175 Farmers and Business Men Make Trip to Lindale

OFFICIALS TAKE PARTY THRU AREA EXPLAINING WORK AND BENEFITS.

175 farmers and business men of Coryell county and Gatesville returned here late Friday afternoon after a trip of 200 miles to Lindale to view and have explained to them the working of the Erosion Demonstration Area located in and around that city.

Leaving here at about 6:00 A. M. Friday, the caravan arrived in Lindale about 10:30 and were loaded in trucks furnished by this service, and with instructors and officials, including E. T. Nagle, State Administrator of the Soil Erosion Camps of Texas and Paul Walsler, Assistant Regional Director of Project No. 20, were carried thru the Demonstration Area which was explained in detail and concrete examples of the work shown.

Two different groups or tours were necessary on account of the number who went, one group leaving at 10:30 and the other at 12:30. While waiting on the trucks to make the second trip, both Mr. Walsler and Mr. Nagle, explained to the assembled farmers and business men more about the area and what they would see. Fred G. Prewitt, Secretary of the Gatesville Chamber of Commerce, thanked the authorities for their gracious reception and for showing the visitors the work being done.

Red Cross Inoculation For Typhoid Prevention Will Start Next Sa.

Next Saturday morning, June 15, will mark the opening of the Typhoid Inoculation Campaign under the direction of the Coryell County Chapter of the Red Cross.

It is hoped that at least 12,000 people will respond to the campaign. The current rainy season, together with other conditions, make this summer a likely season for typhoid, thus every person who is not immune should take advantage of this rare opportunity of getting immunized for only 35 cents.

Below are listed the centers which have been designated, together with the name of a chairman in each community. These chairmen are prepared to answer any questions that might be asked. The time is specified for each center, and it is urged that those who wish immunization come to the centers early. Other communities due to come to these centers for inoculation are listed in the same paragraph following the central place:

RESOLUTION CALLS UPON STATE TO COMPLETE 1100 MILES HIGHWAY IN THESE COUNTIES.

In his speech at the meeting of the Central Texas Highway Association in Waco, Thursday last, Chairman Hines of the Texas Highway Commission gave assurance to the delegates attending that as much money as possible will be allocated from highway funds to complete gaps in unfinished highways in this section.

