Funeral Services Are Held for Rodgers Baby One of Triplet Bairns

Funeral services were held Saturday at the Levita Cemetery for Lloyd Delano Rodgers, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Odis Rodgers, residents on the Cow House Creek northwest of Arnett.

The deceased was one of the triplets sons born to Mr. and Mrs. Rodgers May 24, 1934. Names of the surviving infant brothers are Franklin and Roosevelt.

The baby failed to show the necessary response to treatment given it since the time it was born. The other two babies are doing nicely.

Applause of Approval Accorded Youngsters In Dance Performance

A packed house of fond mothers, proud fathers, relatives and interested friends leaned forward in their seats at the Regal Theatre last Friday evening when the curtains parted on the opening scene of the Raye Rayford Dance Revue.

Applause and encores were profuse from the "Bunnie Dance" opening, introducing little Misses Martha Ann Hallman and Beverly Nell Harris, to the finale, "Artist Model," featuring Miss Colleen Benson, supported by a charming ensemble of Misses Jerry Davis, Josephine McClellan, June Marie Chamlee, Mary Margaret Holmes, Jean Stinnett and Dorothy Chamlee.

On the curtain call of the last scene Miss Raye Virginia Rayford appeared with the ensemble and was accorded a congratulatory hand from her audience. Miss Rayford should be given highest praise for the performance of the youngsters whom she presented in recital Friday evening. The pupils demonstrated well for their instructor. Many of those who witnessed the presentation were amazed to learn that none of the pupils had been given more than nine months of instruction and many less.

Cleverly planned settings for each number added to the attraction of the evening's entertainment. The costumes were both beautiful and charming in originality and design.

Besides those named above the following were presented in the revue: C. Cleveland Martin, Helon Post Chamlee, Lalla Rookh Martin, Nettie Jane Thomson, Beverly Chamlee, Countess Jean Pruner, Grace Weigand, Carl McClendon, Jack Saunders and Ruth Lovejoy.

Assisting Miss Rayford with the production and acting as pianist-accompanist was Miss Beulah Gamblin.

County Club Delegates Addressed by District Demonstration Agent

The presidents of the county economics clubs met in the county court room Monday afternoon with Miss Gladys Martin, county home demonstration agent and Miss Gertrude Blodgett, district home demonstration agent. Forty-one presidents and representatives from the majority of the homemakers clubs of the county were present. Mrs. Gordon Shook presided in the absence of Mrs. Joe Watkins of Purmela, president of the county clubs.

Miss Blodgett, speaking to the assemblage, said each organization should have a definite goal and should strive to accomplish something of importance each year. She said each member should can according to a budget, in order to present a diversified diet to the family, and should strive to improve available storage room for canned goods.

In speaking of canned goods, Miss Blodgett spoke of the five points of food supply demonstration. She said one should plan what to can, produce the foods needed, conserve the foods that can not be had fresh, store canned products, and organize the canned goods, separating the vegetables, meats and fruits.

In regard to the wardrobe demonstrations, Miss Blodgett said each member should take an inventory of clothes on hand and then decide what additional garments are needed. She stressed the need of adequate storage. Miss Blodgett also emphasized style shows and contests, which stimulate interest in the work.

At the conclusion of the meeting it was decided that two or three members from clubs in each community would meet at centrally located points in the county to receive individual training from the county demonstrator.

Farmers Needn't Feel Badly Over Crop Estimate Cut

COLLEGE STATION—Cutting cotton production figures in cotton adjustment contracts was the rule and not the exception in Texas and everywhere else, according to the State Cotton Review Board. The farmer who feels badly that his first figures giving average five-year production were not accepted by the Board, and were reduced by the county committee to put them in line with the county allotment, may feel better if he knows that nearly all farmers took similar cuts.

When all the cotton production figures put by farmers into their contracts were added up it was found that they ran over the county allotments by a rough average of 20%, the Board states. In some counties the over-run went more than 40%.

This does not mean that farmers were dishonest in giving their production figures, the Board says, but that farmers had no way of knowing exactly what they had produced for five years. Production figures were of necessity estimates based largely on memory. The same was true of acreage figures. A farmer assumed he had 100 acres in a field but it might have been 90 acres or 110 acres if actually measured.

