State Superintendent Writes Letter to All Children in State

L. A. Woods, State Superintendent, addresses a letter to all children in the state, and also requests that the parents and everyone in the county take notice, as a part of the letter effects them as well as the children.

The letter follows in part: I wish that I might carry this message personally to each of you. Nothing would please me more than to visit every school room in Texas and talk to the boys and girls and have them talk to me and ask me questions concerning matters of interest to them. Since this cannot be done, I am taking this opportunity of addressing a letter to you. Please consider this a personal appeal.

Accidents Statistics

Statistics show that 35 per cent of the accidents sustained by school children happen on the playgrounds and in school buildings; 32 per cent occur in the homes; 9 per cent in going to or coming from school, and the remaining 24 per cent on the streets and other places.

Supt. Woods asked that special attention be given to the following rules, so as to prevent accidents:

A. One School Buses: Ask your parents not to pass school buses which are loading or unloading children. This is a state law in Texas. When getting off a school bus do not alight when the bus is in motion. After you have gotten off the school bus, let the bus and other traffic pass before you cross the road or street. Under no circumstances should a child ride on the fenders of school buses. Do not stand up in school buses while they are moving.

B. On Streets and Highways: Play on the playground, never on the sidewalk or in the streets. Avoid darting out into or across the street; running from behind parked cars, and hitching rides on cars. Obey traffic regulations when riding bicycle. Never carry anyone on the handle bars. Avoid playing around places where buildings are under construction.

FUNERAL RITES HELD FOR JUDGE HOWARD F. O'NEAL IN ATLANTA

Funeral rites were held for Judge Howard F. O'Neal, 82, grandfather of Robert M. Arnold and father of Mrs. R. M. Arnold, Sr., of Gatesville, in Atlanta, Texas Saturday afternoon, at 4 p. m.

Judge O'Neal was a retired east Texas Judge who had distinguished himself as a jurist in the courts of that section of struction. Never walk or play on railroad tracks or railroad bridges. Stop, look and listen at crossings. When walking on the highway, walk on the left hand side so that you face approaching traffic.

C. At home: Put things in their proper places. Trash or loose objects may cause fire. Don't lean out of windows or from other high places. Use good ladders. Wipe up oil, grease and water on floors. Watch for worn stair treads, carpets, unguarded steps, poorly lighted halls, stairs, loose bannisters, light connections, and loose matches.

County Superintendent J. M. Witcher, suggests that teachers of the county discuss these precautions with their pupils with the view of preventing accidents.

Tribal Rites Symbolize Freshman Adoption

The peace pipe has long been the Indian's symbol of friendship. Here is shown 73-year-old Belew Cozad of the Kiowas offering his long-stemmed pipe to Miss Anne Hughston of Dallas, president of the first year class at Texas State College for Women (CIA). Cozad and members of his tribe appeared on the campus for the traditional Indian ceremony in which approximately 1,000 freshmen were adopted into the college tribe.

Texas, and was also widely known throughout the state.

His death followed six weeks' illness and at the time of his death, Friday at 8:50 p. m. he was in a Shreveport hospital.

Services were held at the First Methodist Church of Atlanta, with Reverend Rider, pastor, delivering the eulogy. Burial was in the Atlanta Cemetery.

Judge O'Neal was born September 22, 1853 in Marshall, Texas, and studied law under his father.

Governor James V. Allred at Austin, ordered the flag on the state capitol lowered to half mast in honor of this distinguished citizen.

YOUR CHILD AND THE SCHOOL

By Dr. ALLEN G. IRELAND
Director, Physical and Health Education
New Jersey State Department of Public Instruction

SEEING IS BELIEVING

For no good reason at all, children are confined all day by the four walls of a classroom. There is so much to be seen on the outside, it seems such a waste to let opportunities go by. Realization of this is taking place among teachers, and increasingly children of all grades are being treated to educational excursions far and near. Parents are participating by loaning their automobiles and themselves as drivers. No doubt their own experience in seeing the activities convinces them that sight is a powerful factor in learning.

Municipal activities are always interesting, and among them are the fire house, water filtration and pumping station, sewage disposal plant, and public health laboratories. Most manufacturers are prepared for visitors and are especially glad to welcome school children.

