

Murder Charges Filed Against Burl Scott in Oglesby Justice Court

RELEASED ON $2,000 BOND

Three shots allegedly fired by Burl Scott, 28, from an automatic pistol were responsible for the death of Hermon Wheat, about 38 years-old, and the former's brother-in-law, Saturday night around 8:30 o'clock.

The shooting occurred near the home of Scott, a mile north-east of Eagle Springs, who surrendered to officers and was taken to Oglesby where charges of murder were filed in a court of inquiry held by Justice-of-the-Peace M. V. Dalton. The accused was granted his release on a $2,000.00 bond pending action of the grand jury in July, at which time a complete investigation will be held.

The three shots fired all took effect. One was in the head, one in the upper part of the body and a third in the neck.

The accused failed to make any statement. There is only supposition as to the cause and reason for the affair.

Youths Escape Injury When Car Hurdles Curb To Avoid Street Ditch

UPROOT TELEPHONE POLE

Paul Hinson, of Ames, 1934 Gatesville High School graduate and popular young athlete narrowly escaped what might have been a serious accident with two other boys last Friday night when the '33 model Chevrolet sedan driven by young Hinson hurdled the sidewalk on the south side of Main Street in front of the J. A. Fletcher home and came to a stop in the front yard of the J. R. Curtis residence.

The three boys had been to the ball game at the Fair Park and were returning to town in a procession of cars going westward. Hinson attempted to turn out of the march and go around the cars. When the car swerved out, gaining speed as it traveled, the driver found himself driving head-on toward an open ditch across the street which had been dug by the city engineering department. Not having time to check the speed of his car, Hinson drove the auto across the curb, knocking down a telephone pole and side-swiping a hackberry tree.

When the car stopped, about a hundred feet farther, the boys were a bit shaken up but none were injured. Three flats tires and a sprained front axle was all the damaged done to the car.

South Carolina will omit its slogan, "Iodine Produces State," from automobile license tags for 1934.

ATTEND CONNALLY HOME-COMING TO-DO

Several residents of this vicinity were present Friday evening at Marlin to help welcome Senator Tom Connally back to Texas following the adjournment of Congress. Among those from Gatesville were Mr. and Mrs. George Gilmore and family, Conrad Powell and 'Uncle Billy' Sadler.

The latter made a short speech at the Home-Coming celebration in which he said, "I don't want to detain you folk, but I do want to let you know that Coryell county is 100% for Connally."

Silo Demonstration To Be Held Following Meeting on Wednesday

FARMERS URGED TO ATTEND

There will be a meeting of those interested in trench silos at the courthouse here Wednesday morning June 27 at 9 o'clock. After the meeting the group will go on an inspection tour of a demonstration trench silo.

Much interest has been aroused in this economical and efficient way of conserving a feed crop before it dries up. Corn is considered the best ensilage. A trench silo should be dug on a well drained hillside and should be seven feet deep and as wide as the number of stock to be fed requires. It has been found that two short silos are better than one long silo because spoilage is thus avoided when ensilage must be used the second year. Those filling silos should put one ton, or 240 gallons of water to each ton of ensilage. It has been found that ensilage may be placed in the silo in bundles if a cutter is not available.

D. W. Sherrill, county agent, said yesterday, "It is not too late to raise plenty of feed this fall. It is urged that farmers look for rain in July or August and prepare their land for planting fall feed crops. Hegari and sudan grass are the best feed crops. It is even suggested that planting of fall feed crops should be done at once."

Home-Coming Crowd Finds Inspiration In Old-Time All-Day Meet

700 CHURCHFOLK ATTEND

The all-day service at the First Methodist Church here last Sunday will be long remembered as a highlight in the life of that church. More than 700 people attended the affair and were inspired by the program of the day. Services followed the regular routine throughout the morning each of them pointing to the celebration of the 80th anniversary of Methodism in Coryell county and citing the fact that this year is the 100th in Texas and the 150th of organized Methodism in America.

At the noon hour luncheon was served to more than 400 guests in the basement of the church where the ladies had prepared a barbecue dinner.

The afternoon session was perhaps the most interesting of all. D. W. Diserens directed an interested congregation in singing the old-time hymns at intervals throughout the afternoon. Rev. J. W. W. Shuler, a former pastor, brought a message on Prayer. Rev. J. W. Whitefield of Oglesby and Rev. Van P. Morrison of Turnersville also brought interesting messages. Several made remarks of reminiscent nature at the after-

BOOSTERS VISIT HERE WITH COWBOY TROOP

Leonard Stroud, world's champion trick rider, and a group of his cowboys and cowgirls, together with a motorcade of Hamilton boosters were in Gatesville Friday afternoon in the interest of the Hamilton Western Jubilee held last Saturday.

