State Superintendent Of California Speaks At Texas Convention

The teachers of Coryell county had opportunities at San Antonio to hear speakers from all sections of the United States. These speakers were inspirational in their talks, and mentioned practical phases of educational work that is being carried out successfully. The California speaker stated repeatedly that whatever progress is made must begin where the people are, and it must proceed as development, and the activities of communities permit it to do so. "Teaching youth to live and make a living" was the general theme.

Those who attended the convention from Coryell county were Melvin Tharp, Ozella Hargis, Laura Tharp, Mrs. Lula Harris and Margie Upton of Pearl; L. A. Holmes of White Hall; Willie Mae Green of New Olive; Mrs. Pearl Powell and May Powell of Hubbard; La Vera Mosley and Ima Fellers of Mound; S. C. Anderson and Fay Bowman of Belcher; Curtis Humphries and Mrs. Estell Humphries of Flat; Mike Coleman and Mrs. Loys Conner Carigan of Peabody; Fradell Upton of Plainview; James D. Carter of Evant; Leslie Humes and Mrs. J. E. Huddleston of Oglesby; J. C. Cullwell, Supt. Jolin Rogers, Lucille Holt, Johnnie Jacobs, Miss Swain, Jewell Dickson, Jewell Yarbrough and Everett L. Williams of Copperas Cove; Frank L. Williams, Mrs. John P. Reesing, Ruth Grimes, E. D. Shelton, Linnie Fore, Lois Grantham, and Lizzie Lockard of Gatesville.

GEO. I. JOHNSON NOW OPERATES FRESH AIR SERVICE STATION

"Across from Bauman's!" That's the location. Who's there? George I. Johnson. What's he doin'? Operating the Fresh Air Service Station, selling gas, oil and accessories etc. to the public.

Mr. Johnson's station is located on North Lutterloh as advertised and has as an assistant Olin Johnson. Mr. Johnson is familiar with filling station business having operated a Conoco station near the Caruth gin on Lutterloh.

COTTON STATISTICS AS PRESENTED BY CO. STATISTICIAN

Reports show 13,869 bales of cotton were ginned in Coryell county from the crop of 1935 prior to November 14, as compared with 12,948 bales ginned to November 14 of last year, according to W. R. Goodson, Special Agent for the Bureau of the Census of the Department of Commerce.

All of which shows, the 1935 crop is 921 bales better than that of last year at the same date.

Mrs. Beatrice LaSar attended the Texas-A. & M. football game and was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ragan and Mrs. Lee Olivia of Austin and Senator Poage and Miss Oliva of Bastrop over the week end.

River Harnessed at Boulder Dam

Three million pounds of steel in a massive door were lowered against the Colorado river at Boulder dam, subjecting the stream to man's control for the first time. The door stopped the flow through tunnel No. 4 on the upstream side, and sent it through diversion tunnel No. 1 on the same side. Photograph shows water from the Colorado river, running through diversion tunnel No. 1 at Boulder dam.

S. M. U. PROFESSOR HEADS HISTORY DEPARTMENT OF CENTENNIAL

Dallas, Dec. 2.—Establishment of the historical department of the Texas Centennial Exposition under Professor Herbert Gambrell of Southern Methodist University has created state-wide interest amongst private collectors and owners of historical heirlooms.

Hundreds of offers of historic mementoes of the heroes of Texas history have been pouring in from city and farm house. The private offers alone would fill the spacious hall of 1836 in the Texas Hall of State which has been allocated for the historical exhibit. Plans are being discussed for an additional space for historical exhibits in the million dollar building.

From Dr. William E. Howard of Dallas, noted as a private collector of Tevania, comes the proffer of such priceless documents in connection with Texas history as the last will and testament of General Santa Anna who was vanquished by General Sam Houston at San Jacinto. Also a certified signature of King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of Spain; the autographs of 120 Texas and national figures of whom Texas counties are named; the autograph of every president of the United States and the picture and signature of every Viceroy of New Spain who ruled Texas from Mexico City.