For the health lesson there are trips to dairy farms and dairies, bakeries, food canneries, drug houses, and candy and ice cream factories. A large hotel or restaurant kitchen holds innumerable surprises. A meat packing house reveals many features of sanitation as well as the safeguard of inspection provided by the government. Try to arrange to visit while a refrigerator car is being unloaded.

Naturally, such excursions are preceded and followed by class planning and discussions. But "seeing" is believing, and let us add "it is also remembering."

New Jersey has just started an interesting new experiment in the training of youthful automobile drivers. Dr. Ireland explains it in his next article.

"Kara-Kul" is the name of two lakes ("Great" and "little") of Asiatic Russia.

Tom Doesn't Detour

Tom Brown says that he is tired of bumping into detour signs every time he starts out in his car. It looks like ALL the road crews are working on the roads this year. Tom went down and ordered a telephone. He says he NEVER has to detour when he calls and his telephone saves his time, his temper and many unnecessary trips.

"Blue Eagle" News

This issue of the Blue Eagle News is dedicated to Raymond "Red" Kelley, first winner of the Honor Award given by our Co. Kelley led the run-off with two other outstanding men, Wade Densmore and Donald Evans, close on his heels. All three men have enviable records and the Blue Eagle News congratulates them. Votes were counted by Lt. Coyle and Roten Quinn, with L. R. Hill as witness.

The Co expressed gratification at the large number of enrollees who polled heavy votes in the primary election Friday. They will have their chance later, as no winner will be eligible for a second award.

The beautiful gold medal will be presented in the near future with the name of the winner and the commander, as well as the company number, engraved on it.

Educational

That long looked for educational building, the little red school house, if you like, at last looms in the foreground, for which the proverbial thousand thanks will be due to Major Wadden, Park Board Chairman Colp and our own project superintendent, C. R. Bryan. This building will be moved for the Troy camp in a few days.

The first addition to the new school house is going to be an auto mechanics room, with black board, wall charts of popular cars, and much better, the actual installation of a complete 1933 model Chevy truck, which we are told we will be able to borrow for an indefinite period. Mr. Burdick, who reported just before Thanksgiving to teach auto mechanics, expects to have two or three classes each night in this subject. Classes will be limited to ten men each. Each enrollee taking auto mechanics will also have an opportunity to study electrical wiring and automotive electricity, as classes in this subject will be taught by Mr. Burdick.

Freshman College Center Authorized

Word has been received from Lyndon B. Johnson at Austin authorizing our educational adviser to establish a Freshman College Center at this camp. Baylor has agreed to sponsor the "college" and studies will begin as soon as a teacher can be found who has the qualifications. All high school graduates are eligible; also, enrollees who are not high school graduates but who are between twenty-one and twenty-five and who are able to do college work will be permitted to enter. All these enrollees are urged to take advantage of this opportunity, which amounts to being paid by Uncle Sam to go to college. Full credit will be granted, and will be accepted by any college or university anywhere.

Athletes Attention

How about some volley ball? We have a softball team, basketball team, so why not a volley ball squad.

If you fellows will get together and organize a team, you have a standing invitation to play the Waco firemen on their new electrically lighted court in Waco any time.

Volley ball is an active sport, and quite as thrilling as basketball. This company is fortunate in having just received a brand new volley ball. It's here for you if you want it, so please let us know as soon as you can as those firemen are a tough lot, and practice every night.

A Real Thanksgiving

Boy! Did company 817 have a Thanksgiving! I'll say we did. We had everything that was good to eat, and cigars and cigarettes to top the dinner off. We could have eaten all day and not made much of a dent in the food that Mess Sgt. Morgan and his cooks had piled up for the occasion.

A number of visitors were present, some of them were: Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Blinks, Mrs. C. R. Byram, Mrs. Coyle, and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Herfurth and daughter from Waco. A number of enrollees also had guests.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION EXPLAINS POSTAL CLERK EXAMINATION

The United States Civil Service Commission has received more than 200,000 applications for the Railway Postal Clerk examination, receipt of applications for which closed on October 28, 1935.

It is necessary to hold this examination in certain cities on succeeding dates, because of the large number of competitors. The Commission has received very numerous inquiries from applicants who have heard that some persons in their own cities have been notified to appear for examination, whereas they themselves have not yet received notification cards. The fact that an applicant has not as yet received an admission card has no significance and is due solely to the different examination dates necessary.

