To those of us who greet you here, Christmas is a business, as well as a sentiment or a holiday. For most of us, Christmas begins long before it does you who look to us for aid in making your Christmas happier.

Day by day, it grows more human, less commercial. We forget selling as "selling" and begin to get as much of a thrill out of finding the right gifts for Cousin Lou as you do. Suddenly, we're all one, you and we, joined together in one common purpose, the bringing of happiness to others . . .

DEAR'S CHRISTMAS DOLL
By Helen Gaisford Waterman

DEAR was really too big to play with dolls. Yet, when she said that all she wanted for Christmas was a really nice doll, of course mama and everyone gave in.

People always were nice to Dear, probably because Dear was so nice. That was why everyone called her "Dear" instead of by name.

Such a doll, on Christmas morning, with real eyelashes, and long curls. It could walk, talk, and sleep. And it had a whole trunk of lovely dresses and shoes, and a little fur coat.

Dear dashed down to see it first thing Christmas morning, and then, when breakfast was over, she got her wraps, dressed the doll in its fur coat, and set out with its trunk under one arm, and it in the other. "She's so proud, she has to show it to her friends," smile mama.

But when Dear returned, she had neither doll or trunk. "Why, Dear," said mama, "where's your doll?" "I gave it away," Dear answered. "I do hope you won't mind. You see, I knew a little girl who had never had a doll in her whole life, and I wanted so to give her one on Christmas."

"But Dear, why didn't you say so? We could have bought one that would have been good enough, and you could have kept yours."

"That's why, mama," Dear explained. "It had to be just the nicest doll ever, to be fun. And oh, mama," she cried, her face beaming with happiness, "did you ever see a poor little girl with her first lovely Christmas present?"

The Christmas Party

By Katherine Edelman

IN SPITE of the gay music, the Christmas atmosphere, Doris Brian was miserable. For the first time in his life Dick was neglecting her for some one else. Ever since the first dance he seemed to have eyes and ears for just one person—Barbara Overton, a visitor from Chicago. Doris couldn't understand it; Barbara was not even pretty. But there was Dick, hanging on every word

Snatching a wrap she hurried out on the veranda. She couldn't bear the gayety another moment. Suddenly she felt herself whirled around. Dick had come quickly through the doorway. "I've got the whole dope from her," he was saying excitedly. "I'm on the way to riches. Don't you know she's THE Barbara Overton who took first place in the biggest contests last year—and, honey—she's put me right on the track. I'm going to win big money next year—you see if I don't. Doris, are you willing to take a chance, and marry me right away—to make it a Christmas wedding?"

THE CHRISTMAS VISIT

"Where are you going to spend Christmas this year?"
"It will be either at my folks' or my wife's. We haven't quarreled about that yet."

HOLLAND'S SANTA

CHILDREN of Holland believe that St. Nicholas was a kind-hearted Spanish bishop who had heard about their land of dikes, windmills and tulips and decided to pay it a visit, says Johan Hart in "Picture Tales from Holland." He arrived there long years ago on December 5, and began giving children presents. Since then he has always returned on that night to fill the wooden shoes of Dutch children with gifts. The children in turn leave out some carrots or hay for his horse.

"SAY, Jen, where's the star for the top?"
Dick Dartmouth smiled down at the girl who stood at the foot of the ladder. "How does it look?" he asked.
"Fine, Dick. It's almost like being home," she exclaimed, and then her face sobered.
"Here!" said Dick, and descended. "Don't you dare let me down. It's a darn shame that the whole school piled off for the holidays and left you behind with me, but still, if you hadn't stayed, what would I have done?"
"And if you hadn't stayed, what would I? I couldn't nearly afford the trip home."
"But at least, Jen, you have a home," he said wistfully.
"I know. I'd been thinking of that." She straightened. "Come on, let's get through. What shall we do with the mistletoe?"
"I'll take it." He began twining it around a lamp fixture. "Do you know, Jen," he said musingly, "I'm surprised some of the other girls didn't invite you to visit them."

She was silent for a moment. "They did, Dick. But I preferred to stay here with you."

"Honestly, darling?" He laughed happily. "And I turned down three chances just to stay with you."

And quite naturally he discovered what to do with the mistletoe.

Each in His Own Way
—by—
Frances Grinstead

EVERY family has its own way of celebrating Christmas. Do you have the tree on Christmas eve or Christmas morning? It seems all wrong to me to take off its gifts at any other time than the dark early morning of Christmas itself. Yet I have a friend who considers that Santa Claus can only arrive in the candle-lit twilight, so that visions of sugar plums already seen, as well as those to be found in the stockings at dawn, may dance through the heads of the young ones.

Among my Christmas memories are years when our household could not afford trimming a tree, and there was no mantelpiece for hanging stockings. Some people might think that a combination to knock merriment into a cocked hat! They should have seen our excitement at hanging a stocking from the back of each chair, and the delighted squeals when we discovered in the morning that Santa had filled the chairs as well as the dangling hosiery with appropriate gifts. If they were cheap and the tinsel and holly conspicuously lacking, only the grown-ups knew it.

There was always a box of dominoes in somebody's stocking, since my father liked to play. We usually spent Christmas morning in a family game, and I have just this moment suspected it wasn't the children who started it! I've another friend whose father insists on making popcorn balls Christmas morning, and her mother must always fry sausage. So, Merry Christmas, each in your own way!

CHRISTMAS "INSIDE"

By GERTRUDE H. WALTON

THE large house interested Celia. There seemed little life within, no Christmas decorations in the windows as in many dwellings on the streets. Tonight, a dim light in the back, with the early Christmas eve twilight, heightened its drabness.

"One may be excused for inquisitiveness, tonight," Celia led Ann, her roommate onto the porch. "This house, outside, looks gloomy but no more than is my heart. I'll admit being disappointed because of no opening, after our singing audition over WGQ this afternoon." Celia, slipping to a side door, with Ann, began singing Christmas carols. A door opened and a dignified woman said:

"Come inside, girls, and sing. I'm Mrs. Ashby. There's a piano, not opened since Beulah—"

"We'll sing if you join us," Celia answered.

After singing, Celia told of ambitions for her voice and of the afternoon's disappointment.

"Girls, you have given me a happy pre-Christmas eve and birthday, as well. Many of my club members have birthdays at this season. Please come again, tonight, if you wish. You're across the street."

Celia and Ann, at home, were eating, when, answering the telephone, Celia swung Ann around into dizziness.

"We're to report for a program tomorrow afternoon over WGQ! Someone not filling engagement! We'll practice on Mrs. Ashby's piano. Let's decorate her windows with these wreaths," Celia cried.

During the Christmas day program, dedicated to those with birthdays of the season, when Mrs. Ashby's name was mentioned, the announcer said:

"Mrs. Ashby will enjoy this program. She called us last evening—asked that you girls sing for birthdays of her club members—other members asked for you, too. Mrs. Ashby travels, gives of time and money to a shut-in club of which she is national president. Her daughter is the wife of a famed doctor in India. You probably will have a permanent program for birthdays of listeners."

"Maybe that house interested me because, even through boards and stone, human kindness, character, oozes through. Her windows look pretty, though, with our wreaths," Celia told Ann.

CHRISTMAS IN THE HOME

CHRISTMAS festivities are likely to be much more fun when the whole family helps, says the New York state college of home economics.

The older children are always eager to trim the Christmas tree, collect Christmas greens, and make wreaths. Often they have good ideas on how to arrange these holiday decorations. Because these tasks are unusual they have a special appeal, but with the right encouragement from father or mother even the more routine work may seem a part of the general family-sharing at Christmas.

Big brother and sister can be a help if they show their small brother or sister how to help in odd carpentering jobs that come with Christmas. If mother is busy, older brothers or sisters can help the youngsters to dress or get ready for bed.

What can the small members of the family do? Little Johnny or tiny Mary can cut out gingerbread men and other fancy shaped cookies, which mother will lift onto the baking sheet. Father will also be pleased to know how well his small son or daughter can find his tools, cut the string used to wind the Christmas wreath when both of father's hands are busy, or to help with other preparations.

One thing father and mother should remember is to watch for signs of fatigue or nervous strain in the younger children. They should not ask the children to do too many or too difficult tasks.

MEANING OF "NOEL"

"NOEL" is the French name of the Christmas feast and of the old carols formerly sung in the French country churches at this season. Its derivation is from the Latin "natalis," meaning "born," and the word was originally shouted or sung to express joy over the birth of Christ. With the spelling "Nowel" it is found in Chaucer and other early writers.

Largest Christmas Pudding

The largest Christmas pudding ever made was that which was boiled for 14 days in a brewing copper for "mine host" of the Red Lion, Southwark, in 1718. It weighed more than 1,000 pounds.

Popcorn Ball Decorations

Popcorn balls, wrapped in red and green tissue paper, silver paper or glistening cellophane, and piled in a decorated basket, make attractive centerpieces for Christmas dinner or party tables. A small favor may be placed in each ball, to add interest at a party. Hung on the Christmas tree, these balls make pretty ornaments for the strong lower branches that always seem to be neglected when the tree is decorated.

'SETS' HISTORY TO MUSIC

Don Voorhees, Versatile Young American Maestro, Pioneers in Unusual Musical Opportunity.

"PUTTING history to music is the most interesting and difficult musical assignment that's fallen to me in seventeen years of conducting," said Don Voorhees, dynamic young maestro of a half dozen leading air-shows, in an interview in his midtown Manhattan studio-office. Voorhees, who first wielded a baton over a Broadway production at the age of sixteen, recently accepted the post of musical director for "The Cavalcade of America" a radio feature that dramatizes American history.

"Most musical performances," he continued, "are what you might call 'spot' playing. You give the best reading you can of a score. You hope you can please the public. Primarily you want to please yourself—express your own reaction to the mood of the music. At any rate it is purely the feelings of the moment you are expressing."

"When you set history to music you are up against a different problem. You must create a background of sound that sets the perfect pace for dialogue and action. The audience must not be aware of any interruption, but be carried unconsciously from one episode to another with just the heightening of interest and emotion that only music can evoke."

Friends and fellow musicians say much of Voorhees' sensational success has been due to the fact that he never gives up until he licks a problem. As soon as he had finished the first rehearsal, he realized that here was an opportunity to do some musical pioneering. He ordered the script sent to his studio-office three weeks in advance. There he goes over every line of it, and jots down the mood of each situation and a brief summary of each characterization. Then with his catalogue of 3000 musical scores in front of him, he picks out music that represents not only the period, but the tempo of the episode that is to be dramatized.

"Don't get the idea that we play music written, say, in 1849, when we are using a gold-rush dramatization in the sketch," he said, "that would be simple. The problem is a subtler one. We have to find music which expresses the psychological aspects of a period, not the form of musical construction that was in style at the time."