Added to this will come exhibits from the Garcla library at the University of Texas in Austin which will include the original account of Cabeza de Vaca of his adventures in Texas published in Zamorra Spain in 1529.

The original Texas Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the Republic and the State of Texas will be brought from the State Capitol at Austin, under guard of Texas Rangers, to be exhibited during the Exposition in Dallas.

$40,000 A DAY SPENT IN DALLAS ON PAYROLLS ETC. AT EXPOSITION

Dallas, Dec. 2.—Forty thousand dollars a day is going into payrolls and material at the huge grounds of the Texas Centennial Exposition here.

This huge expenditure will be increased as the drive to complete the mammoth buildings of the Exposition reaches its full swing in December.

Where 1,100 men are working now, there will be 5,000 by January 1, according to William A. Webb, the Exposition manager.

Searing bank statements already reflect the pressure of this additional employment. These figures are far above those of 1934. Banking experts expect them to go still higher as the tourist swing starts with the opening of the exposition June 6. They also expect the boom to spread to the state as the influx of out-of-state visitors to the Centennial continues on to the historic shrines and places of interest which have made Texas a lure since, and before, its historic, successful fight for freedom in 1836.

Construction of six buildings, involving when completed an expenditure of close to $3,000,000, has started on the Exposition grounds.

T. R.'s BULL MOOSE BROUGHT IN BY HUNTERS

The head hunters were really in town Monday! And did they have heads. So many, in fact that a photographer was called out to "snap" them. All which means:—

Two of the County's master hunters, Charlie Liljeblad and Howard Cowpton received their specimens of the last hunt up in Wyoming, consisting of two bull moose heads, four antelopes and three elk, which were killed by them and their guides on a recent trip to that state.

Besides the heads, antlers etc fixed by the taxidermists, they also had ash trays, table legs and a number of other gadgets which used up all the inedible parts of the "kill."

They'll nearly need a hunting lodge to stow all their trophies away in—that is if they keep hunting.

R. W. WARD OPENS STATION ON LUTTERLOH

As announced elsewhere in these columns, R. W. Ward, former operator of the Fresh Air Service Station, has moved across the street in a new Station. Mr. Ward has contracted to handle Humble and Eastex products besides a number of the leading lubricating oils which are sold in this territory.

FIRE AT POSTON BROS. AND BRITAIN'S MONDAY

A small fire started in the Poston Bros. and Britain Implement Shop on Leon Street, Monday morning at 6:55 o'clock. It was caused from an explosion of a gas stove.

Men in the shop at the time put out the flames before anyone called the fire department. Very little damage was done.

By presidential decree, Guatemala has reduced interest rates on crop loans.

By June 6 the Southwest's successor to the Century of Progress—an up-to-date, improved version of that great exhibition at Chicago—must be completed, and at a cost of $10,000,000.

Real estate men estimate this $10,000,000 expenditure will be fully justified, with the grouped projects having a tangible value of more than $20,000,000 when finally finished.

AGAIN, WILL ROGERS

We have no crow of our own to pick! We really admire and revere the memory of Will Rogers. Considerable space has been given in these columns to the Will Rogers Memorial Fund which has been receiving publicity thru every known medium thruout the United States.

Saturday, in Fort Worth, no other than Governor James V. Allred himself made a plea to Texans to support this worthy movement by contributing, not largely, but a contribution from every one of a small amount for this fund.

Plans have been made to use this money for underprivileged, crippled and deformed children in a manner similar to the Warm Springs Foundation which has been sponsored by President Roosevelt.

The time limit has been extended for Texans until December 15 to receive donations. It is hoped by the entire staff of the News' that people of this county will co-operate in making this county's gift, somewhat in line with what is being done in other counties. So far, only three donations have been made thru this office, and we understand none have been made through any of the banks.