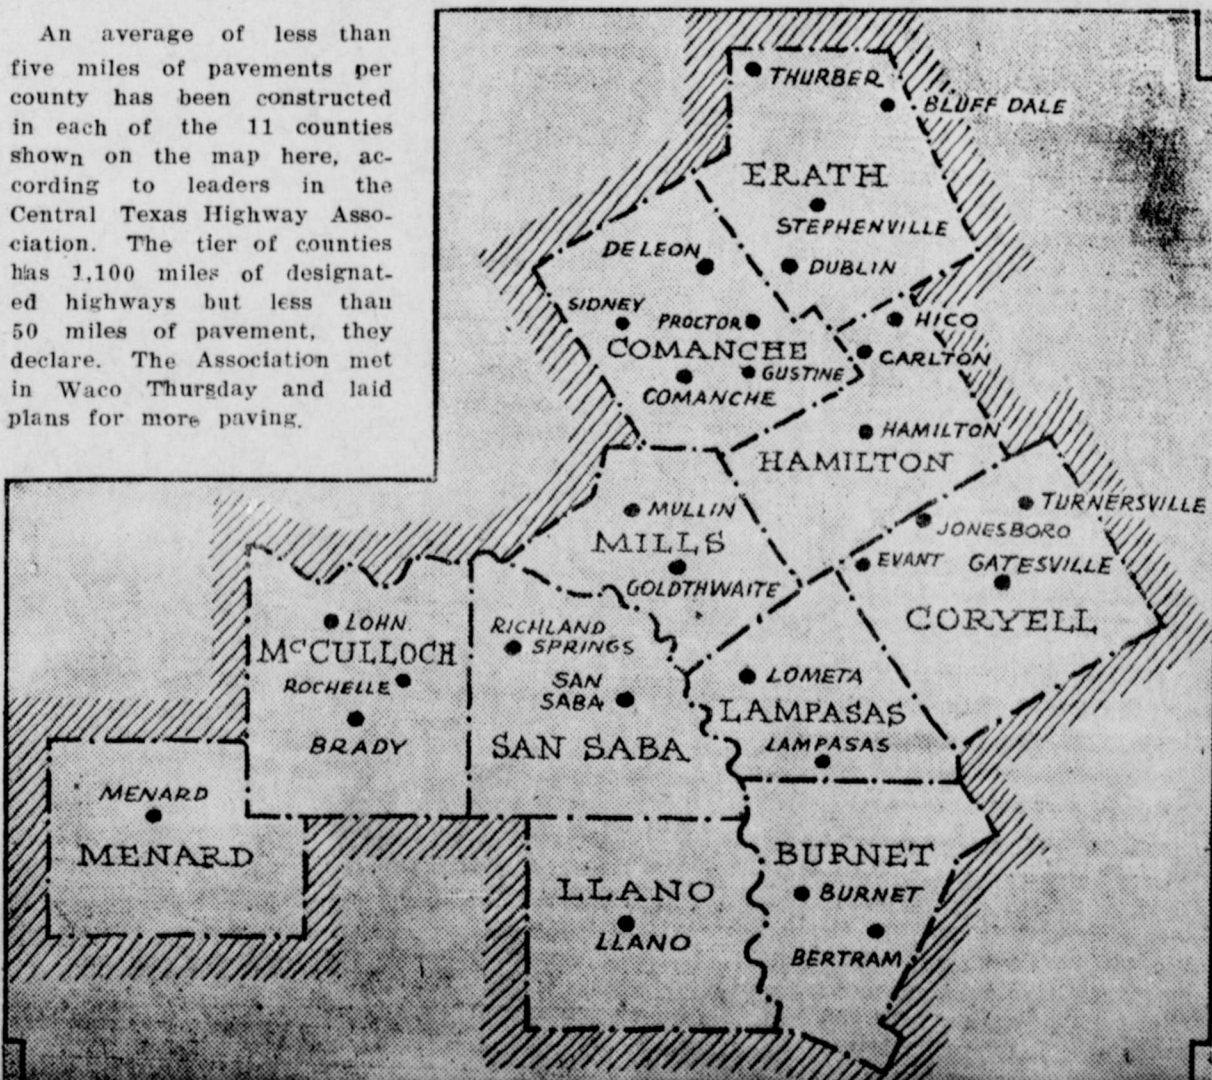

Hines' promise to the section pictured on this page after representatives had complained during the morning session of the association that this part of the state had not received a square deal in completion of highways. The highway commissioner outlined the proposed state road program and told of hopes of securing 100 million from the federal government to aid in this work.

Resolutions drawn up by the committee on resolutions for the association, composed of one man from each county, asked the highway commission to take steps to finish 1100 miles of designated roads in 31 central Texas counties on which practically no work has been done. Also, the resolutions proposed that the association send a personal representative to Washington with Hines and the highway commission to aid them in securing the 100 millions for road work in this state.

H. Burks of Comanche, secretary of the association led the demand for better treatment of central Texas counties in highway matters. He named McCulloch, Mills, San Saba, Llano, Burnet, Lampasas, Coryell, Hamilton, Erath, Comanche and (See HIGHWAY page 5)

Map Shows Need of Highway Program

An average of less than five miles of pavements per county has been constructed in each of the 11 counties shown on the map here, according to leaders in the Central Texas Highway Association. The tier of counties has 1,100 miles of designated highways but less than 50 miles of pavement, they declare. The Association met in Waco Thursday and laid plans for more paving.

