Two Hundred at Pecan Grove for Strickland-House Family Reunion

Two hundred descendents of George Augustus and Martha Ann House Strickland gathered at Pecan Grove for their Family Reunion, on the invitation of John W. Roberts of Goldthwaite, a member of the family.

Before noon, most of the relatives got acquainted and registered, many of them meeting for the first time, and some, no doubt, meeting for the last time. Then, well filled baskets were brought out, and although there were some 200 hungry mouths, the feast that was spread was only touched.

In the afternoon, older members of the family gathered at the church and sang spirituals from Christian Harmony and Old Sacred Harp song books. Family records were given and recorded as well as possible, but from memory, for the most part.

Towns represented besides Gatesville, were Jonesboro, Riesel, Goldthwaite, Hamilton, Gustine, Turnersville, Nocona, Los Angeles, California, Gainesville, Florida, McGregor, Oglesby, Junction, Overton, Waco, Copperas Cove, Killeen and Pidoake.

At the business meeting after the singing, Willis M. Jones, of Gatesville, was named Chairman, and Mrs. Lena Graves, of Pidoake, was named secretary. The third Sunday in July is the date of the 1938 meeting, and the place designated was Neff Park.

JONESBORO VOTES $7,000 IN BONDS FOR GYM

By a vote of 40-0, Jonesboro Rural High School has just voted a bond issue of $7,000 to construct a new gymnasium, construction on which work will start immediately, according to advices from the Superintendent of Schools there, P. T. (Papa) Lemmons.

Plans are being rushed to completion, and the gym will be a modern building in every way having a playing floor of regulation size, also housing two class rooms for home economics and agriculture, dressing rooms for boys and girls will be provided in the basement.

This building will take care of a long felt need in the Jonesboro community. For years, the school has produced outstanding teams and players, but in recent years, the home folks were forced to go elsewhere to watch their boys and girls in action as all the games are now played indoors.

With this new gym, Jonesboro is apt to be more and more of a threat to other schools in the county in the basketball line, and this shows the school interest in this town, and the public spiritedness of the Jonesboro citizens.

Civil Docket Is Started in District Court This Week

GRAND JURY AGAIN IN SESSION THURSDAY.

Coryell county's July Term of District Court opened officially Monday morning with the first case called necessitating a jury being the case, Lucile Wheat et al vs. D. B. Scott, suit for damages, the reported amount being $40,000.

Considerable time was spent getting the case in motion, and at 2 p. m., a jury had not been chosen, according to Carl McClendon, District Clerk.

Other cases to come up have not yet been announced.

Thursday of this week, the Grand Jury goes back in session although they have already returned thirteen indictments, which have not been made public. It is not known how long the second session will be.

Judge R. B. Cross, who gave his "charge to the jury" stated that there were 880 murders in Texas in 1934 as compared to only 22 in England, also, that modern prisoners were treated to rodeos, movies, baseball and football games—more activities than the average farmers and laboring people who are free, enjoy.

Suspended sentences, Judge intimated, were another reason for the prevalence of crime, as well as reminding the Grand Jury they should indict those who they thought they would convict if they were on the Petit Jury.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, ROSALIND RUSSEL AT PALACE "NIGHT MUST FALL"

At the Palace Theatre last night an audience that was at once startled and pleased observed on the screen one of the most unique films that has been presented from Hollywood. It is called "Night Must Fall" and stars Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell.

"Night Must Fall" was a London stage play and Montgomery suggested that his studio adapt it for a picture. That is an extraordinary procedure, but the extraordinary phase was Montgomery's eagerness to play the leading role. The part is that of a pathological killer who commits murder with the least of reason but the most of cunning.

For a star of heroic roles to deliberately choose such a part was daring and in the light of his subsequent performance, highly commendable. Montgomery has brought to the screen something that as never appeared there before. He has talented cooperation from Miss Russell

"Night Must Fall" is not a mystery story. On the contrary, the audience knows in advance that it is watching the criminal even before he conceives his next act of violence. The result is fascinating and remarkably effective as a thrill producer.

M-G-M brought over some of the players from the London stage play who appeared there for 55 consecutive weeks. These include Dame May Whitty, Merle Tottenham, Matthew Boulton and Kathleen Harrison. Others who score are Allan Marshall and E. E. Clive.

Hunt Stromberg produced the picture and Richard Thorpe directed. John Van Druten, author of "Young Woodley" and adaptor of "Parnell" for the screen, wrote the scenario.

Olla Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Webb of Evant, is breathing easier now since a recent operation at Baylor Hospital in Dallas. An open safety pin, which she swallowed 14 years ago, was removed from the top of her left lung by the aid of a bronchoscope.