DON VOORHEES
"it is much subtler"

For instance, for a modern setting, music must be restless, sharp, dynamic. The pioneering days of the last century are best set off by a score that has a clear, simple vigorous melodic line and an orchestration that is not complex."

Mr. Voorhees says that he has always been interested in American history, and believes it is possible to present our national development in terms of music. "There is something stirring and epic in the sequence of our country's events that should find its way naturally onto the pages of a great symphony," concluded the alert Pennsylvania-born conductor. "One day such music will be written. Great attempts have been made already. Until that day, I feel it a rare privilege to have been able to set American history to music in the 'Cavalcade' programs. I am honestly grateful for this chance to play even so modest a part in the cavalcade of American history and music."

"It's A Small World"

EVERYBODY'S read Robinson Crusoe. The fascinating adventure and the resourcefulness of Detoe shipwrecked character will always thrill the kids of future generations, and their parents. There was supposed to have been a real Crusoe, you know, in the flesh, and there has been much speculation from time to time as to where the island was. Some say it was in the West Indies, others claim it was one of the Falkland Islands. The other day a new claimant appeared professing to know which island Crusoe was marooned on. Mrs. E. na Whiteley says it was her native land, Tobago, a bump in the Caribbean near Trinidad. She claims she can prove it by official Tobago records which mention Crusoe on Friday. Just why the official records don't mention Crusoe, Mrs. Whiteley doesn't explain. And it doesn't seem likely that either Crusoe or Friday ever kept an "official record." That is one of the blessings of being shipwrecked—there's no official red tape to it. If Friday did put down a few notes just for the record, it seems likely he would have mentioned his boss. We wish these Tobago people wouldn't Croswow. By the way, who would you call somebody who comes from Tobago—a Toboggan?

SPEAKING of official red tape, it's getting worse and worse in some of our States. Anybody who thinks this is a free country which can be roamed at will, ought to take a motor trip out West. It's almost like going to Europe in some respects. At the State line, a "frontier guard" may stop you to poke around in your car, and barriers labelled "HALT, PORT OF ENTRY" are common. It's harder to get into California than into Germany, and there's enough red tape along the Arizona border to wrap up the whole State. Colorado and Oklahoma have troops along the line as though some neighboring army was going to invade them. The City of Los Angeles has an army of its own. They put stickers on your windshield (if you look all right) put "visas" on your registration, make you sign cards, permits, licenses, and "rights of passage." Sometimes these forms cost you money. Nowadays the great open spaces are just places where you have to sign on the dotted line.

MORE than half of the people of the world can't read or write, according to Dr. Frank C. Laubach of the World Literacy Movement. And the radio isn't helping them learn. At the present rate of progress, a majority of the world's population won't be literate in a thousand years. This makes you realize how more how good it is to be an American. With all our faults, we have never yet been faced with the conditions endured in those parts of the world where Dr. Laubach is journeying—China with its 400-odd million people, and Japan where 70 million are crowded into a space no bigger than Montana. Reading and writing and arithmetic can take you further along the road to prosperity and comfort than most of us realize.

RUSSIA'S going to count her population all in one day, and there are about 175 million of 'em. It's a neat trick if you can do it. There will be 1,200,000 people counting noses, and an awful lot of Russian around on Jan. 6—the day they take the count.

"Georgie Porgie, pudding and pie, Kissed the girls and made them cry . . ."

WHICH was very reprehensible of that genial Mother Goose character, but, after all, a good deal of latitude should be allowed the boys around the holidays. Perhaps he might even be content with these Yuletide Kisses: Beat the whites of four eggs until stiff but not too dry. Fold in one cup sugar, one teaspoon almond flavor and one cup canned moist cocoanut. Drop by small spoonfuls on an ungreased brown paper. Decorate tops with tiny red and green candies or with fine candy shot in mixed colors. Bake in a very slow oven at 250 degrees for forty-five minutes.

A Holiday Pudding

Steamed Chocolate Pudding: Cream two tablespoons butter and one-half cup sugar, and add one well-beaten egg. Add one and a quarter squares melted chocolate. Sift together one and an eighth cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder and one-eighth teaspoon salt, and add alternately with one-fourth cup evaporated milk combined with one-fourth cup water. Pour into a well-greased tube cake tin or a pudding mold, and cover tightly with an oiled paper or a regular cover. Steam one and a half hours. Turn out and serve with the following sauce:

Raisin and Nut Sauce: Cook one-half cup seedless raisins in one cup water until plump and the water entirely absorbed. Cream one-half cup butter with two cups confectioner's sugar

Mix until smooth one tablespoon flour and one tablespoon water, add one cup boiling water and cook till thick and creamy, then add to the creamed butter and sugar. Add the raisins and one-half cup chopped vacuum packed walnuts, and flavor with brandy or vanilla, as desired. Serves eight.

Mince Pie Traditional

Mince pie is traditional at Christmas dinner, so let's give Georgie this Delicious Mince Pie: Line a pie tin with pastry and pour in half the contents of a 1-pound can mincemeat. Slice two bananas and spread over next, sprinkle with one-fourth cup sugar, then add the rest of the mincemeat. Pour over one-fourth cup fruit syrup from canned pears, pineapple or apricots, and cover with top crust. Bake thirty minutes in a hot—425 degree—oven. Makes one pie.

Or, if Georgie has cast an envious eye on that other Mother Goose character, the Queen of Hearts, who is addicted to tarts, he can still get his mincemeat in these Brandied Mincemeat Tarts: Turn the contents of two 1-pound cans mincemeat into sauce pan and cook gently for four or five minutes. Remove from fire and add one-half cup brandy. Meanwhile, have tart tins lined with rich pastry; fill with the hot mincemeat and cover with upper crust. Bake in a hot—425 degree—oven for from fifteen to twenty minutes. Makes eight to ten tarts.

"METHUSELAH" BATTERY

Longer Life of Batteries Promised by Glass-Clad Plate Construction

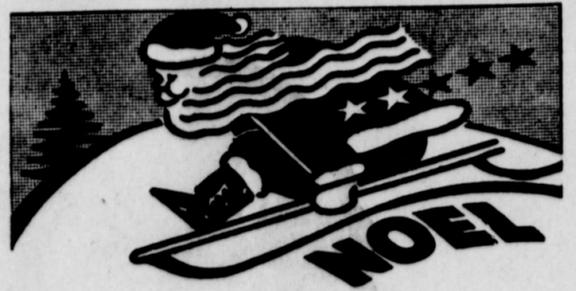

THROUGH an adaptation of the famous "glass-clad plate" principle of battery construction, which has long been used for battleships, busses, airway beacons, and other special installations, a new type of automobile battery has recently been developed that will be capable of at least twice the life of those formerly on the market, according to an announcement by the Kathanode Corporation of New York and Chicago.

The new battery, which is making its first commercial bow this fall as standard equipment in several of the leading new car models, is regarded as one of the most sensational developments in the history of the battery industry. Evidence of its long-life features may be found in the fact that it is guaranteed for as long as the motorist owns his car.

For several years, it has been apparent that the solution to the automobilist's battery troubles lay in the Kathanode principle. By this method of construction—perfected eleven years ago—the positive plates of the battery are encased in flexible and highly porous retaining mats composed of many layers of finely spun glass. The active material of the plates—lead particles, which are acted upon by the electrolyte—is of course the heart of the storage battery. This material tends to drop away from the plates, through vibration and normal wear, to become useless sediment. Thus, the life of the battery shortens. The laminated mats of glass fibre, encasing both surfaces of each plate, provide a means of holding even the most minute of the active particles in place and yet, being highly porous, permit free supply of the electrolyte to the entire surface.

Motor busses have used this product extensively, with notable results. One of the original batteries purchased by one organization is almost three years old and has seen about 225,000 miles of service. Although subjected to considerable mechanical and electrical abuse, this battery is still in excellent operating condition.

With such performance standards being reached in other fields, it was inevitable that the Kathanode principle would be adapted for the pleasure automobile. To accomplish this, however, it was first necessary to make changes in the container design. Scantling engineering developments have recently made possible such changes, giving, in the new Kathanode batteries, space for oversize cells, space for more acid, a larger group terminality, and wider and higher plates without increase of outside dimensions.

Luke's Christmas Money

by Martha B. Thomas

LITTLE LUKE, watching his father splice rope, was suddenly struck with an idea. "It's just one strand after another, isn't it dad?" "Yes, just one strand after another that makes the rope that holds the ship. It's the way most things are accomplished, boy, when you come to think of it."

A cold wind blew around the fish shed back of the wharves. Other men were busy, too, tying snood-knots on trawls, hoping a good day would come for fishing tomorrow.

Luke walked away and up the hill. Christmas coming in a week! He knew his father and mother had been busy planning something for his happiness then. But what had he done? Nothing at all. He stood stock still, his thoughts all mixed up in a queer way, with the strands of rope that made the line, the hundreds of snood-knots the fishermen were tying. "Just one thing done, and then another to make the whole," he reflected.

Then, walking slowly again he seemed to see two one-dollar bills folded away in his pocket-book. And trailing back from the money a row of different pictures of himself, working hard to earn those two dollars. Planting seed potatoes in the spring, hoeing them, weeding in the hot sun, even watering his own plot when the weather was dry. Then, in the fall digging them up. Selling them . . . for two dollars. One bit of work after another. What next? He took more steps. Money was earned by the work of one person to buy something which was the work of another. Luke smiled. He knew "what next," very well indeed.

So, on Christmas morning, though Luke was delighted with his own gifts, he had an almost dizzy pleasure in watching his father and mother unwrap a pair of bedroom slippers and an apron he had given them. "My potato money!" he shrieked. "I got it by doing one thing after another . . . just the way the rope grows, strand after strand."

Luke's father looked puzzled, but his mother kissed him and said "Merry Christmas, dear!"

MEANING OF CHRISTMAS

THE first meaning of Christmas is that of generosity, inspired by the great gift of God to mankind. The selfish sway of the world is broken at least for a time, and the Christ spirit is born in our hearts. Sometimes the exchange of presents is carried too far and becomes a burden instead of a pleasure; but anything that makes the world unselfish is beautiful and good.

The Mistletoe Hunt

By FRANCES GRINSTEAD

"By-O Baby Bunting, Daddy's gone a-hunting"

When the mothers of young children in the east Oklahoma countryside sing this nursery song to their little ones they may out of loyalty to Mother Goose add the next two lines:

"For to find a rabbit skin,
 To wrap the Baby Bunting in."

But that isn't exactly what daddy does down there. When it comes the time of year that the baby needs warmer covering, daddy takes his gun and goes out to shoot down mistletoe! This he sells for the Christmas trade and buys Baby Bunting a different kind of raiment. For mistletoe, with its well-known holiday meaning, grows in abundance there and is always found high among the bare winter branches of the native elm. Little boys climb for it, of course, but the quickest way to gather it for commercial use is to shoot it down.

