

"Happy Days Are Here Again" Kiddies And Grownups Agree When Pool Opens

The local Municipal Swimming Pool, located in beautiful Raby Park, will open Saturday with a day of free bathing to all who care to go in. The affair is an annual one and has been looked forward to for the past several weeks. The opening this year will be entirely different in several respects the major of which is the surroundings.

Raby Park has been entirely worked over. Automobile drive-ways find their way across the park in several directions. Picnic tables and benches have been scattered about over the property. Footpaths intermingle with the beautiful shade trees. Rock bridges have been constructed at several points along the branch which meanders through the park. Stone masonry in its beautiful rustic execution is to be observed all through the park site.

A new stone bath house has been recently completed and has all of the desirable features. It is situated to the south of the pool instead of to the west as was the old one.

A well to supply the water for the pool is nearing completion. The well is situated on newly acquired property.

There will be a band concert on the opening night, Saturday, June 9.

Mr. Walter Moore will be in charge at the pool this year. Season tickets will be on sale Saturday.

NEWS FLASHES

HIKE IN WHEAT PRICE FOR DROUTH RELIEF

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The Farm Administration announced today an increase of a cent a bushel in wheat benefit payments to farmers as a drouth relief measure.

Plans to rush these payments totaling more than $30,000,000 and corn-hog payments now coming out constituted the newest steps in the Government's drouth-relief plans.

Farmers already have received 20 cents a bushel under their wheat contracts and were scheduled to receive 8 cents a bushel more. The increase of 1 cent will mean payment of an additional $3,500,000.

The money is given the farmers for signing contracts to reduce acreage.

G. O. P.'s SELECT JOCKEY FOR 1936 RACE

CHICAGO, June 6.—Henry Prather Fletcher, one of Col. Theodore Roosevelt's Rough Riders, was placed in the saddle by the republican party today as jockey for the 1936 presidential race.

Fletcher's election as national chairman to succeed Everett Sanders, resigned, was considered at least a partial victory for the old guard in a three-day battle with "young liberals" of the west.

PRESIDENT SIGNS BILL FOR STOCK MARKET CONTROL

WASHINGTON, June 6.—President Roosevelt signed the stock market control bill Wednesday and turned to the processes of setting it to functioning, the first step of which is the appointment of a five-man commission to administer and enforce it.

By its own terms, the bill will become effective, with the exception of its margin provisions, July 1, if the regulatory board has been named prior to that time.

JAMES V. ALLRED TO SPEAK HERE SAT. JUNE 16

It was voiced here yesterday that Hon. James V. Allred, attorney General of Texas and one of the leading candidates for the office of Governor, will speak in Gatesville on Saturday night June 16 at 8 o'clock. He will bring a full discussion of vital issues in the campaign to Coryell county voters.

Arrangements are not yet completed but it is likely that a good band will be present.

Mr. Allred will probably discuss two phases of his platform, namely the regulation of utility operation and rates and a downward revision of these rates and the elimination of professional, highly paid lobbyists from our state government.

Coryell Board Members Attend Joint Meeting Of Centennial Bodies

When the Texas Centennial Commission and the Advisory Board met in Joint-session Wednesday morning at 10:00 o'clock in the Crystal Ballroom of the Driscoll Hotel in Austin, four members of the Board from Coryell county were present. They were: Mrs. T. R. Mears, Mrs. J. O. Brown and Ayres Compton, of Gatesville and Jewitt Allin, of Copperas Cove.

Cullen F. Thomas, of Dallas, presided as temporary chairman at the morning assembly. Much dissention during the first three hours of the joint-meeting was responsible for separate meetings during the afternoon sessions for the two Centennial bodies, at which time each agency went into permanent organization.

Cullen F. Thomas was made chairman of the Commission while Mrs. Volney Taylor, of Brownsville, was elected to the Chair of the Advisory Board.