NEED OF FLOOD CONTROL

Destruction to growing crops caused by recent overflows in the Brazos River and its tributaries shows the necessity of flood control proposed by advocates of the Brazos River Conservation and Reclamation District. It is estimated that crop losses in the lowlands of this district amounted to more than ten million dollars during the flood season of the month of May.

There is a measure before Congress asking for an appropriation sufficient to construct flood control projects in the district. Louis Mims, President of the Brazos Conservation and Reclamation District, has recently been in Washington in the interest of the bill and reports that progress was being made on the Brazos Project in the national capitol, and some funds were expected to be granted. Mims stated that the project looked brighter than ever before, but emphasized that it would be necessary to supply the authorities with accurate information of the present flood.

DAD'S DAY, SUNDAY JUNE 16

Dad's Day! Well, the old boy ought to get a break at least one day in the 365. He's most convenient. Lot's of us put up with him only when we're in a "gimmie, let me have, have you" mood. It's awfully convenient to use his money and credit (when it's good) and buy the things we want, whether we need them or not.

Even Mother, as good to us as she is, doesn't always hand out the "wherewith" like the old boy does. To some of us, he's only in the family, and when someone in the family needs something—that costs. He's just to be tolerated—with very little thought of what he wants and wishes.

Let's make him feel IMPORTANT, this once, even if he slumps back into the same old rut he has been so far. Let's give him something for this day, that he needs, if anything, or something he doesn't need would be more of a novelty, since he rarely buys anything he doesn't need. And—when you buy it, have the graciousness not to use his money or "CHARGE" it to him. Of course, he'll appreciate the thoughtfulness, and cheerfully pay the bill, but DON'T do that this once. Make it a rare occasion, this Sunday, June 16. Do right by your good old Dad, this time—and don't stop there. It's DAD'S DAY, and make it a CAPITAL day for him.

World Comment

By JOE BURNS

RAMSEY MacDONALD, Prime Minister of Great Britain since 1929, resigned last week and was succeeded by Stanley Baldwin, former premier and leader of the conservative party. MacDonald did not retire from the cabinet but exchanged posts with Baldwin, becoming Lord President of the Council.

The retirement of MacDonald from the Prime Ministership had been predicted for some time. The conservatives, with a majority in Parliament, want Baldwin at the helm when the general elections are held in the fall.

Few changes of importance were made in the Cabinet. Sir ister, being succeeded as foreign Minister by Sir Manuel Hoare, former secretary for India, Robert Anthony Eden, League of Nations expert and Lord Privy Seal, was raised to ministerial rank with the title of Minister for League of Nations Affairs.

Baldwin's appointment as Prime Minister will mean little change in Anglo-American relations. The new premier has announced that the war debt installment due June 15 (Saturday) will not be paid. It is known, however, that Baldwin desires closer co-operation between the two English speaking nations in the interest of world peace.

THIS WEEK the Senate is expected to extend the skeletonized NRA for two years, okaying the action taken by the House last week. The new NRA agency will have only a shadow of its former powers, carrying on with a greatly reduced personnel as a statistical research Administration to continue the thought of industrial planning but its powers will stop there.

Donald Richberg, administrator of the old NRA, is stepping out, his resignation being accepted by the President after the NRA was decided upon.

The American Federation of Labor is working upon a plan of its own which it hopes to present to Congress this session that would require all companies shipping across state lines to be licensed by the Federal Government. To obtain these licenses it would be necessary to live up to the regulations that existed under the old codes.

FRANCE had four premiers last week. The Cabinet of Premier Flandin fell when the Chamber of Deputies refused it powers to rule by decree in financial and economic matters. Talk of inflation had caused huge amounts of gold to be withdrawn in one day, most of which was sent to the U. S.

Fernand Bouisson, former President of the Chamber, formed a new government after Flandin resigned that lasted only three days, being refused the same powers asked by Flandin. Francois Pietri, Marine Minister in the Flandin cabinet, was unable to obtain support for his cabinet and quickly resigned. President Le Brun then persuaded Pierre Laval, former minister in the Flandin cabinet, to take the premiership after he had twice previously refused.