The rodeo troupe gave a several minutes performance on the public square for an interested group of spectators who quickly congregated at the sight of the "westerners".

Many of the troupe entertained the impromptu audience with novel stunts in roping and lasso throwing.

The Federal Farm Administration made public, the latter part of last week, the county allotments of the amount of cotton each will be allowed to produce tax-free under the terms of the Bankhead Act this year.

Coryell county's allotment will be 14,853 bales of tax-exempt cotton. This figure may be compared with neighboring county quotas, i. e. g., Bell 40,776, Bosque 8,992, Hamilton 9,494, and McLennan 47,559.

The 10,000,000 bales fixed in the act as the maximum crop which may be marketed without paying a tax of 50 per cent of its market value were distributed among the 19 cotton States and the 1,000 cotton-producing counties according to their average production during the years 1928-1932, inclusive.

The act provides, however, that if, in any of those years, production for a particular county, was materially reduced because of drouth, storms, insects or other natural causes that year should be dropped in figuring the average.

HON. C. C. McDONALD COMING TO G'VILLE

According to recent information from campaign headquarters at Austin, Hon. C. C. McDonald, candidate for Governor, will speak in Gatesville on the Courthouse lawn at 8:00 o'clock Monday evening, July 2.

Word of Mr. McDonald's plans to come to Gatesville on the above date was made known through local supporters, of the popular gubernatorial candidate.

Mr. McDonald, for the past few years a practicing attorney with offices at Longview, has many friends in Gatesville and Coryell county. He was here several weeks ago, prior to the opening of his campaign, and although his visit was short he spent the time renewing old acquaintances and making new ones.

Players and Steeds Disagree in Opening Game

Rollicking fun and hilarious laughter were rampant when the Fire Department defeated a team of all-stars in a "donkey" softball game on the lighted diamond at the Fair Park here last Saturday night, 5-4.

High points of the game were when players and steeds came to the parting of the way. Time and again, as the game proceeded, the animals developed minds of their own and refused to go in the desired direction and oft times mistook third base for first giving the base runner no end of worry. Excitement took the breath of the spectators several times when a steed flatly refused to put one foot on home plate thus delaying a score.

"Dock" Ray just couldn't look dignified on a pitching "jassonkey" nor could Lonnie Wharton remember that he had to ride the bases and not run them. Mirth overflowed in lusty roars when Louis Neumann couldn't keep his seat on his chosen beast.

This thrilling spectacle was witnessed by something like 700 interested spectators many of whom avowed that it was the best entertainment they had ever seen in Gatesville.

There will be another of these games on Wednesday night June 27. The game will be called at 8:15 and will be played for five innings under rules which have been formulated by a local committee.

Proceeds will be used to pay for equipment on the grounds and new equipment yet to be added.

EDITORIALS IN BRIEF

Congratulations to the Methodists of Coryell County for their past eighty years of noteworthy achievement, and to the local church for its delightful hospitality, and to the pastor, Marcus M. Chunn, for the birth of the Home-Coming idea and the execution of the program. The affair was a splendid success and shall be long remembered by the visiting brethren who attended the centennial celebration.

The honorable C. C. McDonald comes to Gatesville Monday night, July 2, to bring a message to the people of Coryell County regarding the affairs of Texas government and his own candidacy for the Governorship of this state. McDonald, a life long friend of the Fergusons, and for years a standard bearer of the present administration, will be at home to the people of this section, where the name of Ferguson has been a household word for many many years. As was stated in this column of the News in a previous edition concerning Hon. James V. Allred, this paper feels likewise toward McDonald—it is hoped that as many residents of Coryell County as can will hear the message another worthy candidate has for the voters of this vicinity.

Hon. Edgar E. Witt, the illustrious Lieutenant-Governor of Texas and presently candidate for elevation to the office of Governor spoke before a very enthusiastic crowd in Gatesville last evening. Witt's coming to this section was not heralded with a great deal of pomp and glory with noise and excitement but the rather mediocre crowd that listened to the words of the candidate as he spoke on the courthouse lawn retired at the close of the speaking with more knowledge to their credit than they had previously possessed—thanks to Edgar E. Witt.

The division office of the State Highway Department apparently has no intention of giving any support to Highway 36, to Temple. The office of this division is located at Waco and Waco can't see any good that might come from a passable thoroughfare from Gatesville to Temple. Without the support of the Division Coryell County cannot expect much from the Highway Commission for Number 36. It's evident that local authorities are doing all within their power to get No. 36, but unless pressure can be brought to bear elsewhere it looks like a sad story for a road that is needed in this locality very badly.