Let's all get behind this, and let our cash (in a small measure) say what our minds know about Will Rogers, and in appreciation of his world of uplifting humor which he so cheerfully gave us when he was with us.

Since the installation of a new foolproof system of pass dating, a marked increase in class attendance has been shown. Each man's pass is dated from the time his last class ends, thereby, eliminating all excuses for his not attending class. Although equally effective, this system presents none of the usual difficulties met within a system of compulsory class attendance.

Rev. E. D. Shelton, local Church of Christ minister, was in camp Thursday evening to conduct the weekly religious service. Rev. Shelton's conservatism and practical interpretation of the Bible won for him a place of reverence and respect in the hearts of all who heard his address.

Being inspired by patriotic urges, men on extra duty have found their labor less irksome the last few days. They have been busily engaged in constructing the foundation for a flagpole which is to be erected in the southeast corner of the parade ground. # PAINTER & LEE

The opening gun of the 1936 presidential campaign was sounded at Atlanta, Ga., when President Roosevelt made a vigorous defense of his acts and policies.

Lavish Government spending, the President said, has ended. And, to show he means business, $400,000,000 was cut from appropriation requests of regular Government departments for the next fiscal year.

The President replied to those critics who accuse the Government of piling up an "unconscionable and backbreaking debt." In the crisis of 1933 he related, "many of the great bankers" who "flocked to Washington" told him the country safely could stand a national debt between 55 and 70 billions. The national debt now, according to the President, is only 29 1/2 billions.

He repeated his determination to end the dole, and added: "I see clear signs of a revival of material prosperity in country and in city."

The President announced the Government has passed the "peak of appropriations," and asserted the Administration's employment goal had been substantially achieved. Orders have been issued for the remainder of 3,500,000 employables to go to work, he said.

He underscored this: "We can look forward with assurance to a decreasing deficit."

David Lawrence points out that the President's speech reveals the strategy of the 1936 campaign for re-election. Roosevelt appealed to the discontent of the Nation in 1931, according to this writer, but in 1936 he will appeal to the contentment of the people, and "his objective in speeches and statements will be to prove that the American Nation has progressed toward a sound recovery."

This writer points out that for Roosevelt to argue that conditions are bad and that something must be done about it, is to admit that the New Deal has not in three years remedied the situation. Roosevelt, in 1932, as the political saying goes, viewed with alarm, "but now he must of course, "point with pride."

The United States naval delegation, composed of Norman Davis, unofficial European ambassador of the President, William Phillips of the State Department and Admiral William H. Standley, is now on its way to the London naval conference.

American delegates frankly expect to accomplish nothing, as this Government, along with the British, is now willing to accede to Japan's demand for naval parity.

Japan took the short end of a 5-5-3 ratio for capital ships and aircraft carriers at the 1922 conference, and again in 1930 was forced to accept a 10-10-7 ratio on other fighting ships, the meeting being held at London.

Dissatisfied, Tokyo has denounced these treaties, demanding all-around equality. And it's for this reason that admirals and diplomatists of six nations will meet Dec. 6 in London to see if they can write a new formula which will satisfy the Nippons while maintaining the mythical "Western" supremacy in the Pacific.

The six nations meeting are Great Britain, committed to increasing the Royal Navy to cope with possible European or Far Eastern emergencies; United States, committed to parity with Britain; Japan, committed to parity with the U. S., but not believed to be financially able to match American parity with Britain; Germany, committed, by separate agreement with Britain, to a fleet not more than 35 per cent in total tonnage of the British Navy; France, committed to a large program of new construction to insure superiority over the resurgent Navy of Nazi Germany; Italy, committed to a program of colonial expansion in Africa and charged with an aim to make the Mediterranean a "Roman Lake."

Claude Swanson, Secretary of the Navy, sharing the belief of other Washington officials that the London conference is doomed to failure, recommended to the President that the American Navy be built up to the full strength authorized in the Washington and London pacts.