All applicants whose applications have been accepted will in due course be sent admission cards, giving the date and place of examination.

Applicants examined on the first day will, of course, have over applicants examined on no preference in appointments any of the succeeding dates, as the entire register will be made up on the same date. Applicants are urged not to write to the Civil Service Commission concerning the date of the examination, as this tends to retard the work of the office.

OLD AGE PENSION CHIEF OUTLINES PENSION RELIEF

Austin, Dec. 9.—"We are going to be fair to the old people of Texas," said the new pension chief this week.

Orville S. Carpenter, 36-year-old State Auditor, was named executive director of the old-age assistance board, November 20, by the new three-member commission. He will resign as Auditor and take up his new duties when the pension law becomes effective February 14.

"We are going into the matter carefully. I am studying the pension systems of other states that have pension laws," he said.

Mr. Carpenter probably knows more about pensions than any other man in the State. At request of Governor Allred, Mr. Carpenter made a survey in September on the "Cost and General Plan for Old-age Pensions." This was prepared for the Legislature, and the new law reflects his survey in many ways.

The Dallas businessman was appointed last August by the Governor to reorganize the Office of the State Auditor. To the Legislature, he made reports on pensions, liquor, and fees. Other surveys were on taxation, bank deposit insurance and a number of lesser subjects. He is now conducting audits of the Treasury and Banking Departments.

He estimated that there were 283,199 people in this State 65 years of age or older. Considering the experiences of other states, he calculated that there would probably qualify for old-age assistance in Texas 62,933 people.

"As there are 41,787 persons 65 years of age and over on the Texas relief rolls, this apparently is the minimum number able to qualify for old-age pensions," Mr. Carpenter stated.

"I am not sure about the reducing effect of the regulations passed by the 44th Legislature. My calculations were made in September before the new law had been passed," he said.

"OUT WHERE THE MUD BEGINS"

Being a dissertation by one of the "kings of the grip" who MUST come to Gatesville and Coryell County regardless of the damage done to both automobile and self by riding over our lovely system of highways, and where-in said visitor gets his ire up and writes, platonically enough, a part of a mournful dirge of conditions he finds "out where the mud begins."

His poem follows: (tune, Out in the Cold Again).

"I've traveled every road in Texas,
Pikes and bogs in turn,
But the roads in this old coun-ty
Are the kind that make me burn.
The State loosens lots of money
In counties with one windmill,
But nothing ever for Coryell,
So they stay in the mud—and will."

Now, we feel like Mr. Visitor. Here's the dope, according to Fridays morning's Waco News-Tribune which says: "Road builders to boom under State program for 1936. Highway heads contemplate $49,000,000 of construction to August 31, next, almost doubling the average annual outlay."

By past experience of knowing what Coryell County has gotten in the way of highways for the last 25 years, we predict we'll draw another blank, as usual.

Moreover, when they get ready for the taxes to be paid on this enormous expenditure, Coryell County will NOT draw a blank. She'll go right on and pave other counties as has been the case for at least the past twenty-five years. Certainly your gas tax, and gosh knows what other taxes go to the state for highways, which never are spent here beyond a little bunch of maintenance men who do their best with a little 'scraping and dragging' after rains.

Looks like we could touch some kind of button or pull some kind of string that would "start the concrete pouring in Coryell County," especially, with an election year coming up. Or can we?

Double Use of Hot Beds

Gainesville.—The hotbed made last February by Pauline Landman, garden demonstrator of the Callisburg girls' 4-H club in Cooke county, for growing tomato plants is being used now to grow winter salad greens for the family, according to Miss Nettie Shultz, home demonstration agent.

Pauline is planting lettuce and parsley now. She plans to re-plant lettuce as fast as it matures and is used. The parsley bed will supply a sufficient amount without replanting.

Approximately 600 tomato plants were set out from the bed in the spring.

STATE'S BASIC RESOURCES TO HAVE EXHIBIT AT CENTENNIAL

Dallas, Dec. 9.—The almost unlimited natural resources of Texas, the minerals and metals which constitute the basic prop of the state's prosperity, will be featured in a special exhibit at the Texas Centennial Exposition.

