THE TRAINING SCHOOL BOYS "WORKING OUT" IS BANNED

Austin, May 21.—(AP)—Rep. E. F. Harrell, chairman of a legislative committee that investigated the institution, made public an order by the state board of control directing the management to stop furnishing labor of inmates of the Gatesville reformatory.

Harrell said evidence showed youths committed to the institution has been used for work for which the state received pay, a practice held by the attorney general to be in violation of the law for commitment of juveniles.

Labor in the vicinity had been denied the opportunity to work because of state competition, Harrell asserted.

POST OFFICE GIVEN FINAL OKEH BY INSPECTORS FRIDAY

M. E. Groner and Irving D. Porter, District Engineers and Inspectors were here Friday and gave the final inspection on the new Post Office building.

Indications are now, according to Mr. Hirshfeld, that the entire contract will be completed by May 29 in accordance with the contractual requirements.

Government requirements allow a final inspection on construction for the government only when 99 per cent of the work is done, and according to Mr. Hirshfeld, this is the case with the local building.

SOCIAL SECURITY OFFICIAL TO SPEAK AT CITY HALL TODAY

M. D. Dewberry, representative of the Austin field office of the Social Security Board, will be at the City Hall all day Tuesday, May, 25 to interview public officials, civic leaders, employers and employees on phases of the Social Security Act, it was announced today by Andrew Kendrick, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

Dewberry is on a tour of the entire Austin district, which includes this county, in an effort to bring about better public understanding of the provisions of the Social Security law.

In a letter to the Chamber of Commerce, the Social Security Board official said one of the purposes of his visit here would be to enlist the support of local officials and civic groups in a campaign to assign social security account numbers to every worker covered by the old age benefits section of the law. Although the majority of workers in covered employments now have their cards, it is believed that there are yet many eligible employees who have not applied for numbers.

Since applications for account numbers may be filed through the local post office until June 30, it was pointed out that employees who have not yet applied should do so now. After June 30, it will be necessary to communicate with the Austin field office in order to establish a social security account.

APPEALS TO FARMERS IN INTELLIGENCE IN AGRICULTURAL PRACTICES

Fort Worth, May 21. —(UP)—Intelligent farming was urged today by Victor A. Schoffeleer, agricultural editor of the Dallas Morning News, as the salvation of southwestern agriculture.

The farming expert addressed the opening session of the fortieth annual Texas Grain and Feed Dealers' Association. Voluntary moisture conservation, crop rotation and intelligent tilling were pointed out as the things most needed on southwestern farms.

FROM THE COUNTY AGR'L AGENT

Trench Silos

Silage in a trench silo weighs 30 to 40 pounds per cubic foot depending upon the amount of silage in the trench as well as the method used in filling.

It is felt that in Coryell County each farm owner with stock should have at least one ton of silage per animal unit in storage.

To find the required size of a trench to feed a herd of a certain size for a certain period of time first figure the cross section (width by depth) of the trench required for the feeding period.

May 26 a meeting will be held with a representative from A. and M. College to discuss trench silos and dairy management. Watch announcements for location of this meeting.

Plane Table Mapping Begun

Crews operating Plane Tables are now in the field making maps of all farms which are under Work Sheet for 1937. All crop land will be chained, and a map made to scale of each farm.

Since exact measurements are essential to compliance under the 1937 program is very important that each man who signed up go with the crew or have a representative with each crew in order to definitely locate all fields and all property lines. Present instructions are that the mapping must be done not later than June 30th.

Pecan Meeting To Be Held On May 29th

What can be done to improve the pecan industry in Coryell County will be demonstrated and discussed on a nearby farm, by a pecan specialist of the Extension Service, Sat. morning, May 29th, at 10 o'clock. A continuation of the discussion will be held in the district court room Saturday afternoon.

Watch next week's paper for the exact location of the morning meeting. All persons interested in the production of pecans should take advantage of this opportunity.

What Was the 1936 Farm Program Worth

To many the answer to this question would be so many dollars. Definitely in terms of Government checks, Coryell County receipts were approximately $250,000.00 to 1550 co-operators.