On the other hand, the Bureau of Crop Estimates knows with great accuracy the total bales produced in Texas every year. The average of this for five years became the Texas allotment. This was apportioned out among counties on the basis of local ginnings, cross county ginnings taken into account. It was imperative if there was to be a cotton program at all, that the total cotton production given by farmers in their contracts added to that of non-signers not exceed the known State total. That is why cuts were necessary, the Board explains.

RESPONSIBILITY IN STATE OFFICE

There is a large percentage of citizens of Texas today who pay their poll-tax and vote with great confidence in their own judgment but actually know little about the duties of the various public offices. They choose a candidate and cast their votes in his behalf yet know very little of his ability to fill that office because they do not know just what the office holder is supposed to do in performing his duties.

Take for example the office of State Comptroller. The present incumbent is Hon. George H. Sheppard. This department is actually one of the most important in the Government of the State.

According to Mr. Sheppard's figures, more than $100,000,000 of the people's money pass through the Comptroller's Department each year in the form of taxes derived from the various sources as provided by law. The reports and collections from the various taxing agencies of the State must all be audited and approved by the Comptroller, and he is also charged with the responsibility of allocating the funds to the various other Departments and uses as directed by law.

Of the total amount collected, more than $28,000,000 goes to the public schools of Texas. For the fiscal year ending August 31, it is estimated that more than one-half this amount will be derived from the tax on gasoline, cigarettes, beer, gross production on oil and sulphur and inheritance tax. It is the job of the Comptroller's Department to collect such taxes. The amount of revenue depends upon his ability to make collections.

February, 1933, was a banner month for gasoline tax collections in Texas. Tax was paid on 2,720,144 gallons of gasoline in East Texas. However, in January, 1934, tax collections were increased, under the new law, 275%. Tax was paid during this month on 10,310,711 gallons.

The total tax on gasoline amounts to more than $30,000,000.00 per year, and one-fourth of this, less a small per cent, for enforcement purposes, goes to the schools, one-half to the road fund, and one-fourth to the retirement of county road bonds. All of the nearly $4,000,000.00 derived from the tax on cigarettes, less the small amount allowed for enforcement of the law, goes to the school fund.

With a scholastic enumeration of 1,575,472, it is estimated the schools will receive this year sufficient funds to provide for the text book requirements in the sum of $1,384,345.07, per capita apportionment of $16.00 and $1.00 toward the unpaid apportionment.

This information is only an indication of the stupendous job which confronts one man who holds a state office. Other departments are responsible for similar performances, hence the voters of Texas should realize the great responsibility of public offices and do their utmost to place men in their elective positions who can best do the job and do it right.

The responsibility of proper management of State affairs rests with the voters.

WORLD FOREIGN COMMENT

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S action in relinquishing the intervention rights assured by the Platt Amendment will undoubtedly be hailed as a gesture of friendliness by the Latin-American nations. With the Marines out of Haiti and Nicaragua, the Platt Amendment was the one remaining policy or right of the U. S. which might be termed imperialistic. The new policy recognizes the complete right and ability of the Cubans to govern themselves—of course, there are doubts, even official doubts, that the troubled isle can work out its own destiny without the help of the "colossus of the North."

As one daily terms it, "President Roosevelt has taken an action which will do more to convince Latin America that the U. S. has no ambition to extend territorial dominion than all of the words that have flowed over American cables in the last quarter of a century." This is significant indeed, in view of our trade with Latin-America.

TWENTY-NINE years ago as two great fleets approached each other in battle array, somewhere in the China Sea, the admiral of one called his officers to him and said, "The rise or fall of the Japanese Empire depends upon this battle. The Empire expects every officer and man to do his best." Then he handed the dragon dagger of Japan to each officer but said not a word. Each man knew what it meant and what to do—if he failed. It is a singular characteristic of the Japanese Navy that suicide must follow failure in battle, but this brave little admiral led his men to victory and the annihilation of the opposing fleet. This admiral was Heihachiro Togo, 57 years of age at that time and since then the hero and idol of millions of Japanese boys and girls. He was the hero of Japan.