"The United States adheres to the Washington and London Treaties. Only a failure to renew these Treaties could change American policy, and then only in the event that other nations exceed the limits provided," Swanson recommended that plans for building new warships to the total 1,125,000 tonnage permitted under the treaties "be continued without change."

Enactment of a BONUS BILL in the January session of Congress, "despite a presidential veto," was predicted by Senator Chas. L. McNary of Oregon, Republican leader of the Senate.

McNary, who helped the Senate to sustain last May President Roosevelt's veto of the Patman bill to pay the 2 billions immediately with new currency, did not say what kind of bill but talk was rife on Capitol Hill that baby bonds would be issued to make the payments should the bill pass.

The Administration has issued with success several hundred million dollars of so-called "baby" bonds of denominations $25 and up, bearing an interest rate of as low as one-fourth of one per cent.

Veterans of Foreign Wars, organization of ex-service similar to the American Legion, has been carrying on propaganda for the bonus ever since the May veto of Patman's bill contended that "with 11 billions in gold and silver in reserve in the Treasury and an unexpended balance of 4 billions, there is no reason why the payment should not be made."

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau recently said that as "far as I know" the President remains unchanged in its opposition to immediate payment of the bonus.

Food imports amounted to about $100,000,000 more during the first ten months of this year than in the same period last year, according to Government figures.

Corn importations have jumped from 1,000,000 bushels to 39,000,000, wheat has quadrupled from 4,500,000 to 19,000,000, rye from 3,000,000 to 9,000,000, oats from 1,500,000 to 10,000,000. These grains are coming mostly from Argentina and Canada.

The value of butter imports had leaped, from $1,000,000 to $22,000,000, meat products from $51,000,000 to $95,000,000.

All of which is attributable to the curtailment program, which all the shrewd farmers now oppose.

"Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of a Pharaoh."

Thus, in hieroglyphics, read the inscription on the sarcophagus, in the Valley of the Kings near Luxor, Egypt, of Tutankhamen—King Tut.

Explorers scoffed, entered, and looted the tomb in the name of Egyptology. Twenty-one later died of various causes. Among them was Lord Carnarvon, leader of the expedition which opened the rich chamber in 1924, presumably from an insect bite.

Loudest scoffer was Dr. James Henry Breasted, Chicago University orientalist. He slept in the tomb for two weeks, took his meals there; recently returned to the Valley of the Nile for further exploration.

Back in New York he is suffering from a mysterious malady, critically ill.

Second poll of the Literary Digest's Straw Election, which is finding out what the country thinks of the New Deal, finds twelve States reporting, including Texas. About 200,000 votes are tabulated out of the 10,000,000 vote-test, and, of course the present tallies will not necessarily remain as they are throughout the counting process.

This second report shows the New Deal trailing by a wide margin. Of the 207,000 voting so far on the question, "Do you NOW approve the acts and policies of the Roosevelt New Deal to date?" 91,000 are favorable, but 115,700 are opposed. The percentages are 44.11 in support of the President's policies and 55.89 against. These compare with the 61.15 per cent for and the 38.85 per cent against in the final results from all States in The Digest poll of 18 months ago.

Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Illinois, Nebraska, North Dakota and Minnesota—all of the great farming regions of the Middle West—are against Roosevelt, in addition to Florida and Ohio, in different sections. Texas and Georgia, traditionally Democratic, give the New Deal a plurality.

Locals Break Losing Streak; Stop McGregor 6-0

And it came to pass that after six years of inglorious defeat at the hands of the McGregor Bulldogs, the Gatesville Hornets won from their traditional rivals on Thanksgiving Day 6-to-0. Not only was it the first Hornet victory since 1929, but it was only the second in 10 years, and revenge was sweet.

The game was just as close as the score indicates, and was as thrilling a contest as has been played between these two teams in their many years of rivalry. The large turnout of fans tells more clearly than words. Just how high the interest was in this game and at no time was the contest lacking in excitement. So evenly matched in play were the two teams that up until the last few minutes it appeared as if the game would end as few games between the schools ever have, a tie.