The actual benefits of the county, however, can not be measured in terms of government checks. The benefits can be measured in this year's increased crops and in many years to come. How many more bushels of oats per acre will be made this year on land on which peas were planted last year, or where small grains were turned under, or how much increase in corn, cotton, or any other crop? The real value back of the Soil Conservation Program will be in restoring and maintaining soil fertility. If the farmers of this and other counties will base their farm operation on developing and maintaining soil fertilities, and by doing so improve the lands which they are working, it is only reasonable to think farming will be in a better state.

Check up and see if the crops growing this year on land that was retired last year are better than crops on land which were not retired. It is worth while we want to continue it.

Trench Silos

Leading trench silo authority, E. R. Eudaly, Extension Service, will discuss trench silos and their relations to livestock at the dairy barn of Byron Leaird, Sr., Wednesday afternoon, May 26th 2 o'clock. Make your plans to attend this meeting to learn why a livestock owner cannot afford to not have a trench silo.

In order that both some of the advantages and disadvantages of trench silos may be seen more clearly we are quoting below two letters which have been received; one regarding a trench silo which was a success, the other relative to a trench silo which was a failure:

"My boys and I made us a small trench silo last summer. It is 50 feet long, 4 feet deep, 6 feet wide at top and 4 feet wide at bottom. We filled it with bundled hegari the first week in August 1936, and opened it the first week in March 1937.

Our cows gave more milk after we started feeding the silage than they did while running on oat pasture. We are planning to make our silo even larger by increasing the width to 6 feet at bottom and 8 feet at top. This will make it wide enough to drive a wagon thru when unloading and will keep it well packed down. We want to try some corn in the silo this year along with the hegari.

This is the best method of preserving feed that we have ever tried. The rats do not bother silage and can be kept until it is needed."

(Signed) A. T. Quicksall

"I dug a trench silo in 1935. My experience with the silo was a failure, however, it was caused by not knowing how to dig and fill the silo.

We dug it with a plow and scraper which was alright, but we made it too long for the amount of feed that we had. The feed was also too ripe when cut. The silo was the same width at the bottom as at the top which left much air space and caused the feed to be badly damaged. We used too much dirt in covering the silage, and therefore was very inconvenient to feed.

Even under the above conditions some parts of the feed was found to be good, and the stock relished it fine.

If I make another silo I am sure I can remedy the above mentioned mistakes. I would dig the trench in a hillside, if possible, so that it would drain properly, and would make the top 3 or 4 feet wide than the bottom. I would cut the feed before it was too ripe and would not cover with so much dirt. I still feel that a trench silo when properly made and filled when the feed is in the right stage, is an excellent method of preserving forage crops.

(Signed) L. P. Clark

PEACHES AND CREAM AND BLACKBERRY JAM PLUM GOOD

That's what the Force thinks about the blackberries, peaches and plums brought in by T. J. McKinney who lives on the Ted Brumbalow farm near here. We thought for a while we were going to witness a sit-down strike in the back end, because the fruit was really delicious.

Ted Brumbalow and family are now residents of Wichita Falls and when they hear about this fruit, they're going to be visiting their hometown and farm if we know our berries.

Mr. Joe Burns,
Coryell County News,
Gatesville, Texas.
Dears Mr. Burns:

In reading the Coryell County News of April 16, 1937, I noticed your comment in the column, "World Comment," on the Supreme Court Issue. It naturally pleases me to note that you are of the opinion that a majority of the people of Texas are opposed to the plan of reorganizing the judiciary. After listening to the testimony before the Judiciary Committee on the proposed plan, I am more convinced that the plan of the President to add six members to the court without the people being able to express their opinion on the issue would be unsound.

Your comment on the issue is in line with the view expressed by the majority of thinking voters.

With the assurance of my desire to be of service at all times, I am

Sincerely,

Tom Connally

The above letter was received from Senator Connally, complementing Brack Curry on his column, "World Comment." Brack uses the pen name of "Joe Burns" when he started this column with the News, when he was 14 years old and a junior in the local high school. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Curry, formerly of Gatesville and now living in Dallas. Brack is a student in Southern Methodist University at this time, and in a recent letter Brack stated "I shall spend the summer in the office of one of the newspapers here trying to find out what this publishing business is all about."