The story of Texas' underground wealth will be vividly told through the collection of natural resource exhibits now being assembled by a group of scientists, geologists and business men. The exhibit will be in the Hall of 1936, the sole section of the million dollar Texas Hall of State which will not be devoted to display of historical treasures. It will exemplify modern Texas with its opportunities for future development.

Every college in the state, every public library, the leading geologists and the heads of corporations dealing with minerals, have been asked to aid in the painting of this striking picture of the Lone Star State's natural resources.

The story will start with the gold which the conquistadores sought and which has only been discovered in Texas in negligible quantities. Then the history of every industry will be told in compact exhibit form including petroleum production in which Texas leads the world. Coal, sulphur, lignite, building stone, marble, natural gas, graphite, gypsum, iron, lead, limestone, quicksilver, potash, manganese, mica, silver, zinc, mineral waters, copper and asphalt are some of the natural resources which will be exhibited in such manner as to explain their development since their first discovery beneath Texas soil. The exhibit will be entirely non-commercial, the plan being to present millions of visitors the great scope embraced by the natural resources of the state.

L. H. Lewis, former international president of the Lions Club, is in active charge of gathering the exhibit. John M. Spellman of Dallas is chairman of the Natural Resource Committee of the Exposition which includes L. B. Whitehead, geologist, William C. Grant, Dr. Robert T. Hill, geologist, Dr. J. E. Mifflin, W. A. Philpott, secretary of the Texas Bankers Association, and Dr. E. H. Sellards, head of the Bureau of Economic Geology at the University of Texas.

Building activities at the Texas Centennial Exposition continues at full speed with crews working 24 hours a day to ensure the readiness of the structures by the opening date

June 6. Some 2,000 men are now at work on the grounds.

Assured of the success of the Exposition, nationally known corporations are reserving exhibit space daily. During the past week special exhibits totaling more than $375,000 have been contracted for. These include the $100,000 exhibit of the Gulf Refining Company, the $75,000 special building of the Texas Company, the $100,000 Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company display and the $100,000 House of Magic and exhibit of General Electric. A number of other large corporations are negotiating for space ensuring a sell-out of floor space before early Spring.

Why don't lawyers purge their ranks of crooks? Well, why don't doctors, preachers, merchants, farmers and critics?

Germany, The Netherlands, Argentina and Uruguay in that order were Brazil's leading tobacco customers in 1934 when 34,184 long tons were exported, bringing a total of $4,237,360.

Money isn't everything. A celebrity is rich and yet can't think of anything to buy except 200 pairs of pants.

Gold-spangled coloring, thick hair and rounded hoofs characterize the klipspringer, a small African mountain antelope ranging from the Cape through east Africa to Somaliland and Abyssinia.

Ex-Hornets Play Oglesby This Afternoon at 3

The contest between the Oglesby all-stars and the local Ex-Hornets, originally scheduled for tomorrow (Wednesday) has been changed, and the teams will meet here today at 3 p. m.

Some fans seem to think the game today with Oglesby will be nothing more than a breather, however, they will probably be as badly fooled as you were the first time you had a nightmare and woke up, missing your under shirt, or waking up in a strange place wondering where you were. The Oglesby team held the local Training School inmates to a scoreless tie early in the season, and have shown constant improvement from that date. The team is in tip-top shade for the game, and will surprise the locals greatly, is the opinion of this writer.

The local team, under the direction of Truman Blanton, who for the past few years, has been instrumental in directing the local all-stars, reports that the locals are in "fair" shape with the exceptions of coaches Earle Worley and Maurice Ewing. Mrs. Worley seems to have the upper hand of the Hornet Mentor, stating he could play only a few minutes. Ewing is having somewhat the same trouble, unfinished business. (if you know what I mean).

In final practice yesterday afternoon, Blanton was unable to give his starting line-up, but did state that Joe Ricketts, the lad that made Valley Mills look sick last year, Joe Satterfield, most handsome boy that ever left Comanche, Earl Busby, triple treat, and Jesse Lee Wiggins, brunette with a beautiful form, would compose the local backfield as the game gets underway this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Casting all foolishness aside, if you think it possible and necessary, the game today will not be the game that SMU-TCU played, nor will it be the game that the Hornets played against McGregor, but it will help greatly toward making ends meet in the Athletic Fund of the local High School. Why not chump-off 15 cents and be happy, knowing that you are helping someone and receiving pleasure yourself.

