TENTATIVE PLANS BEING MADE FOR FT. WORTH-AUSTIN HWY.

Retail Credit Manager Temple Speaks to 10 At City Hall Meeting

Mrs. G. O. Wendt, manager of the Retail Merchant's Association of Temple was the speaker at the City Hall Tues. evening at 8 p. m. when business men of this city were called by the local manager Evan J. Smith, for an explanation of the working of an association of this nature. Bob McKinzie, manager of Radio Station KTEM accompanied Mrs. Wendt.

Mrs. Wendt outlined the working of the association and the helps which it could perform, both of the merchant and the customer, and showed conclusively that every business and individual could benefit by its services.

She said, in her own way, "the association has been very successful in Temple, protecting both the merchant in his credit business and the customer from buying more than he can safely pay for, especially, on the installment plan. Improved business conditions are consistent when merchants base their sales on the reports of the organization, and all the banks in Temple are enthusiastic members of the association."

Those present at the meeting besides Mrs. Wendt, and Mr. McKinzie, were: George Painter, E. Price Bauman, Dr. Otis C. Ray, Dr. Kermit R. Jones, T. H. Bailey, Curt Rogers, Evan J. Smith, and Mat Jones.

IRELAND, REVIVAL, MEETS WITH GREAT SUCCESS: ENDS SUN. NITE

The revival at the Ireland Baptist Church is meeting with great success according to Rev. S. M. Drake, pastor of the church.

Starting last Friday night the meeting will continue for ten days. Rev. Alvin Hopson is conducting services and Rev. Drake is leading the singing. The public is cordially invited to attend all services.

BAPTIST ENCAMPMENT

The annual meeting of the Texas Baptist encampment is now in session at Latham Springs. Rev. Clarence A. Morton of this city will leave Monday to deliver a special sermon Monday night, returning here for his services Wednesday nite. Miss Irma Lee Rutherford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Will Rutherford, is attending the encampment this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Leaird Jr. spent the week end in San Antonio.

TOM POST THOMPSON HOLDS LUCKY NUMBER AT BELTON RODEO

Tom Post Thomson, age 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. K. Thomson Sr. of this city, is a very fortunate young man.

Last Tuesday Tom Post attended the Belton Rodeo and came away from it the owner of a valuable paint saddle horse, complete with saddle and bridle. The horse was the prize award of a contest held at the rodeo and Tom Post held the lucky ticket.

"For a moment I was paralyzed," he boyishly stated, "then I went down into the arena and rode him around a little."

The horse's name is Mitzl, and according to Tom Post is "a natural born fox-trotter."

The young man is to be congratulated on his good fortune.

L. A. WOODS SPEAKS AT WACO ON RECENT SCHOOL LEGISLATION

State Superintendent L. A. Woods will be the principal speaker at Waco High School July 9, today at 4 p. m. at a meeting of school officials, teachers and superintendents.

Mr. Woods will explain in detail and interpret the equalization and other recent laws relative to schools.

Teachers and officials of this country can better understand recent legislation if they attend this meeting, according to County Superintendent J. M. Witcher. County Board Meet Changed Due to the fact that there is to be a meeting of school executives at A & M, July 13, 14 and 15, the previously called meeting of the County School Board has been changed to July 16, at 10 a. m.

All transfers for local students, and especially high school students must be made in July according to Supt. Witcher. Parents or guardians must fill out and sign blanks similar to the census blanks, which may be obtained at the County Superintendent's office.

Failure to do this by July 31 will mean, state aid application will have been made before for that district, and the pupils transferred will not have this state aid in the district to which they are transferred. Their Contract for 2 Bridges And Paving to Be Let Hiway 36 Hamilton Co.

That Hamilton County was one of the seventeen counties in which construction projects had been authorized was announced Friday by the Highway Commission in Austin. Hamilton's appropriation was for construction of 1.6 mile surfacing and two bridges on Highway 36.

While location was not exact, it is thought that one bridge and the surfacing will probably be on the Gentry's Mill Road on West 36, and the other bridge on Jonesboro-Hamilton portion of 36.