"Open season" for mistletoe hunting begins about the last of November and the demand increases steadily until Christmas. Truck loads of the green sprigs with their wax-white berries are driven to the cities of the north for the holiday trade. As the mistletoe is not always uniformly ripe at the time it is wanted, much "hunting" is required to find sprigs whose berries are at a stage to suit the demands of the buyers. At such times the roadsides may be strewn with discarded mistletoe, for the condition of the berries cannot be seen until the sprig has been shot down. But such waste is not lamented, for mistletoe is a parasite that reappears in abundance each year, however ruthlessly it may be treated.

Christmas and December
Christmas is not nearly as old as the month in which it falls. December was the last month in that old ten-month calendar of ancient Rome. The name comes from the Latin word, "decem," meaning "ten." In the beginning the month was known as Decembris, but during the many centuries that followed the name changed so that it now comes to us in its present form. The old Saxons, recognizing December as the beginning of winter, called it Winter-Monath (winter month). They also called it Hehlig-Monath (holy month) because of the fact that Christmas fell on one of its days.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Christmas in the Air

By Martha B. Thomas

OLD MR. SADDLER had the most unique and delightful ideas. Unquestionably he was the happiest man in town, though he hadn't much money, and lived in quite a modest way, in quite the smallest house. People loved to drop in for a chat. Old men came for a smoke by his fire-side. Women brought their children to spend the afternoon when they were busy. Mr. Saddler welcomed everyone as if he were a king in a palace.

One snowy day when every foot-step creaked underfoot, and the whole world looked buried under white wool, several people on their way here and there dropped in to see Mr. Saddler. A bright fire crackled on the hearth. A green wreath hung above the mantel-piece. There was a distinct smell of a rich pudding having been recently cooked.

"This place has more Christmas about it," declared one guest, "than any place I've seen. How do you do it? After all, there's only one green wreath."

"Well, I hardly know how to tell you," said the host. "I guess it's just that I feel Christmassy . . . and maybe it sort of fills the room like steam from a pudding. I know," he smiled at them, "you think me peculiar at times, but it's what goes on in your heart that makes the outside you live in, pleasant. And here's another thing. Laugh if you like, I shan't mind. I like to think that all the happy chimes of church bells at Christmas keep traveling around the world until it's time to ring them again. Why not? And the fine songs and anthems and all the joyous laughter of children. We speak of planets being so many 'light-years' away from the earth . . . and sound taking thus and thus a time to reach a certain place. Well then," he smiled at them, "I guess I just sort of hear those things. . . .

CHRISTMAS
BUCKLES

By Luella B. Lyons

TIMOTHY BROWN knew not a soul in Hartsburg well enough to merit an invitation to a Christmas dinner, for he had opened the little shoe repairing cubby hole in the postoffice building only ten days previous to the holiday. And the little restaurant served no turkey either, for they had probably figured everyone would be eating elsewhere.

Rather blue and unhappy, Timothy slipped back to his workbench, there to get caught up on the avalanche of work that had poured in upon him. The first pair of slippers—yes, he remembered the pale, thin little girl that had brought them in. "My aunt bought them for 25 cents at an auction of second-hand things in the city and sent them to me; but they do need repairing before I can wear them. But I've only 25 cents to my name—could—would you repair them for that amount, Mr. Brown?" Of course, he assured her that it wouldn't cost that—not to her, of the sad and wistful eyes!

"Why, I may be a shoe re-builder, but if those buckles aren't worth a fortune then I'd better get out of this business," he shouted to the empty little room as he suddenly discovered the winking little buckles were not of the dime store variety.

Luck was with him when he sent a messenger for the poor girl owner of the second-hand slippers, and at the jeweler's home the pair were in luck—the expert in gems told them that the buckles would positively remove the girl out of the pauper class, for they were really worth a fortune.

Happy and merry Christmases may come and go, but Timothy will never be lonely again, for the lucky little girl later said "yes" to Timothy, not out of gratitude but because of love at first sight.

KEEPING TREE FRESH

IF A Christmas tree is set in water when it first comes into the house and is kept in water while it is part of the Christmas decoration, it will remain fresh and green for at least a week longer. Water should be replaced as it evaporates. If the base of a Christmas tree is trimmed with a sharp knife just before it is mounted, the pores will be left open, allowing water to rise in the stem to the living cells which are still trying to provide the tree with food and moisture. Spruce and fir retain their needles longer than most other Christmas trees.

SURRENDER yourself to the Spirit of Christmas! Let its joy thrill you—let its peace steal softly across your heart! Open your ears to the magic of its message—open your eyes to the miracles it accomplishes!

Read again Dickens' Christmas Carol, the best known and most inspiring of all the Christmas stories. And don't feel ashamed, if at the end, as Tiny Tim whispers, "God bless us, every one," you find your own eyes wet with tears.

Open the Book of Books, and let Luke tell you about that first Christmas—of the long journey to Bethlehem, of the birth in the humble manger, of the shepherds keeping watch over their flocks. Listen to the heavenly music that was heard upon the hills, to the thrilling words of the angel, "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. Christmas Carols

By Katherine Edelman

WARREN ELMORE was mad—angry through and through. For the first time in his business career he had had quarrel with his partner. Of course it had been all Peter's fault, but even that thought didn't help so very much. The old saying, "It takes two to make a quarrel" kept bothering him.

What was it that his wife had told him to get at Grant's? He asked himself the question as he entered the big department store. Hose for Muriel, that was it! Bother Christmas shopping, anyway; why didn't Beverly tend to things herself?

As he walked down the crowded aisles, he was conscious of music from the balcony. An orchestra was up there playing Christmas carols. Warren Elmore forgot his peeve against the world; he hurried up and joined the happy crowd. His voice joined in "O Little Town of Bethlehem." It was followed by the glorious "Adeste Fideles." Then came "Silent Night." As its beautiful strains filled the store Warren Elmore was conscious that all anger was disappearing from his heart . . . He wanted to get back to the office, to slap old Peter on the back, and tell him they were a pair of fools for letting such a small thing interfere with their friendship . . .

And man-like, he purchased six pairs of hose for Muriel instead

HINT FOR THE HOUSE . . . Not many of us can afford interior decorators. It's more fun to do things oneself anyway. But so often rooms we plan carefully fall flat and stale. This is because the three primary colors, red, blue and yellow are not all present in some form. A room in peach and green, for instance, will be more interesting if there is an accent of blue in a bowl, or possibly in a mirror. And much of the charm that books lend a room is based on the color variety they introduce in an inconspicuous manner.

HINT FOR GOOD LOOKS . . . It's not bones or regular features either that make you lovely—it's color. . . . That is why haphazard make-up is never effective. The clever woman is careful to blend her rouge, powder and lipstick to one focal color, just as a painter blends the colors on his palette when he creates a portrait. Nature has given us a focal color in our eyes. Every brown-eyed woman knows that she looks well in orange, for it reflects the glint in her brown eyes. Every blue-eyed woman admits that blue is the most flattering shade she can wear. Makeup should follow suit: warm, orange tints for brown-eyed beauties—cool tones for blue eyes. Think about your eye-color the next time you shop for cosmetics.

The Vogue for TOMATOES

THE vogue for red this season has extended even to vegetables. You see red coats wherever you walk abroad, and you eat red dishes whenever you sit down to table. We may be in the red in our dress, but the red is in us when it comes to eating. And that makes for good red blood because our principal red food—tomatoes—is one of the very best sources of vitamin C and a good source of vitamins A, B and G. And canned tomatoes are now said to be an even better source of vitamin C than raw tomatoes cooked in the usual way at home.

So What?

So let's see if we can't think up some more dishes in which this fashionable color appears in the shape of canned tomatoes. Here's a "honey" which is not only new but which contains some honey in its makeup:

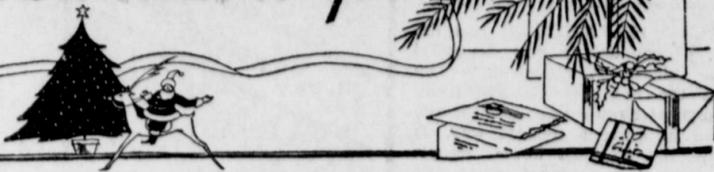

Oriental Onion and Tomatoes: Peel twelve large white onions, cut them in halves crosswise and lay them in a baking dish. Melt four tablespoons butter, add one cup strained tomatoes, one-fourth cup strained honey, salt and pepper to taste and a few grains paprika, and heat to boiling. Pour over onions and bake until tender—from one hour to an hour and a half—in a slow or 350-degree oven. Serves six.

CATCHING UP WITH THE PAST!

Smokers who are guided as much by imagination as by habit are giving a try to a new cigarette with a filter-tip. Manufacturers hail the filtering idea as new, but it goes back at least five hundred years to early Persian efforts to cool and filter smoke through a "narguile" or water pipe! Some historians even claim that Casanova, the great lover, though there is no positive proof of the fact, invented a filter-method for smoking tobacco in order to escape from cigarette-breath which he found might make his sidorous admirer less attractive!

July travel in Yellowstone park increased over 40 per cent over July 1935.

Merry Christmas to You

The true Christmas Spirit is not found in the glittering tinsel of the yule tree, but in the true expression of good will and friendship the season brings. And may we add to the many you will receive our own greeting and hope that peace, prosperity and happiness will be yours.

PEAS

FOR ALL

MOST people think of peas as just one small part of a meal and fail to realize how far they can be extended. But peas are important in the diet and so flexible that they can be made part of a recipe for one person, or used in quantity as an important ingredient of a recipe for fifty. Here's the proof. For your child's school lunch box what would be better than this Tomato Stuffed with Chicken and Pea Salad: Cut stem end from one small or medium tomato, scoop out and drain, and dust inside with a little salt. Combine one quarter cup chopped canned chicken and two tablespoons canned peas, and moisten with cooked salad dressing. Fill tomato, replace top and set in lettuce-lined jelly glass or paraffined covered container. Serves one.

In a Quantity Recipe

And here's the rest of the proof. For a graduation or Junior-Senior banquet, a church supper, or any meal for many people, here is a recipe for Stuffed Potatoes with Curried Peas: Sauté one-half cup minced onion in one and a fourth cups butter a few minutes, add two-thirds cup flour and six tablespoons curry powder, and stir smooth. Slowly add two and a half quarts milk (substitute part of the milk if desired), and cook until creamy, stirring constantly. Add the contents of five No. 2 cans peas, and season to taste with salt and pepper.

Meanwhile, bake twenty-five large Idaho potatoes until soft, cut each in half lengthwise, scoop out centers and mash and season to taste. Fill the potato cases with the curried peas and spread the mashed potatoes lightly on top. Sprinkle with one and a half cups grated cheese and brown in hot oven. The potatoes may be put through a pastry bag if desired. This makes fifty servings.