Miss Webb swallowed the pin, which she was holding in her mouth, when she was seven years old. Her health was affected after the incident, until some weeks ago when she was attending school in Abilene a physician discovered the pin in her windpipe by means of X-ray.

Modern surgery intervened and today Miss Webb is fully recovering from the effects of the pin.

LUTHERAN PASTORS MEET AT COPPERAS COVE FOR SESSION

With an early meeting held on Wednesday night and the first meeting on Thursday night, the North Texas District Conference of the Evangelical Lutheran church is under way at the Imm. Ev. Lutheran Church of Copperas Cove. More than 60 pastors and teachers, including every North Texas district officer and committee chairman, are being housed in the homes of members of the local church.

This evening (Friday) the Rev. E. F. Moerbe of Aleman will be the principal speaker to the pastors and teachers, at the pastoral communion service. The Rev. W. J. Luecke will deliver the preparatory address. The service will be in the German language.

The first meeting was held on Wednesday night when problems of the district mission board were discussed. The Rev. Mr. Moerbe, chairman, presided; other members include Rev. E. A. Heckmann, Rev. W. H. Bewie, and Rev. C. M. Beyer.

Carl Gaertner, pastor at Plainview, and Henry Gaertner, student at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, will be present. —Copperas Cove Crony.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Anniversary

TO OUR FRIENDS AND CUSTOMERS:

We have been in Gatesville nearly two years. We want to thank each and every one that has had a part in making our business what it is.

We handle a complete line of McCORMICK-DEERING tractor and machines and genuine McCORMICK-DEERING parts. Don't be misled by someone selling inferior parts. The genuine may seem a little higher at the time you buy them, but they are cheaper in the long run, as well as experienced men working on your tractor. Money you have tied up in your machine can't be tampered with. You can't afford to let Tom, Dick and Harry fool with it when you can get a man that knows his business and got the equipment to do it wiith.

Why buy a machine and equipment that you can't get repairs for, or find a man that knows how to repair it?

Study this problem over and if you need some work done, give us a ring—day or night.

If you need to buy anything in our line, we would be glad to talk it over with you.

Again thanking you for your past business and hoping to retain it, we are,

Yours very truly,

GAYNOR ONE OF 13 STARS TO RISE FROM RANKS OF EXTRA

In the entire history of motion pictures, only 13 stars have risen out of the extra ranks. Janet Gaynor is a member of that select company. Thus, of all the pictures in which she has appeared, none stands out as more symbolic of her career than David O. Selznick's technicolor production, "A Star Is Born," in which she will be co-starred with Fredric March at the Regal Theatre on Saturday nite 10:30 Sunday and Monday. For "A Star Is Born" tells the story of a girl who came to Hollywood seeking stardom, found the odds 100,000 to one against her—and won. Janet Gaynor was born in Germantown, Philadelphia. When she was eight, her parents were divorced and Janet moved to Chicago with her mother and sister. It was in Chicago that Harry Jones, who was to become her step-father heard Janet recite and was first to think of the child in terms of motion pictures. In 1922 Mrs. Gaynor, who had married Jones, moved to San Francisco with her family. Following her graduation from Polytechnic High School in the Bay City, Janet worked as a motion picture theatre usher for a few months. In 1924 the family moved to Hollywood and Janet, her mind turned filmward, began making the rounds of the studios with her stepfather. Bucking the 100,000 to one odds, Janet landed her first extra work in a Hal Roach comedy. After a few months she won a bit in an F.B.O. comedy, starring Alberta Vaughan. Shortly afterward, she landed a lead in a two-reel Universal western, and was given a contract as a member of the stock company at $50 a week.

All construction materials are barged to Treasure Island, site of the 1939 World's Fair in San Francisco Bay, from railheads and freight piers on the mainland.

H. D. CLUB DEMONSTRATORS REPORT WORK DONE IN 1937

Seven Clothing Demonstrators have sent in their reports showing that they have all kept family clothing accounts during 1937. These accounts show that they have spent $201.83 for their families clothes and $65.96 for their individual clothing needs, and made fifty-nine garments. The seven Home Demonstration Club Clothing Demonstrators are: Miss Mildred Melton, Pecan Grove H. D. Club; Mrs. Geo. Bamburg, Carden H. D. Club, Mrs. York Stacy, Four Corners H. D. Club Mrs. R. W. Daniels, Eliga H. D. Club; Mrs. T. J. Smith, Purlmela H. D. Club. In part Mrs. T. J. Smith says "Since I was selected Clothing Demonstrator of my club I began to keep an account of the expenditures of the family. I find that it was very helpful and I enjoyed keeping it."