A Highway Committee of the Lions Club appeared before the Commission in Austin on Monday, June 21, and requested work to be resumed on 36. They deserve to be congratulated on their success.—Hamilton Co. News.

BOOK, 'THESE TREMENDOUS YEARS', SENT BY OSCAR BURTON, TYLER

"These Tremendous Years", is the title of an interesting book sent two newspapers here and the three banks by Oscar Burton, General Manager of the Gulf States Telephone company of Tyler.

A very interesting booklet this, and it covers the years from 1912-1937, showing pictures and giving the progress in the United States during that period in every branch of endeavor.

In fact, it says, you could not in 1912; see a newsreel, go to a "talkie", send a letter by air mail, or a package by parcel post, offer a woman a cigarette safely, buy anything wrapped in cellophane, shave by electricity, buy a row-crop tractor, freeze your own ice cubes, ect.

new school will lose this state aid.

School Per Capita Boosted
Public schools of Texas will receive approximately $4,700,000 more from the state per capital apportionment during the year starting from September 1, than ever before. The board of education has just voted to boost the allotment from $19 to $22 per scholastic.

DR. ELWORTH LOWREY NOW DOING INTERNE WORK IN FT. WORTH

Word was received here Thursday that Dr. Elworth Lowrey, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Lowrey of this city, who received his degree from Baylor Medical School in Dallas this summer is now doing interne work in the City Hospital in Fort Worth. Dr. Lowrey was placed in the Emergency Ward and began his duties on last Thursday.

His many friends in this city and county wish him success in his field of work.

HIGH SCHOOL BAND WILL HAVE SUMMER CAMP ABOUT AUGUST 1

D. W. Diserens, band director for Gatesville High School Band announces today, a Band Camp will be held about August first, either at Pecan Grove or Pidcoke, which will be band instruction and recreation.

Mr. Diserens said the object of the camp will be to get the band ready for the first of the on coming football games, and to give class instruction to both junior and senior band students and no tuition will be charged just a small charge for "eats".

All those interested in this camp are asked to get in touch with Mr. Diserens. Only students who will be enrolled in the local school will be eligible.

CHIEF OF POLICE RESIGNS ONE-NIGHTWATCH JOB OFF, TOO

Chief of Police J. B. Graves has tendered his resignation to the City officials effective July 15. Joe Sasse, who was put on temporarily as nightwatchman last winter has also been let out by the city, because the job was only temporary.

Mayor C. E. Gandy stated last night that the Chief of Police position would also be left vacant temporarily.

Reasons for these moves by the City Council were not made public.

Harry Dillishaw visited Mrs. Ruby Dillishaw and children in Waco over the week end.

The booklet was published by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America.

Public Records Reveal Full Civil Docket at July Term

Examination of the public records in District Clerk Carl McClendon's office reveal the following civil suit cases, all new, that are to come up in the July term of District Court, which starts Monday, July 12. The first week, however, will be devoted to the Grand Jury Meeting, which will probably produce a number of misdemeanor and criminal cases.

The Civil Docket, so far has these cases listed: Ernest W. Trammell et ux, vs. J. T. Bell; Marvel Chaney vs. Jewel Chaney, divorce and custody of children; Bessie Curd Bice vs. Frank L. Bice, divorce; Jewel Woodhouse Bedsworth vs. Wm. L. Bedsworth.

With relation to Coryell County, the highway situation is looking up! Plans so far, are mostly in the air, but talking points and co-operation, is being given two north Texas cities, Dallas and Ft. Worth, and Austin, on the south.

"Plans for a proposed highway between Cleburne and Austin via Gatesville which would speed up the transportation of marketing products from a vast area in South Central Texas to Fort Worth and Dallas was discussed Wednesday afternoon at a meeting at the Ft. Worth Chamber of Commerce.

County Judge Floyd Zeigler, H. K. Jackson and L. S. Holmes all of Gatesville were in conference with Charles G. Cotten, manager of the highway department of Fort Worth C. of C. and M. C. Welborn, division engineer of the State Highway Department.