Texan to Study In New Zealand

DENTON.—With a backward glance through the Golden Gate, Miss Winifred Jones, senior student at Texas State College for Women (CIA), will say goodbye to America on Feb. 2 for a year that promises new experiences. The Lancaster, Tex., girl will sail aboard the liner S. S. Monterey from San Francisco, to spend a year as a foreign exchange student studying nutrition at the University of Otago in Dunedin, New Zealand.

The honor came to Miss Jones in recognition of her outstanding work in the home demonstration field. She will arrive at Auckland, N. Z., two weeks and five days after sailing, and from the capital city of the islands she will go to Dunedin, capital of Otago Province, and begin her work under the fellowship granted in a reciprocal arrangement with the University. S. F. Bethel Got First Printing Experience On G. W. Hand Press

S. F. Bethel got his introduction to the trade way back in the days when G. Washington hand presses were in style, and during his first week as an apprentice was "donated" the job of manhandling the long crooked lever of one of these ancient type presses. The handle was 4 inches in diameter (we suppose to make it the more inconvenient to hold, and to make sure your grip would slip and let it fly back and come unjointed, which they were sure to do if the press was an old one, and this particular ancient machine was as nearly worn out as the old G. Wash could get, (it is well known among printers that this type of press never completely wear out). There has never been anything in modern times to compare with it for long life except the model T.

When press day rolled around the first week we, (then about 16) were initiated as pressman, and were told what would happen if the lever slipped out of our hand; but experience being a much more effective teacher than precept—we got the experience. The mechanism that operates the press is a double jointed, three-piece huge and when it flies apart, as it is certain to do with a beginner, one piece goes straight toward the boy doing the inking, one sails over the pressman's head, and the other imbeds itself in the opposite wall, if it doesn't hit a by-stander first.

The boy operating the hand ink roller was a slim wiry chap, as quick as lightning—he had to be to dodge a flying flange joint. Marvin Hunter, son of the publisher of that four-page weekly, is now publishing the Frontier Magazine, which many of you have read. Willie Dye was another apprentice serving misery at the same time, but he reformed before the bug bit him hard, and went back to the farm where he could cuss the editor if his paper didn't show up on time each week.

After serving apprenticeship—getting board and lodging for our labor—we later purchased and published our own sheet, having done the same (not continuously) the past number of years. On two or three occasions we tried other lines of work, but always found our back to the print shop—which is true with everyone that has been thoroughly inoculated with printer's ink.

Immediately preceding our coming to Gatesville nine years ago, we owned and published a small weekly in Hunt county. Our connection with the Coryell County News dates back to its second issue, January 1, four years ago. In March 1935, in partnership with W. Mat Jones, we purchased the News from Ayres Compton. Thanks to local business firms, our business has steadily increased since we assumed control of the paper.

In six years' unbroken attendance at school, Muriel Robinson of South Side, England, has walked 7,000 miles to and from school.

FOUR YEARS

Seems like most wars are four years—anyway, lots of them. Take the Civil, World,—we won't bother to look up any more since these two are bad enough

This is our FOURTH ANNIVERSARY. Not that there is any war, but it has ben what you might call a struggle, and for that matter, still is.

We have either fooled ourselves into thinking we have made progress, or we have. Anyway, they're coming out bigger and better every issue—that is, of we can possibly make them.

We are going to pay respects to our "force," twelve in number locally, and some 25 active correspondents, and some 15 or 20 not-so-active correspondents.

However, those who have made progress possible, to this fourth mile stone, are You, You and You. Our subscribers, our splendid advertisers, our boosters, our knockers, everyone, wheather we have had any direct dealings with you at all or not, you are to be thanked for helping carry-on as we have been enable to do.

At any Anniversary, there are two pleasures. One is looking back to the friendships made, the services rendered, the problems worked at, or completed. The other is looking forward to possibilities, new problems (both in the shop and outside), and everything else that a mere youngster has to hope for with the enthusiasm that is so infectious to youth.

This is our goal now! We will make it—with your assistance only, when we are assisting you! Let's get, and stay together!

The Management.

George W. Witt, Shop And Office Trained Is "A Find" for the News

Inventory, that's what we're doing now and that is our fourth Anniversary.

Looking over our assets, George (AP) Witt is an outstanding member of our staff, having been in the office something over a year, he has made himself the Jack-of-all-Trades, doing practically everything there is done in the shop, save the linotype work, and with speed and accuracy.

Starting as a helper in the front office, George has mastered the situation there, moving to the "back end" he has taken over many of the operations in that department.

Let's let him give his own autobiography briefly: "George W. Witt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percie Witt of Gatesville, was born March 17, 1916, at 308 Fenimore Street, and moved to 1314 South 14th street at the age of one year. Was known as the meanest and loud bawlingest brat in South Gatesville. Was licked from five to ten times a day (for particulars, consult Mr. Witt).

Entered Gatesville Grammar school at the age of 6, and was graduated from Gatesville High School in 1933. He then at—

"Emile," Emil Lee Is Old Hand with the News Second Longest with Us

Emil Lee is an old timer in years of service with The News. He has done just about everything that has to be done in the shop, but let's let him tell it.

"Every printing shop has its 'Printer's Devil' and that's where Emil Lee, elongated youth of the "back end" got his start. Emil came to us when this paper "was still in its swaddling clothes," being the second longest employee in years in the News office.

As to his decent, Emil was born near Copperas Cove, the 17th day of January to Mr. and Mrs. Young W. Lee. He started to school at the age of six at Harmon. Since then, he has attended five different school over the county including both the Gatesville Elementary and Gatesville High school from which he was graduated in 1936.

Emil has been employed by the News for something like 3½ years, working at his off hours when not in school. He is now the man who runs that "big lead typewriter" that is in the back end with so many gadgets, motors and whatnots, called a Linotype which he has learned since he has been with the News.

Beulah Gamblin Is Our Cholly Knickerbocker Walter Winchell in One

What Cholly Knickerbocker and Walter Winchell is to New York's 400, Beulah Gamblin, (Miss, we should say, but we always call her "Beulah" for short) is to Coryell County's 398.

She's "Sassiety" personified. It's her business to but into all your affairs, and can be heard cherrily calling, "Where have you been? How have you been? Where are you going? Tell me about your party? What's the baby's name?" She's the "gimmie girl" of the News. She is the newshawk that keeps up with your personal and personalities. You might as well give in; it's always easier, and some one else will spill the beans anyway.

As for her family tree, may be she didn't come over on the Mayflower, but, who knows, she might hae met the boat. Anyway this is her story, and she can stick to it.

She also picked out March 17 to be born; just like George Witt. If we'd known that we'd fired them both, She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Gamblin of Gatesville.

They got her into school early, and she was graduated from Gatesville High School in 1932, being Secretary-Treasurer of the Senior Class and President of the

News Sports Observer---James Read Saunders

This guy really gets in on the "heavy dough!" Our most expensive luxury! Ask anyone who has been one! They make just fifty-two times as much as the famed Dollar-A-Year men did a year during the World War. Pave the income tax man.

The heavy end of the job of "Sport Editor" is in just saying what the fans want said, and woe-be-ye, if you don't hit the nail on the head, no matter what the coaches, school heads, or who-soever, say about the matter.

J. R.'s forebears in this "sports racket," had their trials and tribulations, they rode and got rode, they wrote about and got prote to—same as Jinx Tucker, or some of the greater lights in sportdom. They are the boys that "can take it!" Sports writ-ers.

As for JR's upbringing, he was born January 29, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Saunders, started to school to "Miss Lizzie" finally entering Gatesville High School, where "he quickly acquired the reputation as a gentleman and a scholar." Under the tutelage of Coach Ben Hines built his "large and bulky muscles," and was known as "Flash" Saunders, as

"Old Jones" Learns How Work Is Really Done In Real Printing Office

W. Mat Jones, just thought he knew what work was in the full sense of the word, until he came along with his partner, S. F. Bethel, bought the Coryell County News from Ayres Compton, former owner.

Since that time, some of the work done by him has been as follows: Advertising, Bookkeeping, Collecting, Designing, Editing, Filing, Greeting, Hurrying, Inking, Jogging, Kicking, Listing, Mailing, Numbering, operating, Proofing, Queering, Reading, Signing, Tutoring, Unding, Verifying, Writing, Xylographing, Yarning and Zoning. In fact, everything from A to Z.

He tells us he was born at the old Bigham place near Bigham School about 1900, the first son of Mr. and Mrs. Willis M. Jones. Seven of his first years were spent at that place, and his parents then moved to Gatesville, where he was placed in the second grade, continuing thru grammar and high school, where he was graduated in 1922, having taken out three years for a trip in the U. S. Air Service.

His next four years were spent in Waco at Baylor University, where he received a B. B. A. degree in 1926, in business Administration, Accounting, German and Economics. Following this, he was employed variously by the Clement Grain Company, Western and Inspection Bureau, The Texas Company, Lago Petroleum Corporation, five different ships, for eight trips, coastwise and transatlantic. After a short time in New York City he returned to Gatesville, where he was employed by Ayres Compton on two subscription campaigns for the News, and then to the present place as part owner, rap taker, go-between, adv. taker, reporter, and what not.

When Mr. and Mrs. Harold Palmer dropped a boat anchor overboard in the Gulf of Mexico recently a giant devil fish seized it and towed the boat for five hours. Palmer finally severed the anchor rope.

At odd times during 1933, she completed a business course at the River's Night School and also had a correspondence course from the University of Chicago, completing one year's work.

Beulah has proven herself by steady application, and keeping in touch with social and personal events of Gatesville and Coryell County to be an ideal society editor for the News. She is active in club, church and social work, endeavoring to get her "leads" that would otherwise be overlooked.

Besides her work as Society Editor, she also handles the preparing of the mailing list, and sending material to the many correspondents the News must have throughout the county.

This isn't a Wish just for Christmas,
For a day or week of good cheer,
But a wish that the choicest of blessings

THE TEXAS COMPANY
MRS. MABEL GARDNER, Agent

"THANK goodness," said Martha Goodwin, bustling about her kitchen. "Christmas comes but once a year." She wiped back a loose wisp of gray hair with a weary gesture. "But it will be fine seeing you again, Lad," she murmured, thinking of her distant son. "Now, let's see. Those star cookies you're so fond of—" She glanced at the hurrying clock.

Low shrieks of laughter under her window interrupted her thoughts. Those new neighbor children again. If they were dirtying up her freshly swept walk! She strode grimly to the porch. There was a path in the snow from their yard, around hers, and back again to their own, where all four of them had apparently trudged, pushing a snow ball, across her walk in two places. A tussel started suddenly, and they were all tumbling about in the snow, shrieking at the top of their voices.

