Gen. Texas Championship Rodeo at Katy Park Draws Top Hands There

Special to The News: Waco, Texas, August 10.—The old west will live again in Central Texas when the Bear Club sponsors its big Central Texas Championship rodeo at Katy Park here on August 13-14-15.

Some of the outstanding rodeo stars of the Lone Star State—riders, ropers, trick artists—who make the big time shows have entered the various contests. Extraordinary stars of the rodeo have signed to enter the bulldogging event, which in an evolution of a difficult feat started years ago when Will Pickett of Taylor, thrilled and startled the rodeo world by leaping from his horse to the horns of a running steer and then throwing him without the use of his hands. That was in August, 1904.

Calf belling, bronc riding, steer riding, calf roping and cowboys bareback mule riding contest are on schedule for the three-day affair.

Roy Dillon of Elkhart, Anderson county, is the director and Ralph R. Wolfe, business manager of the athletics at Baylor university, is the general manager of the second annual Central Texas Championship rodeo.

The management of the Waco show has attended the big rodeos of the state this year and have brought back all of the ideas that are new to incorporate in the Katy park entertainment. A large delegation from Gatesville is expected to be present during the three-day meet.

Agriculturists Spoke Over WACO Thursday Night at 8:15 O'clock

Horace Gilmore, W. E. Lasseter and Guy Powell, local agriculturists were speakers over WACO radio station last night at 8:15, when they presented a discussion of the Coryell Co. Sheep and Goat Raisers Association, and the sheep and goat industry as related to this county.

County Agent Guy Powell is mainly responsible with the Association for the recent very successful ram and billy sale which was held here August 2nd, and which was attended by sheep and goat men from every part of Texas.

The sheep and goat business is relatively young in this section and with the association and the County Agent working as they have, this industry at present in the county is looking very "bullish."

This time, 8:15 Monday night, is regularly assigned to the McLellan county Agent, at which time regular features in the interest of agriculture and stock raising are presented.

BAND CAMP

It's a new wrinkle, but, an admirable and worthy one—the Band Camp at Pecan Grove, the idea, we suppose, originating with D. W. Diserens.

It'll whip the High School band in shape for the first of school and the opening of the football season. It'll encourage those who are already band members. It'll encourage those who are not and wish to be, to join and improve themselves and at the same time help their ability and the school.

Band instruction is especially good—there is a director, there must be cooperation, there must be study, one in a band follows the director, follows his music, and acts when either says so. Band Training is splendid training for youngsters, and the camp idea has splendid qualities.

I have spent most of my time this past week in trying to work out some program of immediate relief for the falling price of cotton. Some time ago the Senate Committee on Agriculture followed shortly by the House Committee, stated that they did not believe that it would be possible for them to agree on any permanent farm legislation at this session, and both committees have stated that they are going to hold further hearing on such a bill this fall. For my part, I would like to pass a permanent farm bill at this session, and I am ready to stay here just as long as it takes to pass such a bill, but everyone who knows anything about legislation realizes that if the committees have been unable to agree on a bill for six months, that we will get better legislation by taking time for them to cool off. If they were forced to bring out a bill I am sure they could bring out something, but there is nothing to be gained by simply letting some Chicago meat packer or Minneapolis flour miller write a bill and pass it, regardless of what it does for the rest of the nation, just to say we passed a bill. It is easy enough to pass a bill, what we must do is pass a good bill—one that will really aid agriculture all over the country, and that will stand the test of time and the constitution, one that will be fair to all sections for all times. To write such a bill is a terribly difficult job. Then to get all the interested parties to agree to such a bill is even more difficult. This is the task of the Agriculture Committee. I am not a member of this Committee, although I wish I were.

This Committee has this year brought out bills to extend the Soil Conservation Act, to reorganize the Farm Credit Administration, to extend the low interest rate on farm loans, to control the sugar industry, to help tenants become home owners, etc. They are now faced with a total disagreement among the farmers of the nation as to what is to be done. We must remember that they have to consider the wheat, corn and truck farmer, as well as the cotton farmer, and if they do not please all groups they cannot pass their legislation. They have a hard job and the abuse and vilification that has recently been heaped on their heads gets the farmer nothing, but simply makes the solution of the problem more difficult.