Two possible routes of the proposed highway from Gatesville to Austin were discussed, one via Copperas Cove and Briggs to Liberty Hill, where it would connect with Highway 2; the other thru Killeen and Florence to Georgetown where it would connect with U. S. 81 into Austin.

The highway from Cleburne to Gatesville would be thru Meridian.

Such a route would offer distinct advantages, Zeigler asserted. It would provide immediate means of marketing livestock, grain and other farm products into Ft. Worth; would shorten the distance from Oklahoma and to Austin, San Antonio, Laredo and Mexico, and would relieve traffic on the present over-crowded State Highway No. 2.

The Gatesville officials pointed out that products into Ft. Worth must go at least 40 miles before striking a paved highway into Ft. Worth. They said that the proposed road would serve 11 counties, comprising 1,100 miles which had less than 100 miles of pavement."

Accompanying the above article which appeared in Thursday's Ft. Worth Star-Telegram, was a picture of L. S. Holmes, H. K. Jackson and County Judge Floyd Zeigler, together with Mr. Cotten of the Ft. Worth C. of C.

Judge Zeigler said Thursday morning, since this paper was out, he had already received two telephone calls from different points along the proposed route with requests for information and assuring co-operation.

GATESVILLE, TEXAS

CORYELL HISTORICAL TALES

BY FRANK E. SIMMONS

THE HEADLESS HORSEMAN

In 1916 I was working on Gov. Jim Ferguson's ranch in Bosque County. Once we had occasion to move a herd of cattle from the home ranch to a small ranch the governor owned near Morgan. We had completed the movement and were returning home by way of the Morgan Meridian road. When we came to the top of the divide between Morgan and Meridian my companion, Mr. George Cooper, assistant foreman for Mr. Ferguson, asked if I had ever seen the Headless Horseman. So I asked Mr. Cooper to tell me the story of the headless rider as he knew it.

Mr. Cooper related that for many years the inhabitants of that section had, on numerous occasions, seen a horseman riding that particular road and that many people were a little shy of riding that road alone. Especially the Morgan Hill section of it. This horseman rode a large milk-white steed, perfect in every line of his makeup, and the horse snorted fire from his nostrils, his eyes glared like live coals. The rider of the horse was headless and robed in white. An occasional daring rider had attempted to ride alongside the spooky horseman, but the horse ridden by the headless one had no equal for speed and the ghostly rider always outdistanced his pursurers and escaped into the wild brush country that that country is made up of. It was a beautiful night. A full moon shining, and soft southern breezes were gently fanning the brush. It was an ideal night for the horseman to be out. However he remained in hiding, to my great satisfaction.

I asked Cooper if he had ever seen the Headless Horseman. He replied that he had not but that he knew several people that had. I then asked Cooper if he knew the story of the famous White Stallion that used to roam this country, and that was killed by frontiersman who were trying to crease his neck so that he would drop his head and lessen speed so that he might be lassoed. Cooper had heard the story of the White Stallion and being a typical cowboy, with a true cowboy devotion for horses, he did not hesitate to link the story of the Headless Horseman, and the story of the White Stallion together. My informant intimated that probably the Headless Horseman was the slayer of the White Stallion doomed to ride the horse he had slain thru eternity.

Ed Bynum, who at that time had charge of Gov. Ferguson's sheep also told me the story of the Headless Horseman on Morgan Hill. Mr. Bynum said it was "just a wild dream of a ghost story. Nothing to it. Although some people believe it."

I inquired of number of people who had heard the story but like most folk-stories, most people had heard it but none had seen the milk white steed or the headless rider. None could account for the rider having no head.

This story probably grow out of the many night riding incidents that transpired in that country in the period immediately following the Civil War. Regulators and Moderators did quite a bit of adjusting of the affairs that the law was unable to reach. During the period of the 70's and 80's it became necessary for the citizenry to take matters into their own hands and quite a lot of riding was done on moonlight nights. Not infrequently a man was found hanging to a tree. This opinion was borne out by an old cowboy I talked to many years later, and who gave his version of the story of the Headless Horseman.