It was in 1905 that this great battle occurred, in which the untested Japanese fleet completely routed the Russian Oriental and Baltic squadrons. You remember that Russia and Japan were fighting for Manchuria at that time and Japan had to have an open route to Korea and Manchuria for the transportation of troops and supplies. This was what made Togo's victory over the Russian fleet such an important event for the then struggling nation of Japan. He passed away last Wednesday but his name will live perpetually in Japanese history for years to come. One writer says that "he made Japan a nation."

GATESVILLE should be proud indeed of MAJOR GENERAL WILLIAM S. GRAVES, a native of our city and one of the few major generals of modern times. Recently, an article by General Graves appeared in the New York Times published Current History magazine (June issue), entitled "If Japan Fights." General Graves presents a comprehensive view of the Japanese war machine, the potential strength of Russian Asiatic forces, and tells when Japan intended to fight Russia and something of her future plans toward that power. It is a powerful article, dealing with the Japanese menace by a competent observer of Asiatic affairs. You remember General Graves commanded the American forces in Siberia in 1918-19. Another toast to General Graves, citizens of Gatesville!

ON TEXAS FARMS

By W. H. Darrow
Extension Service Editor
A. & M. College

Farm record keeping has taken a fresh start in Texas because farmers have had to sweat for a year piecing together past records of farm production. The new AAA farm record book is in great demand. In Shelby county 45 community demonstrators are keeping the book and holding monthly meetings with neighbors to encourage and help them in record keeping.

An 8-acre alfalfa pasture has meant the difference between profit and loss in the dairy business to Bradford Lewis in Gonzales county. For two months this spring he kept 20 cows on the patch four hours daily and then had to mow it to keep the growth in check. Four tons of hay were cut.

A pantry with 49 feet of shelf put in at a cost of $1 is large enough to store a year's supply of canned food, it has been found by Mrs. E. L. Collins, pantry demonstrator for the Grange Hall Home Demonstration Club, Cherokee county.

Nineteen Harris county 4-H club boys marketed 17,100 lbs. of baby beeves in Houston this spring at a profit of $12.88 per boy.

Archer county home demonstration club women this year have cured 16,831 pounds of meat, canned 6403 quarts of meat, and made 190 pounds of American cheese as part of the living-at-home program.

An alfalfa field, developed as a demonstration in cooperation with the county agent, was a big factor in deciding local authorities that E. Clay Williams of Smithville should be given the keeping of the first stallion located in Bastrop county by the State Department of Agriculture from race track revenue.

Marlin—Farmers who have trouble getting stands of dallis grass are advised by county agent W. I. Ross of Falls county to visit Dean Kelly of Reagan. Two years ago last spring Mr. Kelly planted this fine pasture grass with a corn planter in rows about 24 inches apart on land well prepared as for any cultivated crop. A light chain was fastened to the covering feet of the planter as a drag. A perfect stand of dallis grass resulted and now the plants are covering all the ground between the rows.

In addition to dallis grass Mr. Kelly has sown carpet grass, burr clover, and annual and biennial sweet clover in his regular pastures, and hubam clover in his hog pasture. All the clovers give good grazing, but the carpet grass has not done so well. The pastures are to be mowed once or twice this year to control weeds.

Brady—Selling turkey eggs to Northern hatcheries, started in McCulloch county four years ago by turkey demonstrators organized by the county agent into the Brady Cooperative, Poultry Producers Association, resulted in the sale of 20,000 eggs in April at a net of 13 cents per egg. Forty-five producers participated in the early season sales.

What it means to the individual farmer is told by Bill Carroll of Pear Valley. From 38 bronze hens he sold more than $100 worth of eggs and had 350 in the incubator for his own flock. From his egg sales he has made enough to feed his poults until October. He says he can sell the hens which produced the eggs for more in the spring than he can get for them in the fall. From each hen he estimates sales of $4 in eggs. This gives him a spring as well as a fall turkey income.

Denton—Jersey breeders of Denton county used a novel way to finance seven 4-H club boys in the purchase of dairy calves this spring. A dairy committee went into their herds, selected top calves, and set a price which became the sale price. In this way, according to G. W. Warren, county agent, the boys obtained calves for $50 that would ordinarily have cost $75 on the open market.