SHOTS AT THE BASKET

The two local basketball squads are working out daily, and much progress is being made, and with the material, in the opinion of this writer, will make two good clubs, boys and girls.

The season somewhat on us before we could realize it, is getting well underway, and from reports, good games were played in the local gym the past week.

Here is the schedule for the this week:

Wednesday

Flat vs. Turnersville. Both boys' and girls' teams from these two schools will participate in games.

The Ewing boys will play the Pidcoke boys also on this night.

Thursday

Purmela vs. Levita. Both the girls' teams and the boys' teams from these schools will play. Also the boys from Gatesville will play the boys from Plainview, also the girls' teams from these two schools are scheduled to play a game.

On Friday night the local Hornets will gather in the gym for their annual feed, better know as the Hornet Banquet. Tickets are on sale at the local High School Office or at the drug stores if you desire one.

THE CRUSADES

a novelization of the CECIL B. DeMILLE production
by DONALD BARR CHIDSEY

From the PARAMOUNT PICTURE of the same name

SYNOPSIS

Richard the Lion Heart, King of England, joins the Holy Crusade to cancel a pledge of marriage to Alice, sister of the scheming King Philip of France. The Crusaders run out of supplies at Marseilles and Richard is forced to marry Berengaria, daughter of the King of Navarre, in exchange for food for his army. Never having seen Berengaria, Richard sends his troubadour, Blondel, to take his place at the wedding ceremony. Later, when Richard meets his wife for the first time, he is fascinated by her charm and beauty.

CHAPTER V

NOW Richard, by Grace of God King of England, Duke of Normandy and Aquitaine, count of Anjou, etc., etc., was an excellent rider; and in the lists he seemed riveted to his saddle; but this information almost tumbled him into the dirt of the little Marseilles street.

"My wife!"
"Berengaria of Navarre. You married her last night."
"Why didn't you tell me she looked like that!"

"You didn't ask me."
Richard looked at him a moment speechless. Then Richard jerked at his bridle, wheeled, rode back toward the balcony. Blondel was after him, pleading.

"Sire, you can't do this! The fleet is waiting! The King of France is ready to sail with the tide!"

"He'll sail," gritted Richard, "and so will I. And so will my Queen."
He stopped under the balcony. He smiled.

"Angel, I have learned. I confess my sin. I ask forgiveness. I am in the dust at your feet."

Berengaria said bitterly: "So is my veil."

He remembered it, looked down. Yes, the bridal veil still was tied to Fauvel's left forelock, a bandage. It had come loose. It was trailing.

Richard's face, never pale, now was almost black with embarrassment.

"Why—er—why, my horse is wounded."

"And so am I."

She started away. He called: "Wait!"

She said from the doorway: "This is not England. You do not command here."

"Lady, I am Richard. I command wherever I go." He was out of the saddle now, and climbing the balcony rail. He was laughing.

An hour later the master of the women's ship begged audience with Alice, sister of the King of France.

"Your pardon, my lady, but there is another lady come aboard, and she is the must—she is to have this cabin."

Princess Alice sat up.

"Surely you have made a mistake," she said coldly. "This is the royal cabin."

"Aye, but—but, my Lady, this lady—"

Then Berengaria came in. There were only two servants with her. She looked tired.

Alice's dark eyes became very small.

"I am Alice of France, betrothed to King Richard. Who are you?"

Berengaria looked back the way she had come, toward the shore which was fading already.

"I am his wife," she said quietly.

It was before Acre, where the Moslem sultan Yusuf al-Saladin was trapped, and Berengaria had recovered from the sea trip. It was good to lie in a real bed again. She stretched full-length, smiling a little.

while Tina, her duenna, snuffed out all the candles but one.

She murmured: "Good night, Tina."

Then there was a man's voice: "Good night, Tina."

She looked up sharply. Richard of England stood holding back the tent entrance, smiling upon the duenna.

"Good night, Tina," he said again.

