'round the square

By
The Snooper

E. W. Jones has made good his promises in bringing a good looking new car into the village for the locals to look over. Great curiosity was promoted by a crowd of people gathering to watch Herschel Bradford paint a sign on a drug store window. R. W. Stephens beating it across the square trying to get where he was going before the sun got him. Bertie Walkup might utilize the sun, incidentally, by moving her pop-corn machine out on the street during the day and save the electricity. Jack Boyd and Arch Boyd, son and father, a most congenial pair; I can imagine the latter being very proud of his graduate son.

Local golfers began their qualifying rounds last Monday week. Each player must turn in his 18-hole score by Saturday night to be eligible for competition Sunday. Fifteen men will be selected from the low cards to go to Clifton.

WACO HAS DAILY MAIL SERVICE BY AIR ONCE MORE

There are many times when the residents of Coryell county have occasion to use the air-mail as a means of hurried communication with their friends and relatives.

This section of the state, with Waco as air terminal, has been without airmail service since the federal government took over the mail planes for a short time some several weeks ago.

Beginning today, mail planes will leave Waco for points south at 9:15 a. m. and for points north at 7:05 p. m. daily, according to a statement from C. V. McMahan, Waco Postmaster.

Letters posted in the Gatesville post-office for air-mail delivery by 5:30 p. m. will make the early morning plane at Waco going south.

The postage rate for airmail is eight cents for the first ounce and 13 cents for each additional ounce.

Marketed Cream Must Be Graded Is Decree Of Gov't Authorities

Beginning today (June 1) the federal Pure Food and Drug Commission aided by the Texas Commission of Agriculture will put into effect a system of grading for bulk cream sold to local buyers.

Grades one, two and three will be put on cream sold to the local cream station agents. Number 1 grade will have a two-cent premium over grade No. 2 while cream being classified as Grade No. 3 will not be acceptable to the market.

A school was held in Gatesville last week to familiarize the local buyers with the proper methods of grading the bulk cream.

It is the contention of the state department of Agriculture that the grade system of buying will raise the standard of Texas cream and cream products sold in the East. It will give protection to the producer as well as to the consumer by giving extra compensation to producers of the best grade of cream and keeping the poorest grade off the market and boosting cream prices for the producer.

Miss Hazel Mayberry was accorded valedictorian class honors. Miss Minnie Faye Williams was the class salutatorian.

Miss Gladys Martin, newly selected county home demonstration agent for Coryell county, will arrive in Gatesville Friday to begin her work in that capacity.

Miss Martin has had extensive experience in this work in Tom Green, Culberson and Presidio counties.

According to those interested it is very necessary that each club have a representative present.

Local Clubs Too Much For Visiting Players In Doubleheader Bill

A double-header exhibition of softball drew a large crowd of interested spectators Wednesday when a team of local women played the women of the Carden Community. On the same evening the local Firemen's club played a team of Hamilton business men.

Both of the contests were won by the respective Gatesville teams.

In the first game, the women playing, the local fems won by a narrow margin over their visiting rivals, 6 to 4. The women of both teams demonstrated a softball technique that would have been highly becoming to the ordinary male club.

Hamilton recently became interested in softball and although there are only two teams in the neighboring city they can boast of some real ball players. The Gatesville Firemen were too much for the visitors however, and should have won by a larger score than was registered. The final tallies were 9 to 6.

RIFLE CLUB SHOOTING EXTENDED THROUGH MONDAY

Only ten members of the Gatesville Gun Club responded to the call for a rifle match held at the Cox Springs range Wednesday afternoon, due chiefly to the fact that sufficient publicity was not given the affair.

All members of the club who were not present Wednesday will have a chance to shoot Monday afternoon from four to six o'clock. The cards shot Wednesday are in the hands of the referee and will not be disclosed until after the final shooting Monday.

A twenty-two calibre bolt-action Remington is at stake for the best score made in the current match.

CONSIDERATION—NOT A STAND

Thus far this newspaper has not taken an open stand on state politics as concerns the gubernatorial race. Neither is this newspaper doing so at this time.

Any newspaper is justified in remaining silent forever on politics but the chances are the News will not do that. Once this paper is positively convinced on one particular candidate the News will take a stand in behalf of that candidate.

In this very issue of the News publicity is being given to C. C. McDonald, candidate for governor. This does not mean that the News is out in the open sponsoring Mr. McDonald or any other candidate, although it is possible that this paper might do so at a later date.