The outstanding star of the game wasn't Amelunke nor Shirley, the bruising McGregor backs, nor was it Hair, the brilliant Hornet field general, nor the ever consistent Dickie. It wasn't Myers in the Gatesville line nor was it Capt. Blanton of the Bulldog forward wall. No it wasn't any of the all season stars of either team. The honors for the day go to Holt who went in as a tackle substitute early in the game and his inspired play left nothing to be desired. He made tackles all over the field and it was Holt who on practically every punt stopped, the McGregor safety men before he could do much damage by his returns. He was largely responsible for the failure of the Bulldogs offense to click but for one first down the second half. After the Bulldogs quarterback decided it was useless to run plays in his direction and tried the other side of the line, this boy would rush thru and nail the ball carrier from behind to smash the play in that direction. Holt is not a big boy as tackles grow, but he was big enough for the day that he stopped every thing thrown in his direction and though he was ably assisted on the defense by Myers, the other tackle, and by the guards, it was his play that completely demoralized the McGregor offense and in the future when games of the past are mentioned, Holt's play in this game will always be remembered.

Sharing the spot light with Holt was Hall, also a substitute, going into the fray in the second half, and enabling the Hornets offense, held without a first down the first half, to get started. It was his pass catching along with McDonald that took the ball to the three yard line early in the last period only to see McGregor take the ball at this spot on downs. But on again taking possession of the ball, Hall and McDonald with passes advanced within scoring distance, where Hall behind the goal line made a most sensational leaping one hand catch of Hair's pass for the game's only score. Hall and McDonald have been on the receiving end of most of the Hornet passes all year and it was only fitting that one of them should score this deciding touchdown in the game that everyone wanted to win above all others. Hall's seemingly impossible catch was of course the game's outstanding offense display and his name will go down with that of Holts as one of this games "never to be forgotten."

The entire Gatesville team played good football and silenced the "big guns" of the McGregor attack like they haven't been all year. Although, the line on the offense wasn't so hot, they were demons on the defense and after the first quarter, played the heavier forwards of the Bulldogs off their feet. Hair's signal calling and all around offensive play was excellent while Culberson and Davis did a neat job of backing up the line. Dickie and Byrom gave them able assistance from their defensive half-back positions.

From the above you might think it was all Gatesville, but McGregor wasn't without her stars. There was Tubbs, who early in the game by his smashes thru the center of the line, several times, appeared loose for touchdowns. Shirley played a nice game with his hard drives at the line, giving the Gatesville line some serious moments. Amelunke, Bulldog star, was of a necessity watched very closely, and was for the most part pretty well shackled. Nevertheless, he was a threat every time he got his hands on the ball until a leg injury slowed him up in the latter part of the game. The losers line played brilliantly and the Hornets' ground game never had a chance, and it was no fault of the line that Gatesville won.

The game started with McGregor having the advantage of the high wind and thru Amelunke's good punting and a good running game, the Bulldogs kept Gatesville on the defensive, and for the most part in their own end of the field for the greater part of the first half. The Bulldogs made four first downs the first quarter and two the second. Gatesville failed to tally the distance of the chain either period. The first half clearly belonged to McGregor who had several chances to score but failed to come thru. The passes of both teams were very poor because of the high wind.

To start the second half McGregor again had the wind to their backs, but couldn't get their offense to working. Midway in the third period, Culberson intercepted a Bulldog pass and with a little more speed, would have gone for a touchdown. The Hornets then opened with a passing attack that carried the oval within the McGregor 20 yard line, but a fusillade of passes failed to click, and McGregor took the ball on downs. Gatesville took the kick following this and the third quarter ended shortly afterward with the Hornets just completing a pass for a first down. After the intermission, a passing attack carried to the Bulldog 3-yard stipe, but again the Gatesville attack bogged down. McGregor carried the oval out with a first down, but after the Hornets again got the ball they started the drive that resulted in the touchdown. The second half belonged to the Hornets, as they made 6 first downs, three in each period while the Bulldogs were held to one, it coming in the last quarter.