The Chamber gave Laval full authority to balance the budget and enforce the needed economies "to save the franc." Obviously the franc will be "saved" but the road ahead for Laval will be rocky. Economic conditions are daily growing worse throughout France. While other countries have had five years of depression and are now slowly recovering, France is experiencing its first taste of hard times.

THE VANQUARD of the combined American fleet steamed into San Diego harbor yesterday morning, marking the end of the spring maneuvers. It is the opinion of Admiral Joseph Mason Reeves, commander of the combined battle fleet in the Pacific and umpire of Fleet Problem XVI, that the navy of Uncle Sam had developed into a fighting machine equal if not superior to any other in the world as a result of the recent maneuvers conducted in the Pacific. Fifty thousand men and over 100 ships have been conducting a mimic war for weeks in a 5,000,000 square mile area with a loss of less than ten lives. And the high efficiency of Uncle Sam's blue-clad sailors has been bettered to an extent surprising to even Admiral Reeves—stern disciplinarian that he is.

OLD AGE PENSION

House Joint Resolution No. 19 is a proposed amendment to the constitution to be voted on August 24, 1935. If adopted it will give the Legislature authority to provide for an old age assistance at not exceeding $15 per month for all who are over 65 years of age.

The Legislature will have the power to prescribe such limitations, restrictions and regulations as it deems proper.

For the information of those who are interested in this amendment, the 1930 census shows the number of people in Texas from 65 to 74 years of age to be 160,853. From 75 years of age or over, 71,606, or a total of 232,459. If a pension of $15.00 per month is granted to each of the 232,459, it would cost, per year, $41,842,620.00.

The state now pays $16.50 for the schooling of 1,560,433 children (6 to 17 years of age), amounting to $25,747,227 last year, hence, it is possible for 1,792,897 of the 5,824,715 population of Texas to draw more than $65,000,000 per annum of public money.—Texas Tax Journal.

BIG FEAST FOR HIS FRIENDS

JOHNSONS IN ASTONISHING AIR SAFARI

One of the most spectacular screen offerings of a decade is promised for the Palace Theatre when "Baboonna," newest African adventure film of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, opens there today. "Baboonna" is described as an aerial epic over Africa. Requiring twenty months in the filming, it was made while the Martin Johnsons toured 60,000 miles of unexplored jungle, visiting many spots in the dark continent never before glimpsed by civilized man.

This newest screen exploit of the intrepid pair reveals man's most dramatic conquest—the first record of Africa's remotest secrets filmed from the air.

In two Sikorsky amphibians christened "The Spirit of Africa" and "Osa's Ark," the Johnsons circled mysterious Mt. Kenya, snow-covered and inaccessible; flew over the vast Iturbi forest, visited the "mouth of Hell," Lake Rudolf; charged a vast herd of rhinos and another of buffalo across desert stretches, visited the Pygmies, who were enchanted with these huge birds that carried men; descended on the homeland of the baboons and accomplished other feats which would have been impossible had any other means of transport been employed.

wonders are presented in "Baboonna," with, it is said, an accuracy and reality never matched in an adventure or travel film. According to those who have viewed the picture prior to release, the result is an extraordinary one—a veritable succession of wonders.

Where others have stopped, the Johnsons started—on safari in the air. Where no man or woman ever went before—they flew! From all advance accounts, "Baboonna" is an exceptional achievement.

CHAPTER II

WHAT HAS HAPPENED
Nicky Kerry, handsome, debonair, healthy bachelor, is one of the most popular men in Europe—especially with the ladies, though his charm lies chiefly in his culture, intelligence and his daring, for he is a well-known sportsman. In a motorboat race on the Riviera, he deliberately overturns his boat that his younger brother, Brian, whom he adores, might win. He later introduces Brian to the Riviera's elite at a cocktail party at the villa of Mrs. Loutledge. The Countess Margot de Legere, in love with Nicky, is one of his guests.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

The following morning found Brian busily studying a set of blueprints. He called Nicky over. "I suppose you know the firm's bidding on that new Chilean railroad bridge. Well, this is my shear diagram—and I'm a bit worried about it."
 Nicky stared over his brother's shoulders for a long moment. "How about increasing the maximum bending moment to WL? See what mean?"

