me?"

"Love you? My G—d; it's because I love you, adore you, worship you, that I'm taking myself out of your life before it is too late. I don't want to see you—"

"See me what?"

"Nothing. Let's go. Let's go now."

He turned Un d'Oro sharply and headed for the down trail, Darkness following close. Sonya sat rigidly in her saddle, her throat swelled painfully with the dark realization that her dream of love was done for, that this man whom she had come to love so helplessly was riding out of her life. She could not speak.

At the mesa's foot they set out across the levels which were once more darkened into a starlit night dreary silence. And before they had said another word, before they could say that last farewell which comforts the heart bereaved, fate was upon them.

Out of the shadows of a clump of juniper four men suddenly rode across their way. And at their head rode that huge figure of a man which had loomed on the dance floor that enchanted night and called Starr Stone as a master calls his dog.

COMMENT

JOHN CITIZEN has become the most forgotten man in Europe as the dictators strengthened their iron rule. In the years immediately following the Armistice, thrones were toppling, republics were being formed, and parliamentary institutions were increasing in scope and power. It seemed then that maybe the world actually had been made safe for democracy. But now democracy wavers. Parliamentary government is held in contempt, especially in France: In countries which are monarchies, kings are actually doing some "kinging" for the first time since the war. Other nations have dictators. Everywhere there is a strong demand for "strong government." And to confirm this you need only to take a bird's eye view of the map.

For sixteen years the vast and enormously populated country of Russia has been governed by the 500,000-odd members of the Bolshevik-Communist party. The party in turn has been ruled by the inner ring, and the ring itself has been subject to the orders and whims of Joseph Stalin. For eleven years Italy has been ruled by the Grand Council of the Fascist Party, the boss of which is Benito Mussolini.

Chancellor Adolph Hitler and his Nazi (National Socialist) party has ruled for fifteen months in Germany.

Until last January 26 Poland looked like a republic, but the real ruler was, of course, Josef Pilsudski, who contented himself with the modest title of Minister of War.

The powerful Balkan state of Yugoslavia is under the iron rule of King Alexander, who became dictator in 1929, and in 1931 handed the country a new constitution written by himself.

In Austria, Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss has announced abolition of the old Austrian republican constitution and now a new one has been put into effect that makes Austria a "federal state" with a president holding dictatorial power.

Portugal is a corporate state ruled by two men, President Carmona and Premier Salazar.

Recently the Bulgarian army overthrew the constitution, jailed the cabinet members, and made 40 year old king Boris dictator. Spain, Rumania, Hungary, and Esthonia waver between Fascism and democracy.

England, the United States, and France are the only major nations in which democracy retains its paramount position. In France the people are dissatisfied with Parliament and have strong Fascist leanings. Fascism has even penetrated the democratic stronghold of England where a member of the nobility, Sir Oswald Mosley, leads a strong Fascist movement. 10,000 Londoners recently attended a Fascist mass-meeting. Democracy retains its hold upon American institutions with a firm grip, despite accusations from irate Republicans that Roosevelt is establishing a dictatorship. To the contrary, the President has been leaning toward the Right for several months.

CHARLES HAMMOND BEALL PIONEER CITIZEN PASSES AWAY

Charles Hammond Beall, one of Coryell county's earliest pioneer citizens and ranchmen, quietly passed away at the family home on the Beall ranch seven miles west of Gatesville on Wednesday May 16, 1934. Born in Jefferson county, Ohio. Mr. Beall came to Texas in early manhood in 1850 and settled down on the ranch where he remained throughout his long life and from which he passed away. With his departure is removed one of the great historic landmarks of central Coryell county, where he was known not only as a successful ranchman but as a man who always knew how to leave other people's affairs alone and attend to his own.

Surviving his removal are: His widow, Mrs. Kate Kistler Beall; two sons, George and John; three daughters, Mrs. Lucille Weigand, Mrs. Alma Jane Wolf, and Mrs. George Weigand, all of Coryell county. Two grand children, Grace Weigand and Maston Wolf. One brother, George M. Beall, and one sister, Mrs. Miles J. Saunders.

Mr. Beall held membership in the Arnett Baptist Church of which he became a member by baptism in 1914. His death came as the result of illness that developed last summer from which he quietly and patiently suffered during the passing months. He lived beyond man's allotment of time, reaching the high age of 84 years, two months and five days. Entombment of the body was made in Hemelein cemetery. The funeral services were conducted in the family home by Rev. A. W. Fechner, a life long acquaintance and friend of the Beall family. Funeral arrangements were in charge of Morton Scott Undertakers.

President's Son Drives Ford V-8

Like many another man who loves the open air, James Roosevelt, Boston business man and son of the President, favors motor cars of the sport type. Mr. Roosevelt is pictured above with his Ford V-8 de luxe phaeton. The top is down and the car is ready for a run through the New England countryside, now beautiful in the first warm days of spring. Mr. Roosevelt not only drives his Ford V-8 de luxe phaeton, but also owns a Ford V-8 cabriolet, which can be closed in when the weather is inclement.

CARPET WAS MAGIC FOR TOT

BIG LAUREL, Va., May 27.—When 2-year-old John Faulkner gets big enough to read, his reaction to the magic carpet tale of the Arabian Nights probably will be: "Shucks, that's nothing."

John apparently, knows his carpets.

He tumbled out of the second-story window of his home here and landed unhurt in the middle of a carpet his father and a hired hand were carrying from the house.

WORKS WITH BROKEN LEG

CHICAGO, May 27.—An automobile hit John Conroy, 48, while he was en route to work at the World's fair. Anxious to be on time the opening day he got up, hobbled on, worked an hour, collapsed. A doctor found that Conroy's leg was broken.