Jim Speaks For Ma

Among the prominent speakers to address the general assembly was former governor Jim Ferguson who brought tidings from his wife, the present governor.

"The governor is pretty busy right now," he stated, "but she asked me to come down here and tell you she is still one-hundred percent behind the Texas Centennial and all she wants you folks to do is tell her what you want done and she'll do it, and I'll help her," he added.

Neff Addresses Board

Upon the request of the Advisory Board the Commission appointed Pat M. Neff, Baylor president, to bring a final message to that body which concluded the day's activities.

Neff urged beautification of cities and towns, the restoration of historical spots and the

Plans Being Made to Open County Cannery By Monday or Tuesday

Full time is being spent on the installation of the equipment to be used in the cannery located on North 10th Street, Gatesville, in hopes that work may begin Monday or Tuesday of next week, according to a report from the local Relief Administration office.

The use of the building location of the cannery factory has been donated by the Texas-Louisiana Light & Power Company. The fuel is being contributed by the Community Nat'l Gas Company.

The major part of the expense of the mutual enterprise is being borne by the Relief Commission, however, the City of Gatesville in conjunction with the County is contributing a substantial part.

The canning will be done on a toll basis. A schedule of tolls will appear in a subsequent issue of the News.

Cannery Open To County

It seems to be the impression with many that the cannery is accessible only to people on the relief rolls, however, this is a mistaken idea. The factory is open to all residents of Coryell county.

Producers who are planning to have goods canned should call the office of the County Relief Administrator and make arrangements before bringing their produce to the cannery.

Five to ten people, from the relief roll, will be employed in the canning factory. The number of work days will depend upon the amount of goods to be canned. The factory will operate daily at the start.

After 'Seeing the World' Turns to Law

A "yen" to see the world in the heart of a 13 year-old boy that couldn't be subdued by staying at home led Gail Walley Jr. to see practically all of the world by the time he was sixteen.

"The life of a sailor is the most free in the world, with irresponsibility the keynote," according to young Walley. "You don't live. You just exist, but there is no ultimate success."

Gail Walley Jr., the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Walley, of Gatesville is now a Freshman in Texas Christian University. The poised, well built fellow now plans to pursue his college education in the study of law.

The young sailor has seen and is familiar with a number of ports outside the United States. These ports include Hamburg, Rotterdam, Havana, Manila, Honolulu, Tampico, Rio de Janeiro and Vancouver.

When the urge to travel struck the young wanderer, about six years ago, he went to Mobile and shipped for Havana, thence to New York and from there to Providence R. I. Here he suffered an accident and was "laid up" in a hospital for six weeks. Soon after his recovery he was on a freighter bound for Rio de Janeiro.

Next Walley shipped for Hamburg and Rotterdam, after signing up at Port Arthur. His most vivid recollection of that trip is the visit he made to the Karl Hagenbach circus, said to be the largest in the world.

Walley says that he wishes he had finished his high school education before answering the wanderlust spirit.

"I would have had more capacity for appreciating what I saw," he said.

With school out and a new car in his possession, the Snooper can't much blame Frank L. Williams from wearing such a big smile, however, smiling is a natural tendency of his anyway. The closing of school has had its effects on several, Bertha Lillian Stewart and that group of girls riding yesterday morning also seemed to be enjoying vacation time.

Billy Thomson is spending his vacation driving a truck but he always seems to like whatever he is doing. Cam McGilvray was about to get interested in window-shopping just as his sister stopped to pick him up. C. E. Alvis getting the benefit of natural violet-rays by going without his hat. Troy Jones and Chess Sadler busily engaged in conversation and I wasn't surprised to find "golf" to be the topic of discussion.

CORYELL AND THE CENTENNIAL

The six individuals who were appointed from Coryell County for service on the Texas Centennial Advisory Board are immediately in a position to render a great service to their county and in a small way a like service to their state.