"STOLEN HOLIDAY" COMING TO REGAL IS DRAMA OF PARIS

In the role of a French mannequin who rises to the heights of fashion for the world, Kay Francis, beautiful brunette dramatic actress, who wears clothes so magnificently, is starred in "Stolen Holiday." Forst National production which will be the feature attraction at the Regal Theatre, beginning Sat. nite at 10:30, also Sunday and Monday.

The story was literally made to order for Miss Francis. The original story by Warren Duff and Virginia Kellogg, was tailored for Kay and no one else, and so was the screen play by Casey Robinson.

In "Stolen Holiday," Miss Francis' rise from the ranks of the mannequins begins when she meets Claude Rains. He comes to the modiste shop where she is working, and tells the manager that he is delegated to select a model and some costumes to exhibit in Paris society. Kay is his selection, but when they are alone he reveals to her that what he really wants is a dinner companion with whom he can impress a rich banker.

If he succeeds in borrowing money from the banker he promises to back her in a modiste shop of her own. Thus begins a partnership that endures until eight years pass, and Kay has risen to the top of her chosen profession, unaware that her backer is involved in nefarious financial deals. To her he is a cherished and an honorable friend.

When, inevitably, the swindles in which he is involved begin to come to light, she does all she can to help him prove his innocence. She even consents to marry him, although she has already fallen in love with a young English diplomat, portrayed by Ian Hunter. It is to Hunter that she turns when death removes Rains from the situation.

Kay's ultra-modern salon is the scene of a fashion show that is said to surpass anything of its kind ever seen on the screen. The 1937 gowns, designed by Orry-Kelly and worn by sixty odd lovely mannequins are expected to bring gasps of delight from the feminine portion of the audience.

Riots on the streets of Paris, closely paralleling those that really took place not so long ago and political and financial plots based rather closely on fact give the picture a tropical significance.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. OTIS HARVEY

The Death Angel came into the home of Otis Harvey Monday morning, May 10, at 11:00 o'clock and took away his dear wife.

Ruth had only been sick a few days and her death came as a great shock to her many friends and loved ones.

Before her marriage she was Miss Ruth Henson, she was born April 24, 1913. She gave her life to Christ in the summer of 1932 at Pecan Grove Baptist Church. In January 1933, she was married to Otis Harvey and to this union one daughter, Mary Ruth, and two sons, Otis

Sharon and Tommie Gale, were born.

She was a kind and loving wife, mother and daughter. She was proud of her family and kind and good to everyone. She always had a kind word and a smile for everyone. We can't understand why she was taken from her family, but God knows best and our loss is Heaven's gain. So, weep not, dear husband and little ones, father, mother, sister, and brother, Ruth isn't dead, she is only asleep in the arms of Jesus. She can't come back to us but we can live true to God so we can go to her. A precious one from us is gone,

A voice we loved, is stilled, A place made vacant in our hearts, That never can be filled. Life is short and time is fleeting and Our lives will soon be o'er, Then we go to gain our loved ones, Waiting on the other shore. Sleep on, dear Ruth, and take thy rest. God called you home and He thought it best. (Written by one who loved her, Mrs. George R. Hodges.)

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: Philippe Martin, a young Parisian actor, kisses Monique Pelerin in a darkened movie, mistaking her for Yvonne. For this he is hauled to court and fined 1,000 francs which he cannot pay. But Monique relents and pays the fine, saving him from jail. The notoriety of the trial makes Philippe a star. In love with Monique, he arranges a farewell meeting with Yvonne. Photographers who have been trailing him, catch a shot of the kissing "monster" in action again.

Chapter Six

PELERIN INTERCEDES

Monsieur Pelerin, Monique's father, calls on Philippe to put an end to all the nonsense. You have been meeting my daughter," he says sternly. "This friendship—if you call it that—must cease."

"I'm deeply indebted to your daughter," Philippe says stiffly. "So, much as I'd like it otherwise, our friendship is more like a business arrangement. You see, after she paid my fine and got me out of jail, the least I could do was to pay her back."