So hats off to the "fightinest" bunch of youngsters that ever wore the Black and Gold and to the two best coaches in these parts. The only thing to mar the

The Hornet victory over McGregor Turkey Day was the second since 1925 and both these wins and the 1925 victory were won at McGregor. Not since 1924 has Gatesville succeeded in taking a game from the Bulldogs on the local field.

The candid cameraman made some shots of the tussle last Thursday and if the attempts, made only with a common camera, are any good they will be placed in the News' display window with notes describing the play in which the snap was made.

This scribes pre-season prognostication as well as his guess of last Tuesday was knocked into a cocked hat Thursday when at Waco, Marlin defeated Mart 25-6 to win the district championship. The score was rather stunning in its one sidedness.

Lampasas and Fredericksburg again played a tie game in their championship struggle, this time it was a scoreless affair. The penetrations were even so the district committee will vote to decide the winner.

Belton, winner in its district, will play Lockhart for the bi-district title. Belton beat Carol Woods Cameron team to win the flag while Lockhart won over Luling to take that district. Lockhart is in the same district with Gonzales, scene of Coach Ewings first football triumphs.

Roscoe, one time home of Supt. Williams, won over Haskell Thanksgiving Day to win their district. Looks like the "prof" left soon.

Some "mugs" are gluttons for punishment so defying all the laws of nature and old "Father Time," the local all-stars will again play two or three games in the near future with opponents not yet selected. The dates of the games and the opposition in each will appear in the News' at a later date. The proceeds will go to the High School Athletic Fund.

MUSICAL AT MAPLE GRAND SUCCESS

The Musical staged at Maple Monday night, Nov. 25, was a great success. The entire program was featured over the Rambling Country Boys sound system, and we are grateful to them for this privilege.

Prizes went to the following: First, Vocal trio composed of Mrs. Lena Bates, Miss Blanche Dossey and Miss Johnnie Ruth Dossey; and second prize was shared by the Rambling Country Boys and the Flat String Band. The Maple Dramatic game was the knowledge that playing for their last time in the uniform of Gatesville High School were such stars as Hair, Culberson, Dickie, Hall McDonald, Clark, Myers, Holt, Chapman, Lowrey and Weaver, but in playing their last game they have the consolation of having accomplished something few Hornets have succeeding in doing the past ten years—They beat McGregor.

Club sponsored the Musical and are very grateful to everyone who helped make this a success. Proceeds will go for stage equipment and other necessities.

CHAPTER I

LEICESTER, who was very old and believed that things should be just thus and so, stood frowning disapproval upon the two men who worked at the forge. They were mighty men, both of them, with enormous arms; and they were so begrimed with smoke from the fire, and so streaked with sooty sweat, that for a moment even Leicester was not certain which was young Richard, King of England. The bearded man finally told him. The true blacksmith had a beard. Leicester, proud noble in the land, dropped to one knee before the beardless man.

"Hi, old friend! You look as though you'd seen a ghost," Richard greeted.

Leicester said solemnly: "I have seen the King of France."

"Philip? Here in England?" The beardless giant was amazed, but he did not stop working the bellows. "And does my saintly cousin come in peace, or war?"

"He comes in peace. And he brings his royal sister."

"Hmm . . . Alice? She's no dove with an olive branch."

"Your father," Leicester said gravely, "gave his pledge to France that you would wed the Princess Alice."

"That surly wench!"

"Your father's pledge was England's pledge. You cannot escape this marriage. And now here is a king—a crowned, anointed king—at your own castle—and you have no thought but to be hammering out a sword like any common smithy."