"There was in this country," said he "in the 70's a man who did a lot of branding of other people's cattle. The decent cowmen caught 'im and hung 'im to a live oak tree. He was pretty heavy and when the horse was whipped from under 'im he fell so hard it damn nigh jerked his head off. Well we sent word to one of his friends who came and took him down and buried him.

"Well this feller was no doubt as guilty as the one they hung though he wasn't caught red handed. A while after that this feller got to seein' things that nobody else saw. He would talk about seein' a man on a white horse, an' that was most in-generally on moon light nights. Folks couldn't calm 'im down. One night he was crossing the Morgan Hill and thought he saw a headless horseman. Well he turned and headed north an' the last time he was seen he was fordin' the Brazos River above Kopperal. That's all I know about the Headless Horseman of Morgan Hill.

There is still another man who will vouch for the truth of the story of the Headless Horseman. Old Gonzales Cons-cincio has sheared sheep and herded cattle all over the coun-ty, and when he told me this story he was a tottery old man. "When I live on Brazos River, I sometime get plenty scare. A man on white horse sometime ride out on hill and look down to my house. A strange, strange thing. When I start he ain't there. I can no see him. That was a wonderful horse. All white, man all white. He come many times. When I start to go to him he no be there. I fear that strange thing and move away. I don't go back there to liva. N-n-na."

SOFTBALL LEAGUE DISBANDS

At a meeting called Tuesday night by the Firemen the question of continuing the softball league on through the second half was put to a vote. The Firemen voted no and the decision was considered as final because they have been paying over half the light bill. This was not entirely unexpected as interest has been gradually declining for the past two seasons.

"MOUNTAIN MUSIC" SMASH COMEDY HIT

I like mountain music—you like mountain music—everybody likes "Mountain Music"—which opens Sat. at the Palace Theatre, with those two arch fiends of Merry Madness, Bazookin' Bob Burns and Martha Raye the Ultra-Violent Raye, in their first co-starring roles.

"Mountain Music" is a comedy—"Mountain Music" is a musical—"Mountain Music" is just about every thing you want in a picture! It's colossal, it's tremendous, it's de-lovely, its swell, it's the nuts!

"Mountain Music" is the story of a couple of feudin' families in the hills. They've patched up the feud, and Bob, son of one clan, is preparing to marry Terry Walker, daughter of his enemies. Bob doesn't want to marry—he doesn't love Terry, and knows that his brother, played by John Howard, does.

Bob ducks out of the marriage, pursued by the guns of Terry's kinfolk, and disappears. Folks around think that Howard has killed him and toss Howard in the Clink, charged with murder.

In the meantime, Bob, who suffers periodically from amnesia, has lost his memory and in a strange city meets Martha Raye. They fall for each other, Martha from papers which Bob found, imagining that he is a wealthy man. Martha and Bob go to a large city, planning to marry—but two things happen: first: they discover that Bob is not the wealthy man he is supposed to be, and then they met Terry, who is searching for Bob to prove Howard's innocence. As they meet Terry, Bob gets hit with a bucket full of water, which snaps him out of his amnesia, and the trio rush back home, to try to save Howard.

From that point on, the fun waxes fast and furious. Picture rowdy Mrtha Raye in the middle of a Hillybilly courtroom and you've got a vague idea!

WORLD COMMENT

Joe Burns

What inference can be drawn from the President's declaration "We're Going Through" in referring to his legislative program for this session of Congress? Did the chief executive mean that his program is going to be pushed through with the same tactic of political intimidation on patronage bribery that have characterized the court reorganization fight? Or did he mean that his program will be submitted to the elected representatives of a sovereign people for due consideration and possible rejection without interference from Mr. Farley and his emissaries?

Just what the president meant only the next few months can reveal, but the meaning in that phrase, "We're Going Through," is of vital importance to the American people and the democratic system of government under which they live and labor.

This is true because embodied in the chief executive's legislative program for this session are several proposed bills which if enacted will bring about a transformation in the government of this country not unlike those which took place in Germany in 1933 and in Italy in 1922.