Besides "keeping books" on clothing, the demonstrators improve their clothing storage "to help keep and prolong the life of our garments," as stated by Miss Mildred Melton, Pecan Grove Home Demonstration Club Clothing Demonstrator.

One of these demonstrators built a closet, another remodeled a closet and another provided a wardrobe. All have improved existing storage methods.

As outlined by the Extension Clothing Specialist, Mrs. Dora R. Barnes, The demonstrators have the following items as their goal.

Take inventory of clothing for family, put all clothing in good condition. Plan and provide clothing to meet individual needs of family, have and use foundation pattern for self, Provide adequate closet and storage space for family. Take pictures before and after improvement. Keep record of clothing expenditures for the family, write narrative of work done, telling how demonstration has helped her.

Splendid cooperation has been manifested by the demonstrators in the conduct of this demonstration.

CROSSING BRIDGES

Denton, July 19.—As Texans whisk by the cement posts of modern highway bridges they seldom realize what a great number of these structures have been built to fill the needs of the state's widespread highway system. On January 1 of this year there were a total of 7,127 bridges maintained on state highways, and by far the largest amount of these, 4,855 were concrete. This figure does not include underpasses and over passes of which there are 311.

Balinese dancers will be included in the fun zone of the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition in San Francisco Bay.

Trench Silos

The facility with which a trench silo may be excavated commends itself to emergency uses, but there is a wider and deeper thought in the successful operation of this manner of keeping ensilage.

Results have been so satisfactory that it would be a desirable adjunct for thousands of farms which have no regular silo.

No more packing is required than regularly and when sealed with a dirt topping, the resulting silage is in many cases kept better than from an ordinary silo. Such a silo should be located away from contaminating drainage.

The low cost of construction and the comparative ease of filling are other factors in its favor. —Farm Ideas.

HOME FOOD SUPPLY DEMONSTRATORS OR CANNING

The Home Food Supply Demonstration as outlined by Miss Grace I. Neely, Extension Food Preservation Specialist, sets up these standards for the demonstrators to follow:

Start or continue the long time plan, provide the foods to meet family budget. Make food preservation budget which is budget, organize pantry and provide other needed storage. Exhibit at achievement the pantry and any other phase of home food supply complete the cooperators goals of the year.

Mrs. Emmitt Phillips, Home Food Supply Demonstrator of the Hood Springs Home Demonstration Club, has started her long time plan, is providing her family of 2 with foods that it needs, and has made her food preservation budget which is now being filled with the canning of these products: 50 cans corn, 54 cans cream and black-eyed peas, 18 qts. plums, 25 qts. berries, 10 pt. pineapple, 10 pts. plum jelly, 17 pts. blackberry jam and jelly, 15 qts. beets, 20 qts. beans.

Besides these fruits and vegetables which she has canned at home, she has others canned at the Canning Plant at Gatesville with which she is well pleased.

Other Home Food Supply Demonstrators from the country who are doing effective work and from whom we will have progress reports and amounts canned later in the year are: Mrs. Sol Veazy, Carden; Mrs. Jouett Beverly, Four Corners H. D. Club; Mrs. Ernest Pendleton, Pidcoke; Mrs. Montus A. Thompson, Harman; Mrs. Ida Mae Burt, Mountain; Mrs. O. M. Davidson, Pecan Grove; Mrs. J. B. Watkins, Purlmela; Mrs. H. A. Simpson, Topsey; and Mrs. Will Hamilton, Eliga Home Demonstration Club.

WORLD COMMENT

Joe Burns

THE "BATTALION OF DEATH"

Let there be no misunderstanding about the so-called "compromise court bill." The new administration measure involves no compromise between the original objectives of the President, and those in the Senate in opposition to those objectives. The new bill is merely a guise involving the same and identical principle as the original bill. The old bill would have permitted the President to appoint five justices after the retirement of Justice Van Devanter. The "compromise" would permit him to appoint three justices within the next six months, one to fill the vacancy, one for the calendar year of 1937 and one for the calendar year of 1938.

The hollowness of the administration's argument for passage of the "compromise" was revealed in the Senate arguments of last week. Not one constructive argument was advanced why the courts of the land should be subjected to the caprices of the President and his new dealers. Senator Logan, another stout-hearted pro-administrative man, devoted his time to excoriating opponents of the bill as trying to "wreck" the President and the Democratic party. Senator Logan failed to point out any virtues of the bill, and Senator Guffey contented himself with throwing a charge of "politics" at the court. The truth is that these gentlemen are for the bill because Franklin Roosevelt, James Farley, and administrative patronage machine are behind it and not because the bill might act as a corrective agent for the judiciary.