Early last week we held a caucus of representatives from Cotton States. This caucus sent a committee to call on the President. I was one of this group to visit the President. We asked him to use the powers he now has to authorize commodity loans to support to cotton market. I suggested that these loans should be in the nature of the 1935 loans—a loan of a rather conservative figure and a later subsidy or parity payment to cooperators only. The present law authorizes the President to follow such a course and the money is now available. It will take no new laws, only the order of the President. He told us that he did not think it advisable to make any commodity loans until we had some assurance of action on a general farm bill. He doubted the practicability of attempting to pass such a bill at this session. He suggested a called session in November, and personally this idea appeals to me in that it would give the Committees the time they say they need and still give our people a chance to know the provisions of the bill before the first of the year. The President did not, however, say that he would call a session and further said that it would be satisfactory if he could have the assurance of the responsible leaders of the House and Senate that general farm legislation would be the first order of business in January. Fri. morning we held another caucus and the Democratic leaders all appeared and stated that they were ready to give such assurance. I feel that this should enable the President to go ahead and make loans on this year's crop.

If the loans are not above the market price there will be no pegging of prices and no interference with our export business on the account of ruinous carry-overs. These things should be avoided. Much of our present trouble is due the former accumulation by the government of large stocks of cotton that are still going to market. To avoid this the direct loans must be lower than most of our people are asking. The difference can be paid to all cooperators in the form of a supplemental payment next summer in an amount equal to the difference between whatever is determined to be a fair market price and the price the cotton actually brings. In this way the government would buy no cotton till the price dropped below ten cents, but all cooperators would get a better price for their crop, and would thereby reward all who helped reduce the size of the cotton crop.

On the other hand if we were to make direct loans of the full parity value of cotton which is said to be 17 cents at this, we would of course peg the price at that point and while we might expect to ultimately sell enough to supply the American market we could never expect to sell to supply the American market we could never expect to sell cotton abroad until the world price reached 17c. which it is not likely to do. This would mean that we would build up a great surplus carry-over which would probably ruin even the American market and would eventually result in an effort to reduce American production to equal American consumption. I believe that if we are willing to abandon all our export trade we can raise the price of the American consumed part of the crop, but to do so we will have to give up something between fifteen and twenty million acres of cotton each year and about one-half our normal production. This will also mean that we must support on the relief rolls several million families that have been engaged in producing and handling this export cotton. If we are going to attempt this it seems to me that we should give consideration to a domestic allotment system under which we will absolutely control production for domestic consumption and back it up with a guarantee of a parity price for that part of the crop and still (Continued on page 6)

WORLD COMMENT

Joe Burns

The action of Pope Pius in extending the Vatican's recognition to the Franco Government in Spain was prompted by several motives. Undoubtedly the most impelling of these was the desire of the Pope to publicly express the papacy's approval of the movement to restore the property and privileges of the clergy in Spain. Pius' stamp of approval will prove a boon to the cause of the revolutionaries and serve to draw many away from the loyalist side who are not out and out atheists.

Spain, traditional stronghold of Catholicism in Europe, among whose ardent priests originated the tortures of the Inquisition to stamp out all dissenters within the Catholic ranks, has brought grief to the stricken Pope. According to papal sources, 500 priests and other members of the clergy have been executed since the revolution began thirteen months ago. Churches have been wrecked, worshippers shot down while at prayer. But the Franco's men have won their loyal support against the atheistic loyalists.

Defeat of the Italian troops dispatched by Mussolini to aid the rebels has not been well received by those Italians who know their regulars are fighting on Spanish soil. But the Italians are loyal Catholics and the backing of Franco by both the Pope and Mussolini must place Italy in a united stand behind Generalissimo Franco.

Just where British stands as regards taking sides in the Spanish embargo no one has been able to ascertain. At the beginning of the conflict it was charged that hundreds of Britains were fighting in the ranks of the loyalists, eager to deal Fascism a deadly blow by knocking out General Franco. No one believes that Britain proffered any official help to either side, so anxious was Downing Street to preserve a position of neutral both for herself and for the the other neutral states of the Continent.