Richard, by Grace of God, King of England, Duke of Normandy and Aquitaine, Count of Anjou, etc., etc., continued to work the bellows.

Leicester complained: "Fighting—always fighting and hunting. Fearing no devil and praying to no God."

"Why should I?" said Richard. "I know my destiny. I know the help of a good lance along my arm. I know how it feels to see men go down before me. Why should I fear or pray for what I do not understand?"

"The King of France," Leicester reminded him, "is waiting."

Richard shrugged, ungracious as a child called from play. But he turned from the long falchion he was helping to make.

Leicester, shocked, cried: "Surely you will wash?"

"Wash? Ah—" He looked about for his esquire. "Alan! fetch water for me! It seems I must needs wash for this visitor!" He wagged a long forefinger at his friend. "But heed you, Robin! wash I shall, but no court robes! Philip shall see me as I am, else he'll not see me at all. And this Princess Alice, too. Mayhap she'll not wish me for a husband when she sees me in smithy attire, eh?"

They sat in front of the great fireplace, Philip on the right, his sister Alice on the left, while a chair in the center, its back bearing the royal arms of England, was empty.

Richard came in like a gust of March wind.

"Cousin Philip! Welcome to Windsor, and to England!"

Philip, a sharp-faced man with gray-slitted eyes, stepped down from the dais.

"The greetings of France!"

They embraced, stepped apart. It was not a warm embrace.

"And the Lady Alice," Richard cried, with no enthusiasm.

She stepped down, made him a deep curtsy. He bowed over her. She had her royal brother's thin eyes, but she was darker, a firm and handsome woman—a woman who knew what she wished and meant to get it. Now she raised her lips to be kissed, smiling confidently. But Richard only kissed her left ear, hastily, awkwardly.

Richard turned.

"What guests have we?"

Prince John, who was Richard's brother, came forward with a lean, mustached man.

"Conrad, Marquis of Montferrat—my friend."

"Then he is mine," cried Richard.

Richard heartily slapped Montferrat's back. "England gives him welcome!"

Montferrat was smiling a little.

He bowed, but he winced when the great hand struck him between the shoulder blades.

with a puzzled frown, hearing for the first time of this wave of religious fervor which was sweeping all Europe, and of how kings and their subjects were everywhere taking the cross, taking the oath to fight the infidel.

Richard thought this very strange. Himself, he had no love for monks, no desire to travel far, hot lands. He quaffed his wine, threw away the empty goblet, wiped his mouth with the back of a still dirty hand.

"My cousin," said Philip, "you know why we have come?"

Richard called: "Blondel, your song? How long must we wait?"

But Philip cried: "No song now! My time is brief, cousin. We must settle this matter between my sister and yourself. The pledge of marriage was given by your father."

They cried: "No, no! We will go! We'll go with you!" But on the balcony King Richard was silent. The sight, a familiar one, to the Frenchman at his shoulder, was new to Richard; for the Crusade madman had but recently crossed the channel. And Richard, in truth, was not greatly interested, but only simulated interest in order to postpone further the talk of marriage.

"Then come!" the hermit cried.

"Come to the army of the Cross! Lift up your swords not for lust or gold, but for the Lord our God! Come, ye men of England, and take the cross to your hearts! Many who go shall not return, and therefore all absolutism is first given and all other earthly promises and vows are wiped away—"

Now Richard's eyes grew very big. He placed a hand on the rail, vaulted nimbly to the court below.

"Good Father!"

The hermit paused. Richard went close to him, and said in a low voice:

"Do I hear alright? The taking of the cross will cancel a pledge?"

Said the hermit: "No other pledge shall bind one who has taken the Crusader's oath."

King Richard knelt suddenly. In a loud voice, for the benefit of those on the balcony, he commanded:

"Give me the oath!"

"Richard of England, will you forsake all else to join the Crusade?"

"I will," yelled the kneeling giant.

"I will renounce everything—even the lovely woman to whom I am pledged."