Regardless of the fact that the representatives from this county will compose only a small portion of the State Board they should perform the duties prescribed to them just as if the success or failure of the Centennial celebration depended upon the extent of their efforts.

FARM HOME RECONSTRUCTION

Some time ago a farm housing survey was conducted as a project of the Civil Works Administration. The results produced some very valuable and interesting facts.

The rural census of housing conditions included such features as the conditions of the walls, chimneys, roofs, etc., the age of the dwelling, the number of rooms and occupants, and whether or not it had ordinary conveniences and comforts.

It should be interesting to the average town resident and especially to the building-supplies merchant, the plumber, the contractor and utilities companies to learn that comparatively few of these homes were in what might be termed average condition. Most of the houses were found to be in only fair shape.

The point is that here is a vast market for the sale of building materials and supplies. The federal government has made plans that will enable the farmer to make needed improvements on his home, not directly perhaps but in an indirect way. If these plans materialize it will mean that a host of unemployed men will find jobs in actual construction and in the manufacture of these needed supplies.

It is not a mistaken idea to believe that the outlook for new construction and building improvements is better now than at any time in the past four years.

Local merchants should grasp the opportunity to encourage construction of new dwellings and the much needed improvements on old residences. Individuals act upon the matter of buildings as they do on other subjects. They are not expected to jump into a building or improvement program without some sort of encouragement from some source.

PATRONIZING TEXAS

Apparently a lot of Texas people are as ignorant as we were about Title 33, Article 2361, Revised Statutes of Texas. That Article reads:

"All things being equal, contracts must be awarded (by County Commissioners Courts) to a citizen or taxpayer of the county in which the contract is let."

While we seldom believe that coercion is the proper way to accomplish an end, even when that end is so laudable as the objective of Progressive Texans, Inc.—to increase the sale of Texas products—we believe that a good purpose would be subserved and no harm done if Article 2361 were amended to read thus:

"All things being equal, contracts must be awarded to a citizen or taxpayer of the county in which the contract is let; or, in the event there is no satisfactory bidder from the county, then to a citizen or taxpayer of Texas."

As we have said before, the individual has a perfect right to make his purchases when and where he wants to make them, even if he short-sightedly fails to realize his own selfish interest in the development of his home State. But public bodies, spending public monies, are different.

No more enthusiastic supporter of objectives of Progressive Texas, Inc., is to be found than Lee Simmons, superintendent of the Texas Prison System.

FAILED TO MISS JUST ONE OF MEXICAN BROOD

The parable about the old lady "that had so many children she didn't know what to do" came in a modern version yesterday.

A carload of Mexicans had stopped at the Moos Oil station at Midway after making a mad drive to get to the station before they ran out of gas. They were buying gas when a big car drove up.

The driver had a Mexican child. "Did you lose one?" he asked the Mexicans.

They began a hurried check-up of the brood. One was missing.

"Si, si," the parents cried as they crammed the errand in with the rest. The parents had left the child by the side of the road, to be picked up by the tourists, who gave chase.—Temple Telegram.

MAKING CHANGE AT FAIR TAKES TRUCK LOADS OF COINS

Chicago—Seven tons of coin, make change for opening day visitors to the new World's Fair which opened in Chicago Saturday, May 26, was moved in armoured trucks into the Fair's main bank in the Administration building May 25. It comprised $200,000 in pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters and half-dollars.

It took three weeks to wrap and prepare all this change. The fair maintains fourteen modern automatic counting machines and four automatic wrapping machines. This is more equipment of the type than is used in any bank in Chicago, including the Federal Reserve bank.

I consider a human soul without education like marble in a quarry which shows none of its inherent beauty until the skill of the polisher sketches out the colors, makes the surface shine, and discovers every ornamental cloud, spot and vein that runs thru the body of it," says Addison. Yes, education is a wonderful help, but it is not all that we need and must have to bring out the inherent beauties in life. Let Christ, the Master polisher, bring out the beauties that lie dormant in your life.