First on the list of such presidential measures is the court reorganization bill. This measure has not been abandoned despite the adverse report on the original bill submitted to the Senate by its judiciary committee. Widespread indignation against the measure which in its original form would have increased the membership of the Supreme Court by six appointees of President Roosevelt has caused a compromise bill to be submitted by Senator Robinson. The new bill was drafted by Senators Logan of Kentucky, Hatch of New Mexico and Ashurst of Arizona, and provides for the appointment of one new Justice yearly for each incumbent Justice who has reached the age of 75.

Differing minutely from the original bill in principle, the new bill has slight chance of passage as all the original opponents of court packing are opposed to the new measure and will filibuster against the passage if they are unable to muster an actual majority in the Senate.

The reorganization of the executive branch is proposed as a means of strengthening the civil service. But the implications of the bill are far more reaching than mere civil service reform. A presidential secretariat of six men with undefined powers would be established, and inevitably become the agency for projecting new legislations, a function which is a fundamental prerogative of the Congress of the United States.

Interstate and intrastate industry would be placed under the absolute control of a commission of five men under the wages and hours bill. It is obvious to anyone who studies this measure that the members of this commission would have to be infallible supermen of intellectual ability which has never characterized new deal appointees. To the whims and caprices of this board, minimum wages, and labor standards for the entire country.

Seven regional authorities responsible to the President would under the flood control plan be charged with projecting programs for conservation of the Nation's resources and water control leading to power development. Complete control over agriculture would be delegated to the chief executive and his pawns if this measure were enacted.

If "We're Going Through" means that such controversial measures as court an executive reorganization, wages and hours bill and flood control bill are to be enacted this session, there are only two courses which Congress can pursue. It can demand that sufficient time for debate and for crystallization of public opinion be devoted to each measure, or it can acquiesce as often in the past and humbly submit to the dictates of the President with the usual result that new deal measures are found to be directly and irrevocably in the violation of the Constitution.

BOOK PUBLISHED 99 YEARS AGO OWNED BY TROUP CITIZEN

I. T. Wornick, of Route 2, Troup, owns a 99 year old book which was given to him sixty-one years ago by a Mr. Gallagher to carry him from Jonesboro to Hico, Texas, a distance of about twenty-three miles.

At that time, 1876, Wornick was only ten years old. He said it took two days to make the trip riding horse back. The donor of the book was the son of a physician, and the book given Wornick is entitled "The Family Physician," and contains 786 pages. This volume, published in 1883, may be seen at the Banner office.

Mr. Wornick moved to East Texas twenty years ago.—The Troup Banner.

Exhibits from Alaska, bearing out the contention of many anthropologists that America was first settled by people coming from Asia via the Bering straits, will be displayed at the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition.

After two full days of very active debate the House finally passed the "Farm Security Act of 1937" of the Tenancy-Home Ownership Bill. I have, heretofore, discussed this bill. I think it is a splendid move although the amount of money provided is hardly a drop in the bucket. In fact although it authorizes the expenditure of $10,000,000 the first year this will not provide one tenant out of each thousand a home. The next year the amount is to be increased to $25,000,00 and $50,00,00 is authorized for the third year. I feel that the principles of the bill are sound. The bill proposes to loan money at 3 per cent to tenant farmers to enable them to buy homes. It does not provide for the government to buy and sell the land. It simply extends the principle of the land bank to those who can't put up the security or make the payments necessarily required by these institutions. There was a strong effort made to have the government take title to the land and keep it for years only letting prospective purchaser work it under contract. To my mind this is only a case of changing landlords and would only benefit the army of government who would manipulate the red tape. I voted against all such amendments but I fear that the Senate is going to put some of these communistic features back into the bill.

The Senate did however, in spite of the President's objections pass the bill already passed by the House, extending the lower interest rates on Federal Farm Loans and Commissioner's loans. Although the President urged that we not continue this three and a half per cent rate I feel that this is one of the most worthwhile recovery acts of this Congress, and I shall be very much disappointed if the bill is vetoed. The government actually borrows money for less than the reduced rate. Why not, therefore, extend the same kind of help to the farm owner that the R.F.C. has extended and is still extending to industry and business?