And when the flustered fat woman had scampered out, he let fall the tent flap and strode to where Berengaria lay. He started to relight the candles, using the little bed lamp.

Berengaria slid far down under the covers, until only the top of her head showed.

"You did not find your way to my tent," Richard said pleasantly.

"I like my own tent better."

"How should you know?"

"The posts of my bed are Matthew,

He cried: "Remember—I'm your husband!"

"You're not!" She swung the blade high. "This is my husband! THIS is what I married!"

She brought it down viciously. He dodged, amazed.

"You little devil! Drop that!"

She cried: "My husband will defend me!" and raised the sword for another blow.

CHAPTER VI

THEY had not heard the trumpets, the thudding of feet, the clank of steel. But when Leicester came tumbling into the tent they stopped, gasping.

"Sire—pardon—"

Richard roared: "Well?"

"Sire, we are attacked! A sally from the gate!"

He cried: "Remember I'm your husband!" She swung the blade high. "You're not!" she exclaimed. "THIS is my husband. THIS is what I married!"

Mark, Luke and John, and they have been consecrated to my safety."

"I, too, as your husband," he reminded her, "am consecrated to your safety."

"Then stand on guard outside."

He wasn't angered. He tapped each of the bedposts in turn, smiling at them, addressing them.

"Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, you understand that this lady is my wife?"

"Who wishes to be alone," said Berengaria.

He unstrapped his great sword. He laid it aside, sat on the edge of the bed, and began to take off his left spur.

She was suddenly alarmed.

"What are you doing?"

"Well, you wouldn't come to my tent."

"If I scream, every woman in this camp will come!"

"Do you think they'd be interested?" He was working on the right spur now. "I'm no pale gallant, to sit at a woman's feet and plead," he pointed out.

"No, you'd take by storm! What's a woman to you? A citadel. A herd of cattle. It's not so easy, Richard of England! Leave my tent."

"As you will," he rose languidly. Then he bent, scooping her up, coverlet and all. "But you go with me."

"Put me down! Put me down!"

She slipped out of the coverlet, and left him holding it. She sprang to the bed, caught up his great sword.

King Richard threw away the coverlet. He turned from the woman who was his wife.

Now the whole place was in a turmoil. The King, clamping on his spurs, cried over his shoulder:

"If you'd been in my tent, where you belong, they wouldn't have had to look all over the camp for me! Where the devil's my sword?"

She said timidly: Here—Here is thy sword, Richard."

He strapped it on, shoving his squire aside. To Leicester he shouted:

"Robert! Stay here, and guard my wife. Keep her in bed—if you can, I can't!"

And then he was gone, and there was nothing but swaying canvas and the echoes of his voice—and Leicester, who stood looking grimly at his Queen.

She whispered: "He—He may be killed."

"Yes, my lady. He may be killed."

She went slowly to her prie-Dieu, and fell to her knees. And there, with Leicester looking hard at her, and with the bang and shriek of battle outside, the zizzing of quarrels, the whirr of stones, the clash of steel against steel, the unremitting thump of recoil pads on the machines—there she prayed through the night.

Conrad of Montferrat was very sober, very grave, as he went next afternoon to see Berengaria. She was at her embroidery frame, working a crimson cross on white silk.

"Dear child," Conrad said quietly, "a dreadful thing has happened."

She dropped her thread.

"To Richard?"

"Yes, dear Lady. Oh, he is not dead! Nor is he wounded. But a messenger has come from England—"

He broke off, staring at the ground.

She said: "Tell me."

"Lady," he said solemnly, "Richard's throne has been seized by his brother, Prince John. Now John will never dare to hold it if King Philip sends word that France will help Richard to regain that throne."

"But the throne is Richard's! He is the king!"

"Aye, but he is not in England to claim it, and John is."

"But Philip will assist him!"

"Philip," said Conrad of Montferrat, "is angry with Richard. You can guess why?" He got close to her, knelt before her. "Ah, believe me, I would not tell you this, dear lady, did I not know that you hold Richard most dear—Richard and the Holy Crusade."

"I—I do not understand."