Next Lord's Day, June 10th, there will be no services at our church for we are all going to Waco to the Annual Rally Day gathering of the German Baptists of Texas and Louisiana at Baylor university gymnasium building. Follow the crowd. The time is 9:45 a. m. Don't forget the customary (picnick) picnic luncheon. We are looking forward to a great day. "Let us rally all—"

With the coming of hot weather, a large number of people seem to think of vacation. And vacation means a rest. Does it mean a "rest" in regard to spiritual matters? We all need to "pay the more earnest heed" lest we "slip out, as of a leaking vessel." A Christian should never be satisfied with the Grace he now has. Christian growth will be accompanied by worship and study of God's word. Let us not "forsake the assembling of ourselves, as the manner of some is."

There will be the usual services next Sunday. Sunday School at 10 a. m., preaching by the pastor at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Every member is expected to be in his place. Continental Can Co., whose new plant at Houston was recently put in operation, received the contract for fifty carloads of cans for the Texas Prison System's fine canning plant at Sugarland. "Houston," publication of the Houston Chamber of Commerce, commenting on the purchase, says the State Board of Control proceeding "under the regulation that, other things being equal, the State's business should go to concerns operating within the State, employing Texas labor and paying State taxes" awarded the contracts to the Houston concern.

Possibly not strictly "industrial," and yet concerning an industry that has come to be outstanding in the Southwest is the Tyler Rose Festival, first staged last October with a two-day celebration that attracted 40,000 visitors from a wide area, and to be repeated this fall on an enlarged scale. Magnitude of the industry is revealed in the fact that this year more than 6,000,000 rose plants were shipped from Smith county alone.

An outstanding and distinctive affair of the season was the lovely party given by Mesdames Ola Mae Parks and D. I. Glass at the home of Mrs. Parks last Monday afternoon, announcing the approaching marriage of Miss Elsie Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilson, to Mr. Marvin Parr of Houston.

The reception rooms in which the guests were greeted were decorated in various shades of spring flowers of roses and sweet peas basketed and vased.

The place cards in the games were made clever and attractive with designs of tiny cats in bags bearing the inscription "Elsie-Marv'n." The date of the wedding was not announced, but will happen some time in June.

Mrs. Kirby Perryman and the honoree won high score prizes in the games of "42" and bridge. A salad bowl was awarded Mrs. Perryman, and underwear was given Miss Wilson. An iced fruit juice set was presented to the honoree by the hostesses.

As the guests arrived they were asked to register in the Bride's book, and to write a tested recipe in the cook book.

The bride's wedding colors of pink and white were carried out in the decorations and refreshments. The dining table was attractively laid with a lace cloth, centered with a large bowl of pink and white flox. The refreshments consisted of pink and white angle food squares and punch. Favors were large hearts centered with the reading, "Orlean Williams-May 31, 1934." The program consisted of two readings by Margaret Melton. Numerous games of amusements were also featured, after which the bride was told to hunt for a pot of gold. She found it under the rainbow filled with many useful and attractive gifts. AUTHENTIC PARKER-BARROW PICTURES COMING TO REGAL

L. B. Brown, owner and manager of the Regal Theater, stated to a News representative yesterday that he had booked the real original Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow Picture.

Mr. Brown said that more than 100 showmen from as many towns were at the booking office fighting for a dating on the picture. "It was only through strategy that I was able to book the picture for an earlier time than September. There are dozens of imitation shows but I have booked the real thing and the only show which contains the uncensored pictures of the horrible criminal career of these desperadoes," said Mr. Brown. The picture is to be shown at the Regal Theater on Friday and Saturday, June 15 and 16.