Britain like Franco, fears the consequences of a Fascist (Franco) victory in Spain. Fascism would gain its first wedge in western Europe and would be in a position to sever Britain's vital communications lines to the East by way of Gibraltar and the Suez Canal. France, sure to fight with Britain in any future European conflict, would be placing three Fascist powers - Germany on the north, Italy on the south-east, and Spain on the south.

With traditional alacrity to be come involved or committed in any policy that might affect adversely the mother country, the British have refused to commit themselves and thus are free to bargain with any side that may emerge as victor from the Spanish civil war.

Really a choice of two evils confronts the British and their French friends. So one can't foretell whether Hitler and Mussolini would dedicate the policy of any Fascist state that might replace the republican government now recognized by a majority of Europe as the legal government of Spain. But liberalism and moderation in Spain are in the past. If Franco loses, the republican government which he attacked last July will not continue to function as if nothing had occurred. The Communists, radicals, and anarchist are in the control at Madrid and Seville and if Franco loses Britain and France will be face to face with Communism in Spain.

REMAKING THE HOME

By JANNETT ALLEN

Unused basement space turned into man's den.

Build a Hideaway for Father

FATHERS are important people in most homes and keeping them contented is often a problem. But it is one that every family must meet.

The problem is more than half-solved when a hideaway is provided for Father... a room where he may strew his ashes and entertain his cronies without feminine interference. No matter how small the space, it will be wholly his and therefore sacred.

If he is the sociable type, he will probably prefer a downstairs room, and the basement space may hold the solution. If the home is large enough to spare a room on its first floor for father's den, so much the better. The attic, too, should be given important consideration—it may easily have the secluded quality which appeals to the more studious male and to one with hobbies like stamps or beetles.

In any case, let that room take on the masculine air which roughly textured walls can give. The tapestry finished side of Celotex insulation board produces such an effect and at the same time its sandy color is pleasingly neutral.

The carpentry involved is vastly simplified by using the four-foot width of this board. It can be nailed up against studs or over old plaster walls, providing both interior decoration and insulation at one low cost.

A smart effect, in the spirit of the boarded walls of old farmhouses, may be achieved with cane fiber plank. The result is most fitting for a paternal retreat.

The man with a habit of snipping pictures from magazines will be glad of a wall surface which takes thumb tacks easily and without making unsightly holes. And the neutral tones will provide a suitable background for colorful wall decoration.

Uruguayan Pioneer to Seek U. S. Training

Hoping to gain new ideas and experiences to take back to the women of her country, Miss Alcira Lopez Ibarburu of Montevideo, Uruguay has applied for and been awarded a scholarship at Texas State College for Women this fall. A pioneer in physical education for the girls of Uruguay, she wishes to gain more preparation for the work. In her application she expressed a desire that "the traditional generosity and hospitality of the United States can give me and my fellow women this opportunity which will mean so much to the development of women in society and to the creation of tighter relations between our countries."

Poage Letter—

allow unlimited production for export on an unprotected market. At least the domestic part of the crop would bring as much money as the whole crop under a pegged price system, and while the export crop might not be profitable to the growers, no one would be required to grow in cotton in excess of his domestic allotment if he did not want to and if he did, as some always will, he would give employment to American working men. In other words, we can not solve the cotton problem without considering the relief and the labor problems and all of these problems must be taken into consideration in any permanent farm bill.

Just at present, however, what we need is an assurance that the government will help with this year's crop. I am doing all I can to assure this immediate relief and I believe we are going to get it, if we will concentrate our efforts on this problem and don't go off on some "free money" or "share the wealth" plan, as some Members all ways try to do. Cotton is moving now in all south and central Texas. Our farmers should have the same chance at a loan and price stabilization as the farmers out on the Plains. Unless we act quickly the cotton will have moved out of the hands of the farmers.