It is not the policy of the Coryell County News to give free publicity to any and all of the state candidates but where it is felt that publicity is deserving the News will have no hesitancy in devoting space to the candidate.

The gubernatorial race opened around January 1, and since that time C. C. McDonald is the only candidate who has found time to pay his respects to Coryell County in person.

Hon. C. C. McDonald came to Gatesville on the morning of March 14 unheralded and unannounced. Although he spent only a short time in this vicinity and his visit was brief he attempted to see as many prospective voters as possible during this time. He was not invited to Coryell County to take part on any sort of public rally, but came here of his own accord. He made no speeches but went quietly, in his own way, and about his own business, making himself known to the people of this section.

Certainly it is the prime purpose of any voter to consider above all the platform upon which each candidate stands in making his or her selection for the next governor of the state. There are many other features to be considered but the voters of Coryell County might at least give consideration to those seeking high state offices who can find time enough to appear personally in this section during their campaign of solicitation.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS—CAMPAIGNS BEGIN

This session of Congress will soon come to a close, it is believed, and then many of the senators and congressmen will return to their respective states and homes to take up the task of spending a few weeks prior to the primary election campaigning. Notwithstanding the fact Senator Connally has an opponent, he says he will be compelled to remain in Washington to do his part in looking after the business intrusted to him of attending to the affairs of our country; and this is very likely what his people "back home" prefer him to do, since many of his advisers tell him his "business" at home will be well cared for even though he spends all his time in Washington. People of this congressional district are now of the opinion that Congressman Cross will be renominated without opposition; which is as it should be since he is now experienced in congressional affairs and has been doing his job splendidly—Clifton Record

ENCOURAGING MISSIVES

William (Bill) McCraw of Dallas is already getting mail addressed "To The Next Attorney General of Texas."

Scores of such missives have been received at his state campaign headquarters in Austin, Mrs. Effie Wilson-Waldron, in charge of headquarters, has revealed. Most of the letters point out that the attorney general's office is more than likely to be McCraw's address for the next two years—"at least."

The writers of such fan-mail may be right, or they may be wrong.

Rural Works Centers Are Now Available To All Communities

College Station—How Texas farm communities can get financial assistance to build, equip and develop rural work centers for carrying on small farm and home manufactures is outlined in a circular just issued by the Texas A and M College Extension Service. It is known as C-101, is entitled "Rural Work Centers," and is available on application to county farm and home demonstration agents.

Advanced by extension director O. B. Martin in response to a call for sound plans for permanent rural rehabilitation, the rural work center idea has been adopted by the Texas Relief Commission as the mainstay of the Texas program. It is in charge of J. E. Stanford, director of rural rehabilitation, Austin.

The object of the rural work center is to furnish a means for worthy families on relief rolls, one or more of whose members are mechanically skilled, to make themselves at least partially self-supporting from small manufactures which may be exchanged or sold locally. This would supplement the usual agricultural living-at-home enterprises. In addition, the work centers and their equipment will be permanent in the community and available to all families.

To secure assistance in building a rural work center a community must first show that it can supply at least 10 suitable vacant houses to be made habitable for relief roll families by the labor and a limited amount of material for repairing these houses. It can also furnish labor and some material for new construction for the use of relief roll families. The community will have some choice in the families which are to make their homes in the community.

The community must also donate the land for the center, and furnish half the material and equipment for it. A plan for maintenance and use of the work center should be made to show that facilities requested will be ample for local needs and that every family will have fair privileges. It is also desirable to make a list of locally needed commodities. Applications for rural work centers should be made to county relief administrators.

Houston Mural Design Is Painted by Former Coryell County Woman

(The following story will be of much interest to local friends of Miss Virgie Claxton, of Houston. The story was clipped from the Houston Chronicle of Sunday, May 20, and was accompanied by a picture of the mural painting described below.)

Another beautiful mural has been added to the public buildings of Houston with the installation, at Alexander Hamilton Junior High School, of "Houston Skyline from Buffalo Bayou," painted by Virgie Claxton, talented Houston artist, as a part of the public works of art project. It has been placed on the east wall of the library of the school, of which Miss Helen De Chaumes is principal.

Virgie Claxton is well known here, having been an exhibitor at all of the annual Houston artists' shows at the Museum of Fine Arts as well as having exhibited with the Southern States Art League and Texas Fine Arts Association.