WACO CLUB WILL BRING ACE PITCHER HERE IN EXHIBITION

Ten of the best softball players, selected from teams of the local League, will be pitted against the Fadal Drug Company team, of Waco, in what promises

CHAPTER IX.—With Blake is an easterner, Marston, who announces himself as a secret service operator, on the trail of Mexican opium smugglers who are believed to be working in the vicinity of the Savarin ranch. Serge, remembering an incident at a dance they had all attended, connects Stone with the smugglers whom Marston is seeking. Sonya is forced to admit to herself that the man she loves is involved in the nefarious traffic. At the general store in the desert village Sonya inadvertently acquires knowledge of the store keeper's possession of opium. On her way home she is seized and carried away in an airplane.

CHAPTER X.—Sonya realizes she is in the power of El Capitan Diablo. In his stronghold she is committed to the care of an elderly Spanish woman, to await the arrival of the chief. A younger woman, Concha, views with apprehension the arrival of Stone, whom she loves, evidently a prisoner, with El Capitan Diablo.

Late morning waked her, or perhaps it was the sound of the bar being slid from its slot outside the door. She opened her eyes to see the senora with a little wooden tray on which were coffee steaming in a tiny pot, luscious fruit, eggs in a cup, and bread made of some dark flour.

The woman smiled at her with a crinkling of all her brown face, and Sonya smiled back.

"Good morning, senora," she said in English. "I thank you for these things."

"Good morning, senorita," the woman answered. "I hope you sleep verree fine."

"Yes, I did," said Sonya, getting out of the bed in her plain undergarments, which she had been forced to use as nightwear, "and I would eat."

She washed her hands and face in the ancient bowl where the senora had poured the water from the pitcher, dried on the towel she gave her from her arm. Then she dressed, sat down by the table near the iron-barred window, and fell to with a will. She was young and very hungry, and the excellent food put heart in her for what the day might bring.

It brought only the senora again to take the things away, and the hours dragged on leaden feet. She sat by the window looking out across the stone-flagged yard at the tall trees of the grove through which she had come the night before.

And the day drowsed itself away. Try as she would, her molling brain would not relax. Thoughts raced through it, one on the heels of the other.

What had happened to Starr Stone? Where was he? What would El Capitan do with him? With her? So it was opium which Parks had dropped at her feet in the heavy brass container—and she, having seen it, was a menace to them all. And El Diablo took few chances with those who knew too much. He—crucified them. There was no mercy in that wild dark face of his. A woman who knew too much was just a source of danger to himself, nothing more.

Parks—the bland owner of a simple store at a lost little station on the cross-continent railroad. Parks—who could so easily send small flat cans of contraband to New York city in crates of innocent western produce; lettuce, say, from the Imperial valley, or even bales of hides. She knew now why she had always disliked him, why she had felt a repugnance to his speech, the oily handshake.

And it was Parks who had sent the little gray ship, hidden no doubt on some flat among the weathered mesas south of town, to take her and bring her here. And what a get-away it had been!

She, Sonya Savarin, was gone completely, a helpless prisoner here in an alien country. In the very heart of El Diablo's stronghold, her fate resting in the hands of the cruellest killer in all the turbulent land. If only Fate permitted her to see Starr Stone again, to look into his eyes, to commune once more with the soul of him which, under all its wrong and sin and spiritual loss, was yet the soul of her predestined mate, gentle and steadfast and irrevocably her own. And she felt that it would be so, that he was coming, would soon be here, though for what dire destiny only heaven itself knew.

So the long hot hours wore away, and twilight came, and with it again the senora with more food. But Sonya could not eat this time.

Darkness fell again, and once again the late round moon came up, and one of the little gray ships warmed up and took off into the starlit skies.

Presently there were the soft steps of women on the flagstones just below, the little noise of creaking chairs. The low intonations of their voices came softly to Sonya by her window.

They spoke in Spanish, as did all the people here, without regard for the white woman who seemed so alien. Apparently they had not thought that she might understand. "It is warm, Conchita," the senora said, fanning; "the heat is heavy this year."

"Si senora—heavy as my heart." "Muchacha," said the older woman, "a woman's heart is made for aching. It has been always so."