Martha scolded shrilly at them, and they stood up, an abashed little line of stair steps. "The ideal! On Christmas, too!" Martha chided. "Whatever is the matter with your ma, that she lets you make such a racket?"

"She's sick," answered the oldest girl. "Sick! Then all the more reason why you should keep still. Shame on you." The little group stood like statues.

Martha tucked in the wisp of hair. "You children come in here and sit still while I work, and I'll tell you a story," she invited. "Mind you wipe your feet."

"I suppose it should be a Christmas story," Martha began. "Do you know about the shepherds and the wise men?"

"Yes'm," they chorused. "We go to Sunday school," added the oldest girl.

"Then," Martha asked her, "shall I tell you about Santa Claus?"

Her face clouded a little. "Mother told us that," she answered soberly.

"Oh," said Martha. She dusted the flour from her hands and turned to baste the turkey. Four pairs of eager eyes watched her every move. The doorbell rang.

"Laddie! Good heavens," cried Martha, slipping off her apron, and rushed to the door.

But instead it was a telegram:

"AWFULLY SORRY DARLING BUT I JUST CAN'T GET AWAY STOP DO TRY TO HAVE A MERRY CHRISTMAS STOP GO ON A SPREE AND I'LL FOOT THE BILL STOP EXPECT TO BE ABLE TO GET DOWN FOR NEW YEAR'S AND WILL EXPLAIN EVERYTHING THEN LOVE LADDIE."

Who will come and wish with me?
Wish for luck and wish for laughter,

Wish for health and wish for wealth,

MERRY XMAS AND HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Mrs. John R. Colgin
Underwriter for Amicable Life Insurance Co.

"GRAND'THER, isn't that the most beautiful doll you ever saw?" The little hand tugged at the hand of the tall man. He looked down at the childish figure beside him. "I wish I had one like her," the child said in a low tone.

The man mused with a tender smile, "It is very beautiful dear—but I thought I heard you say that you had all of the dolls you could care for."

"Well—I did," came the faltering answer "but"—as though an inspiration had presented itself—"I could give some away I s'pose." The man's clasp tightened on the child's hand, and then he reminded her gently that they must hurry on if they were to be home in time for luncheon. Although there were many other interesting toys in the department of the great store, the child showed little interest in them, and managed to work their way back to the object of her affection, and stood enraptured before it until her grandfather again reminded her that they really must be on their way home.

As the child reluctantly followed, the man recalled another dark eyed Marcia standing before just such a doll and heard again almost the same words this Marcia had used today. "Isn't," she had said, "that doll in pink just beautiful? I wish I had one like it." And he heard the man beside her reply: "You have more dolls now than you know what to do with," and he had added, "That is too expensive anyway." "Oh is it?" the child had asked in surprise. "Yes, everything in this store is." He hadn't known whether it was or not, but he had led the child away. Later he asked himself many times why he hadn't given the doll to the child, and he resolved that never again would he be the cause of a hurt look such as he had seen in the little one's eyes that day. From then on, he determined to grant her every wish that he possibly could and so atone for the un-be happy if I didn't have that doll," Marcia laughed at the memory.

"And I wouldn't buy it for you," her father frowned.

"Why father do you remember that?" the daughter asked in surprise.

"I have never forgotten it, and I resolved never to be the cause of hurting you or anyone as I had you that day."

"Why, you old dear," Marcia laughed as she hugged him. "I haven't thought of it for years." And then she said suddenly as a light of understanding broke upon her, "That is why you always have done so much for me, and why you gave Marcia that doll today, isn't it?" John Grant's smile was the only answer he gave for a moment, and then he said: "If I have succeeded in making both or either of you happy, I shall be happy, too, for I shall feel that I have at least in part paid a Christmas debt long overdue."

"Dear, dear father," Marcia lovingly assured him, "you don't know

Christmas night: John Grant sat alone before the fire, his head against the back of the chair, his eyes closed and a smile of content upon his face. The door opened and a young woman's voice called softly—"Father."

"Yes, my dear," he answered as he turned toward her.

"Mother wants to know if you aren't coming to bed," the young woman said as she came into the room.

"Tell your mother I'll be there in just a minute," the man replied with a laugh.

"Do you know, father, I think that you have made Marcia the happiest little girl in the world tonight," Marcia Field said as she went and sat on the arm of her father's chair.

Her father put his arm around her. "I'm glad if I did," he told her.

Carrier Boys Deliver "The News" To City Subscribers Tues. and Fri.

Uncle Sam's city rates on semi-weekly newspapers is so much higher than on weeklies that the semi-weekly is compelled to use carrier boys, which in most instances get the paper to the subscriber earlier.

BOB THOMAS

Bob Thomas is a senior in Gatesville High School, and when asked for a sketch of his life for this purpose, he gave us the following: Bob was born in Dallas December 10, 1919, has lived probably in more places than any boy on the staff of the News, since his father is employed in Mexico in some capacity, he lived in Tampico for a number of years, attending school there for four years. Six months was spent in Jonesboro, and he has been a resident of Gatesville for the past six. As for his other travels, he has been all over Texas, New Mexico and a large part of Old Mexico.

His experience has been with ice plants, farm work, gold mining, usher, "skeet" at drug stores and carrier and helper at the News office.

Bob is a linguist, speaking Spanish and English fluently and is the head of our "Foreign Relations" department, and acts as interpreter, or would, if we should ever need one.

MARVIN FRANKS

Marvin Franks is also a "paper hurler." He has been tossing the pulps for quite a spell now, and gives the dope on himself being born September 20, 1920, is a Junior in High School, has worked for Frank's Market, is son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Franks, and has made Gatesville his home since birth.

Marvin, like the other carrier boys, knows the highways and byways of the city and keeps up with the residents, who can't make a move, without these boys "getting on." "Nor cold, nor heat, nor rain, nor hail," can stop these boys when the News is out, the reader must be served.

Aside from this, these boys would break down and take your subscription, or renewal, and save you the trouble of coming to the office, but you'll have to get up early, because they "put 'em out early."

KENNETH ANDERSON

Kenneth (Lassies) Anderson is one of the "paper toters," for the News. Mixing papers with football management this Fall, Lassies has been busy as a cranberry merchant at Xmas, especially, with a little school work to put up with.

Lassies has taken Emil Lee's place as carrier boy since Emil finished school.

Lassies gives us this dope about himself. He was born in Jonesboro on October 30, 1918. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Seth Anderson of Gatesville. He is a Junior of the Gatesville High School and takes part in all kinds of athletics. When a Freshman he and his team mates won the softball championship of Coryell county. He is also manager of the Hornet Football team of 1936, and has been re-elected for '37 and '38.

Tell me she can't make you give an accounting! Mrs. W. Mat Jones, our new bookkeeper, who got her position by marriage, just to help "Papa."

If we told you a lot about her, you'd say it was bragging, but even that wouldn't be enough.

She "took over" one of the sternest duties of the office some three or four months ago and has been seldom bawled out for efficiency—she just won't take it. She "figgers" the advs, bills the advertising, readers, want ads, job work, and let's the collector, me, worry about getting the "dough."

If you have to "ache" about a bill, that's the part of the bookkeeping she doesn't handle, preferring to let us do that part, which of course, we are probably in a better position to do.

Well, for JR, we'll say, he doesn't always say what we'd say, and he isn't very handy with the salve and soft soap, but he does hand the readers the most readable sports column we've seen in this neck of the woods. He unconsciously, or consciously, we can't say, mixes some very spicy, good-natured humor with his comments and puts up a first rate sports column.

FOR many years Marelu had not been exactly happy on Christmas; somehow she had never received the pretty things bestowed upon other girls. "If they all only knew how I have secretly longed for those soft, dainty luxuries," thought Marelu, as she sat before the fireplace, just three days before Christmas.

"There are those kitchen aprons, for instance, from dear old aunt Lucia. Every year, as far back as I can remember, it has always been aprons. I must have almost a dozen by now. Then there is cousin Marie, who has been sending the inevitable handkerchief right along, year after year. There must be quite a collection of them, too."

While she had been grateful and thankful for these kind remembrances, she had not been exactly thrilled.

A happy Christmas thought suggested itself to Marelu as she gazed out at the slender icicles shining like silver in the moonlight. "I know what I'll do. I'll start right now and wrap up all these things into parcels and give them to some one who really needs them."

When Christmas day arrived Marelu started out with her basket brimming full of beautifully wrapped and tied Christmas gifts. Every step she took over the holiday carpet of snow represented a kindly thought of cheer.

"Merry Christmas," she cried, as she handed a bright colored parcel to dear old Linda Larsen.

"The very same to you," said she, with a questioning look of surprise. The next moment she was proudly unwrapping a pair of pretty bath towels. Marlene and Dolly, two little girls around the corner, danced up and down with joy when they saw the snowy handkerchiefs with colored borders. Marelu smiled happily as she left the little girls and proceeded to her next stop. Effie Lynn was overwhelmed with surprise when a gift was handed her. She explained that it had been years since she had received a Christmas present.

After several other interesting calls Marelu started for home. The street lights flashed on and the glimmering Christmas trees joined in the ceremony on all sides of her. As she drew near her own home she stood still a moment and admired the grandeur of the dark pines encircling the house under a white burden of snow. The variations of colors gleaming from the windows seemed to be stretching out to meet the pines.

Inside the house was warmth and joy and Christmas cheer as the family gathered about the Christmas tree, pointed with the star of Bethlehem. Marelu was just in time for the celebration. Bobby had been chosen to read off the names upon the gifts and all eyes were centered upon the huge basket containing them.

"First on the program," shouted Bobby, "is for mother." All wondered what it could be.

"A gorgeous lamp shade," cried mother, as she held it up for all to see.

While still admiring this thing of beauty, Bobby shouted louder than ever, "something for the governor, himself. Get ready, pop, for your surprise."

"What can the strange package be, for goodness sake?" said father, his eyes popping with interest. "Well, I do declare, if it isn't a golf set. Just what I have wanted for a long time," as he started to examine it.

"Oh boy, hold out your hands and catch, Dot, a ducky package for you, all tied with silver cord. What is it? Open it quick!"

Dot removed the bright red tissue and disclosed a white wool skating outfit.

Marelu had been so absorbed in what the others were receiving that she had forgotten all about herself. For the first time in many years she had received the things she really adored. With a heart full of appreciation and joy, she

The Guilty Gift
SAM LINCOLN walked slowly along the street gazing into store windows. An icy wind caught him at the corners but he hurried across to the next curb intent on his mental shopping.

He was thinking hard of Cora, too. Though not a word had been spoken between them on the subject, it was quite understood that he should buy her warm gloves, a warm sweater and stockings for Christmas. He'd saved a fair amount for this very purpose. When you gave up your city living for the country, you thought in terms of wool. Cora needed all these things. Her gloves were worn down to thin spots. Her sweater had been mended a good many times and her stockings—well, Cora just laughed about them. Cora would. She had made fun of every hard thing about changing their home, from the dreadful wheezy pump in the kitchen, to the way the floors slanted in the bedrooms, so that no pencil would stay on a table, and books continually slid off on the floor. Cora was a thoroughbred and a good sport.