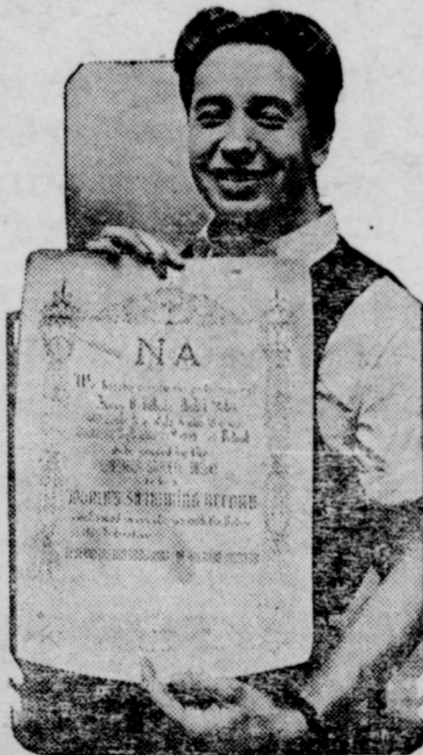

She had had one-man shows at the Galveston Art League in Galveston; the Little Gallery in Cedar Rapids, Iowa; a private gallery in Iowa City, Iowa; and at the Houston Artists Gallery. She is represented in the current show of works by Texas Artists at the Carnegie Public Library and Art Gallery in Fort Worth.

Her study has been with Andre L'Hote in Paris, France, and Emil Bistram at Taos, N. M., and she has traveled abroad.

Her most recent honor is her appointment by Grant Wood of Iowa City, internationally known artist, to assist him in the painting of a mural for one of the public buildings of that town, one of the public works of art project commissions. His only other assistant will be Edna Spurgeon of New York, a graduate of the National Academy of Design.

Grant Wood is an outstanding American painter who, in the last several years, has gained international recognition and honors. He is represented in the permanent collections of all the larger museums of this country, is represented in the invited international exhibit now in progress

CHAPTER VI.—Sonya, with a feeling of shame, realizes she is falling in love with a man whom she can only class as a renegade and outlaw, knowing that under the circumstances she can never marry Blake. From an odd character of the desert, known as the "Servant of the Lord," Sonya learns Stone is alive and safe.

CHAPTER VII.—An influenza epidemic among the Indians keeps Sonya busy for many days. Stone greatly helps her in her care for the stricken Navajos. Sonya and Stone declare their love for each other, all doubt in the mind of the girl being ended.

He sat now and looked at him with black eyes burning.

"Hombre," he said again as he had said before, "three times in as many days have I sent for you, and you did not come. This is the reason."

He nodded toward Sonya.

"Yes!" cried the girl like a shot, though her voice shook. "Yes! I—and a better one. I first, and the caring for those who died, second. I am a doctor, and there has been a great sickness among my people, the Indians. This man has stood with me shoulder to shoulder in a fine thing. Together we have saved many lives. That's why he stayed." There was a note of defiance in the trembling voice.

"Oh, so that ees why, senorita?" the stranger said, changing from the Spanish to broken English, "why he disobeys hees h'orders? For you, eh, an' for thees dirty Navvys? Well, he goes now, an' don't you forget it! An' remember, Senorita Savarin, that if he comes to you, ever again, that will happen to you an' yours which will be a price. A fair price for thees insult to me. In that you keep my best lieutenant from hees work. Adios, senorita. Do not forget."

He raised his sombrero with a gallant gesture and whirled his horse away. And this time Starr Stone, following, looked long in Sonya's white face with eyes in which all the tragedy of life lay stark and awful. Then he was gone, and only the soft sound of loping horses in sand came back to her.

Until the dim shapes were lost in the night the girl sat still, listening, her mouth open, her hands on her rein cold and nerveless.

That which threatened had struck at last.

And presently she drooped forward with her face in Darkness' mane and fell to such weeping as only a heart cleaved to the quick can know.

When she rode into the patio at home an hour later a man came swiftly from the lighted doorway, his hands reaching up for hers, his face glowing with joy.

"Sonya! Dear heart!" he cried, and.

"Rod!" said Sonya before she crumpled and slid limp into his reaching arms.

"She's fainted!" he cried. "Lila—Serge—quick!"

He carried her to the door and in, laying her down on the living room couch, and Lila was at his side in a flash.