"But does one never find relief, senora? Does one not forget?"

"Si, with the years. Calm thyself, Conchita. There will be others."

"No," said Conchita, "there will never be another. And once I was good for him—held in his arms, lived on his kisses. Now he does not see me with his eyes that stare ahead. He pushes me one side—gently, but still puts me away."

"H'm," said the senora. "He has seen another, child. Best look at a new man—to forget. One does not build a new fire from dead ashes. Say thy prayers, Concha, and ask the Virgin Mary to send you a new man, one with blue eyes, to make you forget."

"No," said the other, weeping, "never another—with blue eyes."

Sonya by her window stirred uneasily.

She felt abashed to listen, yet there was nothing she could do, since she would not let them know she understood. And then, out of the silence, out of the vast diapason of seemingly inaudible sounds that made that silence, something struck lightly on her ears.

Horses' hoofs, far off and slow, padding on hard sand, striking now and again against a stone, the later rattle of chain and spur, the sounds of riding men.

The women below listened in sudden stillness, then got to their feet swiftly.

"Madre—look quick!" the younger one said swiftly, "there—in the stable's lantern light. Quince! They have brought him back! Oh, madre!"

Sonya leaped to her feet, her hands clutching the old iron bars, her face pressed close to them. There had been something in Concha's voice when she cried "Quince! Oh, madre!" which explained her tears.

Quince—a blue-eyed man. Verily, disaster was raining upon her from all quarters. But she would not sink, she would not give up. Whatever seemed to be, there was still behind it all the sound of Starr Stone's voice saying, "I'd crawl around the world—to change my spots!" Whatever he had done, whatever he had been, he was another man now. It was in his eyes, in his heart, in every tone of his voice. The past and all it meant of sin and shame were done. He would change his spots if he could; that she knew beyond all doubting.

The newcomers had passed from sight and sound, and the Mexican night hung its starry jewels above the drowsing trees. And Sonya Savarin sat by her barred window as the hours passed, her hands clasped in her lap, her face pale in the shadows.

What the morrow would bring she did not know. Uneasy thoughts

"They Have Brought Him Back! Oh, Madre!"

molloed in her mind. She heard again the Servant of the Lord talking in Myra's yard, at the dance at the Neddlingers'. "Beelzebub—and the Blue-eyed One—danger where they passed by—a dark form hung on a cross."

She shivered in the warm night, nugged her arms across her breast.

"Beware, Innocent One," the mad old man had said—and here was his warning fulfilled. Here was the goal toward which she had turned her face irrevocably when she had looked in Starr Stone's eyes and followed him in spirit. All the good past, all her work and her services, all the sane and precious things of ordinary life, were gone like so much chaff in the wind because a man had looked at her with wild blue eyes and she had turned and followed.

Now that man rode by out there in the dusk of an alien land, a prisoner; she sat trembling here, a prisoner also, and the morrow held their fate.

The morrow and El Capitan Diablo.

SOFTBALL SYMPTOMS

By TEDDY

Arnold's team had little trouble defeating Ward's crew Monday night 13 to 6. Ward's gang played their poorest game of the season, letting Arnold's bunch hit at their will.

The Baptists managed to shut-out the Methodists 8 to 0 Monday night. The Baptists played considerably better ball this week than last week.

The Firemen downed the Bachelors Tuesday night 9 to 5. The Fire Fighters were not up to form, but should have given the Tablers a worse defeat.

The State crushed the Highway Tuesday night 12 to 4. The Road-Gang was doped to defeat the State, but when two teams play that have the habit of upsetting the dope, anything might happen.

—MY—DOPE—

Today—According to the law of average, the State will be defeated by the Road-Gang by a small margin.

Ward's bunch is due to win from the strong Firemen's club.

Monday—Arnold's crew will defeat the Baptists, but will have plenty trouble with the churchmen.

The Methodist will defeat the Highway. The Methodist will have trouble, but are due to win.