Little response has been had to the suggestion that Coryell county have a Fair this Fall, a suggestion publically inaugurated by the News recently, except that most everyone that is willing to say anything says there should be one. It is granted that this is a bad time to be talking-up such an idea. The country is badly in need of rain, it's hot and people's dispositions generally are not any too good for arguing the question. However, that doesn't diminish the fact that a Coryell County Fair would be a good thing.

When a man stands on the south side of Main Street in the business section of any town and another man whom he knows comes down the street toward him, on an unusually hot day, the odds are about five to three that one of the two will say, "Hot enough for you,"—or words to the same effect.

STUMPIN' THE STATE

WITH THE SPECTATOR

Editor's Note.—This column is published by the News as a news feature because of the interesting comments of this writer upon politics. The views expressed are those of the writer and should not be interpreted as reflecting the editorial opinions of this newspaper.

IN 1930 CLINT C. SMALL, then of Wellington, entered the race for Governor with ten other contestants and—although he was little known—ran a good third, getting more votes than the well known political figures of Tom Love, Earle Mayfield, Barry Miller, and James Young.

He had served his home district only two years in the State Senate, and yet he polled more votes in the entire Panhandle than all the other candidates combined, including Ross Sterling and "Ma" Ferguson. That is a pretty good recommendation, in your correspondent's opinion.

Recently, a Houston editor called up an Austin editor and told him that the gains of support in the Houston territory made by Small are nothing short of remarkable. Small has more newspaper indorsement than any other contestant, including the San Antonio Express, Austin American-Statesman, El Paso Times, and Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Small has a clear, conservative and honest platform that unquestionably has appealed to people all over the state.

EDGAR E. WITT, present Lieutenant Governor of Texas, was re-elected without opposition to that office two years ago by the greatest vote ever cast in Texas—973,000 to be exact. That is a recommendation that cannot be surpassed.

Witt first ran for office in 1930, entering the second primary with Sterling Strong, now Congressman-at-large. Witt's conscientious manner of campaigning and his frank speech gave him a clear cut lead of 68,000 votes in the second primary.

No one can question his record in the Lieutenant Governor's chair—he has truly been a servant of the people. And now he asks the people of Texas, the people who gave him such popular acclaim two years ago, to make him Governor of the Lone Star State—and he is conducting his campaign in the same clear cut, out-spoken manner that he has done heretofore.

He is considered by his many friends a candidate who is free of political factionalism and who stands for and can carry out a definite program. The Lieutenant Governor says, "going back to the land is the only way to end the dole." He wants a ranger force of old-time prestige and new-day ways and desires many reforms in the courts.

Witt, by the way, is our neighbor.

Interesting and outstanding among the church activities recently was the social affair honoring the 25th wedding anniversary of the Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Baldrige at their home on 308 South Lutterloh, Friday evening.

Immediately following the ceremony and congratulations, the guests registered in the bride's book, presided over by Mrs. Joyce Ryan. The book was made of silver paper tied with ribbon.

Ice cream and cake were served from the beautiful lighted table laid with silver runners covered with pink tarleton. Four pink tapers burned in silver holders. The table, which was decorated with queen's wreath and ferns, was centered with a miniature bride and groom placed under a silver arch. Mrs. Howard Compton and Mrs. W. C. PATRONIZE THESE EXPERTS

Flame of the Border

By VINGIE E. ROE

Copyright, Doubleday, Doran & Co., Inc. WNU Service

She looked at the back of Starr Stone's head, its bronze hair whipping in the backwash of wind behind the low windshield, and wished she could see his face.

If she could have done so she would have seen it set like a mask, for long before she felt the presence of this unseen danger he had been conscious of it.

He knew that not far behind them, not so high above, another little ship droned steadily out of the south—that Nemesis incarnate was on their trail. He knew that in that ship there was, in all probability, a machine gun in the hands of El Diablo himself, who was an expert in its use. What the end would be, he did not know. Only that it would be an end. There was no doubt of that.

El Capitan would never in this world let him get away with what he had done, with the knowledge he had, with the stand he had taken to forswear him and all his works. He meant to kill him—to kill them both, if no other way was possible—to shoot them down, if they would not land.

And where could they land with any chance of safety?

Well, it was fate—as he had told poor Conchita.

And then Sonya looked up and back—and saw.

Saw the soft silver thing that followed like a pointed sword.

After all!

After all the monstrous anguish, the fear, the sorrow, and the hope! Verily Starr Stone was paying for his sins, and she paid with him for that love which had redeemed him to manhood's high estate, which had made of her a fugitive, an outcast from her own, but which burned in her soul with indestructible beauty.

So be it, thought Sonya Savarin, so be it.

Down in that dim world below, the last act of this drama of the sage land was preparing for enactment. Posse after posse, scouring the lone levels, had turned back toward the railroad and the town. Baffled, wondering, they sought new reinforcements, made more extensive preparations to search the canyons and the Bad Lands country. Only Serge Savarin, the two men with him, rode and would not give up. Two Fingers, Hosteen Nez, Hosteen T'so hunted patiently in ever widening circles that had covered all the face of the flat land.