"Get me some water," she said.

But Sonya, strong creature that she was, did not need it. Her senses, reeling from grief and fear and the sudden sight of Rodney Blake, who was the last man she wanted to see in her present trouble, righted themselves swiftly. She moved, opened her eyes, sat up a bit unsteadily.

"Why, what a silly thing!" she said tremulously. "And Rod—how in the world—"

"Steady, dear," said Rod. "I just dropped in—by plane and car—from New York—Williams—got a man to bring me over. Us rather. Have a friend with me. But don't talk now.

Me down again."

"Piffle!" said Sonya. "I'm all right. A bit tired, I guess."

"She's been riding day and night for a month," said Lila, looking at Blake. "Epidemic, you know."

"Dam' Indians again," the man thought. "They'll kill her yet."

But Sonya was on her feet, stripping the kerchief from her neck, rolling back her shirt sleeves.

"I'm O. K.," she said. "I'll just go and clean up a bit."

And she walked steadily to her own room.

Inside its shielding door she clasped her hands together, stood a long moment staring into the darkness. The fight of life which she had visioned, of which she had spoken to Starr Stone, was on, and she had lost the first battle—to that black force across the Border.

CHAPTER IX

The Dark Threat Falls.

RODNEY BLAKE had brought a friend with him. A tall, quiet man by the name of Marston. Sonya, herself again to all outward appearances, met him at breakfast. His face arrested her. A keen face, but still as arctic ice, its eyes penetrating everything they met.

She felt uneasy under them, as if they could read the secret of her heart. Rod seemed to know him well.

But she was soon so taken up with her own problem that she had no time to study this stranger who sat and smoked and asked odd questions of Serge: her problem of what and when to tell Rod Blake, how to break her sacred word, to ask him to release her. Rod, who had said that no man, no people, no country should ever take her from him. But Mr. Marston's questions were very strange. Were there any people in the country whom he, Serge, did not know? Any strangers about? Any airplanes flying off the regular lane above the new port at Williams?

Rodney Blake smiled and leaned forward, tapping his cigarette ash in his saucer.

"I may as well tell you folks, that you're entertaining an angel unaware—or rather, to quote the gentry he's always after, a fallen one. Mr. Marston is the government's crack man of the secret service, whose rare talents are enlisted only as a last resort. He is here on a mission of his own. I merely accompanied him as an excuse to be here."

He smiled and looked at Sonya. Marsden fingered his cigarette, looking down gravely.

"For months our department in New York has been puzzled by a certain matter, a serious matter to this country, which has been bafflingly mysterious. By our department I mean the federal narcotics bureau. A steady flow of 'mud,' or pure raw opium, has been coming through, which we could not trace. We have reason to believe it is coming in on the west coast of Mexico—at Mazatlan, to be exact—brought inland and across the Border by fast and private planes, and sent east by train, from somewhere about the middle of the line. I am here—about the middle—to see what I can see. I need not tell you that this knowledge is dangerous for anyone to possess, and that it must be held in the utmost confidence—chiefly because of that one across the Border—El Capitan Diablo, as he is known—who is Mexico's king racketeer. Anyone tampering with El Capitan tampers with death. I should not have told you this if Rod had not spoken as he did. Let me impress again the danger of any mention of this affair to anyone."

Sonya Savarin wet her lips, which had suddenly gone dry, laid down the knife in her trembling hand.

She had her answer at last!

The answer to that night on the dance hall floor—to the little gray ship settling so swiftly on the sand at the canyon's mouth—to Starr Stone's renunciation of love and all it meant.

The answer to Starr Stone himself.

And that answer was—El Capitan

Diablo. El Capitan Diablo who terrorized the north of Mexico, who raided mines, who levied taxes on the poor, and who—crucified his double-crossers!

To know too much of El Capitan Diablo and ever leave his service was to die—and one's friends also who might share that knowledge. One's friend's friends, maybe, his relatives. With dilated eyes, the girl looked round the table, at Serge, at Lila, at little Babs. Lila's face was pale, but Serge was talking eagerly.

"By George!" he was saying, his fist on the table, "there have been strangers here—and I'd stake my last dollar. Sonya, you remember that chap you danced with at the Neidlingers' and the funny thing that happened?"