Senator Wheeler of Montana, leader of the opposition, stated that opponents of the bill were adhering to the Democratic platform of 1936 and following the lead which the present chief executive took in 1933, when he (Roosevelt) said that increasing the number of judges or the number of courts would not be a satisfactory remedy for congestion in the judicial docket. The President at that time said such action would "add to the ravages of the disease."

Senator McCarran of Nevada told his colleagues he was probably making his valedictory address in opposing the administration measure for Jim Farley has issued dire threats of political reprisal against the Nevada Senators. McCarran added: "We seek to save democracy for the world. I would rather go down holding the helm of the ship of state than be re-elected to the Senate."

Senators McCarran and Wheel-

Monday, the President vetoed House Bill No. 6763, recently passed by Congress, providing for an extension for one additional year of the present 3½ per cent interest rate on mortgages held by Federal Land Banks and providing for a two year extension of the present 4 per cent rate on Land Bank Commissioners Loans. Representative W. R. Poage of the 11th Texas District immediately stated that it was his purpose to attempt to over-ride the veto and pass the bill, in order to avoid unnecessary loss to farm home owners.

Mr. Poage said: "I feel that the President does not understand the situation; I can not believe that he would deliberately urge a policy that must inevitably do more to make tenants out of home owners in the next year than all of the Resettlement and Home Ownership er are members of the Senate "battalion of death" numbering forty-odd members of that body which is pledged to defeat the court measure at all costs. Included in the "battalion of death" is the flower of the Senate, including able Senator Connally, Idaho's Borah, Nebraska's Burke, Missouri's Clark, New York's Gopeland, Ohio's Donahey, Georgia's George, Virginia's Glass and Byrd, California's Johnson, Utah's King, Oregon's McNary, New Jersey's Moore, Oregon's Steiwer, and Michigan's Vandenberg.

The position taken by the "battalion of death" is a most sensible and reasonable one, and the failure of the administration to accept the proposal of the "battalion" brands it inexorably as desiring to subvert the will of the people or at the least fearing to submit its proposal to the people.

Senator Wheeler and his colleagues believe that the measure is fundamentally unsound and would, if enacted, undermine the constitution. They oppose it for this reason, and for the additional and imperative reason that this congress had no mandate to tamper with the courts. Senator Wheeler and his friends supported a Democratic slate of candidates last year which not only failed to mention court increase or reorganization, but specifically promised to achieve constitutionality in the courts.

What could be more fair and just than the contention of this group which even now is friendly to the objectives of the President, that the people should pass upon the court measure? As Senator Wheeler explained on the floor of the Senate, opponents of the measure are following the lead taken by the President in the first year of his administration, a stand reiterated in the Democratic national platform of 1936 which the Montanan proposed to abide by.

The "battalion of death" was formed not by the wishes of the opposition group, but because of the obstinate determination programs combined can do toward making home owners out of tenants in the next generation.

"According to a study made by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, from 1933 to 1936 both inclusive, an average of twenty-seven farmers out of every one thousand lost their farms through mortgage foreclosure, tax delinquency or bankruptcy each year. The aggregate number of farms lost to their owners during the years indicated was one hundred and eight out of every one thousand. Since the total number in the United States is now placed at 6,812,000 it will be seen that during the past four years more than 735,000 farmers, or more than one-tenth of the total home owners of the United States, lost title to their farms and have presumably become tenants.

