Soldiers Bonus Bonds Are To Be Received Here About June 16

Soldiers' Bonus Bonds will be dispatched on June 15 from 12 Post Offices in the United States; the Dallas office being the one sending them to the local post office. The time of the receipt at the Gatesville post office will depend on the transit time taken for them to come from Dallas. The letters that will bear the bonds are or will be marked "Delivery to Addressee Only." Regardless of the fact that the registered letters may be addressed in care of a person or institution, delivery will be made to the addressee only, and the addressee should be at home to receive them, with suitable identification to the carrier, such identification to be made by a person known to the carrier.

It is probable that all bonds will not be ready for mailing by June 15 by the Treasury Department, but veterans can rest assured that the delivery will be made as soon as they have been received at the local post office.

Adjusted-service bonds may be redeemed on and after June 15, 1936, and although they earn the simple interest of 3% per annum, no interest is payable on any bonds redeemed prior to June 15, 1937.

Veterans who desire to cash their bonds must sign the request for payment in the back of the bonds in the presence of a certifying officer (postmaster or one designated employee of the post office to act in that capacity). The bonds are sent to the central United States savings bond depository office and the treasury checks will be sent from Austin, Texas, to the veteran at the address on the bond.

BIGHAM EX-STUDENTS WILL STAGE PLAY AT EWING

County Court Docket Is Opened Here With a Few Petty Cases

HOME-COMING AT CORYELL CITY SUNDAY MAY 31

People from all over Texas and Oklahoma gathered at the tabernacle at Coryell City Sunday, May 31, to celebrate a regular old time home-coming.

Rev. Arthur Loper, chaplain at the State Training School, brought a very fine message at the 11 o'clock hour, and all the singers that used to sing in the choir at Coryell were asked to sing with the choir. Mrs. J. B. Millard was at the piano.

The noon hour came and the table was loaded with such wonderful and an abundance of food. Everyone talked old times and enjoyed themselves until three o'clock, when Ed Britan at the request of some of the older people, called everyone under the tabernacle for another song feast. Mr. Lee of McGregor gave us a few numbers on the violin, accompanied by Mrs. Lee at the piano.

Mrs. Worth Sadler of Valley Mills was proclaimed the oldest mother present, being 83, and Mr. Tall Small, the oldest father, he being 89 years old.

Alec Armstrong of Crawford announced that the people had decided to make the home-coming a regular annual event. Each year the meeting will be held the last Sunday in June.

STATE SENATORIAL SONS SEE CITIZENS SIMULTANEOUSLY

W. A. (Son) Shofner and J. Manley Head, both candidates for State Senator, were working the same sides of the street, in fact, the same block, and seemed to be getting along okey-dokey, at least there were no bricks flying.

These two young legalities were talking about things that we 'laymen' as they put it, would hardly understand, something about corporation law, special issue and the like, their past practice and future prospects. Anyway, they were in a jovial mood.

LEVITA CITIZEN PASSES AWAY

Mr. Moses Church of Levita an old citizen of that community passed away Saturday and was buried at Levita at 4:30 Sunday afternoon.

Two cases of theft against Tommie Davis were disposed of and after a plea of guilty was entered, he was given 30 days in jail on each charge.

On docket for Wednesday is the Scott case, and following that two cases against Fred Gough and one against Dutch Miller. All these cases are liquor cases.

WORLD COMMENT

By
JOE BURNS

Europe's century-old trouble-spot—the Balkans, where the spark that set off the explosion of 1914 was struck, where Turks and Russians have battled for generations—is again preparing for trouble because of the expansionist aims of Germany and Italy.

Czechoslovakia, Rumania, and Yugoslavia—the Little Entente powers—are strengthening their alliance in fear of a "push" southward by Europe's Fascist dictators.

From 1887, when Imperial Germany concluded a treaty of alliance with Austria-Hungary, to 1914 German influence was supreme in the area now included in Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Austria, and Hungary all of which were included in the Dual Monarchy. The Kaiser's grandiose scheme of a Middle Europe, dominated by the German speaking peoples of Germany and Austria, and extending its influence to Turkey and the near East, was fast bearing fruit when the victory of the Allies abruptly terminated the plan.