GRACE MOORE GOES TO TOWN IN GAYEST OF ALL RISKIN YARNS

Grace Moore goes to town in "When You're In Love," Columbia picture showing Thu. and Fri. at the Regal Theatre, in a knockout yarn by the writer of, "Mr. Deeds" and "It Happened One Night" . . . with songs classical and swingical . . . with more fun and frivolity than you've ever seen rolled into one picture! WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

No matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month.

Too often the honeymoon express is wrecked by the nagging tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward sign that she is a victim of periodic pain.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

of the year.

Can you imagine glorious Grace Moore buying herself a husband in a Mexican jail . . . wooing him under a blanket of stars . . . thrilling with a song at a tropical fiesta . . . swinging the strains of "Minnie the Moocher"?

It's the gayest of all the Grace Moore hits . . . so different you'll be rubbing your eyes . . . and ears . . . in amazement.

BRING IN THE CLOUDS

Without the clouds this would have been a dull picture. A K-2 filter over the lens brought them in. Exposure 1/25 second at f.8.

GO to any art gallery and examine the landscape pictures. Find one in which the artist has failed to put clouds in the sky. If you succeed you will have encountered a rarity in the world of art.

The fact is that even though a painter may succeed in capturing the true empyrean blue he seldom omits to put in a cloud or two, white, dark or tinted, despite the fact that a cloudless, blue sky is not an unusual phenomenon and hence true to nature. The painter appreciates that clouds in their many beautiful forms, "pavilions of the sun," as a poet once called them, are artistic contributions to any outdoor scene. Too, the artist who works in black and white rarely fails to put clouds in his sky because an expanse of plain white space is uninteresting.

Why do we not more often see clouds in amateur photographs? Years ago the qualities of photographic materials were such that it was very difficult to photograph clouds because there was no film so sensitized that it would register clouds distinctly. Today films are available which to a greater or less degree will do so, but if the little gadget known as a filter is used over the lens, clouds may be brought into the picture in their full form and beauty.

Nevertheless, many amateurs continue taking cloudless landscapes, their skies being represented only by a void of white or gray, or faint outlines of clouds at the best. The beauty of a great tumbling cloud, or the attractive canopy which a mackerel sky spreads above a landscape is absent in the print although present when the picture was taken.

Why should not amateur photographers be cloud artists, too, when they have the means to do so? The trick the filter does is to hold back the violet, ultraviolet and blue light to which photographic film responds more sensitively than to the other colors, and in which clouds and sky are both rich. This allows the green and red light (also reflected from clouds) to register, and if the film is of the type especially sensitive to green and red, such as the super-sensitive panchromatic, the clouds come in still more distinctly. Naturally since the filter holds back all the light to some extent, somewhat longer exposures are needed than when no filter is used. Correct exposure can be determined by using the "filter factor" data furnished by the manufacturer.

Filters for recording clouds and for general use are yellow in different degrees of density, variously suited to different subjects. A good average filter costs only from $1 to $1.50, depending upon the camera on which the filter is to be used. This is an investment which pays high dividends in the satisfaction you get from the enhanced beauty of your outdoor photographs.

"FLY-AWAY BABY"
AIR MYSTERY IS DUE HERE TODAY

Would you like to go all the way around the world in the space of a few single minutes beyond a single hour?

It can be done. All that is necessary is to go to the Regal Theatre Tues. and Wed. when the Warner Bros. melodrama "Fly-Away Baby" opens up.

This is a movie based on the recent race around the globe by three reporters, two men and a girl. The story was written by the King Feature Service.

For the first time in film history, we are shown action aboard a giant Zeppelin crossing the Atlantic from New York to Germany. That is how Miss Kilgallen and her competitors started their trip.

Also you see the crossing of the Pacific from China to San Francisco by the famed China Clipper. And in between are shots of innumerable foreign cities and airports.

Glenda Farrell, plays the girl reporter in the movie. But is isn't merely the story of the round-the-world race. Miss Kilgallen opened up her yam with a mystery about a murder and robbery, and had Glenda and Barton MacLane, solve the puzzle while hopping from continent to continent.

HARVEY G. NECESSARY BURIED AUG. 7TH

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at the Hemline Cemetery for Harvey G. Necessary, who passed away August 6th at the home of his son Kim Necessary near Osage.