He was chuckling to himself, though outwardly he was grave, as the hermit administered the oath.

Well, he was free of that pledge easily! And away from that dark-haired woman with the sharp gray eyes! What did it matter if he went hundreds of leagues to fight for a faith in which he had no faith? Fighting was fighting, no matter where!

But he did not know Alice of France. She was at his side, a moment later, kneeling as he was kneeling, and addressing the hermit:

"Father, give me the oath. Men they need, but women too. I'll go to Palestine with these brave warriors. Give me the oath."

Above, in the balcony, lean Conrad of Montferrat touched Prince John's shoulder. Prince John was a pale, pimply-faced youth with not a trace of his brother Richard's robustness.

"So Richard goes to war?"

John muttered: "Yes. . ."

"You may have won a throne, my friend. Suppose Richard does not return? It is hazardous. Many will be killed."

"By the infidels?"

Conrad smiled. "Perhaps," he whispered.

"Then," John said slowly, "I would be King of England."

"And you would marry Alice. And then—when this Crusade is won—would England and France make me King of Jerusalem?"

Prince John nodded his head very slowly.

Conrad made him a mock obeisance.

"You know, John, I have a premonition that your dauntless brother will never return to England. In fact, I give you my word for it."

And they shook hands, these two traitors.

(To be continued)

She stepped down, made him a deep curtsy. She was . . . a firm and handsome woman . . . a woman who knew what she wished and meant to get it.

"I understand now, Sire, why men call you the Lion Heart."

Philip of France started:

"My cousin, about this marriage—"

"But why are we so glum here? Ho, lads—wine! And Blondel, give us a song!"

Blondel, when the goblets were filled, tuned a harp. He glanced at Princess Alice, then at his master.

"Shall it be of love?"

"No, no!" cried Richard. "Sing of hunting!"

Philip of France lifted his goblet, stared at Richard.

"Methinks love would be more meet, eh? A pledge, Richard, to my sister Alice."

Richard seemed not to hear. He pointed hastily to the cross on Philip's breast.

"What device is that, cousin?"

"The sign of the Crusade."

"The Crusade?"

"I go to Holy War in Palestine. A miracle is happening, cousin! Men are arming everywhere for our Christian faith! They will go to win back the Holy City! They will free our Christian pilgrims who have been tortured and sold to infidel slavery!"

CHAPTER II

NOW they were all babbling about the Crusade, while Richard stood

There was no avoiding the subject. Richard looked away.

"Alice and I were children then," he muttered, "and you know well that my father and I seldom agreed upon anything."

"Richard of England!" Philip's mouth was flint, and his eyes were gray diamonds. "Do you refuse to wed the Princess of France, to whom you are pledged? Answer me straight-out!"

"What," asked Richard, walking toward a balcony, "is this clamor I hear in the court yard?"

Philip was furious, the Princess Alice in a silent but smouldering rage; but they bowed King Richard to the balcony.

A hermit was there, a palmer preaching the Crusade.

"Oh, ye men of England! The kings and peoples of every land are going forth to war, for the cross. Will you close your ears to the cry of Christendom?"

The crowd, excited, pushed closer to him.

"Do you fear to die where Christ our Lord suffered to give you life everlasting? Will you turn from Him now, while He is crucified anew? Behold! in the city of His sorrow, darkness falls again upon the mount of Calvary! Will you deny Him now?"

Cook 1 quart of berries with 2 cups of water till very soft. Press through a sieve and add 1 1/2 cups of sugar or a little more if a less tart dessert is desired. Add the juice of 2 lemons and 1 teaspoon of gelatine dissolved in 1/2 cup of cold water. Cool and greeze just to the mushy stage.

TRY PINEAPPLE JUICE WITH YOUR EGG-NOG

Eggnog is of course ancient and accepted. Here is an intriguing variation that makes your mouth water. Serve with a sprinkle of nutmeg on top. Makes 4 1/2 cups.