Following the creation of the independent states of Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia and the enlargement of Rumania out of the ruins of the old Austro-Hungarian monarchy, French influence predominated in the Balkan area. French capital supplied the armies of the Little Entente with cannon and ammunition until today the standing armies of Rumania, Yugoslavia, and Czechoslovakia total nearly 500,000 men—a formidable force, indeed.

These three nations feel that France has exploited them. Promises of financial aid have not been kept since France herself has undergone financial reverses. Result has been a strengthening of German influence and Nazi activities in southeastern Europe. German trade in the Balkans is expanding by leaps and bounds, bringing in needed capital with which to build up a mighty military force at home.

This explains the anxiety on the part of the Entente nations. Three million Germans live in Czechoslovakia, adjacent to the Fatherland. Most of them are said to be Nazis and have organized into a strong and unified pro-German party with representation in the Czech diet. Czech military officers fear and Nazi authorities believe that this section would go over to Germany, lock, stock and barrel, should war ensue between the two nations.

South of Czechoslovakia and north of Yugoslavia lies Austria, former oppressor of Czechs and Slavs. The Little Entente wants neither a Hapsburg government nor a Nazi government in control of Vienna. A Hapsburg ruler would become a rallying point for the discontented Croat in Yugoslavia and minorities in Czechoslovakia dissatisfied with the present republican regimes. Likewise a Nazi Austria would make Germany all-powerful in southeastern Europe and on the entire Continent, and would be followed by an extension of German influence in, or control of, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, and the other Balkan states. By threat of force of arms is the Little Entente thwarting the wishes of a majority of the people of Austria.

The name "Mussolini" awakens fear in the hearts of all small nations—and it seems among the larger powers also —because of his conquest of Ethiopia.

Italian interference in Austria, where the powerful Heimwehr of Prince von Starhemberg was organized and armed with Italian funds, animosity toward Yugoslavia, and control of the so-called kingdom of Albania strike fear into the hearts of Balkan statesmen who believe Il Duce envisions a Fascist empire in southeastern Europe with Italy as the guiding hand and the Duce as the crowned head.

Since the conquest of Ethiopia, heavy Italian troop concentrations have been reported in Albania, across the Adriatic Sea from Italy and south of Yugoslavia.

Italy was deprived of the coveted Dalmation coast at the end of the war. Her entrance into the war on the side of the Allies was largely inspired by a desire to seize the Adriatic coast of Austria-Hungary and to make the lake of that name an Italian lake. Diplomats at Versailles with victory in the bag turned a deaf ear to promises they had made the Italians in the dark days of 1916 when the Kaiser's hosts were romping over the Somme, and gave the coveted coastline to the newly created kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes.

Thus the Balkan states, threatened by dreamers who are backed by powerful armies and almost united support among their peoples, prepare for what they believe to be the inevitable—war for their existence against the Nazis of Germany and the Black Shirts of Italy.

BIG EVENTS OPENING DAY PROGRAM CLIMAX AT FORD EXPO BUILDING

The opening day of the Texas Centennial in Dallas June 6 will find many events originating in and revolving about the Ford Exposition building. The principal feature, outside the actual opening of the building to the public, will be the ceremony signalling the dedication of the "Roads of the Southwest," sections of the trails and highways which have a vital part in the history of this part of the country.

The "Cavalcade of Texas" a mammoth spectacle, which has been likened to a "grand opera," pageant, will introduce the "Roads of the Southwest" as a part of the elaborate opening day's program. The cavalcade, consisting of several hundred actors, livestock, covered wagons, cowboys, Indians, soldiers and other colorful units will march over the nine sections which total approximately one-third of a mile and wind around the lagoon opposite the Ford Exposition building.