Mr. Necessary was born June 3, 1859 and was a retired farmer. Scott's Funeral Directors were in charge.

Miss Mamie Sue Halbrook of this city in a motor party with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kelley and daughter, Miss Mary Caroline Kelly of Fort Worth left the first part of the week for a vacation trip to Old Mexico.

1,218,686 ACRES RECEIVE NEW FARM PURCHASE ACT CULTURAL PRACTICES OF SOIL CONSERVATION

Ft. Worth, Texas.—Coordinated measures and approved cultural practices for conservation of soil and moisture are being applied on more than 1,218,686 acres of farm lands in Region 4, which is comprised of Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas, except high plains area, according to a report issued here today by Louis P. Merrill, regional conservator. The report represents work accomplished by the Service up to July 1. Mr. Merrill stated. Erosion control work in the three regions is being carried on under 7,683 cooperative agreements with individual landowners or operators.

Highlights of the report on different phases of the complete erosion control program are as follows: 66,071 acres of land have been retired from cultivation to pasture or woodland; contour ridges have been constructed on 53,959 acres; 26,386 acres are protected by contour cultivation alone; 92,947 are protected by strip crops and contour cultivation; 151,112 acres are protected from rapid runoff of rain water by a combination of strip crops, terraces and contour cultivation; 12,148.5 miles of terraces have been constructed in project and camp areas; 13,827,939 trees have been planted on steep or eroded slopes for erosion control; winter cover crops have been planted on 43,702 acres.

Of the 1,218,686 acres under cooperative agreement with the Service, all phases of the coordinated erosion control program have been completed on 857,571 acres, representing 2,753 farms.

Soil Conservation Association in Region 4 have a membership of 15,871. An indication of the widespread interest of farms and business men in the program to protect farm lands from soil and water losses is brought by the fact that some 84,000 people have made inspection tours of farms where erosion control work is being done. These visitors, coming in groups sponsored largely by county agents and vocational agricultural teachers, come to project and camp areas, according to Mr. Merrill, for the purpose of studying approved erosion control measures and practices as applied under actual farming conditions.

"The year just closed has seen a great spread in the use of approved erosion control measures and practices throughout Region 4," Mr. Merrill stated. "Farmers visiting Soil Conservation Service work areas have returned to their homes and adapted to their own farming operations many of the phases of the coordinated erosion control program. This growing interest on the part of farmers of our region in soil and moisture conservation program for their farms will be definitely reflected in the future agricultural welfare of the entire southwest," he

EXPLAINED BY RA CHIEF

Dallas, Texas, August 5.—Tenant farmers from every corner of Texas and Oklahoma are writing to the Resettlement Administration and some are coming long distances in person to make application for loans to buy farms under the recently enacted Bankhead-Jones bill, but Paul V. Maris, acting for the regional Director of the Resettlement Administration, said today that no agency has yet been designated to handle the new activity.

"It is useless for farmers to write or call upon the Resettlement Administration at this time," Maris said. "The bill provides for a Farmers Home Corporation to carry out the provisions of the act. Until this corporation is set up and has established its own personnel or has designated some agency of the Department of Agriculture to execute this program, it will be impossible to refer farmers to anyone who has any authority to give them detailed information."

The organization placed in charge must then set up county committees, Maris said. These committees will examine applications of person desiring to finance home ownership through one of these loans and also examine and appraise the farms.

Until these committees have actually been appointed and are functioning no applications can be approved by anyone at any place. Organization of the machinery will start with naming the three members of the board of directors of the Farmers Home Corporation, then proceed all the way down through regional or state or district to county headquarters. The bill states that all applications must be made through a county representative who shall be either the county agent or someone else chosen by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Loans will be made only for farms large enough to constitute an efficient farm management unit, which will enable a diligent farm family to carry on successfully the type of farming best suited to the locality, said.

One of the major returns to the government to compensate for expenses incurred for cooperation and assistance extended to landowners and operators in project and camp areas is from the visitors who see the work and then apply the measures on their own farms at their own expense with only technical assistance. "For this reason," he stated, "the technical men of the service and the cooperating farmers see that a complete job is done on each farm under the agreement and that the measures used are applied in such an economical, sensible, practical way that the visiting farmer will not say, 'The government can afford this, but I can't, but will say instead, 'why didn't I think of this before?'"