COUNTY DECLINES OFFER OF RIALROAD ON RIGHT-OF-WAY

Erath county Commissioners' Court declined an offer made by the Cotton Belt rail line to sell the right-of-way on 30 miles of the road recently abandoned between here and Carlton according to County Judge Wallace Scott.

The company offered to sell the right-of-way for $12,500. The court considered the offer in view of using the railroad rump for proposed highway bed, but voted not to accept.

Work on salvaging the abandoned line started this week. Switches near the round house were removed and other work begun. Work is due to start on moving the track on the entire line next week, it was announced Thursday.—Stephenville Empire-Tribune

Music Pupils Presented in Two Recitals Last Week.

A very lovely musical was given by the students of Mrs. Ola Mae Parks at her home last Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

The music rooms were most attractive with their two pianos and beautiful decorations of ferns and spring flowers.

The programs consisted of piano and vocal solos, duets, ensemble numbers and chorus singing.

A large attendance witnessed the enjoyable entertainment both evenings.

Rogers-Hestilow Vows Are Solemnized.

The marriage of Miss Vonna Rogers to Travis Hestilow was solemnized Sunday morning at 8 o'clock at the First Baptist Church, with Rev. C. A. Morton, pastor, reading the marriage vows. The ring ceremony was performed before an altar decorated with ferns and baskets of roses, larkspurs and other spring flowers.

The bride was lovely in a frock of blue ribbed crepe ensemble with white accessories to match. The coat was three-quarters length, finished with trimmings of peach taffeta. Her head-dress was a large blue sailor trimmed with a peach and white taffeta band.

The bride is the popular daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Rogers. She graduated from the Gatesville High School in 1930, and was a teacher of Expression and Public Speaking in the Ireland Schools for the past three years.

The bride groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Ward. He attended the Gatesville schools, and for the past several years has been an employee of the Texas Company.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left on a wedding trip to points in West Texas and New Mexico.

Mr. and Mrs. Hestilow will make their home at 1806 East Main Street.

Miss Nela Scott Becomes The Bride of Travis Meharg

The marriage of Miss Nela Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Zim Scott and Mr. Travis Meharg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Meharg, both of Gatesville, took place Saturday morning at 8:00 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, 810 East Leon Street.

The ring ceremony was performed before an improvised altar of fernery and baskets of pink and white larkspur by the Reverend C. A. Morton, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Gatesville, Texas. Bro. Morton's grandfather, the Reverend David Morton, baptised the bride's mother thirty-eight years ago in Northern Mississippi. Preceding ceremony, Miss Tressie Meharg, violinist, sister of the groom, played "Melody of Love" accompanied at the piano by Miss Zelma Scott, sister of the bride. The wedding party entered to the strains of the "Lohengrin" wedding march.

The bride wore a pink jacket semi-sport frock with white accessories. She wore a corsage bouquet of Briarcliff rosebuds.

Miss Scott is a 1926 graduate of the Gatesville High School. She attended Baylor University, Waco, Texas and Texas State College for Women, Denton, Texas, having received her degree of Bachelor of Science from the latter institution in 1930. She has taught home economics in the Odd Fellows Orphanage, Corsicana and for the past four years has been head of the Home Economics Department of the local High School.

Mr. Meharg is also a 1926 Gatesville High graduate, a graduate of John Tarleton and has attended Texas A. & M. College and Texas Tech.

Only close friends and relatives of the families attended the wedding. Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Scott of Port Arthur, Texas, uncle and aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Glenn Combest and daughter of Meridian, Texas. Mrs. Combest is a sister of the groom.

CHAPTER VII.—An influenza epidemic among the Indians keeps Sonya busy for many days. Stone greatly helps her in her care for the stricken Navajos. Sonya and Stone declare their love for each other, all doubt in the mind of the girl being ended.

CHAPTER VIII.—The Mexican bandit, surprising the pair at a meeting place, takes Stone away, and warns the girl hereafter to let his "lieutenant" alone. Sonya is surprised by the unannounced arrival of Rodney Blake from New York.