Another event which promises to draw much attention on the first day is the termination of the strangest horse race to be run in the Southwest in years. This race will finish on the "Roads of the Southwest." The Lampasas race, as it has been called, will be sponsored by ranchers and entered by both men and women riders. About 200 entries are expected. There is no relay of mounts. Each rider must finish the 180 mile race from Lampasas to Dallas on the same horse. The race will begin June 3 and end on the "Roads of the Southwest" within the Exposition grounds sometime June 6. Cash prizes will be awarded, and the Ford Motor Company will present the winner with a saddle.

A word picture of the Ford Exposition building will be painted by Centennial radio announcers in their opening day pick-up description. The building will be mentioned especially when the "cool" features of the exposition are discussed. Air-conditioning of the Ford structure was done at a cost of approximately $125,000.

The court of the Ford building, alive with growing flowers, plants and trees, will be the scene of "man-in-the-street" ra-

Lets Talk about Clothes

Denton, May 30. Never before has dame fashion predicted a gayer summer on the beach. Stores everywhere are displaying new and interesting models in swimming suits, and the fact that you already own one won't curb your desire to buy another. You can't be quite satisfied in last year's model after seeing the new designs.

If you are slim and don't have to worry about bulges, the new satin lastex suits will be your choice. Those new arrivals are lined with soft jersey, and, according to girls at Texas State College for Women, are tops for snug comfort. The colors run towards upastels.

There are more suits of trick textures in wool, nubby material, small waffle weaves, and ribbed jerseys, all of which are unusually attractive. The colors again take your vote. I saw one suit in ivory with tangerine and blue wool straps haltering it around the neck. The very brief shorts were buttoned to the top with a row of alternating tangerine and blue bone buttons.

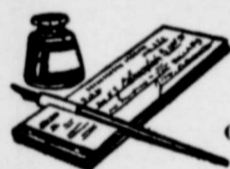

Dressmaker swim suits have been designed for the plumpish swimmers. They are lined thru-out with a slightly elastic jersey which does wonders with the remote control ideas.

Beach accessories are reaching a new high this season. Rubber sandals, fish-net shoes, and Roman soles that art tied

AND STILL WE SNOOZE!

The following towns will be represented at the Fort Worth Frontier Centennial Celebration, each having a beauty entered in the contest, which was won by Miss Faye Cotton of Borger, who will be billed thruout the world as Texas' Sweetheart No. 1.

Here's the list of towns who got in on this bit of FREE publicity from the Frontier Celebration: Abilene, Archer City, Baird, Beeville, Big Spring, Borger, Hutchinson county, Brady, Breckenridge, Brownwood, Burkburnett, Burnet, Cleburne, Coleman, Colorado, Crockett, Dalhart, Decatur, Del Rio, Eastland, Electra, Fort Worth, Gainesville, Georgetown, Gladewater, Goldthwaite, Gonzales, Graham, Hamilton, Haskell, Kerrville, Kilgore, Lamesa, Lampasas, Lufkin, Luling, Marlin, Marshall, McAllen, McKinney, Midland, Mercedes, Meridian, New Braunfels, Olney, Overton, Paducah, Palestine, Pampa, Paris, Pecos, Plainview, Pearsall, Post, Ranger, San Angelo, San Marcos, San Saba, Shamrock, Stephenville, Sweetwater, Taylor, Terrell, Uvalde, Vernon, Wellington, Wichita Falls, and Weslaco—but no Gatesville.

'Course, it's a shame to have a "girl revue," but in this case we think it's a crime not to, because Billy Rose, impresario from New York will use these girls in connection with the Fort Worth Celebration. Also they have a chance for a contract in Hollywood, and many other opportunities, besides giving our own city and county a world of free advertising during this Centennial year. Yet, we snooze comfortably as if there was nothing in this world but ourselves. Maybe that's just how we got so sleepy! Maybe that's how we lost 66! May-be?

Softball

The softball league gets into action again tonight, after more than a week's lay off. The teams are no doubt a wee bit stale and it will take a little time for all clubs to get back into shape.