"This was news to Pelerin. "Monique paid your fine!" he shouted. "Why?"

"She is not the daughter of a prominent newspaperman for nothing . . . She realized that as long as I was in jail the whole incident would be in headlines in the papers . . . so, to avoid any further publicity, she paid my fine."

"Smart girl," says Pelerin approvingly.

"Very smart," Philippe agrees. "And so," Pelerin continues, "to avoid still further publicity she met you secretly in a quiet little place like a public skating rink."

"Not so smart," Philippe agrees. "Now let's get one thing settled," Monique's father said gravely. "You are a gentleman and you respect Monique. I hope for her sake you will use discretion, good judgment and good taste . . . and no more scandal."

Philippe agrees, and means it. But he must meet Monique that afternoon. She is waiting for him at the skating rink. Unfortunately Count Alfredo gets there first, and waves before her horrified eyes a new headline about the latest escapade of the kissing monster. There is also a picture showing Philippe in action. Fortunately, the face of the woman is unidentifiable. It is, of course, Yvonne.

Innocent of this new publicity, Philippe skates towards her. She skates away, pursued across the rink by him. This is Count Alfredo's opportunity. He puts in a call for the police. Philippe catches up to Monique and tries to speak to her. She shows him the picture.

"Go away," she cries. "Let me alone! You can get your picture in the papers kissing someone else."

"But, Monique, you don't understand. I was just telling her goodbye. That is the girl I thought was next to me in the cinema when . . . when I . . ."

Monique refuses to listen. Moreover, the police enter and spoil all chances of explanation by putting Philippe under arrest again. This time Philippe is branded indeed, with no one to pay his fine, and none to intercede. As a second offender, things are liable to go hard with him. The papers naturally play up the case for all it is worth.

In consequence, on the night of the opening, Philippe is in jail. Maillot and the prompter appeal to Monique's father. For the sake of his daughter, to keep her name unblemished, Pelerin agrees to act. He has another reason. Monique has not been happy, and he begins to suspect the truth. She loves the monster, Philippe. And, come to think of it, this Philippe is not such a bad fellow at that. Much better as a son-in-law, when all things are considered, than that helpless idiot, the Count Alfredo.

Thanks to his intercession, but chiefly through the good offices of Yvonne, who happens to be married to the Minister of Justice, and has good reason to want the whole case closed, Philippe is eventually released. But for Maillot, the trouble is not yet over. Philippe refuses to open the show. He's tired of playing "monster," he's sick of the notoriety.

"I won't sing," he says stubbornly. "Who cares if I sing? They're not crowding the theatre because I can sing. They're crowding it because I accidentally kissed a girl in a cinema . . . and I'm not going on kissing girls in public places for the rest of my life. Understand that, Maillot."

But Maillot knows actors. "So, that's it, Martin. You're afraid to face it. You know that you can't sing and you've got cold feet. Very well. The old tenor will sing. He'll sing better than you if you live to be a hundred . . . In the morning the papers will say 'Martin exposed as an empty bubble and shattered as an imposter.'"

Philippe turns upon him savagely. "They'll say that! Never! I'll sing. I'll show them. Get a taxi. Charter a plane."

In the theatre, all is turmoil. The people are stamping their feet and demanding their money back. "We want Martin!"

Monique is there, too. Pelerin has seen to that. She is worried. "If he doesn't appear at the theatre tonight," she says, "he'll never get another chance."

But Philippe appears, poking his head through the curtain just in time and starting his song—"One Rainy Afternoon."

The producer has arranged a neat trick for this number. He has set the stage for a re-enactment of the cinema episode that brought Philippe so much unhappiness and so much fame. In the audience is a girl "stooge" seated next to an empty seat. It is Philippe's cue to walk singing to this seat, and to kiss the girl, while on the stage is shown the scene that was playing at the cinema house when the whole affair first started.

But Pelerin slyly leaves Monique and takes his seat next to the girl "stooge." So that Philippe, heading for the only empty seat in the house, finds himself again alongside Monique.

It is to a smiling Monique, therefore, that he sings his song, and it is Monique whom he takes in his arms and kisses, while the audience applauds rapturously.