Brian turned to him eagerly. "You are one of the greatest engineers in the world. Why don't you come back?"

Nicky shrugged. "It doesn't amuse me any more. When you came into the firm, my dad—I stepped out. And I'm staying out."

"All the same, I wish you'd think it over—and come back to London with me."

Nicky grinned. "London—in November. I'd just as soon go to the Arctic! Pleasanter climate. Matter of fact, I'm leaving for Monte Carlo—to pick up my yacht. Then—a long cruise—following the sun."
 "But—" Brian frowned, "you

In fact, there was but one chip left. Nicky leaned over her shoulder, took the chip, and before the astonished girl could say anything, placed it on Number 17. The wheel was whirled. Fast...fast...slow...and presto change! the young lady had won chips—heaps of them!

Calmly (Nicky was always calm), Nicky cashed in the chips and stuffed the sheaf of franc notes into the young lady's purse. When the young lady, whom we'll call Kay, for that's her name, caught her breath, she managed:

"I—I can't accept all this!"
 Nicky smiled. "But it's yours. You won it."

"Half of it belongs to you," Kay held out several of the bank notes. Nicky hesitated a moment, studying her youthfulness. As though inspired, the idea of continuing the game became an appealing obsession.

Nicky bowed with mock gravity. "Please—I couldn't take money from a lady. After all, I have some pride left—"

"Oh, I'm so sorry. I'd heard this was a bad season over here. Look—if I weren't a girl, you'd take it, wouldn't you? I mean—you could use the money—"

Nicky smiled bravely. "Perhaps Mademoiselle knows what it means to go hungry?"

Kay was sympathetic. "No—but it must be dreadful. Particularly here—with people throwing away money so foolishly. It's enough to make a socialist or communist—or something—out of anybody! Tell me—if it isn't too personal—"

Nicky bowed again. "I am what you might call one of the great unemployed."
 Kay's eyes became radiant. "Once

Nicky smiled. "But it's yours. You won it."

can't go on always—just—following the sun...Nicky, I hate to preach, but—well, I'd like to see you settle down." Brian had seen the young lady leave earlier that morning, with Nicky throwing a good-bye kiss from the window.
 "Now, I ask you," said Nicky, "is there anything more depressing than the spectacle of a bachelor settling down! The fireside—the pipe and slippers—and rheumatism! No, thanks, I'm not having any."

"But—I've always hoped you wouldn't go on being a bachelor—"
 "I've never been interested in any woman for more than a week. Perhaps that's by misfortune. Perhaps not."

Brian spoke sincerely. "If I ever fell in love, I'd love her all my life!"
 "I'm sure you would, old boy. And that's as it should be," Nicky shrugged. "But for me—women are something to dine with—dance with—and forget. Oh—More coffee?"

"You mean, there hasn't ever been anyone—"
 "Shall I let you in on a secret? There's one lady I've lived with—for twelve years!"

Brian gasped.
 "Minnie!" said Nicky, pointing to the parrot swinging on the perch.

Nicky leaned over the rail of his yacht, staring at the bright, glittering lights of the Riviera which threw sharp pin-points of radiance on the water. In direct contrast was the smoothly-flowing path of the moon's glow. There was no doubting the romantic implication of the night.

Weems, Nicky's butler, valet and general man-about-the-house, spoke a little dolefully. "We didn't engage a table ashore, sir."
 "Well," said Nicky amiably, "I haven't any plans for dinner."
 Weems was shocked. "You aren't dining alone sir? In Monte Carlo?"
 "One of the few adventures left in life—is not always knowing who you're going to dine with!"