Games tonight find the Firemen and the Merchants pitted against each other in the first game, while the Reds and the Whites furnish the show in the second encounter.

Thursday Doc's is scheduled to play a double header against the Blue and the Firemen. Only one game will be played, more than likely, and as the same situation occurs later in the schedule the team that is not played Thursday will be played the second time. The Blues will probably be Doc's opponent for Thursday, thereby leaving the Firemen to be played the next time this double header appears. The two odd games that appear under this arrangement will be played off on non-league nights at the convenience of both teams.

The Fireboys suffered a heavy blow the past week when Berkley Laxson turned rustic and left the bright lights of the city for the sunlight of the open fields. In other words, Mr. Laxson has become a country gentleman and turned to the soil as a means of livelihood. We regret to see Berk leave, but here's hoping that he hasn't moved so far back in the wilds that he can not get to town twice a week to lend his talents to the local soft ball league in general and to the Firement in particular.

As Coach Worley will be out of town this week on vacation the Firemen might find the going a mite rough.

Doc's loses a man in Maurice Ewing that will hurt that team no little. Ewing is a jam up catcher and one of the league's best hitters.

GOLFERS OUT IN FAIR NUMBERS SUNDAY P. M.

Sunday evening the local golf course was given a good going over by a goodly crowd of the local followers.

Due to the adverse weather of the past several days, the golfers have had to limit their play to front room putting and drug store talk. For some unknown reason putting on the parlor rug and tremendous tee shots of the barber shop and drug store variety are way yonder better than the same shots executed in the green and fairways, and the group playing Sunday encountered many difficulties in their attempts to beat par.

The weather is ideal for the Scotch game at present and large numbers should be out every afternoon working the kinks out of their limbs and whetting their appetites.

NOTICE, COUNTY BASE BALL MANAGERS

Managers of the County Base Ball League are the men in position to alter any rule agreed upon by them at the start of the season and this being the case the following has come before them:

Three of the men signed by Levita, Seth McLarty, Francis Rutherford, and Clarence Bunnell, have either moved from the community or failed to make their appearance for the games and as these men were rather expected to be main-stays the chances of the Levita club were hurt. There are two men in the community unsigned and wishing to play with Levita, namely, Vernon Todd and Grady Sullivan. It was agreed on at the start of the season no new men were to be signed after April 11, but as the managers were the ones to make this rule they have the power to alter it and, such being the case, Levita wishes a vote as whether they can sign the two above mentioned players.

The other 11 managers are asked to send in their vote to this writer. Just send in a card with the manager's name and his vote—yes or no. Regardless of your vote there will be no ill feeling from any source.

It might be stated here that a similar situation has taken place at Pearl. The managers can look further into the case before they vote but their answer is desired by Saturday noon.

O lieb! so lang du lieben Kannst!
O lieb! so lang du lieben magst!
Die Stunde kommt, die Stunde kommt,
Wo du an Graebren stehst und klagst!

Und heute deine Tunge wohl,
Bald is ein boeses Wort gesagt!
O Gott, es war nicht boeses gemaint,
Der Andre aber geht und klagt.

Dan kniest de neider an der Gruft,
Und bringst die Augen, trueb und nass,
Sie sehn den Andern nimmer mehr—
In's lange, feuchte Kirch hofsgras.

Und sprichst: O schau auf mich herab,
Der hier an deinem Grabe weint!
Vergib, das ich gekraenkt dich hab!
O Gott, es war nich boes gemeint!

Er aber sieht und haert dich nicht,
Kommit nicht, dass du ihn froeh umfaengst;
Der Mund, der oft dich kuesste, spricht
Nie wieder: Ich vergab dir laengst!

Er tat's, vergab dir lange schon,
Doch manche heisse Traene fiel
Um dich und um dein herbes Wort—
Dich still—er richt, er ist am Teil!

O Lieb! so lang du lieben kannst!
O Lieb! so lang du lieben magst!
Die Stunde kommt die Stunde kommt,
Wo du an Graebren stehst und klagst!