"Richard is now before the council of the kings. He speaks with Philip, with Hugo of Burgundy, and Frederick the German, and Leopold of Austria, Nicholas of Hungary, Michael of Russia, William of Sicily, and with Sverre, the Norse king. But only one of these men can help him, and that is the most powerful one—Philip. And Philip is angry. He says that Richard has insulted France, has insulted his own family. Philip will not help him to regain the throne. Philip swears he will not even fight by his side, but will return with all his men to France. It would disrupt the Crusade, dear lady. Philip's is by far the greatest force. Without it, we would be at the mercy of the infidel."

"Philip is angry because—because Richard wed me?"

Conrad nodded.

"And Philip will not fight—"

"Ah! How terrible that the lovely thing you are can destroy that fine king your husband!"

"Destroy Richard!"

"And the Crusade."

"It cannot be! Richard can give me up—and annul the marriage—send me away—"

"You know he will never do that." He was watching her closely now. It was well, for him, that she was so much in love.

"Tell me—tell me what I must do!"

"You are indeed a saint! But you must step from the path of the Crusade."

"You mean—kill myself?"

He only bowed. He had wished to have her say it. But he was sure of her now. He was sure, too, that Richard would be too busy in council to disabuse her. He sobbed a little. He bent over her hand, and turned, sobbing, to stagger away.

She was whispering: "I see—to save Richard."

For a long time she sat there, thinking, looking at nothing. Sometimes her lips moved a little, for she prayed; but for the most she was motionless. It was dark when she rose. She walked swiftly, unnoticed, to the outer line of mantlets.

Lets Talk about Clothes

TEXAS STATE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN (CIA)

Denton, Dec. 9.—The variety in types of evening clothes continues to amaze us since silhouettes, materials and particularly colors are changing coming of early fall, rich hues every week or two. With the in velvet and taffeta made their appearance for evening wear. Deep wines and red purple blends were considered foremost on the color chart.

The winter season ushers in another color. Whether you happen to be a petite, dreamy, blue-eyed blond or a tall, willowly brunette, you will agree with girls at Texas State College for Women (CIA) that white is your most flattering color. It blends nicely with the new designs in Grecian modes and classic adaptations from the Renaissance.

First we see white made into a frothy all-over-pleated, chiffon frock. It is tightly caught at the waist with a narrow chiffon belt, and rhinestone clips hold the shoulder pleating in place. Wear something like this to one of the Christmas fraternity proms.

Of course we're always interested in frocks that can be adapted for both dinner and evening. With this in mind let me suggest a white crepe, smooth of line, with an overblouse entirely covered in scroll design with bugle beads—it's very new and chic. The belt is of crimson velvet and gives effective contrast. For strictly formal occasions the overblouse can be removed.

Hampered white satin makes a lovely dress for the cocktail hour. It is simple in design with multi-colored stone clips on the décolleté and boasts a loose box jacket held together down the center front with mammoth white silk braid frogs.

is spending $50,000,000 on a great naval base—directed at no one but Japan. Here a great navy will be maintained, to protect Australia, India, and the Dutch East Indies, protected jointly with Holland. John frowns upon Uncle Sam's coming evacuation of the Philippines as it is likely to be followed by Japanese seizure of the islands and consequent extension southward of yellow control.

The important point is that the British aren't likely to become embroiled with the Italians now that the Jap threat is reaching dangerous proportions. London may look ahead to coming years when Italy might menace the Empire but that's in the future—and the Jap menace is in the present, very much so.

The League of Nations, dominated by Britain in France is imposing heavy penalties upon Italy for what is termed an unjust and unprovoked attack upon weak Ethiopia. These punishments are in the form of an economic embargo upon Italian exports and an agreement not to sell Italy war materials and other key products. Japan has and is duplicating in China what Italy is attempting in Ethiopia. Starting in 1931, the Nipponese conquered and made into a semi-autonomous state 500,000 square miles of Chinese territory. The League moved not a hand; Britain voiced a feeble protest through its foreign office.

If the League sanctions bring Italy to its knees as many expect and predict, a precedent will have been established that can be held like an ax over the head of an aggressor nation in the future. If an act of aggression by the kingdom of Italy can be prevented by the League, why cannot an unprovoked attack upon defenseless China—a League member—by the empire of Japan be halted?