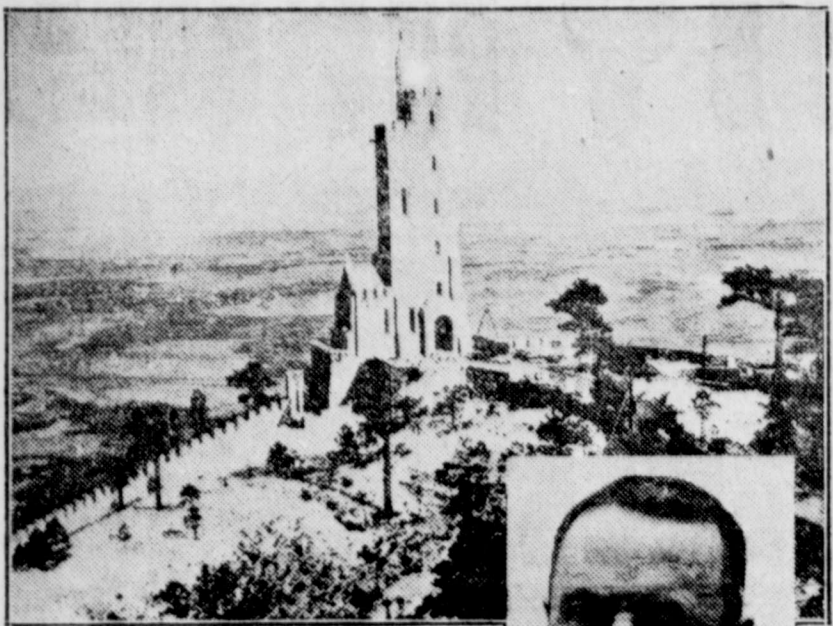

"At the same time we are now engaged in an effort to eradicate, or at least reduce, tenancy and a bill on this subject cut down to one-tenth of the original appropriation to meet the President's wishes has passed both Houses. Since the total number of farm tenants is approximately 2,800,000, to provide each one of them with a farm costing an average of $4,000 each would call for the lending of more than eleven billion dollars. As that is beyond the range of possibility under prevailing conditions, there is only one thing we can do to relieve the situation, and that is to prevent those who are now owners from slipping into the tenant class. That is the purpose of the bill just vetoed by the President.

"The government is now borrowing money at an average of about 2½ per cent and the Land Banks are making new loans at 4 per cent. Under these circumstances what possible reason can there be for compelling those who borrowed from the Land Bank back in the black days of the early thirties to pay 5, 6, and even 6½ per cent interest, as most of the existing contracts call for. As long as the government can borrow at 2½ per cent it is not giving the farmers a subsidy when it loans the money at 3½ and 4 per cent. On the other hand, if the reduced interest rate is not continued the government will be in the position of demanding a pound of flesh from the very people we must help if this nation is to prosper.

"Today the government can help to maintain home owners as such for a fraction of the cost that will be involved in rehabilitating these same people if a short-sighted policy of getting all the contract calls for is allowed to control our action. For one, I shall vote to over-ride the veto."

Since the above was written the House voted, and by a vote of 259 to 98 passed the bill over the President's veto. Mr. Poage was one of those who spoke in favor of the bill and carried on a vigorous fight to secure the reduced rate.

Acme
The Will Rogers Shrine of the Sun which will be dedicated on the fifth and sixth of September. It is 2000 feet above Colorado Springs, Colo., and was built by Spencer Penrose (inset), whose dramatic career is described in the current Saturday Evening Post.

Philadelphia, July 19.—One of the most impressive memorials to the late Will Rogers stands nearly ready for dedication on September fifth and sixth, on a promontory of Cheyenne Mountain, 2000 feet above Colorado Springs, Colorado. It is the Will Rogers Shrine of the Sun, built by Spencer Penrose, the seventy-two year old mining millionaire whose exploits are famous throughout the West.

Penrose was a friend and admirer of the beloved humorist and the story of how he came to build the memorial is told by Forbes Parkhill in an article in this week's Saturday Evening Post.

Rogers was a frequent guest at Penrose's hotel which is in the shadow of both Cheyenne Mountain and Pikes Peak. Mr. Parkhill writes that Penrose "called Rogers to a window during a thunderstorm, promising to show him an unforgettable spectacle. Clouds rolling down the slope of Cheyenne Mountain parted on either side of a promontory, which projected above them like a rocky island in a billowing sea. Abruptly the sun broke through above Pike's Peak. The pink granite crag jutting up through the clouds was spotlighted in blazing light. Rogers was speechless."

Immediately after the fatal airplane crash in Alaska, Penrose began construction of the memorial on that same granite buttress. The walls of the shrine contain five thousand cubic yards of pink granite, quarried from a single boulder. The spire is 100 feet high and is built to last 1000 years. From this vantage point it is possible to see with the aid of binoculars, 150 miles into the westernmost end of Rogers' native state of Oklahoma. It cost a fortune but Penrose refuses to reveal the figure.

Penrose Has the Midas Touch
Spencer Penrose is probably the most fabulous of the four Philadelphia brothers, all of whom achieve recognition in Who's Who. They include in addition to Spencer, the famous Boies, R.A.F., and Dr. Charles B. Penrose.

Spencer poined the Cripple Creek Gold rush in 1891, four years after he was graduated from Harvard. To the amazement of the hard-boiled prospectors, Penrose and his partner in the real estate business bought an apparently worthless claim which they sold later for $300,000.

In a few years Penrose and a few close associates—the so-called Cripple Creek smelter trust—owned almost every smelting mill in the district. They backed a young mining engineer who discovered a method for the treatment of low-grade copper property in North America, according to Mr. Parkhill. When Utah Copper was merged with Kennecott the organizers became multi-millionaires. Penrose did not stop there. He is one of the few who held on to his mining riches and increased them by investments in other fields.