So fraght edin Glaube und din armes Hoffen,

Increasing Use Of Farm Products In Making Ford V-8

Importance of the Southwest Will Be Emphasized at Exposition Opening June 6.

Agriculture has stepped out of the back yard and shaken hands with Industry. Farmers and industrialists have mutual problems which can be solved only by close co-operation.

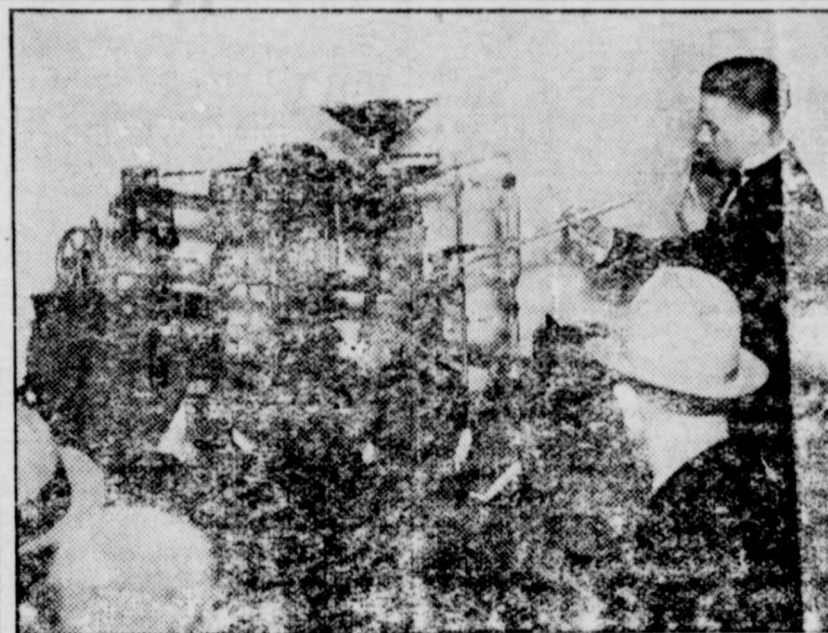

To demonstrate the many uses of agriculture products in the automotive industry as utilized by the Ford Motor Company at its Rouge River plant at Dearborn, Mich., the Ford Exposition Building at Texas Centennial in Dallas will contain demonstrations of processes in which cotton, mohair, wool, soy beans, tung oil, hogs, corn, pine pitch and sugar cane, all important products of the Southwest, are used in the manufacture of Ford V-8 automobiles. The theme of the Ford exhibit will be: "From the Soil to Finished Car Parts."

Everything pertaining to an automobile has its origin in the earth. There is no need, as Mr. Ford sees it, to exhaust the mines and forests if the material required can be grown on the farm; and in addition the growing of the material on the farm will give to the farmer, when markets are developed, another source of cash. When the industrial market for farm products has been developed, it will not be long before there appears the farm-factory. In this farm-factory much of the processing by which the products are advanced into better condition for the market will be done in or near the fields where the raw material is harvested.

Cotton, the king of farm products in the Southwest, will play an important part in several exhibits in the Ford Exposition. A group of spinning and weaving machines, from the Edison Institute Museum at Dearborn, will present a dramatic story of the development of these arts by men of many nationalities in all parts of the world over centuries of time.

Various exhibits in the Ford

Soy Beans Raised on Farm; Converted to Industrial Needs

Wherever the model soy bean plant of the Ford Motor Company is shown, crowds of interested spectators watch the simple process by which the soy beans are converted into raw materials for use in the automobile factory. The above picture of the oil extracting unit was taken at a recent industrial show in Detroit, Michigan.

At the Ford Exposition in Dallas, the moulding presses which turn out horn buttons, light switches, steering wheels and other parts made from the soy bean meal, as well as the model oil extracting plant, will be shown in operation. This feature is presented as evidence of the growing inter-dependence of farm and factory.