Sonya did not speak, and Serge went on excitedly:

"There was a dance at a neighboring ranch, and my sister was dancing with a stranger when the biggest Mexican I ever saw appeared and dropped a hand on the stranger's shoulder. The man followed him out. I'd forgotten the incident."

"What sort of looking Mexican?" "Don't know, only that he was monstrously tall and broad."

Marston sat in silence for a little time.

"El Capitan stands six feet three in his boots," he said.

"Then who was the man he took away?"

"If I should make a guess, which I never do," said the other, "I'd say it was Quince—Kennthal—Number Fifteen—the wildest white man in Mexico, and El Diablo's ablest lieutenant. I've heard of him. But his master owns him body and soul. They say on the Border that twice El Capitan's 'spread him up,' after his amusing little custom of crucifying any and all who incur his anger, only to take him down again. He's too valuable to kill. But some day the butcher will be too mad to think of that. I'd hate to be in Quince's shoes."

Sick to her foundations, Sonya Savarin excused herself.

And John Marston looked curiously after her.

The rest of that day was like a nightmare to Sonya.

She had to be about the house, to help Lila with the work, and Rod was everywhere she went, leaning fondly on her shoulder, tipping her face to look into her eyes, whispering of that future which she knew could never be. Misery was her portion through it all. She sorrowed for the blow she must deal him sooner or later, for herself in her fear and her loneliness, and for the disaster she might some day bring on this house. And fear rode her like a witch whenever she thought of Starr Stone riding to the border with that prince of butchers, El Capitan Diablo.

"What alls you, Sonya?" asked Rodney Blake. "You don't hear half I'm saying. You're obsessed with something. Is it these d-d Indians?"

"If you don't stop that, Rod," she flamed, "I'll not forgive you. I told you once that one's life is his own. I still think so."

"Not a woman's—when she has given her promise," he said calmly: "it then belongs to her man."

"I'm sorry you take that attitude," she said, "my life will never belong to any—"

She did not finish, for the flashing thought that already her life was not her own, that for better or worse it was irrevocably connected with the precarious existence of Starr Stone—Quince of the Border! The time was ripe to tell Rod the truth, yet she did not speak. It seemed that something stronger than herself, some vital caution, held back the words.

"Lila," Sonya told the other woman later, "I've got to get away by myself a while or go crazy. You know—I want to think."

"Well," said Lila uneasily, "do be careful." And she stood on tiptoe to kiss the taller woman.

So Sonya rode away on Darkness, and Rodney Blake stood watching her with a strange expression in his eyes.

SOFTBALL SYMPTOMS

By TEDDY

A crew of Fire Fighters, with their infield filled with errors, managed to down the Bachelors Monday night 11 to 8. The Firemen had the Bachelors 10 to 1 at one time in the game, but the Bachelors pulled themselves together and with a tight infield held the Firemen to one run after the fifth inning.

The great upset of the season came Monday night when the Methodist crew defeated the Baptist 8 to 7. This Methodist gang is the most improved team of the league. Berry took the mound for the Methodist and pitched a good game, but lacked support from his outfielders. Berry weakened and Joe Powell, young moundsman, took the box and disaster for the Baptist bunch. The score was 7 to 3 in favor of the Baptist when Powell took the box, and he pitched his teammates to victory with the Baptist infield helping him with their errors.

The Methodist seem to get pleasure in upsetting the dope. They have managed to turn the trick twice, and may do it several more times before the season is over.

The State crew turned the trick for their first time Tuesday night to defeat the Road-Gang 9 to 6. The State seems to be improving but it was the many errors the Highwaymen made that was responsible for their defeat.

A large crowd was on hand Tuesday night to witness the game between the two leading teams of the league. Ward's and Arnold's teams played good ball, with few errors made by each team. Neither team was up to par, three of Arnold's first-string men were out, and Ward's men could not connect with the pellet.

—MY—DOPE—

Today—The Bachelors will defeat the State by a small margin. I am doping this game this way due to the fight that the Bachelors put out against the Firemen. The State took the Highway down and may give the Roundtable a licking.

Ward's bunch will defeat the Firemen with little trouble. The Firemen are no set-up for any team.

Monday—Arnold's bunch will defeat Ward's crew by a very small margin of two or three runs. Ward's gang has never been defeated, but it looks like Arnold's crew is the favorite Monday night.

The Baptists will defeat the Methodist Monday night by a few runs.