Only farm tenants, farm laborers, share croppers, and other individuals who earn or who recently earned the major portion of their income from farming operations are eligible.

Precedence is to be given to persons who are married or who have dependent families, and wherever practical, to persons who are able to make an initial down payment. Farmers who have been thrifty enough to become owners of livestock and farm implements necessary to run the farm are also to be given general preference where other consideration are equal.

The county committee must certify that they believe the applicant will be successful in carrying out the provisions of the agreement. The committee must also certify to the reasonable value of the farm.

Size of loans shall be determined according to local conditions, but shall in no instance exceed the amount the county committee believe is the honest value of the land. Loans must be repaid within an agreed period of time not to exceed forty years, and the interest rate will be three per cent per annum on all unpaid balances. A surplus above the average annual payment will be collected in periods of above normal production or price. Reduced payments will be allowed when farm income is sub-standard. The farmer may pay out and take a clear title at any time he is able. However, he cannot make final payment or the government's interest be released prior to five years from the making of the loan, except with the consent of the Secretary.

Loans are to be distributed throughout the forty-eight states and Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico, on the basis of farm population and prevalence of tenancy. The bill leaves the apportioning of money to the Secretary of Agriculture, rather than specify amounts for any state or territory.

In carrying out the provisions of these loans, the Secretary is to avoid expansion in production, especially where it tend to defeat the policy of Congress as set forth in provisions of the Soil Conservation and the Domestic Allotment acts as set forth in provisions of the Soil Conservation and the Domestic Allotment acts and amendments. The Secretary is also instructed to assist farmers who are barrowing from this corporation to become established upon lands now in cultivation. He is to avoid encouraging them to settle on land yet to be broken, except in instances where this is deemed particularly advisable.

Congressman Marvin Jones has been quoted as saying this act is merely a beginning. It provides for an appropriation not to exceed ten million dollars for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938. Administrative expenses must not exceed five per cent of the sum actually appropriated. An appropriation of twenty-five million dollars was authorized

Twenty Questions on Social Security

Question No. 16

QUESTION: If an employee changes jobs, residence or name, should he report the change to the Social Security Board?

ANSWER: If an employee changes jobs or his residence, he is not required to make any reports to anyone insofar as the Social Security Board is concerned. All he need do is report his account number to his new employer. Employees will be credited with wages paid to them as a result of the required periodic reports made by their employers.

In case an employee wishes to change his name he may make a request to that effect to the Social Security Board, Washington, D. C., or to any of its field offices. A new card with the same number, showing the name, will be issued.

HOPPERS WORTH MONEY

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 5.—(UP)—Colorado farmers plagued for 40 days by an infestation of grasshoppers are reaping a profit from the insect invasion.

Buyers from Michigan and eastern states are paying $400 a ton for dead grasshoppers. They say that the Colorado variety has a better flavor for fish bait than low-altitude hoppers.

Ranchmen and farmers are operating two collecting devices that scrape up a swath of dead grasshoppers and dump them in piles. The grasshoppers are canned and shipped to anglers.

A load of gossip goes with every hair wave.

for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and appropriations not to exceed fifty million dollars for each fiscal year thereafter, with no limit as to the number of years.

This act empowers the President to allot money out of relief appropriations for rehabilitation loans, for purchase of livestock, farm equipment supplies, and other minor needs including the re-financing of indebtedness. This year seventy-five million dollars have been appropriated for this purpose. In succeeding years the President is to allocate such sums as he believes necessary.

Included in this provision is a section authorizing the continuance of debt adjustment activities.

College Station, Texas, Aug. 9.—An annual pilgrimage by Texas farm folk, headed for their twenty-eighth annual Farmers Short Course at Texas A & M College, will begin late the coming week. The short course program will begin Monday, Aug. 16, and will last through Thursday, but a majority of the visitors probably will have arrived by late Sunday afternoon, Aug. 15.