Building will explain how the Ford Motor Company will use in its car production schedule for 1936, 89,300,000 pounds of cotton, 3,204,000 pounds of wool, the product of 30,000 acres of soy beans, 728,000 pounds of tung oil, 1,000,000 pounds of lard obtained from approximately 20,000 hogs, by-products of corn raised on 11,230 acres, mohair obtained from 87,500 goats, 2,060,000 pounds of pine pitch, and sugar cane produced on 12,500 acres.

In the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company's portion of the Ford exhibit, there will be a dramatization of the story of the part that Southwest products, such as cotton, carbon black, and sulphur play in the manufacture of automobile tires. Liquid rubber, "latex," is followed through treating processes, vulcanization, and anti-oxidation.

Another portion of this exhibit shows the steps followed in the manufacture of a modern pneumatic tire and the important part played by cotton. This process is traced from the cleaning of seed and foreign matter from the cotton through the separation of short fibers, the spinning of yarn and twisting of cable cords, the weaving of the fabric, gum-dipping, and finally the actual tire building.

Other uses of cotton in automobiles will be shown in the making of electrical wiring covers, and the weaving of upholstery fabric. These two processes will be seen in the Essex Wire and Shelton Looms exhibits, respectively.

SYNOPSIS
Scornful of the bloody feud that exists between the Tolliver and Falin clans in the Kentucky mountains Martin Reed, young city engineer, arrives to build a railroad over their properties. Complications ensue when June, Judd Tolliver's daughter, falls in love with Reed and accuses the jealousy of Dave Tolliver her fiancé. Dave vows to kill Reed but when they meet the Falins appear on the scene to kill Dave. Reed turns on them and succeeds in holding them off until Dave and June can make a getaway. After the fight he sends June to his sister in the city. The Falins, in retaliation dynamite Reed's railroad camp and Buddie, June's younger brother, is killed.

CHAPTER X
MR. REED, I've lived in this country for fifty years," the Gaptown sheriff told Martin when the latter descended upon him demanding a posse with which to round up the Falins. "I know these people. I can bring the Falins to court . . . maybe hang 'em . . . but that don't stop 'em. It takes 'em. There'll be killin's like we've never seen before. Mountain people don't like law, Mr. Reed . . . it's got too many curl-mucues to suit 'em. The Falin relatives'd never forgive . . . an' the Tollivers won't be appeased."

As he rambled on and on, excusing himself for not interfering, the door opened and June, who had arrived on the latest train, stepped inside. Her face was white and her eyes staring and full of tears.

"He couldn't just die could he?" she inquired of no one in particular. "My little brother Buddie. He had to be killed—he had to be killed by the Falins. He ran down the hill with me when I went away. He stood up there by the lonesome pine. I never got to see him again . . . I'm . . . I'm never goin' to see him again."

Suddenly she caught sight of Martin standing beside the sheriff and her eyes glittered. "What you doin' here?" she demanded. "Why ain't you up there with Dad and Dave? You loved Buddie, didn't you? He was goin' to be an engineer when he got big. What are you doin' here?"

"June!" cried Martin, trying to stop her awful tirade. "June, please! June! June dar, I don't want you to cry. Don't cry June darling I love you." The last words seemed dragged out of his mouth.

"You love me . . . You loved Buddie," she sobbed bitterly. "But you're not with Buddie. You're here with the law—with civilization—and I'm civilization no more!" she raged on hysterically. "I got nice clothes. That is civilization, ain't it? Pretties? Nice words—an' hollow words. Well, I don't want . . . I don't want you. I don't want anything but the Falins. Civilization! Well, you can have it! An' grabbin' the neck of her dress, she ripped it from her."

Buddie's burial was a solemn and pitiful occasion. Underneath the lonesome pine, in a plain wooden box, he was laid to rest while June, barefoot and in her mountain clothes, knelt beside the grave and Tater sang a spiritual which had all the misery of the ages in its harmonies. Martin was there too, as was Corsey and many of the men. But the latter formed a little group apart, and felt alien and alone.