In the quest of these three silent trailers there was more than a mere search for a lost white woman. There was the dim and gentle shadow of that legendary delty the Blue South Woman who "made her hogan" in the white girl's heart.

So the Navajos rode steadily, would ride until they found her, either living or dead, if she was anywhere in the wild land, and destiny came to meet them.

They had done with the sagebrush levels. Lone Mesa loomed before them. Silently save for the click of the climbing hoofs, they ascended, fantastic figures from a long dead past, the low moon red behind them.

And in the magnificent heavens Starr Stone, looking desperately down ahead, caught the dim outline of Lone Mesa's crown, its shining white stone level.

Here was a landing place. Here were walls against which a man might make a stand if he were armed, find shelter behind which if he were not, providing he could get the time to leave his plane and gain them.

And Sonya too saw and recognized Lone Mesa.

It was almost level with them—was so—the ship was leveling off—distance, height, had dropped away—they were skimming the mesa's surface—touching—bouncing on the uneven rock—were still.

Behind them that other was at the very edge—above them—passing over.

Starr Stone, with his arms about Sonya, dragging her over the side, cast one flashing glance ahead.

"Kismet!" he said with white lips. "They beat us after all! They're down between us and the pueblo!"

So they were, the rocking gray ship still a hundred feet beyond. And El Diablo, Manuel, deadly shapes of menace, were climbing out, coming toward them.

Calmly Sonya stood beside her man.

"Come back," she said, touching him, "toward the cliff. It is our only way."

With his arm around her Starr Stone turned, and, stumbling, hurrying, they crossed the space between them and that sheer lip where once, ages ago, it seemed, they had looked into each other's tragic faces and found their destiny.

"Darling," the man said softly, "hold to me—tight—don't be afraid."

Sonya Savarin laughed, a little low sound.

"Afraid?" she said, running. "With you?"

"Halt!" came the great voice of El Diablo. "Halt! Or I fire!"

There was yet a moonlit space for the running feet. Death might catch them before they leaped to meet it.

Crack! Crack! Crack!

The sharp barking of an automatic, not the machine gun.

Bullets whined about them, clipped into the rock beyond.

And Sonya Savarin looked up for the last time into the face which had filled her heart, her soul, to the exclusion of all else since that wild day in the spring here on this wind-swept height, when she had first beheld it.

The man looked down, slowed in his stride.

One moment more—a kiss, maybe, and this glorious adventure would be done forever—sealed like a deathless flame in the casket of eternity.

And then, high on the thin blue air there came a sound as old as the ruined walls behind, a sound to chill the blood, to shock the very soul. Clear and high and savage, primitive as life itself, the war cry of the Navajos. It pealed above the cracking gun, stopped the man and the woman like a hand upon their shoulders.

And out from the dusky shadows of the crumbling walls three shadows came like darting flames. In the very act of whirling to meet them El Capitan and his henchman were caught in their onslaught, went down beneath them.

Then, as Starr Stone ran toward them, as Sonya followed, tall Two Fingers rose with the dapper pilot held by the neck in his powerful hands. Behind him Hosteen Nez, Hosteen T'so, came struggling up with the great bulk of El Diablo fighting like a fiend between them.

"South Woman," said Two Fingers, "what have these two done to you and to your man?"

He spoke in Navajo, and Sonya answered, panting.

"They would kill us both—because we know too much about them—they are breakers of the law—outlaws across the Border. Me they stole three nights ago—my man they would hang in the sun to die the slow death—and me they would give to this one—and to their followers after."

Two Fingers looked at her with quiet eyes.

"It is good," he said, "that we come."

"Oh—good!" she cried.

For another moment the tall Indian looked at her.

Then he stooped and caught Manuel as one takes a child and raised him cross-wise above his head.

Two Fingers was a tall and powerful man, and he looked like some ancient god of his fathers as he strode toward the mesa's lip.

In one horrified second Sonya Savarin saw what he would do, and a scream escaped her, but Starr Stone turned her face.

And Two Fingers, walking steadily toward that sharp rim, paused on its edge and cast his shrieking burden far out to the empty space below.

Hard on his heels Hosteen Nez and Hosteen T'so, with El Diablo, fighting every inch, between them.

"Quince!" he cried as he passed. "Save me and all I own is yours!"

"Remember those who fed the vultures, senor," said Starr Stone, "whose bones dried in the sun. Remember the women!—the children starved! It is your fate."

"Save me—Quince—save—"

But the wind of his falling snatched the last word from his mouth.

And there was silence on the mesa's rim, five people standing still for one breathless moment.