It was far past noon when she tied Darkness to the hitching rail beyond the general store and climbed the worn steps to the porch. At the hollow sound of her booted feet on the floor, Parks, fat and oily and wide eyed, came swiftly from the open door of the back region of the store. He was hastily putting something in the pocket of his white linen vest as he came, and fumbled his damp hand free to greet her. Sonya hated to shake hands with this man, who always insisted on the formality. There was something so unctuous about him, a secretive sense of common understanding, which irritated her.

Now, as he reached out his hand, the small object which he had so hastily hidden in the sagging pocket tumbled out. It struck the floor with a strange sound of weight and for some reason Sonya stooped and picked it up even before the man could catch it as it fell.

"I'll take it," he said quickly, "give it here."

But again for some dim reason Sonya held the little thing and looked at it curiously.

It was a flat, narrow can about the size of the little tin in which Serge Savarin got his tobacco for his pipe, and it was shaped very much the same, having a rounded top and a flat bottom.

But there the similarity ceased, for this container was made of solid brass and thickly and beautifully carved with Chinese characters, while at the lower edge the small, belligerent figure of a fighting cock stood boldly out in bas relief.

And it was unbelievably heavy for its size.

This much she saw and felt before the proprietor of the store reached out and took it from her so quickly as to be rude. He fairly snatched it and dropped it once more in the sagging pocket, this time making sure it was safely in.

Then he laughed unctuously, rubbing his wet palms together.

"A new tobacco, Miss Sonya," he said, "for my personal use. Very select and, I may say, costly. Now, what can I do for you today?"

Looking at him curiously Sonya named her small purchases, and he bustled about, getting them from shelf and bin. And turning idly the girl looked directly into two dark faces under Mexican hats which peered furtively at her from around the door jamb. She knew with a thrill of portent that they were the same two men whom she had seen that day long back with Starr Stone, when he had brought her purchases out to the car in Parks' place.

Chilled and frightened, she gathered her things and went swiftly out, mounted Darkness and rode from the town at a long lope. She knew instinctively that she had stumbled on something of importance, and that Parks was, in some dim way, a part of it.

Oh, what was it all about! Where was Starr Stone, and what would his master do to him?

Starr Stone—and Parks—and planes—and contraband sent east from somewhere along the Border—about the middle—about here.

She knew—deep in her heart she knew—what Mr. Marston would give a lot to know, what he had come here to find. What Rod Blake would help him find if he knew. Rod Blake—Rod Blake on Starr Stone's trail. He would be as unrelenting as El Capitan if once he knew all the shining things, the sweet things, that Sonya knew, the dark things, the evil things which she knew, too. The whole terrible thing was too much for one girl's loving heart to hold, and Sonya felt as if the bottom were falling from the universe, as if soon she and all her little world would be destroyed.

And then, from high up and far away, a sound fell on her ears, the thin small sound of engines in the blue coming rapidly nearer. She stopped and looked up anxiously, and presently she saw it—a tiny speck that grew and lowered until it was circling over her, seeking a place to land.

It was the little gray ship she had seen before, the powerful bluntnosed thing which could land and take off with such incredible swiftness. It was down, its bouncing tail stilled, its engine throttled down but running, and a man was climbing over the side, coming toward her across the sand. Was it, could it be, Starr Stone?

She peered hard for a glint of bronze hair beneath his helmet, but could not see it, nor his eyes behind the disfiguring goggles.

And then he was here, close at Darkness' head, and his hand was on the bit. She saw then that he was dark, a Mexican—that another like him was coming from the ship—and then stark drama took the silence and the still shadows.

For Sonya Savarin, fighting for her life, came out of her saddle, saw Darkness sailing away in a panic of fright, his empty stirrups flying—felt the sand giving under her stubborn feet, saw the ship loom large as her captors brought her, struggling, to it—felt her hands held behind her. She was lifted up and put over the side into the gray leather seat, a strap was buckled tightly around her. The man who had first approached her climbed into the pilot's seat, the other squeezed in somewhere at her back and side, the engine roared for a moment, the plane quivered, surged ahead, surged faster, its tail came up, and almost immediately the vast spread of the desert began to drop away beneath.

With a gasp stifled on her ashen lips Sonya Savarin was away among the stars.