"Oh God, Our Heavenly Father," the mountain preacher spoke after the earth had been mounded above the coffin. "We bow before Thee in meekest humbleness, believing in Thy Divine Wisdom and accepting with equal humbleness the complexities of this life. We are returning to the earth that which Thou hast produced—a part of Thy soul, of Life eternal. Amen."

As he finished Thurber stepped forward and laid on top of the grave the toy steam shovel which he had made for Buddie such a long, long time ago.

Judd and Melissa tried to pick up the threads of their life, but it was almost impossible. True June and David were back at home, but that didn't fill the aching void left by Buddie's absence. Even Martin tried in vain to cheer them up.

"What are we doin' here?" June suddenly demanded on the day after the funeral. "What are we standin' here for?"

"June, honey," expostulated her father, looking up from the brood of little chickens which Melissa had just brought into the house.

"Before green-up time," the girl continued, her eyes strangely bright. "That's what you wanted, wasn't it,

"Before green-up time," the girl continued, her eyes strangely bright. "That's what you wanted, wasn't it, Dave? But it's got to be a Tolliver—somebody who acts like a Tolliver."

Dave? But it's got to be a Tolliver—somebody who acts like a Tolliver." "She's a fool, Dave—and you're a fool if you listen to her," said Martin. "You ain't a Tolliver!" muttered Dave.

"You're right," said the engineer bitterly. "I'm not good enough to be lib'ant this on I knew people. Oh yes—I knew all kinds of people. Now I don't know anything—only this, Dave. I don't want you to fight. But look, Dave. I think you're a swell guy if you say it. I'll go fight with you. I'll do anything—but that wouldn't help matters. Melissa's right—she really is, Dave. You can't make nappiness with hate." His eyes glowed tenderly as he looked at the older woman. Then he picked up his hat and turned to the door. "Goodbye, June. Good luck, Dave."

As she realized that he was going and did not intend to see her again a little sob broke from June. Impulsively she rushed forward and threw her arms about him. "Martin," she cried. "Don't go way I—I didn't know what I was saying. I don't want you to go."

Slowly, Dave realized that June's words to him had been merely empty words. His face tightened. Then his eyes shifted to Melissa, who despite herself was looking at June and Martin with tender mother love and sympathy. With a pathetic little sigh the youth rose and slipped quietly out of the house.

Dave headed straight for the Falin home. As he approached he could hear a wordy battle going on between tater and sons.

"Yep—we're all brave men—the Falins are brave men—they kill children." Buck was ragged. "Pussy-footin' drivin', I call it." Wade snarled back. "I don't like 'em, young or old. I ain't goin' to like 'em. Ifen I get a chance at that Dave Tolliver, I'll . . ."

"Who's thar?" barked Buck as Dave knocked at the door.

"I want to talk to you . . . an' I ain't got no gun," Tolliver answered as the door swung open and he faced the muzzles of four rifles. "If I tell you we're . . . if I tell you we're licked, will you stop fightin'?"

"You ain't licked," Buck shook his head. "You couldn't be licked. You're never goin' to be licked. Why do you come to me? Yeh. Why shouldn't I come to you? I orter drag myself through all the brambles from here to your house an' say I'm sorry . . . but I ain't got guts like you have . . ."

"You ain't my father," screamed Wade, his face livid with rage. "Yore a snivelin' pup."

"Maybe that's what's the trouble," agreed Buck. Then to Dave. "You wanta shake hands?" After they had done so, he added, "Now tell me why you done it?"

"It's A'nt Melissa's birthday," answered Dave. Then he turned awkwardly and started back the way he had come.

He had hardly taken ten steps when a rifle cracked and he went down.

"Fer a minute I thought you meant it, Pappy," Wade chuckled as he reloaded his gun.

Buck turned to the mantel, picked up a revolver which lay there and pumped six bullets into his son's chest.

"I did," he said, as he stared down at the fallen man. Then he walked out of the house, picked Dave up in his arms and started across the ridge.