Your writer believes that Japan could be "persuaded" thru the sanctions weapon with even greater effect than could Italy, for the season that the former's natural resources are even less than the latter's and because Japan is more dependent upon foreign trade than is the Fascist nation. If the nations of the world would refuse to sell oil, cotton, iron and food products to Japan and in turn boycott the sales of that nation, the Japs would be forced to capitulate to the Western nation's demands in a week.

But in 1931 the occupation of Manchuria did not menace the interests of Britain, France or Japan and for that reason nothing was done. Just as long as your neighbor's garden is robbed it makes little difference to one but when the culprit invades your own demense, then the howling begins.

By imposing sanctions upon Italy, the League has gained prestige immeasurably and has acquired a potent weapon that can be used with effect upon any "outlaw" nation. Will this weapon be used against Japan? Or against Germany, eager to revise the map of Europe? If British interests are menaced in the Far East to the extent that actual losses are incurred, if the Japanese war lords continue to extend the hegemony of their Emperor southward, you can bet that the British-controlled League will take some action.

Al Smith was running on a platform so wet it wouldn't float; Morris Sheppard, senior senior from Texarkana, was as dry as a bone. Political opponents saw an ideal chance to put the senator on the spot and defeat him in the primaries two years later, in 1930. He must either come out for the party nominee, they said, and thus support a wet or declare for dry Republican Hoover and forsake his party. Political suicide either way, they reasoned. But "they got him wrong."

"I have always been a dry, I am a dry, and I always intend to be a dry," Senator Sheppard stated in a published statement. "But Mr. Smith is the party nominee and I will support the choice of the party." What rejoinder could there be to such a pledge of party loyalty? An astute political step by an astute politician.

The senior senator is up for re-election again this year. Again his opponents have tried to put him on the spot.

This time, they decided, the wets are decidedly in the majority—we have a Democratic President who went into office committed to the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment—and the wets will put up a candidate and beat the veteran of four terms. But the voters inclined to be wet, when approached relative to the nomination of a wet to succeed Sheppard, reply that the Eighteenth Amendment is a dead issue, that repeal is an accomplished fact, so why replace a competent legislator on a dead issue? The wets feel that way about it but the dries are still in a belligerent mood and will go down the line for the greatest proponent of prohibition in the States today—the man who wrote and sponsored the much-debated amendment. Now the Texarkanan comes forward in whole-hearted endorsement of the AAA benefit program and bitterly attacks opponents of the processing taxes. This just about completes Sheppard's conquest of the wet element in the farm districts—and eliminates all opposition but that which may be generated among the opponents of the AAA, certainly in the minority among the farmers.

World Comment

By JOE BURNS

Eyes of the world are rapidly shifting from the Italian-Ethiopian embroglio to the Far East because the actions of the Western powers and of the United States will follow the course of events in China, where the Japanese are again threatening the sovereignty of the aged nation.

One of the most important aspects of current China-Japanese tension lies in the fact that Britain may be deterred from its purpose of crushing

Fascist Italy. The center of Nipponese military activities is just north of the Yangtze valley, where $300,000,000 of British money is invested and millions of pounds of goods are sold annually. The British and Japanese are now engaged in a trade war in the Far East, India and Australia. The Japs have already supplanted Britain as the largest seller of India—Britain's exclusive sphere for 250 years—and in China and Australia Britain is rapidly losing its markets to the more enterprising yellow men.

Not that the British are giving up without a struggle. The Indians and Australisians have been prevailed upon to impose prohibitive tariffs and other restrictions on the importation of Japanese-made goods but with no avail, due largely to cheap methods of production in Japan. HOW'S YOUR ETIQUETTE?

When two people meet an acquaintance of one of them who stop to talk, must an introduction follow?

Not always. The person not involved in the greetings might walk ahead slowly while a few words were exchanged. But if the conversation lasted for any length of time, the two not known to each other should be introduced.

Plans are completed for a forty-two party to be held in the G. J. Teinert building Friday night, Dec. 6. A large crowd is expected and a number of tickets have already been sold. The price of admission includes everything and there is to be no additional fee for refreshments. There will be plenty of entertainment for those who do not play forty-two.

The building has been decorated in the season's colors, and tables for the players have been arranged. Mrs. Roy Crabb, Mrs. W. R. Goodson and Miss Lillian Teinert are the committee in charge and the party is being sponsored by the P.-T. A.