Playboy and Politician
Penrose's personal adventures, according to Mr. Parkhill, were even more spectacular than his financial genius. A business associate tells how a friend who had invested in Utah Copper was more interested in getting Penrose to back a gold-mining proposition. They went off into the mountains in a hack plentifully stocked with refreshments. The hack turned over and every bottle, except one, was smashed. Penrose "refused to stir another step without refreshments. The friend was in tears at the prospect of losing the Penrose backing. Desperate, he offered to swap his Utah Copper holdings for funds to finance the gold mine. Penrose refused. The friend offered to throw in the remaining bottle. The deal was made. Penrose acquired stock that in a few years was worth a fortune in itself."

Penrose like his brother Boies is a staunch Republican. He represented the state of Colorado in the Senate and Mr. Parkhill relates, "was one of the thirteen Republican leaders in the smoke-filled hotel room where the nomination of Harding was decided upon." He bolted to Al Smith in 1928 because of his hatred of Prohibition. In what he maintains is the first direct quotation he has authorized for publication he told Mr. Parkhill, "Roosevelt helped us replace prohibition. Except for that, I am against everything he ever did or ever will do."

For all his dead-pan expression and fantastic sense of humor, the splendor of a sunrise as seen from the top of Cheyenne Mountain enralls Penrose to such an extent that he built a $500,000 road up the 3000-foot, almost sheer granite surface of the peak. Mr. Parkhill says, "He declares he'll get more than a half million dollars' worth of fun out of it."

Uncle Jim Says

"Winter cover crops hold rainfall, check soil losses through erosion and leaching, and provide early spring pasture several weeks before permanent pastures are ready for grazing."

Dairymen who have planted winter cover crops of oats, barley Italian rye grass, and similar small grains or grasses, have long noticed that the fields devoted to this purpose are more fertile than other fields which remain bare during the winter.

Over a large portion of the State, erosion does its worst during the winter, when heavy rainfall on unprotected fields allows a huge loss of soil.

In addition to offering protection against loss of rainfall and of soil, winter cover crops offer green roughage at a time when livestock need it the most.

SYNOPSIS

Jack Gordon, crack western division air pilot, comes to New York on vacation but he is called back to fly a ship from Salt Lake City to San Francisco. He balks but changes his mind when he sees pretty Felice Rollins board the westbound plane. He tries hard to win the attentions of Felice but she treats him coldly. Arriving in Chicago, Jack saves her from a menacing foreigner, Count Stephani. His suspicions that Felice is a jewel thief are dissipated when she tells him that she is a society heiress.

CHAPTER IV.

JACK had an awful job shoeing the blonde away and explaining to Felice that she was just a "chance acquaintance" who really meant nothing in his young life. He had only partially succeeded when Ruth, the new stewardess for the westward flight, rushed up to report that Master Waldemar

She turned back to Jack and smiled dazzlingly. "Have a nice nap?" she inquired.

Pitt, III had disappeared. The pilot started a desperate last-minute search and finally located the boy stuffing his pockets with chocolate bars as he fed nickels by the handsful into an automatic vending machine.

The two reached the plane just as it was ready to take off and found that the stewardess had already tucked the other passengers under their blankets in order that they might obtain a few hours more sleep.

"Who's the new customer?" he asked, nodding toward a seat which previously had been unoccupied.

"He's for San Francisco," answered Ruth. "He's got a funny name—wait a minute." She ran her finger down the passenger list. "It's Count Gregorie Stephani." As she spoke the Count, who had muffled his face in the blanket, sat up and grinned sardonically at Jack.

"How did he get here?" exploded the pilot.

"A new way," yawned the stewardess. "He just sat down and we built the plane round him."

"And what else?" His enemy was still mocking him.

"The cannon." Jack twiddled his fingers suggestively, then, as Stephani feigned surprise, continued. "Yeah, the cannon—cap pistol—gun. I want it. If I don't get it, you'll ride as far as Omaha and no farther."

Sourly the Count handed over his automatic. Jack took it and discovered with a frown that it was loaded once more.

"Say, what is this, a game?" he growled as he opened the door of the plane a crack and tossed the weapon into the night.

"Maybe it's none of my business," whispered Palmer as Jack resumed his seat, "but who is that guy that got on at Chicago?"

"His name's Stephani." The pilot pulled a blanket over himself.

"How come he had a gun?" Palmer's hard face grew harder.