Local softball fans are showing more interest in the game. Wednesday night there were two exciting games played on the Fair Grounds. An All-Star team composed of local women defeated a like team from the Carden Community 6 to 4, while the local Firemen defeated a crew of All-Stars from Hamilton 9 to 6.

A crew of local All-Stars have booked a game with the Fadal Drug Company's team of Waco. The game will be played here Saturday night, June 9. The Fadal team is the leading club in the Waco Softball League, and will make it plenty "tuff" for the locals.

The public is cordially invited to worship with us at all services. You will receive a hearty welcome. All the members are urged to be present.

James M. McLean, Pastor.

A long time ago a young man asked Hill, the great railroad builder, how he could tell if he would succeed in life. To which Hill replied: "That is easy. Can you save? If you can save you will succeed. If you can not save you will be a failure." And this is a test that never fails because the ability to save is a test of character. It takes courage. It takes strength. It takes self-control. It takes the forward-looking mind to enable one to do without the little thing one.

HON. GEORGE H. SHEPPARD

The above is a likeness of the Hon. Geo. H. Sheppard, who has made an enviable record as State Comptroller in making the installation of business principles the foremost motive in his administration, and now seeks reelection.

Under the Constitution of the State of Texas, the Comptroller has many expressed and implied duties to perform, and duties that have grown enormously in the past few years. The Comptroller's Department is the clearing house for the State's finances, and this necessitates a vast amount of accounting, auditing, filing, and other clerical work. Upon the Comptroller is placed the responsibility of collecting the various revenues levied by the legislature. In addition, he collects all taxes on inheritance, gross receipts and production on oil, sulphur, and gasoline. It is also his duty to enforce the statutes in the collection of the various occupation taxes such as the tax on cigarettes beer, bowling alleys etc.

It has been a source of particular satisfaction to Mr. Sheppard to be able to collect approximately fifteen millions of dollars annually from the above sources for the support of the Public Schools of Texas.

Special attention is called to the fact that we are beginning a series of meetings here at our place of meeting on June 3. We meet at North 10th and Saunders Streets. Comfortable seats will be provided for all who come. The day services will be conducted in the building, but the evening services will be conducted out on the lawn. Bro. J. W. Dunn will do the preaching and the singing will be directed by Bro. Clarence Williams of Grapevine, Texas.

On next Lord's day we will have the regular services at our place of meeting.

Bible study at 10 a. m. Preaching at 11 a. m.

Week-day meetings are: Tuesday, Bible study, 2 p. m. Wednesday, Bible study, 7:45 p. m.

Make your plans to attend the meeting. Let us make this a real spiritual feast of good things. The sinner should obey the Gospel and the unfaithful should renew his allegiance to God and rededicate his life to Jesus Christ. The faithful should be built up and made strong for the work which remains to be done. "Come and let us reason together" is a very timely suggestion. Will you not heed it? If you think you do not believe what we do come and let us talk it over.

German Bethel Baptist Church

"The best way for a young man to begin, who is without friends or influence," said Russel Sage, "is, first, by getting a position; second, keeping his mouth shut; third, observing; fourth, being faithful; fifth, making his employer think he would be lost in a fog without him; and sixth, being polite." In this saying lies hidden not only for the young, but for us older folks as well a very noticeable hint. At the church with a friendly smile we are trying to follow the advice of the great Sage, but there is room for improvement. Make the church feel that it would be lost in a fog without you, by attending for a few years regularly and then you will have the habit well rooted in your life, and as others, find it to be impossible to stay at home or go elsewhere. Come to church!

Sunday School 10 a. m. with classes for German and English speaking Americans. Just follow the crowd and you will find the right place.

BACK TO GRASS

"Back to grass," now the objective of farmers for millions of cultivated acres in the United States, needs a little explanation, according to crop specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture. Grass in this sense means legumes as well, and these are in most cases forage crops.

Grass, to the average person, connotes only plants in which the leaves are narrow and spear-shaped blades. When speaking of pasture land farmers usually refer to land in grass sod year after year. In the West they mean the native grasses.

"Back to grass" means more grasses and legumes in semipermanent pastures and hay land, or in crop rotations of 2 to 5 years. It means in many cases using better soil for pastures. "Only pastureland" is a phrase common in the Middle West especially, when referring to land too poor and too rough for plow land.

Grasses and legumes grown on soils as good as those used for grain crops, say the department specialists, often will return greater net profit to the livestock farmer than grains on similar soil.