Sam looked at a green sweater. That would be becoming to Cora's light curls. Or that cheerful red one. Nice on snowy winter mornings. The very chickadees would sing with pleasure at sight of her in that sweater. He took a few steps toward the shop door when his eye fell on a black-and-yellow silk kimono.

Of course he would not get it; just inquire the price so that he might look at it.

The moment Sam touched a reverent hand to the exquisite silk he was lost. Thrifty, hard-working Sam! How could he have done such a thing? And so calmly, too. "Please wrap it up," he had said. The price had been reduced in order to sell quickly. He walked out of the shop with the light bundle under his arm, and slunk by windows filled with warm woolen clothes . . . the kind Cora so sorely needed.

All the way home on the train his heart sank lower and lower. He felt so chilled and miserable at the thought of his weak behavior, that Cora rushed at him as he opened the door, exclaiming, "My dear, what dreadful thing has happened to you?"

"You're So Lovely I Want to Kiss You Very Hard."

They had an excellent if frugal dinner. Cora chatted happily of this and that, looking unusually pretty and gay. Sam tried to meet her laughter, but actually shivered along his spine. Idiot! Fool! Wretched unspeakable lunatic that he was! Would a yellow-and-black Chinese kimono keep Cora warm? It would not.

Justice demanded that he confess. Cora would be kind, and that would hurt more than anything. Cora would be kind . . . and keep right on feeling cold on the crisp mornings after Christmas. But he must do it . . . muddle through it somehow.

After dinner he came close to Cora muttering something about a gift, and how darned sorry he was . . . and please, please not to look at him so sweetly.

Cora unwrapped the bundle. Sam waited. The lovely shining thing fell to the floor with the lights gleaming on it.

"Oh . . . oh . . . I never in all my life saw anything so magnificent! For me? Surely, surely not for me, Sam? But how I'd adore it! I'm sure I wouldn't mind anything if I knew such a gorgeous garment were hanging in my closet. But of course you're teasing me . . ."

"No," said Sam heavily, "it's your Christmas present. I feel like a cad. I know you need the warm things . . . don't be so darned sweet about it!" he commanded crossly.

Cora flung on the robe, and threw her arms around Sam's neck. "I don't know why you're acting this silly way . . . but if you're so dead set on warm things . . . a whole box came this afternoon from Uncle Horace."

Sam sank weakly into a chair. "You're so lovely I want to kiss you very hard."

"Why not?" inquired Cora, resplendent in the yellow-and-black kimono. "This is simply the most wonderful thing you ever did for me."

BUT ONCE A YEAR—

Then she smoothed the straying wisp of hair and went back to the kitchen.

"Well," the older girl was explaining, "it's sort of like a chicken, I guess, only ever so much bigger." The four children looked up as Martha entered. "Why, what's the matter, Mrs. Goodwin?"

"My son—I was expecting him—he isn't coming."

"Gee," came a sympathetic chorus. "And you'd fixed everything so nice and—and Christmasy."

"I'm not going to have it spoiled," Martha decided. "Here," she said and draped the holly wreath over the youngest's arm. "You," she said to the next one, "carry the potatoes, and you take the mince pie—careful, it's hot—and you," to the eldest, "take the vegetables. I think I can manage the turkey."

"But where are we going?" "Over to your house. Weren't you about to miss out on Christmas dinner?"

"Dinner first, then presents," she suggested, and when, having eaten all they could hold, they gathered about the holly, she found a crudely wrapped present for herself. It was a picture scrapbook, somewhat smudged.

Were those tears in Martha Goodwin's eyes? Surely not, for she was smiling.

"Why, thank you," she exclaimed. "Such a lovely surprise! My," she added, "I wish Christmas came more than once a year."

RACHEL'S CHRISTMAS LIGHT
Gertrude H. Walton

"WONDER if Harris would care? Shall I do it, then ask him afterward?" Rachel Stanton, the morning of Christmas eve, looked admiringly at the brilliant tree in the pleasant living room, then hurried to brush snow from Harris, who, stamping in from the back porch, panted: "I've cleaned the driveways to barns and road but will have to do it again today. What were you saying?" he was interrupted by Rachel.

"The radio announces that the snow plow from Warnton has stuck at the corner and will have to be dynamited out. No one can get through highways farther than the crossroad's corner," Rachel hurried to the telephone's jingling.

"It was Martha calling. She and Gene and the children started here but are blocked in at a home of kind strangers. I wish we could get food to the Harrison family in the Bottoms. They have no telephone, no near neighbors, and would freeze if they tried to get here through high drifts. Such a winter! It looks as though our Christmas will be 'we two,' she sighed at the color-lighted tree.

"Well, I see I'll have to shovel out the driveways again," Harris announced, pulling on jacket and gloves.

Later when he went inside to warm his fingers he heard Martha humming and was thankful that she was cheerful over the disappointment of Christmas eve without her relatives. Odors of savory food and the attractive table with Christmas colors, were inviting as he stamped in after evening chores were finished.

"Tonight will be the worst so far this winter. The wind is rising and snow blowing. A terrible night. Surely no one would venture on highways—why—where is the tree? Did you dump it outside because our company didn't come?" he looked, to be sure Rachel was sane, then at the empty corner where the tree had stood.

"Yes, the radio announced the temperatures will be lowest of season, so far."

"The tree, Rachel! Did you throw it out?"

"That's exactly what I did—only didn't throw—" a shout from outside sent Harris quickly to the door.

"Come in from the terrible blizzard, you poor frozen—how did you get here?" Rachel helped Harris unwrap five shivering visitors, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison and children.

"Oh, it's been terrible getting here. But it was either to freeze and starve at home or risk getting here," Mr. Harrison wheezed. "But, how did you?" Harris began.

"Outside—see the dogs. We hitched them to the sled. The blessed creatures helped us over

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

THERE was a lady that got a great kick out of going out to visit the battleships when they anchored in the river at Santa Barbara. She liked to go out and kinda cheer up the common sailors, she said. She found them right bashful, though, and they hardly ever said anything but "Yes, ma'am."

This lady thought she knew a lot about the sea after she'd been out to the ships three or four times, and so she tried to talk to the bo'-sun's mate one day.

"I suppose you've got kinda used to sea legs now," she says to him, trying to look serious and motherly. "No, ma'am, I aint' used to it exactly," he says, "but I wasn't looking at all when you come up the ladder, so I hope you're not trying to bawl me out."

drifts which are now frozen."

Steaming food was soon on plates and faithful dogs were lapping milk and broth near the kitchen range.

"How did you find the direction—the way in blinding snow?" Harris looked puzzled.

"Well, we got to the top of King's Ridge in the pasture, and came toward the light. The light near your grove, back there," the visitor pointed toward the west. "That light guided us."

"What light?" Harris stammered.

"Harris, dear, will you please carry our Christmas tree back into the house? I carried it outside this morning to the grove and put food on it for birds, wild ducks and any other wild animals that need food and shelter. Then, tonight, I hung that large lantern with the strong light on top the tree to guide whoever might need it.

Merry laughter rang into the night as nuts were cracked and corn popped. Christmas morning Mr. Harrison helped keep snow from driveways and a path to the grove where the children carried food to a stack of fodder which the men had placed for the wild animals.

"Snow may be drifted high outside. But kindness inside of me needs never be blocked so it can not be scattered and be a guide to others," Rachel mused after the happy Christmas of the worst winter.

BRACK CURRY, WORLD EVENTS COMMENTATOR

Joe Burns, columnist who writes World Comment, a regular Arthur Brisbane column of world, national, state, county and local comment, is a home town boy with a non de plume.

We are going to take the liberty to give you the inside of this ace writer. Joe Burns is none other than our Brack Curry, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Curry, who adopted this moniker on account of his age, and due to the fact that he was, when he started this column in the local high school.

In our opinion, with the same publicity Arthur Brisbane gets, Brack would equal, if not surpass the mighty Arthur in his line of columning.

Brack is now in Dallas, attending SMU and incidentally is a writer on the staff of The Dallas Morning News, and will eventually make a great big mark in newsmanship by his carefully thought-out comments on the world and its doings.

FRANK L. SIMMONS, HISTORIAN

Frank L. Simmons, historian, folk lore fancier, author of innumerable Newspaper and magazine articles of local history and compiler of "The History of Coryell County," printed this year by the News, is one of our best and closest observers of local history.

Mr. Simmons, although not so well known in the central part of the county, is better known down Eagle Springs way, the part of the country from which Pat M. Neff sprang and other notables.

He has done a remarkable job in "The History of Coryell County," considering the many conflicting tales that are told, the many different angles of history that could be worked on, and the difficulty of getting this from the old timers that can be substantiated.

Shortly, Mr. Simmons will have other articles of historic interest which he will present thru the columns of the News for its readers. We are indeed, glad to have Mr. Simmons work with us, and it may be truthfully said, he is the Frank J. Dobie of Central Texas.

HE WAS a small boy named Tim who had never been more than ten miles from his home in the Ozark hills. His teacher said he couldn't even bound Arkansas, his own state, but what his teacher didn't know was how well he knew the mountain "crick" and the hill slopes circled with green-gold pine trees that bounded his father's tiny farm. He also knew what it took to keep a family of six children and that for as long as he could remember his father's farm had scarcely been able to produce enough to stretch over every need.

It was just before Christmas time that he heard his father tell his mother that if there was to be anything "extra" to give the day its meaning for the children, he'd have to get the ax and hack out a few ties. Her face went white, for she knew what that meant. So often had they been forced to remain on the hacking of a few ties to be sold to the railroad for dire necessities that practically all their timber available for that purpose was gone. And trees don't grow over night. She could tell by the look on her husband's face that he was taking a desperate and back-breaking chance of finding a few logs tough enough for the commission man to buy.

As she looked out of the window and saw the passing cars of winter "touristers" on the new scenic road the government had built through the hills, she wondered by what magic folks could come to own automobiles and take time off like that to go traveling. But she hadn't many moments to spare on such thoughts, for her husband had returned to say that the ax was gone. Could one of the children have taken it? Or what with the new road so near and strangers riding through the hills, had someone made off with it?

The father had borrowed an ax from a willing neighbor but on the day before Christmas he was silent as he unhitched his team in the wagon lot. Christmas tomorrow and he had been forced to bring back the load from town. The commission man had been truly sorry, for he did need ties; yet none of these were large enough.

He crept up to a window, lost in the sense of failure that made him ashamed to walk to his own door. There an odd sight straightened him. Inside were Tim and his mother joyously trimming a Christmas tree. Tim raced to the door to keep the younger children from bursting gleefully into the room and learning its great secret.