On Wednesday the House passed a number of conference reports in an effort to put the appropriation bills into effect before the beginning of the new fiscal year, which commenced on July first, but as the Senate was not in session these efforts were in vain, but the next day the Senate did adopt all of the more important reports, except the War Department appropriation. The House has sought to break this into two bills, one relating to the military activities and the other into the non-military activities like the Mississippi levees, etc., that we might know just how much we were spending for war. So far the Senate has been unwilling to divide the bill.

On Thursday the House passed the Rivers and Harbors bill with the smallest appropriations of many years. The reduction in the appropriation was due to the effort to reduce governmental expenses.

Later the House passed a bill placing the sale of gas transported in interstate commerce under the control of the Federal Power Commission. I voted for the bill believing that there should be some power to regulate the rates on these concerns that exempt themselves from state regulation and then sell gas to local distributing company (generally controlled by the same interests) at such a high rate as to require the local rate.

CHAPTER I.

"SAY, what is this?" Jack Gordon, crack pilot for the western division of Consolidated Air Transport, stormed into the office of Hap Waller, general traffic manager for the company, and slammed the door behind him. "I come to New York on vacation and no sooner do I land here in Newark than I'm handed a wire telling me to go back West!"

"Jack Berger just pancaked," answered Waller as he slipped on his horn-rimmed glasses and surveyed the rebellious visitor seriously.

"Washed out?" Jack's face set grimly and he ran his fingers through his shock of curly black hair. "Broke his arm..."

"The old potato can't take it any more." The pilot's handsome face broke into a relieved grin. "The bones grow brittle with age."

"That puts them in a spot on the Salt Lake-San Francisco run," continued Hap inexorably. "You've got to go back. You know they wouldn't ask you to do this, Jack, if it wasn't an emergency."

"Sure, I know, Hap—but I got my own emergency." Gordon sat down on the corner of the desk and twirled his cap sheepishly. "I rate one round trip a year and this is it. I've got one foot in Miami right now. Not a chance of my taking that run."

"Now listen, Jack," cried the traffic manager as his pilot started out the door. "You go down to Florida, see some dame in a bathing suit, and in a week you're flat broke and up to your neck in trouble. Now you know how strapped we are for pilots. Be a good..."

"Not a chance. Not a chance." Gordon slammed the door again.

In the ticket office of the airport, which lay just outside Waller's office, Jack almost bumped into a beautiful girl with honey-colored hair who was arguing impatiently with the clerk on duty.

"I've already explained that I just arrived from Europe this evening and that I have to get to San Francisco by the first plane," she was saying. "I didn't have time..."

"I'm sorry, Miss, but I can't take your check without proper identification," answered the man behind the wicket. "It's a company rule." He glanced at Jack as if for confirmation.

"Anybody in New York can tell you that I am Felice Rollins," the girl began impatiently. Then another idea occurred to her.

Abruptly she stripped a handsome diamond ring off her finger and tossed it on the counter. "Here! Perhaps this will be sufficient security."

"I'm sorry," the clerk shook his head positively.

"Is there anything I can do?" Jack plunged gallantly to the rescue at this appropriate moment, "I'm Pilot Jack Gordon."

"I'm Felice Rollins." A note of

"Why, last year we completed..."

"Yes, I know—97 and 6/10% of flights on schedule." She turned her back on him and asked Vi: "Have I time to send a telegram?"

"You have five minutes. Plenty of time," answered the stewardess.

"I'm going all the way through." Jack made one more stab at establishing cordial relations. "Any questions you want answered, sound off—I know all the answers."

"Thank you." Felice smiled at Vi and hurried away.

"Get wise, big fellow," the latter remarked cynically when she and Gordon were alone.

"Girls don't fall for dashing aviators any more."

"Listen, egg—I'm getting a little tired of wise-cracks. Everybody on this air line seems to think that the moment a good-looking girl comes along, I'm going to rush up and bite her on the neck."