CHAPTER X

Across the Rio Grande.

THE world and all it held were gone. They were headed south! South toward Mexico! It was El Capitan Diablo who had her in his grip!

Yet El Capitan was—he must be—riding slowly south somewhere in

Very soon her heart leaped to her throat, for the ship was falling by the nose, it seemed, going sharply down. And then she saw some lights spread on the flat darkness—a landing field.

In an incredibly short time the feeling of falling passed and the ship came level again, touched, bounced, lifted beautifully, and came to rest on the earth. The man behind her reached around her, unbuckled her safety strap, put his hands under her armpits, and lifted her to her unsteady feet. "If you please, Senorita," he said in English, and Sonya climbed out into the unpreached arms of the pilot.

She looked around—at a small level field, a hangar, another gray ship beyond its open doors, all plainly visible in the floodlights that studded the field's four corners. Then the two Mexicans took her arms, and they all walked across the lighted space and out into the moonlit darkness beyond a grove of trees. Here the lights of a low, wide adobe house shone dimly; a door stood open; two women in dark low-necked dresses waited inside.

"La Senorita," the pilot said to them in Spanish. "You will take her to the guest chamber—and bear her company."

There was a marked significance in the last few words.

"Si," the older of the women said briefly. "I will take good care of her."

Sonya, speaking Spanish as well as they, listened tensely.

"And tender care, Carlotta," the man said, smiling meaningly. "She is, as you can see, very beautiful. I like this white skin, sunned though it is, and the curls in the hair. I am glad El Diablo cares only for pure gold blondes."

"You should wait, at least, the master's decision as to what he likes, Manuel," the woman said. "But why did Quatro send her?"

"Because she caught him red-handed with a five-tael can of 'black molasses'—the blundering fool, to approach anyone with that in sight. Well, care for the pretty thing, Carlotta, until El Capitan returns. We'll all know more then."

And with a look at Sonya from under his level black brows he bowed and left the house.

"If thee Senorita weel come weeth me," the woman said in painful English. "You would eat? Drink? Some wine before you sleep, meebby?"

"No, thank you," said Sonya.

She stood hesitantly, her hands clasped before her. She had no possessions to pick up. She had lost her hat the first moment in the plane. And she realized suddenly that she was weary to the bone.

Whatever was to happen to her, she would not help matters any by giving way to fear and worry.

"I would sleep, senora," she said. "I am very tired."

The woman went to a table of dark polished wood and picked up a candle burning steadily in a silver candlestick. Sonya followed her guide down a dark passage between thick whitewashed adobe walls and into a spacious high-ceiled room.

Here the woman left her, and soon returned with a pitcher of cold water and a silver cup.

She asked again if the senorita desired anything more, and finally departed. Sonya was dismayed to hear the unmistakable falling of a bar across the heavy door. Slowly she undressed herself, blew out the candle. But a thought came to her suddenly, and she went softly to the one window in the deep walls. It was closely barred with iron and set hard in the old adobe—and on a little stone-flagged yard below, the two women were just seating themselves in low chairs.

They were soft of manner, gentle seeming, and they carried fans in the hot moonlight.

She was to be cared for—to the very letter of the law laid down by Manuel.

"I am on Thy lap, O Lord," the girl said inaudibly. "Thy will be done." Then she laid her tired body on the bed and went to sleep.

PIG WITH TWO BODIES BORN TO HAMILTON COUNTY SOW

A Herald-Record reporter chanced the other day upon the strangest anomaly born animal it has ever been our lot to see. At the Hamilton National Bank, preserved in alcohol, is a double bodied pig with one head. The head has four ears, two on top of the head and one on either side, but there is only one snout. There are two distinct bodies, however, the legs are entwined. The freak pig is hairless and is probably a little larger than the ordinary new born pig.

The mother of the freak pig gave birth to eight normal pigs and two died at the time the swine "siamese twins" was born. The animal belongs on the E. A. Perry Farm.—Hamilton Herald-Record

The Archaeology of Peugh Branch

By Frank E. Simmons

Highway No. 7 crosses Peugh Branch a few hundred yards west of Jim Everetts' Store which is about one and one half miles west of the city of Oglesby. From this point, following the meanderings of the stream to its confluence with the Leon River, the stream is about five miles long. In that distance there is not a single half mile that doesn't show evidence of long occupancy by stone age men.