When the father entered the house, no one asked him about the ties. "Dad, dad!" Tim shouted. "Do you know those red berry trees that grow way up the crick? Awful hard to get to, but when I found 'em I thought they were so purty I took some to school. The teacher said, 'that's holly' and then I read about holly and learned that folks will pay for it to have it for Christmas. So I gathered a lot of it and made me a holly stand up on the new road just hopin' they would. And dad, they did buy it! Stopped their cars and said, 'Why it's holly, who would have thought we'd find it here!' They wanted so much I had to work awful hard getting it, but gee, it was fun! I wanted to surprise mom and you, and now I'll tell you both that I made $27.82. There's $20 right now in that bureau drawer left after buying our Christmas. Gee dad, I love this old farm! It's got lots of surprises on it yet. This one ain't the last one."

The father brushed a tear from his eye and kissed his wife. Then he shook hands with Tim. "You're the kind of son a man can be right proud to own," he choked. "But dad, will you forgive me?" the boy suddenly implored. "Why Tim, forgive you what?" the father asked in surprise. The boy led the way to the kitchen. "You see dad, I just had to have it?" The father pretended to frown as Tim pointed and then he winked. "Well, being as it's just about Christmas for us, as well as the rest of the world, I guess I'll have to overlook it." For there in a far corner of the room stood the ax. It was Tim who had borrowed it. © Western Newspaper Union.

STORK DERBY OPENS WITH NEW YEAR ISSUE

Ayres Compton, Former News Ed. Is Director of Dallas Safety Drive

COMPTON TO WORK WITH THE POLICE TRAFFIC BUREAU IN CITY OF DALLAS.

In a story in The Dallas Dispatch Saturday announcement is made that Ayres Compton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Compton of this city, and former owner and publisher of the Coryell County News, has been made Director of the new safety drive in Dallas.

The story reads: "Dallas' traffic education campaign to eliminate death from the highways definitely got underway Thursday with the appointment of Ayres Compton, 28-year-old newspaperman, as director of the new safety drive.

"Compton, an employee of the Centennial press division, assumed office with the statement that he had no "pet" ideas to put into operation, but that he would confer with City Manager Hal Moseley, Chief Bob Jones and other officials to obtain data for his initial activities.

"Compton, who received the appointment after it had been rumored for some time that Raymond Hulsey, Dallas insurance man, would be favored, will receive $250 a month and will work directly under the police traffic enforcement bureau.

"The director is dark-haired, of medium height and slender build, and has a pleasing personality. His newspaper work is expected to enable him to produce good traffic education publicity, and his work in public speaking will be valuable in addressing luncheon clubs, civic groups and other interested in making Dallas a safe place for motorists and pedestrians alike.

"The bureau will be largely a clearing house for the exchange of ideas, and Compton will attempt to assemble these in forceful form.

"The new director will have offices on the fourth floor of the city hall."

Ayres, Mr and Mrs. Howard Compton, and the city of Gatesville are to be congratulated on this young man's ability and the recognition of same by a city like Dallas. He has been on the publicity committee for the Texas Centennial Central Exposition, the biggest promotional exposition, and in fact, the biggest event of any nature ever attempted in Texas.

FOY WICKER'S FEEDING PROJECT

I started my project November 26, 1935. I selected two long deep and broad bodied Duroc Jersey pigs. They weighed 30 pounds apiece when they went on feed November 26.

The ration I fed was even parts of tankage and cottonseed meal, and all the corn they would eat. I fed 70 pounds of tankage and cottonseed meal each and 24 bushels of corn during the 174 days on feed. The total gain was 410 pounds, the average daily gain per animal was 1.18 pounds. It took 4.84 pounds of feed to produce one pound of gain.

The total expenses were $31.32 and the total receipts were $41.59 leaving a net gain of $10.27.

JOHNNY SCHLOEMAN'S FEEDING PROJECT

For my feeding project I had two shorthorn calves that weighed 350 and 500 pounds. The cost for both was $50. They were started on feed October 9, 1935. During this feeding period of 120 days and 154 days each, they ate the following: 2360 pounds of corn, 544 pounds of oats, 572 pounds of cottonseed meal, and 620 pounds of millet hay. The calf fed 120 days gained 200 pounds, with a daily average gain of 1 4-5 pounds. It took 8 pounds of feed for one pound of gain. The total expenses were $88.30 including cost of calves. The total receipts were $99.00. I sold the calves at Fort Worth for 74c per pound.

CORYELL COUNTY'S FIRST BORN IN 1937 IS TO BE HONORED WITH GIFTS BY GATESVILLE MERCHANTS.

New as a new-born babe in a new year, is the story of Coryell County's first Stork Derby!

Similar to Toronto's $50,000.00 Stork Derby, but with the details and plans already finished, this Stork Derby will present to Coryell County's first born in 1937, prizes by as many merchants as will make this possible by their participation and donations.

There will be no suits, no legal entanglements, nothing of that sort. The only thing necessary is that the name, address, doctor's report and birth certificate of the first baby born after the first of the year, certified before a notary public. Send to Baby Editor, in the care of the Coryell County News. These conditions are absolutely necessary so that proper certification can be made. To participate in this contest all reports must be in this office by noon, 12 o'clock, Thursday, January 8.

In case of twins, triplets, quadruplets, quintuplets, or sextuplets or more, we are sure awards will be made to correspond with the number presented.

The News will, of course, be in on this novel contest or feature, and will be in the van with something that both baby, mother, father and the rest of the family will be glad to partake of.

The principal thing is this: Get your entry papers to "Baby Editor," care Coryell County News, Gatesville, Texas, not later noon, Thursday, January 8, 1937.

SPORTS

Basketball

Coryell County leads the world in mule production and the state in oats. Now it begins to look as if they will make some kind of record in basketball. With the easy drubbing of the Waco Tigers 30 to 10 last Friday night hopes are soaring high for a championship team. (The championship of Coryell County, which is no small honor in itself, as the boys lay with wild eyes and frothing mouths in these here parts.)

To your commentator last Friday's game was something of a surprise. The night's entertainment started off in fine style with a preliminary battle between the Green-clad Gazelles from Plainview. Straining these old orbs, I gaped open-jawed in bewilderment and delight as the Hornet lassies tripped lightly to and fro across the polished floor, shooting goals with nonchalance and grace from every conceivable angle. "Hurray," I shouted, forgetting my Puritan upbringing. "Hurray, hurray, you are doing nicely girls. Go in there and fight for dear old G. H. S." (In the tense excitement of the moment I was forgetting my supposedly non-partisan attitude, and thinking only of my old Alma Mater achieving victory.)

At the end I leaned back limply. Gatesville had won, 16 to 14! Really my dears, I was so exhausted from rooting for my team that for the moment I completely forgot about the main event to follow.

But when the Waco team came on I sat bolt-upright again, my mental exhaustion completely forgotten. "Gracious me," I remarked to little Johnnie Bradford, who was sitting by me, "Aren't they bulky young men to still be in high school." "Yes, they surely are he replied, and together we sat there and stared in consternation. Oh, dear, I fumed, I expected defeat tonight, but those boys look as if they intended to roll up an enormous score, just for the sheer devilry of the thing!

'Twas then I turned my attention to our boys who were engaged in their warming up practice, as they so quaintly call it, at the other end of the court. And do you know, they seemed not a bit worried. In fact, they actually seemed eager for the combat to start, as if this was the chance they had been waiting for, to show Coryell county they could boast something other than mules and oats.

For the moment I was comforted by their attitude, but on turning once more to view the Waco boys my heart fell again. "Oh dear," I whispered, "surely they can't expect to hold the score down against those players. Why, why they almost looked like professionals!" I almost felt like saying "Gee-whiz," I was so disconsolate.

Finally when I thought I could stand the suspense no longer, the teams were called to the center for the start of the game. "Aie, aie," I groaned, "now comes the slaughter."

The whistle shrilled, the ball was tossed up, the game was on!

Gilbreth, elongated Hornet center, leaped high into the air with a mighty spring, tapped the ball smartly to a fellow teammate, and in a flash Gatesville had scored with an accurate toss by Moore.

The crowd went wild! Gatesville had drawn first blood! the Waco boys smiled condescendingly to say, they will be silent soon enough.

The ball was tossed again. Again Gatesville took possession, and again they scored! It was uncanny. And then, dear public, I was frightened. I was fearful that Waco would become so in-Juggernaut, crushing everything furled they would take their path with a devatating ball and run up some frightening scores of 107 to 4.

But my fears were in vain, yes I repeat, in vain. The Black and Gold could not be stopped. They were like the mythical that Waco would become so in-Juggernaut, crushing everything furled they would take their path with a devatating attack, and the once-mighty Tigers were cowed; They positively whimpered, yes whimpered. In stead of roaring the whispered Gatesville was running wild.

Ten, fifteen, twenty points were rolled up, with Waco's scoring still remaining in the single figures. "Goodness," I thought, "will our boys never stop? Won't the Tigers get 10 points at the least?"

The slaughter continued. Led by Moore and Turner the Hornets shot and shot with un-

Dear Santa:
 Thanks for the pretty doll you brought me last Christmas. She needs a new dress and if it is not asking too much she really should have a buggy. The fresh air would be good for her if I could take her out riding during nice weather.
 Daddy says we'll have a happier Christmas this year because I am well. Remember how sick I was last year with that bad cold? We have not had one at our house this winter. Mother says it is because we have heated the entire house like they do at Aunt Mary's.
 Please Santa, don't bring Junior another rubber gun. He has one that is broken. When it was new he made me play cops and robbers and I was always getting shot.

believable accuracy. "Whopos, whoops!" the crowd roared!

Finally the massacre was over.

A glance at the scoreboard revealed Gatesville had thirty points to ten miserable, scrawny, pitiful ten points for the Waco Tigers, the team had humbled Temple only a week before.

Trembling from pentup emotion I leaned back in my seat. "Wasn't it wonderful?" I whispered to little Johnnie Bradford, who was still sitting faithfully by my side. "Yes," he answered, in a voice choked with emotion, "I don't know how they done it."

But more was yet to follow. Scarcely had the court cooled off and the net on the Gatesville basket stopped swishing, when out on the hardwood ran the number 1 team of the Hornet girls. And from the opposite end came the red-clad forms of the Cranfill's Gap dreaded girl's team.

My fears came back. This crimson aide was the same that had been sweeping the courts up in the north land. Here is where Gatesville ruins their perfect record for tonight, I thought, but I was devoid of feeling; the previous game had drained me of every ounce of emotion and I had only a numb horror of what was in store for our girls.

The game started. The black and gold uniforms swished back and forth. They started shooting goals. My spirits reeled. Ah, I thought, this is beginning to look good. Perhaps we do have a chance after all. I started cheering. And the girls came through.