Roy W. Snyder, chairman of the general short course committee, estimates that more than 4,000 farm men and women and 4-H Club girls and boys will register for the short course and that visitors for one or more days during the week will add hundreds of others to the total attendance figure. Dormitory arrangements have been made for a total of approximately 3,400, including 1,400 women, 600 girls, 900 boys and 500 men. More than 600 additional people are expected to take advantage of a free camping grounds on the South edge of the campus.

Complete programs of entertainment and instruction have been arranged by the extension division of the college for the men, women, boys and girls, and several score agricultural leaders of state and national reputation will take part in the program. In addition to the sectional meetings, joint sessions for men and women and nightly entertainment programs in the Kyle Field stadium, a number of other groups will hold annual meetings at the college during the short course. These will include meetings of the Texas Home Demonstration Association, Institute for Cooperative, Texas Agricultural writer's Conference, Texas Agricultural Workers and Epsilon Sigma Phi, national honorary society for extension workers.

Women attending the short course will study a variety of practical homemaking problems, including farm financial questions. Men's groups will spend one day each in studying livestock, horticulture, field crops and soils and farm business and organization. Joint meetings of men and women will be held each morning to hear general agricultural problems discussed by such speakers as President T. O. Whitton, of the college; C. A. Cobb, Southern regional director for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration; and Miss Barbara Van Heulen, an official of the Farm Credit Administration. Both Mr. Cobb and Miss Van Heulen are from Washington, D. C.

Fainfall in Texas varies from more than 50 inches in some parts of the Southeast Texas to less than 10 inches in the west toward El Paso. Maximum snowfall is over 25 inches in the Panhandle, but snow has never been seen by some people in the Valley and other Southern points.

GRAVES REUNION AT JONESBORO

One hundred or more descendants of the Graves met in their annual reunion at Jonesboro. There were about forty or fifty who spent Wednesday night and had a wonderful time. On Thursday kinfolk and friends began to arrive by sun-up so most of the morning was spent in getting acquainted and visiting. The children had a time playing various games and some went swimming.

At noon there was a feast spread fit for a king with barbecued chicken and all to go with it.

In the afternoon we had a short sermon by Rev. D. A. Graves, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bethel Graves. It was truly enjoyed as few of the kinfolks had heard him, his home being in Oklahoma.

At the business meeting T. A. Graves of Gatesville was elected chairman; Mrs. Lillard Graves of Pidcoke, Secretary.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR T. H. PLACE AT CRAWFORD

T. H. Place, age 68, died Monday morning, August 2, at his home in Crawford, and funeral services were held here Tuesday morning at 10 a. m., the Reverent H. W. Bennett, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Valley Mills, officiating. Mr. Place was born in Mount Vernon, Illinois. When a young man he came to Texas, and in 1895 was united in marriage to Miss Jessie Britain at Coryell City, Texas. To this union were born four children, one of whom preceded the father in death, leaving to mourn his loss two sons, Britain and Frank, one daughter, Mrs. Willis Naler, his wife, several grandchildren, and a host of relatives and friends. During his life time he was engaged in the well-drilling business in Coryell and adjoining counties. For the past several years he has resided in Crawford. Forty years ago Mr. Place professed faith in Christ and united with the Presbyterian church, in which he labored and worshipped until the time of his death.

He had been in poor health since last February, having been confined to his bed for three months prior to his death. With patience and fortitude he maintained a testimony to all who ministered to him during his illness.—Crawford Sun.

CASA MANANA SET PROVES BAROMETER

Fort Worth, Aug. 9.—Every night the Fort Worth Frontier Fiesta has a special weather bulletin indicating the state of the weather for the next 24 hours. The weather prophet goes to work when the huge colonial mansion for the "Gone with the Wind" episode of Casa Manana is apparently set on fire. If the smoke hangs low, rain is certain within 24 hours; if it rises, skies will be clear. Stage hands say it never fails.

FERN COOPER IS UNSCATHED AS FIRE DAMAGES HOUSE

Fern Cooper narrowly escaped injury or loss of property last week when fire destroyed the house next door to where she is living, and spread to her house.