Passing through the Everetts and Simmons pastures the stream enters a deep narrow valley which is bordered by steep hills crowned with cedar and oak brush. One may find flint beds at numerous places in these hills. This basin has been given a thorough search for Indian relics of all sorts. There are no less than six places where flint was quarried by the Indians. At these quarry sites we have found stone sledges and rude flint blades which range up to seven or more inches long. Scientists tell us that these blades were spades used by the Indians in removing the dirt from over the flint ledges. The sledges are quartz boulders brought from other territory.

We seldom find a workshop at a quarry. It seems that the Indians preferred to have their workshops along the tops of the hills overlooking the valley. Evidence is abundant that these hills along the valley of Peugh branch were all used as workshops. It is supposed that there was no brush there during the Indian era but since that time oak and cedar brush has covered these hilltops. It is our supposition that if all of the broken fragments of articles ruined in construction to be found in these workshops were gathered in one heap it would be astounding to one who does not know the scope of the Indian works. One of these old workshops covers an area of about forty acres. Not many finished artifacts are to be found in these quarries and workshops however. We have found only about 20 at these locations. When we consider that almost every hill overlooking the valley has evidence of the former existence of a workshop on its slope even the sophisticated student of Indian lore is amazed at the amount of labor which was done by the Indians at this place. On one of the Peugh Branch shops we found a small arrow point which resembles the arrow points found in the middle section of the Trinity River area which were made of quartz pebbles and chert.

There is a flint quarry on the Compton farm, one in the Lawrence pasture, one on the Dripping Rock farm and two on the Mayhew property and at all of these places many tons of flint have been quarried.

There are a number of low mounds in this area. One of which is on the Everetts farm, another on the Simmons farm and still another on the Dripping Rock Farm. Perhaps there are others hidden by the brush which grows over the area. The mounds are usually fifteen or twenty feet, are circular and about eighteen inches high in the center. In opening them crosscut we have found them to consist of burnt rock, earth and usually a bulk of flint chips. Some of them, however, contain neither burned rock or flint. These mounds are numerous in the Leon area of this county. I would not hazard a guess as to what they are or to what purpose they serve.

On a high hill across the creek from Dripping Rock is an old field partly overgrown with brush. Pecans have sprung up from a few aged stumps. It is here that we found an area of about two acres beneath the trees which was evidently used as a semi-permanent camp. Here we found a very fine mortar made of conglomerate on sand and gravel firmly cemented together (naturally cemented) and a mono stone to match. We found three worn out sand stone mortars, half dozen monos made of sandstone. One sandstone article about five or six inches long and three or four inches wide was hollowed similar to a mortar with cavity one inch in diameter in the bottom. Several flint blades, numerous arrow points and numbers of flint hammers were also found here.

Circleing under Dripping Rock is a long narrow grotto. High water washes the lower section of the floor clean but the higher portion of the floor has a considerable deposit of dirt, old ashes and numbers of bone fragments leaving the impression that the debris is kitchen refuse. In this grotto we found several fine arrowpoints, a bone skiver, a lump of red oxide point, a clam-shell spoon, a quartz stone hammer weighing about 2 pounds, a bone skiver and a large quantity of flint chips.

HUMAN BONES EXCAVATED

Recently the upper section of the floor of the cave was excavated in a very amateurish way and seemingly aimlessly because apparently the excavators did not remove any article from the cave. I happened to visit the cave a few days after the excavation and found a pile of dirt and a pile of human bones. The bones were in a bad state of decay and had been poorly handled in the excavation but it was apparent from the number of the bones and the kinds of bones that they were the remains of at least three human bodies. Picnicers in the future will view the scarilege and the exposed bones.

Further down the creek on the Mayhew farm is a camp in the bend of the creek covering at least half an acre. The soil is impregnated burned rock, rotten mussel shells, and quantities of flint chips. Here we found more than two score finely finished flint artifacts, one spear stemmed and barbed five inches long and a smaller spear and a number of hammerstones.