"David!" screamed Melissa as Buck entered the Tolliver home and laid her nephew on the cot.

"I fell on my gun," gasped the boy, and an' an' Buck Falin found me and picked me up an' fotched me home."

"Could—could I stay here, Judd," hesitated Buck. "until we find out how bad he's hurt?"

"Shore," answered the other as he started tearing off the blood-stained shirt.

June ran for Martin and the engineer soon was working over the wounded youth his face grave.

"Tain't no use, Martin," panted Dave at last. "This'un can't be cut out." He turned his face to the wall. "Dave, don't die!" sobbed June as she knelt beside the cot. "It'll soon be green-up . . ."

"And you'll have the biggest wedding in the whole country . . . won't he, June?" Martin choked.

"In the spring, David," Melissa tried to smile through her tears. Dave smiled wistfully. Then with great effort he placed an arm around his aunt's shoulders and drew her nearer.

"One fer you . . . an' one fer me," he whispered as he kissed her eyes. "The biggest . . . weddin' . . . in . . . the . . ."

As the others watched in horrified silence, his arm dropped limply across the edge of the cot. High in the top of the lonesome pine a single crow teetered back and forth, surveyed the sky, which threatened snow, and screamed: "Caw! Caw! Caw!"

YOUR CHILD AND THE SCHOOL

By Dr. ALLEN G. IRELAND
Director, Physical and Health Education
New Jersey State Department of Public Instruction

A MILK PARTY PROJECT

Toward the close of the school year it is customary to have a party or picnic to which mothers are invited. Here is a suggestion if you would like to use the party as an educative situation. Let it be a project for the class to develop, a constructive activity in health education. The program is not difficult, so let's consider the question of refreshments. Here is the opportunity for practical health instruction.

Let us say, for example, that the class decides after discussion to select milk as the basis of the luncheon. Another year it could be eggs, cereal, fruits, or vegetables. Milk, however, meets every requirement of a party affair. It takes care of the need for a cooling drink. If paper cups are used, have the pupils decide why this is a public health measure.

For sandwich fillings there is cream cheese and the various combinations of chopped meat, chicken, and fish in a creamy base, or the latter can be at-my soups are always tasty additions to a luncheon. Desserts of course furnish a variety of choices, with ice cream the leading favorite. But custards are popular, particularly the custard base of a fruit pudding. If the educational values are to be realized, the teacher will act only in an advisory capacity. The important factor is pupil activity. Study and planning is required, but for such a purpose the class will find it interesting as well as instructive. After all, learning is of little use until it is put into practice.

KITCHEN KLINIC

CHICKEN THE FAVORITE

Nearly everyone likes chicken but sometimes it's welcome to play a few tricks with an old favorite instead of stick eternally to baking, frying or stewing. Here's how!

CHICKEN TIMBALES

Two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon paprika, 1/2 cup canned chicken soup, 1-3 cup evaporated milk or cream, 1 teaspoon grated onion, three eggs well beaten, 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 cup of chopped cooked chicken, 1/2 cup bread crumbs 1-4 cup chopped Brazil nuts, 1/2 cup of chopped canned asparagus tips (well drained).

Melt the butter in a sauce pan and add seasonings and flour. Blend thoroughly, add chicken soup and milk and cook until the mixture thickens. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Grease timbale molds or custard cups and sprinkle with flour. Fill cups 2-3 full with the mixture. Place cups in a pan of hot water, cover with waxed paper and place in a moderate oven. Bake for 25 to 30 minutes. Unmould and serve.

COCONUT FLAVORED CHICKEN

Saute a fowl cut in pieces as for fricassee in shortening, season with a minced onion. When lightly browned sprinkle with flour, shake till the flour is absorbed, add one cup dry white wine, eight peppercorns, a few sprigs of parsley, salt to taste and water to nearly cover. Simmer slowly until tender. Soak three-quarters cup shredded coconut in one cup diluted evaporated milk or cream for an hour. Add to the chicken and cook five minutes longer. Serve in a circle of flaky rice.