"Where did you hear about that?" Jack flushed. "Anyway, that was seven years ago," he added lamely, then, his honor at stake, he continued. "Two bucks is saying I'll take La Rollins to dinner tonight in San Francisco."

"Sold," cried the girl.

"Pardon me, please," interrupted Felice, who had returned just in time to hear the bet. She gave no indication that she had eavesdropped, however, but climbed indifferently into the plane.

"How am I going to know you took her to dinner?" Vi demanded.

"I'll send you the menu with her signature... or the two bucks."

At this moment the bus from New York drove up and disgorged its passengers at the airport. The driver lifted out a package of the latest newspapers and Jack hurried over to get one. The first thing which caught his eye was a bold headline reading:

DARING JEWEL ROBBERY
Beautiful girl bandit and 2 men companions stage $50,000 diamond theft.

Anxiously he read on: "A beautiful girl, wearing a brown fur coat, and two men companions, held up and robbed the jewelry firm of..."

Jack glanced at Miss Rollins' brown fur coat, which could be seen through one of the windows of the plane. Then he felt in his pocket for the ring she had given him, pulled it out surreptitiously and glanced at it in dismay.

"Is there anything I can do?" Jack plunged gallantly to the rescue at this appropriate moment. "I'm Pilot Jack Gordon."

almost frantic appeal came into her voice. "I simply must leave for San Francisco tonight. It means everything to me, and..."

"I'll vouch for Miss Rollins," Jack said grandly to the clerk. "I'll endorse her check."

"But you must take my ring," the girl replied.

"Oh no." Jack was still being gallant. "I don't want that."

"Please," she insisted. "This is purely a business transaction. You can return it after the check has cleared." She pressed it into his hand and hurried out toward the waiting west-bound plane.

When her slim figure and neat ankles had passed quite out of sight, Jack turned thoughtfully back toward Waller's office.

"Thought you were over North Carolina by now," snorted the latter as his pilot made a contrite entrance.

"You misjudged me, my boy," beamed Gordon. "Think I'd turn an old pal down? I just got to figuring that when two fellows have been kicking around this crazy business together as long as we have... I'll ride out to Salt Lake on the midnight tonight, then fly the rest of the way to the coast myself. You better wire 'em."

When Jack reached the plane Felice was just preparing to climb aboard. "Do you think we'll get to San Francisco on schedule?" she was asking Vi Johnston, the trim stewardess.

"Sure, we'll get you there. Don't worry," interrupted the pilot.

"We???" Miss Rollins lifted her eyebrows slightly.

Door to door and store to store

Milk and its products do not sell themselves. They must be sold—from door to door and from store to store. Only by aggressive salesmanship can millions of pounds of milk from thousands of dairy farms be sold day after day, year after year.

In the complicated business of bridging the long distance from cow to consumer, Borden is expert. Vital to the income of the dairy farmer, are the tens of thousands of calls made by Borden men in this and foreign lands, every day selling milk and milk products—door to door and store to store.

The various products the oil industry's technicians can fashion from the sticky black crudes that flow from Texas wells appear, almost, as magic to the layman. But it's not necromancy that combines and recombines the oil molecules into such diverse products as cold cream and gasoline; it is, rather, hard work and constant experimentation.

That, at any rate, is the theory Humble technicians work on. In Texas oil fields, in laboratories and refineries, on the open road, they seek continuously to improve the Humble products you use in your car, the Humble specialties you use in your home. Results approve their methods; Texas motorists say, Humble's policy of continuous improvement keeps Humble ahead.

SPORTS

Gatesville's two most colorful sporting characters, Killer Rutherford and Strongheart Blanton, are rapidly fading, induced no doubt by the prevailing warm weather.

When accosted by Martin Donaldson, whose cigar bears a marked resemblance to that of Mike Jacob's, the Killer stated firmly that he had not the slightest wish to put on the gloves in an exhibition bout with one of Donaldson's pals, namely, Butch Standrich, middleweight champion of the United States Army for three consecutive years.