On the Henry Mayhew farm is a field of perhaps ten or more acres which is thoroughly impregnated with flint chips and workshop refuse. Here we found two well shaped pestles made of hard flint. This field shows very few well finished articles.

Two objects which are evidently very old were found below the Mayhew property. One is an excellent mortar made from a large slab of limestone and the bowl of which is fairly deep. This object is so old that the polish usually made by the wearing of the grinder does not show. The ravishes of nature have obliterated all evidence of polish. The other object is a spear several inches long which was dug from a gravel pit on Peugh Branch. It is made of black flint and had lain in the gravel pit so long that it was beginning to disintegrate.

The last camp on this creek is the Paul Ross field near the Leon River. This camp was uncovered by overflows. Large quantities of mussel shells are intermixed with the soil. Here we found the most artistic flint work to be discovered in this county. Among the findings here were two very fine stemmed and barbed serrated points which cannot be excelled. Because of the fine workmanship we saved many of the broken arrow points from this place. A number of fine flint knives, a bone tool probably a chipping bone, a few small flint hammerstones and quartz hammers were also found here. Noticeable features of this camp are that there were no large arrow points, excellence of workmanship, unusually formed flint knives. The occupants of this camp must have been clam eaters because of the profusion of clamshells to be found in the camp.

Truly practically every part of Coryell county there is a profusion of historical data and interesting folk information if we could but discover the facts.

HAMILTON LIONS CLUB HOLDS INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS

The Lions Club installed the new president, H. B. Gordon and new vice-president, Jack Walker, at its regular luncheon hour Tuesday noon when the club met in the basement dining room of the First Baptist Church.

They were forced to hold a 25-pound cake of ice suspended above their heads while Chairman Williams installed them. This act proved very amusing as each time they dropped the ice it was necessary to start at the beginning of the installation.

After the installation President Gordon took the chair and made an appropriate talk. He urged the members to assist him in conducting the affairs of the club for the coming year. He stated that the highway program was an important piece of work to start with and after some discussion on the subject he was authorized to appoint a committee to begin work at an early date to further the interest of highway construction in Hamilton county.

Retiring Chairman Williams was given a Lion ring as a token for his services during the past year.

Lion Jimmie Bolding made a humorous talk on the outgoing and incoming administration.

SOFTBALL SYMPTOMS

By TEDDY

A hard hitting crew of church-men defeated the poor-looking bunch of Highwaymen Thurs-day night 12 to 1. Sasse was below par, and his fielders giv-ing him very little support, were forced to play their porrest game of the season. Blanton's entire team played one of their best games of the season, al-lowing but few hits.

Arnold's gang nosed out the Methodists Thursday night 10 to 7. Both teams demon-strated their softball ability throughout the game.

The Bachelors, with little trouble, defeated the State Fri-day night 15 to 4. Ricketts pitched a good game, allowing the State to only three hits. The Bachelors are still showing some improvement.

The Firemen's club nosed out Ward's bunch Friday night 5 to 3. This game was a thriller all the way through. Less hits were made in this game than any thus far this season.

The Methodists and Highway are not the only ones trying to up-set my dope. The Fire Boys have joined them.

—MY—DOPE—

Today—The Highway will de-feat the State, but will have trouble.

The Fire Boys will defeat the Bachelors.

Thursday—Arnold's gang will defeat the Methodist.

The Baptists will defeat the Highway.

Fadal's team of Waco, who will play the local All-Stars Saturday night boasts of one of the best pitchers in central Texas, George Pauling. The All-Stars that defeated Carden Sat-urday night 15 to 1 would be a good team to start against the Waco crew.

BEER EXPLODES IN COURT WHEN HASSE WOMEN IS SENTENCED

Mrs. W. L. Knight of Hasse was given a year in the peni-tentiary by a jury in District Court here Friday on a charge of the illegal possession of liquor.

Her attorney waived the right to ask for a new trial and filed a motion for appeal.

Considerable excitement pre-vailed in the District Clerk's office Monday when three or four bottles of beer, to have been found at Mrs. Knight's residence, exploded with a blast, scatter-ing glass over the room.—Co-manche Chief