"On account they told him there were Indians at Omaha," yawned Jack. Then, a grin of self-satisfaction on his face, he glanced at Felice. She was cuddled under her blankets, fast asleep. Soon her admirer drifted off to pleasant dreams also.

The sun was up when he awoke.

Again his first thought was of Felice. She was awake and, her beauty case on her lap, was just finishing repairs on her makeup. She glanced at Jack thoughtfully, then at Stephani. It might be well, she was thinking, to have the pilot on her side. She turned back to Jack and smiled.

"Have a nice nap?" she inquired.

"Yeah—sure." He was pleased as Punch.

"I don't have to ask about the weather—it looks lovely."

"While we're on the subject of looking lovely," Jack said as he stared at her greedily. "How do you do it—so early and at such an altitude?"

It was breakfast time when they landed at Omaha. Waldemar, of course, was first at the lunch counter.

"Gimme some bananas and cream and some hot cakes and some waffles and somma that chocolate pie with nuts on it," he yelled.

As Jack started to order, Palmer sat down on the stool beside him.

"Your Indian-killer over there," he inquired, nodding toward Stephani. "He's not a Dick, is he?"

"Nope, he's not a Dick." The pilot studied the other thoughtfully.

"I imagine most of the passengers are usually old customers." Palmer was trying his best to seem off-hand. "That Dr. Evarts. He must fly a lot. Seems so at ease in a plane. Has he ever taken this trip before?"

"He might have." Jack was enjoying the game. "I've never seen him."

"Well, I'll have some coffee and doughnuts," laughed his neighbor. "Anything, I guess, to break the monotony of the trip."

"What a big nose you have, grandmother," Jack muttered to himself.

"May I speak to you a minute," Felice said as they left the lunchroom. "I—I hate to bother you, but—well, I need a little help." She drew a deep breath like someone preparing for a ten dollar touch, then rushed on. "I want to find out for sure if a certain girl is aboard the Overland Limited that goes through Salt Lake this morning."

"It's a cinch. What time does it get there?"

"Eight o'clock—that's the same as nine here, isn't it?"

"We'll have to hurry." He started toward the telegraph office almost at a run. "What's the girl's name?"

"I don't know." "You don't know?" He stopped dead in his tracks.

"I mean I don't know what name she's traveling under. I'm sure she isn't using her own."

"Well, you know what she looks like. We'll make it all right."

At the telegraph office they concocted a message which read:

"POP ANREWS
UNION STATION
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
CHECK PASSENGERS OVER-LAND LIMITED FOR GIRL—
NINETEEN—SLENDER—TALL
BLUE EYES—BROWN HAIR—
SCAR LEFT CHEEK—MEET ME
AIRPORT 1 P.M.
GORDON"

"Pop is brother Mason, Elk Eagle or Moose to every brakeman on the Salt Lake Division," Jack explained. "He'll find her. That scar cinches it. You didn't eat a bite of breakfast," he continued.

"How about snatching some toast and coffee before we leave?" "Absolutely," Felice smiled.

"But last night you said you didn't drink coffee."

"That was last night."

"Hello, dearie," beamed the waitress archly when they returned to the lunchroom. "You stayin' over tonight?" Jack ignored her, so she slopped his coffee over and burned his toast.

"All right—what's her real name?" snapped the pilot when he caught Felice smiling at his exchange.

"Don't you know?" She glanced after the waitress in astonishment.

"No, no," he growled. "I mean the lady on the train."

"It isn't any of your business," she surveyed him, her eyes suddenly cool. "But her name is Katherine Rollins. She's my sister."

"Of course, it's none of my business, but he—that Stephani—doesn't seem like a very—well—like a—very—"

"He isn't."

"But why should a nice girl like you . . ." He halted lamely. "It still isn't any of your business," she replied pleasantly as she sipped her coffee.

KNOW TEXAS

DENTON, July 16. Oil may not mix with water, but it evidently does a good job of it with roses. One of the centers of the East Texas oil field is also the center of the East Texas Rose growing industry, which now furnishes nearly half of the nation's supply of rose bushes.

Outdoor rose nurseries were begun in Texas over twenty years ago, but they did not gain momentum until the past five years. In 1935 the production mounted to over 4,000,000 plants and the figure made another jump in 1936 to about 6,000,000. This means that the total income now reaches approximately one million dollars.

This million dollar rose business is not a hothouse affair, but is confined strictly to the open air. Soil and climate conditions in many parts of Texas are particularly well suited to rose growing.

Smith county, which ships around 7,000,000 plants annually, is the heart of the industry, and other important farms are in Gregg, Van Zandt, Henderson, Rusk and Anderson counties.