When pressed by the press (????) for an explanation as to his refusal, the Killer stated that he had discarded his ambition for a professional fistic career, that he cared not a whit for the color and glamour of the squared circle, that he was content in his role of hamburger manufacturer, and furthermore what he thought of the Sports Editor and the !?&!&$ press notices he had written about him wasn't fitten for printen (????).

(Gathering up a chair for purpose of self defense just in case, we sat and listened to some more of the ex-Killer's opinions.)

 "I am a gentleman boxer," he stated, "and while I usually could stand on a street corner and trim the first five men that came past I regret to state that I am out of condition now and must regretfully reject Mr. Donaldson's kind offer." (Sotto-voice he mumbled something about "kind offer to get me murdered.")

And so another great figure has passed into the fighter's Hall of Fame. Along with Ruby Bob Fitzimmons, Gentleman Jim Corbett, and Jack Dempsey Killer Rutherford will long be remembered for his brilliant ring career; one fight, one knockout (his own), and one retirement.

Along with the disheartening news of Killer Rutherford's retirement comes another shock; Strongheart Blanton, the self-styled ace softball hurler of the state of Texas, lost a game last Friday night!

Speaking in a purely personal vein, when first informed of the calamity by Bugs Jones, who gleefully assured us that Strongheart had failed, our movements were entirely reactionary. We gasped weakly and tremblingly reached for the morning state papers, but strangely there was no account of the game. For a moment we were reassured that the report was false. Surely if Strongheart had lost a game the Dallas News would have something about it! And then the thought struck us, the game was played in Hamilton and how could the dailies carry the story when hardly anyone north of Hico or south of Aleman has heard of Hamilton.

Clapping on our battered last winter's felt we dashed headlong up the avenue to the soda emporium where the Strongheart dispensés soft drinks to a thirsty populace.

"It is true?" we shouted, bursting in the front door, while six bar flies turned and gaped in amazement.

"Yes, 'tis true," he replied, hanging his head in shame, "but wait! Let me tell you the story behind the facts before you judge me too harshly."

So sitting there, lapping at a glass of water (because pay day isn't till Saturday) we listened to a strange tale.

It seems that a team of Gatesville girls went along on the trip to play a similar team from Hamilton. And it seems that the Gatesville girls did not do so well. In fact the game was stopped in the second inning because the score was something like 40 to 2 in favor of the Hamilton squaws, and being as how they were at bat and only had one out there didn't seem much use in continuing the game.

So, when Strongheart mounted to the mound to pitch in the second game, the true chivalry that has characterized the Blanton tribe since the day when Sir Agenew Blanton stormed the hostile Saracen host at Acre along with Richard the Lion-Hearted asserted itself.

He reasoned that if he went out and mowed down the opposition in his customary style and rang up some top heavy score the girls would feel twice as badly about their own defeat. Whereas, if he, the Great Blanton, lost a game, the girls would feel that their own loss was nothing but a jest, something to brush aside casually in view of the fact that Strongheart Blanton had lost a game. And so this paragon of human kindness went out and lost a game—something like 20 to 8—just to keep the girls from feeling badly.

At least that's the reason he gave us. Personally, we think the main reason the game was lost was because those nasty Hamilton boys simply knocked all the balls he threw out of the park.

EIGHTH ANNUAL PECOS RODEO OPENED SAT. FOR 2 DAY RUN

More than 100 contestants were expected to compete for the $2,000 in prizes at the Eighth Annual Pecos Rodeo which opened last Saturday for a two day run.

For the rodeo, Pecos has reverted to its original element—the element in which it was born—that of a western cowtown, Spurs high-heeled boots, wide brimmed sombreros, and colorful shirts are evidenced as the knights of the range gathered in the ranching capitol of the Trans-Pecos cattle industry.

The principal competitive events were bulldogging, bronc riding, steer riding, calf roping, breakaway, wild cow milking, cow girl's calf roping, and the world's first Jackrabbit Derby.

Henry C. Slack, the only surviving participant in the world's first rodeo held in Pecos in 1883, rode in the opening parade.

I am afraid that as passed the bill leaves a loop-hole through which they will escape most effective regulation, but the bill like lots of other legislation is a good start.