At the finish, the glorious finish, the Black and Gold had triumphed! Our girls had won, 30 to 14, and dearie me, was I happy! I threw my hat in the air, uttered a jubilant scream of victory and started my weary trek homeward. Whatta night! Whatta night!

WORLD COMMENT

By JOE BURNS

The next two months should witness some very definite developments in Europe in respect to the Spanish rebellion. For the course of events on that unhappy peninsula has taken a disastrous turn for peace-loving nations and threatens to involve all the major powers in a general war of untold consequences. A meeting in Paris last week between a confidential adviser of Gen. Franco, the Spanish rebel commander, and emissaries of Adolph Hitler may have been the prelude to much more violent actions concerning Spain on the part of the powers vitally concerned with rebellion, namely, Germany, Italy, and Soviet Russia.

The meeting arranged for the sending of foreign military specialists to aid the insurgents who realize that without foreign help they cannot capture Madrid nor subjugate the outlying provinces.

On the other hand, reliable sources quote the Madrid Government as having said that only with definite foreign aid can it defeat the Fascists. Recognition of Gen. Franco's insurgent regime by Italy and Germany, struck a death blow at the Madrid cause, its leaders feel, just at a time when the city's unexpected defenses seemed to be turning the tide of battle in its favor.

Germany, Italy and Russia have been pouring men, money and munitions into Spain, but a semblance of secrecy has been maintained in the doing. After all three nations have become embroiled that none dares turn back for fear of popular reprisal at home, the Fascist and loyalists bluntly tell their respective benefactors that only with definite foreign aid can either emerge with victory.

Herein lies the danger. Germany and Italy prematurely recognized General Franco as the head of the new Spanish government before he captured Madrid. Now it is apparent that Franco can win only with mercenary and foreign troops, but neither Hitler nor Mussolini dares leave the Fascist commander in the lurch. Such action would mean loss of prestige both at home and abroad which might lead to incalculable results.

The other side of the tragic panorama finds Russia's Stalin energetically plugging for the loyalists and every Russian factory worker contributing a percentage of his monthly wages to the Spanish cause. Can Stalin afford a rebel triumph?

As stated before in this column 10,000 Germans and 5,000 Italians are now serving in the rebel armies, while 9,000 Soviet fighters are serving in loyalist armies. Germans and Italians, apostles of Fascism, fighting Russians, bearing the banner of communism, fighting—but under the Spanish flag and on Spanish soil.

Fascist General Franco has appealed to Herr Hitler for 20,000 German volunteers to augment his forces in the attack on Madrid. Indications point to a withdrawal from the conflict by the Russians.

Europe fears that with this mad scramble on the part of the Fascists and Communists nations to aid their respective a greater struggle—that for supremacy of Europe and the world.

The Refusal of the Republican national committee to accept the proffered resignation of Chairman John D. Hamilton does not mean that all factions of the Grand Old Party are relinquishing control of the party to the Hamilton-Landon leadership, prominence and potency during Franklin Roosevelt's second term.

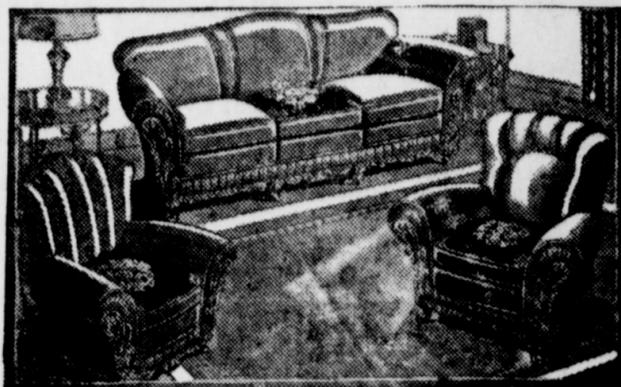

The G. O. P. might be said to be divided into four distinct and somewhat irreconcilable factions. There is of course the Old Guard, which won its last triumph with the election of Calvin Coolidge in 1924, only to be turned out of the leadership of the party by Hoover in 1928. Since 1928 and 1932 the Hoover group has remained apart from both the Old Guard and those liberals who it seemed had captured control in 1936.

But all of the liberals of the Republican party did not unite behind Alf Landon and John Hamilton and their followers, who constitute the third faction. Johnson, Capper, Vandenberg and McNary—those mentioned above—remained aloof in the last campaign, although Capper and Vandenberg issued declarations in favor of Landon and Knox.

And it is this group which divided about half and half between the allegiance to the Roosevelt Administration and an independent course apart from both the Democratic and the Republican leaderships. It is this group which must assume the burden of reconstructing the Grand Old Party and making of it at least a strong and militant minority.

A study of personalities reveals that although Johnson and McNary might back a liberal-conservative leadership, neither is capable because of age of assuming the actual leadership, but Capper and Vandenberg are youthful as presidents go, and then there is a younger group of great potential power, including Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. of Massachusetts, H. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire and Wallace White of Maine.

SYNOPSIS

Ossie Merrill, All-American fullback at Sierra and Paddy O'Riley, comes back to his home town, Bellport, in the summer preceding his senior year. Paddy O'Riley, a high school classmate and now second string quarterback at Green Ridge, a small eastern college, returns at the same time with Dutch Schultz, varsity fullback at Green Ridge, who is en route to Pasadena, his home. Merrill and O'Riley were rivals for the affections of Cheers Reynolds, pretty cheerleader. But Merrill's ardor has cooled now that he meets movie stars. The town turns out to give a big welcome to Ossie. With him is Florence Taylor, a movie star. Dutch recognizes her as an old sweetheart from Pasadena. They greet each other tenderly, much to Merrill's disgust. Later, Merrill, Dutch and Paddy almost come to blows because Ossie makes disparaging remarks about the Green Ridge football team.

CHAPTER IV

"A RECTANGULAR solid is best defined. . ." Dutch Schultz was pacing up and down the untidy little dormitory room occupied by himself and Paddy and staring incomprehensibly at a text book in his hand. "A rectangular solid is best defined. . ." He stopped as he passed the wash stand as his eye fell on a glass which stood there. For a moment he struggled with temptation. Then he laid down the book, placed the glass on the mantel and tried to imitate his father's famous high note.

The glass remained unmoved. Again and again, louder and louder, he tried, unaware that he was rousing the entire dormitory. At last he stopped exhausted, only to be greeted by a loud razzberry from a group of students who had gathered in the doorway.

"Think nothing of it, gentlemen," Paddy pushed his way through the mob. "His doctor told our Mr. Schultz to say 'ah.'" He closed the door in the faces of the boys, then walked over to Dutch, shaking his head.

"Well, my father does it," his red-faced roommate protested.

"Not that kind of a glass, stupid," Paddy answered gently. "It's as thick as your head." He started to unwrap a package which he had brought and finally revealed a toy donkey.

"Who's talking," muttered Dutch feebly. Then, as he caught sight of the donkey. "What's this—a family portrait?"

"This is Oscar, the Green Ridge mascot."

"The guys will tear you apart if you suggest that."

"Not when I tell them Ossie Merrill suggested it. And did it ever occur to you, Dutch—a donkey not only has long ears—it sometimes has a kick."

"Right!" Dutch was becoming enthusiastic. "And a kick in the right place might do Ossie some good. I'm working up an awful burn at that guy . . . every time I think of the way he snaked Cheers away from you."

"Sure it's not every time you think about that cross-country trek he took with Flossie Taylor?" Paddy was annoyed. "Listen, just because Merrill took a woman away from you. . ."

"That guy couldn't take my temperature!"

"Maybe, but he sure can make it rise."

That night Dutch got to thinking again about Paddy and Cheers. And the more he thought the more angry he became. Finally he go-bye for a mug like Ossie Merrill."

After putting this bombshell in the mail, Dutch went to bed again and slept the sleep of the righteous.

Oscar, the mascot, seemed for some strange reason to be just what Green Ridge had been waiting for. The team, which usually acquitted itself well, but seldom displayed championship form, began going through its fall schedule like a battering ram. W. & J. was taken into the fold 27 to 0; Navy collapsed, 14 to 6; Penn followed, 20 to 13. And each winning score was duly lettered upon the donkey's side in india ink.

"I hope Ossie, the pride of Sierra, reads the papers," Dutch remarked one Saturday night as he, Paddy, and several other players were worshipping their mystical mascot.

"If he read 'em today he saw one for his own book," said Russell, Green Ridge's hefty center. "Sierra 40; Monterey 0."

"A set-up," grunted Dutch.

"Those set-ups are going to fool around and make him All-American fullback, if he's not careful," answered Paddy.

"U-h-h-h," Schultz was annoyed. "Well, you guys show me a little blocking against Pitt and we'll see about that."

"If we only showed you a little blocking," murmured his roommate, "you'd be playing on the second team."

"I never could take your place, Irish. You've got a spot worn in that bench of yours—all yours." Dutch was working himself into a fine frenzy. "I suppose all I do is carry the ball, huh?" he demanded, jumping to his feet. "How about the Navy game? How about that first touchdown when you clowns were all laid out on your ears and I busted through and went over the line with four future admirals hanging on me? Blocking, huh? How about the Penn game. . ."

The fullback stopped short and looked toward the door, feeling foolish. The others turned quickly. Soapy Moore, the coach, stood there surveying them dourly.

"Those games have all been played, boys," he said as he walked toward the center of the room. "Let's talk about the one that's just ahead of us . . . the toughest nut on our schedule . . . the one we've got to win. . . How about the Pitt game?"

"Did it ever occur to you," asked Paddy, "that a donkey not only has long ears but it sometimes has a kick." Dutch was enthusiastic. "And a kick in the right place might do Ossie some good," he said.

SOUTHWEST CONFERENCE FAVORITE TO BE NAMED BY T.S.C.W. GIRLS

Denton, Tex., Dec. 21.—"Just because!" What more reason is required of any woman,

And so the girls at Texas State College for Women (CIA) deemed the outstanding football player in the Southwest Conference. Ability to block and tackle, kick and pass, run the ends or plunge the line my enter into the decision to some slight degree, but the vast majority will make their selections "just because."

Who was the lucky hero? Not a soul on the campus will know until he appears at the college soon after Christmas holidays. At that time a suitable trophy will be presented him by the Less-O, student weekly newspaper, and sponsor of the poll.

No football team proudly carries the colors of the State College for women, but this does not dampen their interest in their favorite Southwest conference team. Hundreds of eager football enthusiasts leave campus each week-end to follow games played in this vicinity. He may or may not be outstanding on the all-star teams selected by coaches, scribes, and critics, but the player who gets the nod of more than 2300 coeds from Denton will have no mean accomplishment.

Smoking was unknown in Europe and Asia until after the time of Columbus, who found the Indians smoking their primitive pipes and cigars.