Rose creations which are developed by the breeders and distributors over the United States are sent to many East Texas farms for multiplication. The field grown roses of Texas lack the weaknesses of hothouse plants and can be shipped anywhere in the nation.

Lets Talk about Clothes

TEXAS STATE COLLEGE WOMEN (CIA)

DENTON, July 16. Grandmother's beach clothes cannot be ridiculed as much this summer as heretofore, since daughter's water wardrobe is composed of a bit more material than she has been accustomed to during the past few years.

Pajamas no longer hold the fort, and is now the keynote of beach fashions. One typical ensemble, which would furnish even the most lavish guest with answers to all the week-end needs, is a five-piece affair with full length coat, bolero jacket, halter top, slacks and shorts, all in the same bright print. For those who prefer a change, the same five pieces in contrasting colors are literally a knockout say the girls at Texas State College for Women.

Sharkskin is winning its way in the sports field these days, and proves its worth by not wrinkling, drying easily after being dashed with salt spray, and keeping its shape after being rolled in the sand all day. Pastel coats, slacks and shorts now come in this fascinating material.

Cullottes, of course, are the answer to the maiden's prayer for something between the old extremes of shorts and long pajamas. They are practically the perfect invention for tennis, and on the beach they eliminate the necessity of "dressing" up to go to town.

Many beachcombers begin at their feet this season and work up, since such attractive and new looking sandals have been created lately. Some are mesh and canvas sandals with cork heels. One can wear them in the water, on the beach and in the house all day without endless changing from one pair to another.

Twenty Questions on Social Security

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTION NO. 11

QUESTION: In what cases, if any, should an employer file an application Form SS-5 an employee's Social Security account number card?

ANSWER: Employers should file an SS-5 application on behalf of an employee and secure the employee's account number only when the employee has failed to file an application himself before (1) leaving the employer's service, (2) before attaining the age of 65, (3) before dying prior to the age of 65, or (4) before the end of an informational period, (June 30, 1937 and quarterly thereafter).

In the first three cases, the employer will file the SS-5 application on or before the tenth day after such date. In the fourth case the employer will file before the tenth day after the end of such informational period.

If the employer files an application for the employee, the employer should give as much information called for as he is able, and should sign the application, inserting after the signature the word, "employer". The employer should also state at the bottom of the form the reason why he filed the application. (Further inquiries should be directed to the Social Security Board Office, 1530 Allen Bldg., Dallas Texas.)

rule is to restrict each pupil to events.

Be prepared for emergencies, by anticipating what may happen. Have a first aid kit on hand. For a large affair, have a physician present. Give the same care to the planning of transportation from the school to the field. Police supervision of traffic and parking is a good preventive measure.

In short, plan everything with the child's health and safety first in mind.

of the administrationist to force ahead with the court bill. The opposition to the bill is not inspired by and desire to to destroy the President, his leadership, or the Democratic Party. Senator McCarran told his colleagues of the threat of Jim Farley to deny him and Senator O'Mahoney, his colleague from Nevada, patronage because of the stand they have taken in opposition to the President. In the same address Senator McCarran reiterated his friendship for President Roosevelt and for his program of progressive legislation. And in the new deal press the opposition Senators are branded as Tories and publicly marked for political slaughter in the elections of 1938, 1940 and 1942.

The basic law of the land shall not be altered by a small majority cajoled by public funds patronage and threats of election reprisals. That is the stand of the opposition Senators. It is an unalterable stand. Upon this stand, the members of the Senate opposition are prepared to face the people of America and the constituents of their respective states. The proponents of the bill are not prepared and willing to do so. Only the people of America can change the basic law of the land. Only the people will!

Field Days

Most schools hold some kind of play day, picnic, or festival during the last weeks of the term. Since my experience has included many such occasions, it may help someone if I mention a few of the lessons I have learned.

First, keep the affair simple. An elaborate spectacle is not necessary. And keep it short.

long programs are exhausting beyond reason.

Give no valuable prizes. Stop all material awards if you can. If the practice must be continued, introduce simple, inexpensive team awards such as a pennant and eliminate prizes to individuals.

Don't "play up" the star performers. For their own good they should have no more participation or attention than any other pupil. On the other hand, let the least skilled have his full share of opportunity. A good

FORWARD! MARCH

That has ever been the command for Texans! And as a Texas institution, the entire Humble organization marches forward with the times. Continuous improvement is Humble's basic policy, and efforts based on it are never ceasing. Humble products are improved from year to year, from season to season, even from day to day; Humble station men are continuously seeking in every possible way to improve the service they render Texas motorists.

Texas moves forward; Humble marches with the state!