"Yes, sir."
 "Good-night, Weems."
 "Night, sir."

Nicky descended the ladder to the small speedboat waiting for him. Nicky couldn't know then how close he really was to adventure. But, then, none of us ever do....

Nicky's first move was to the gambling casino. There would be beautiful women and the thrill of the game. There were beautiful women, also some not so beautiful, but it was one of the beautiful ones that caught Nicky's eye—and held it a considerable time.

The young lady was playing the wheel and doing very, very badly.

I read the most romantic story—about a Grand Duke who was starving and he became a gigolo—"
 "So you think I am a gigolo?"
 And so the illusion that Nicky was a gentlemanly pauper persisted, mainly because Nicky wished it to. It continued right on through dinner, cocktails and a stroll in the moonlight, which, by the way, made Kay still more beautiful in the shimmering light, if such a fact were possible. The path of lunar glory across the bay stirred something in Kay. She turned to Nicky impulsively.

"Were—were you every so happy that you didn't want the night to end?"
 "Yes," said Nicky gravely.
 "What was she like? Was she very beautiful?"
 Nicky smiled. "I can't remember. But she must have been—"

"Please don't be so cynical. You see, this is the most perfect adventure I've ever had in my whole life! That moon over the water—and the music. I wish we were out there—in a boat—"

Nicky turned suddenly. "I know where we can borrow a boat!"
 Of course, Nicky didn't have to borrow the boat, for it was his. But Kay didn't know that. Soon they were roaring across the bay, the water whipping over the bow in a fine spray. Kay's eyes were happy, glistening.

She had to shout above the noise of the motor. "Shut it off—I can't hear what you're saying!"
 Nicky obeyed, and the motor purred to a stop. "I'm not saying anything."

Kay laughed. "Oh—I rather hoped you were. I guess it's true that the moon does do things to people...."
 She gazed up at the star-studded sky. "Or why would I be drifting around the Mediterranean—with a perfectly strange man! You realize, of course, that I don't even know your name—?"
 "Names are unimportant. The only important thing is that the population of the world is two billion—and out of those two billion, two people meet tonight—and laugh together for a while, under the moon—"

"Is that all it means to you—laughter?"
 "Laughter, my dear, lasts longer than love."
 "I still think we ought to have some kind of names to call each other—I can't go on just saying 'you.'"

Nicky grinned. "Well—we met at Monte Carlo. Why don't you call me 'Monte'—and I'll call you 'Carlotta'."

When Pharaoh's enterprising daughter
Found little Moses by the water,
It seems the lucky child had handy
What has become of our favorite candy!

AN ANCIENT SWEET

HAD YOU ever suspected that the ancestor of the modest modern marshmallow first saw the light of day in ancient Egypt of the Pharaohs? The mallow plant with its big, pink flower grew in Egyptian marshes, just as in American marshes today, and the Egyptians gathered its roots, dried them and pulverized them to make one of their favorite confections. So, though the Egyptian "marshmallow" was probably not much like its American descendant, still the latter has distinctly oriental connections.

That is not the reason for the name of Oriental marlow, but it might be. Oriental marlow is really an orange-ginger ice cream, and a very superior one because it is also a marshmallow ice cream. Even if frozen without stirring in the refrigerator, it is creamy, smooth, and free from ice crystals. It may also be made in an ice cream freezer, without the labor of agitating. Or, simply use a mold with a tight-fitting cover sealed with adhesive tape, and freeze in an ice-salt pack.

Marshmallows have this magical power to make ice creams frozen without stirring as velvety as those which are continually agitated. The pure cane sugar, corn syrup and gelatine which go into their making combine to form a perfect "protective colloid" which defies crystallization. So when you use this recipe you may be sure that not only the flavor but the texture will be something very special.

A GOOD SUGGESTION

McGregor may participate in the Texas Centennial . . . and profitably. Suggestion for attracting motorists and visitors along this route, the following is submitted: Procure some vacant building or office, designate it as the Centennial office in McGregor, and construct a board large enough to hold a miniature relief model of our territory, with indications of prominent and historical points of interest. Then when tourists visit our little city, they may be referred to that office, and in a moment, see what McGregor has to offer, historically, and and relative to Texas progress. —McGregor Mirror.

Tonight football fans, sportsmen, and athletic enthusiasts in general, gather in the local high school gym to meet Mr. Earle Worley, who has been elected to lead the 1935 Hornet football team, as well as fill the position as principal in the local high school.

From the article that appeared in the last issue of the News in regard to Coach Earle, one needs no introduction as to his past record, however, fans in general are of the opinion that a coach should not be judged by his record entirely. We agree that a coach's record in some instances has nothing to do with the local situation, however, with all circumstances being equal, it has a lot to do with making or ruining a team. In this instance we firmly believe past records count a lot and that the local school board is to be congratulated on their selection.

All athletic enthusiasts are urged by the Hornet Club members as well as this writer to be on hand tonight and give Gatesville's new coach a big hand.

Last Thursday night the Firemen nosed out the Oilers, 18-16, in one of the most thrilling contests played this year in the local softball loop. The personnel of both clubs had little trouble connecting with the pill, and when a batter failed to get as much as a double, he was considered "punk."

Last night the Firemen played the Independent crew while the Oilers went to Valley Mills to take on a crew of hard-hitting ball players of that city.

Wednesday night the Independents meet the Oilers, which promises to be a great game. The Conoco Club is improving, and don't be surprised should the Oilers defeat the Independent aggregation.

Thursday night the Oilers are to play the Smokeaters. The Oilers are due to lose this game, however, much excitement is promised.

The past week end games in the County Baseball League were exceptionally close. Saturday the Training School defeated Plainview 5-1. Barton, State ace, again proved to be superior to his opponent, who also pitched a good game. The Jonesboro-Turnersville game was played the past Wednesday instead of Saturday, and Jonesboro won 6-5. Drake of Jonesboro and Baker of Turnersville took the box for their respective teams, and both kept the game interesting throughout. Andy Watson, diminutive Jonesboro second baseman, showed up well in the field, as did Balch, Turnersville third baseman. We have no report on the Ireland-Pidcoke game.

Hubbard managed to shake-off the strong Liberty crew Sunday 8-4. Osage defeated the Levita team 7-6. Shiffner, Osage, came to the bat first half of the ninth inning. Levita was leading 6-5, and one man on, hit a home run to win the game. Purmela shut-out the Mound team Sunday 3-0. Mound got off to a late start letting the Purmela make all three tallies in the first inning, but finally woke up to keep the game interesting.

Explanation of Farm Allotment Made by Agt. For Farmers' Benefit

Producers are being mailed their copy of the new contract marked, "Producer's Copy," this is for producers' own records and where marked with above and no other communication attached, producers are informed this is solely for their own records.

Some confusion has arisen concerning the meaning of the "Farm Allotment" on the reduction contract. To explain this for the satisfaction of farmers "Farm Allotment" as on the reduction contract means the number of pounds lint on which "parity payment" will be made. Parity payment is 1 1/4 cent per pound in 1935.

For example, a farmer's base acreage is 100 and the yield per acre is one hundred pounds, the five year base production lint would be ten thousand lbs. Forty per cent of this is 4,000 pounds which is the Farm Allotment, that part which is domestically consumed. Parity payment in this case is 4,000 times 1 1/4 cents or $50.00.

This is not the number of pounds on which tax exemption certificates will be issued. Tax exemption certificates will be issued roughly on approximately 65 per cent of the base production lint which is secured by multiplying base acreage times average yield per acre.

ation will be sufficient to explain the difference between Farm Allotment on a reduction contract and an allotment on Tax Exemption Certificates on the Bankhead application.