Miss Fern Cooper recently moved to Stephenville where she is attending John Tarleton Agricultural College. The blazes from the adjoining house causing considerable damage to the house in which she lives, but quick work by the Stephenville fire fighters soon brought the flames under control and prevented any loss of her belongings.—Copperas Cove Crony. Miss Cooper is a sister to Miss Floy Cooper of this city and is a former resident of this place.

INFORMATION ON STRIP CROP NOW AVAILABLE IN BULLETIN

Information on strip cropping as a measure of conserving farm land is now available in a new U. S. Department of Agriculture Farmers' Bulletin. The publication, "Strip Cropping for Soil Conservation," is in popular language and contains up-to-date information on the subject.

"Strip cropping is the practice of laying out fields in such a way that strips of close-growing crops alternate with similar cropstrips of clean tilled crops, either on the contour of the land, in a parallel formation across the slope, or crosswise to the direction of the prevailing wind," E. E. McAlister, Technician in Charge, of the Gatesville Camp said. "The bulletin explains the three principal types of strip cropping: contour stripping, field stripping, and wind stripping; and offers suggestions for their use.

"Contour strip cropping, which is widely used by farmers cooperating with the Soil Conservation Service in Texas, is the production of ordinary farm crops in strips of variable width, laid out across the slope approximately on the contour. Strips of close-growing, erosion-controlling crops alternate with strips of clean-tilled, erosion-permitting crops. The width of the strips depends on the soil type and the degree of slope. Among the advantages of strip cropping are the reduction of soil losses, frequent increase in yields and farm income, reduction of soil losses, reduction of fertilizer costs, and economics in farm power, which result from cultivation on the level."

The new publication, Farmers' Bulletin No. 1776, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C. at 5 cents per copy.

The value of contour cultivation as a means of conserving moisture on cultivated fields was clearly demonstrated in the Moehlem community last spring, according to E. R. Narmour, a cooperator in the Gatesville Camp Area. Mr. Narmour stated that during the dry planting season last spring, most farmers who did not list on the contour were unable to get up a good stand of cotton because of the lack of moisture. On those farms where contour listing was practiced, a uniformly greater moisture content was presented and a good stand of cotton was obtained.

68 acres of cultivated land on Mr. Narmour's farm are controlled by strip cropping and contour tillage alone. Since the inauguration of this program, Mr. Narmour states that there has been no appreciable runoff and the moisture content of his soil has been uniformly increased.

COMPLICATED MATTERS

More than 500 types of Texas soils have been discovered and studied by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at College Station, even though all countries have not yet been surveyed. This University of resources has brought newly-recognized problems to farmers, and according to W. T. Carter in a Texas Soils Bulletin, "The Success of agriculture in Texas depends upon the appropriate use of the soils, which constitute the most valuable resource of the state.

Professionals and amateurs use the same tools, but other otherwise they have practically nothing in common.

BAILEY'S WRECKING

SYNOPSIS

Jack Gordon, crack pilot, is in New York on vacation when he is called back to Salt Lake City to fly a ship to San Francisco. He balks but changes his mind when he sees pretty Felice Rollins, society heiress, board the westbound plane. Complications set in when a gun-toting foreigner attempts to stop Felice from continuing the trip to Chicago. Jack saves her and finds out she is anxious to overtake a transcontinental train with her sister on board. Jack takes the ship out of Salt Lake City and a howling storm forces him to make a landing in a snow-filled pass. Among the passengers is a government agent, Everts. He is trailing another passenger, Palmer, a bank-robber. A few minutes after the landing, Everts attempts to arrest Palmer but the latter draws a gun and wounds Everts and Jack's co-pilot. Jack is forced to defend his plane and passengers without a weapon against the vengeful Palmer.

CHAPTER X

"YOU mean this?" Waldemar stuck his head out of the washroom and held up the fire extinguisher which he had purloined. Before Jack could grab it the cabin door flew open and Palmer leaped inside. The boy hastily shoved the extinguisher behind him.

"Hello, everybody," beamed the gunman. "Wintry, isn't it." He kept them covered with his two guns. "If any of you want trouble—start it and I'll finish it. As for you, Rollo." He glared at Waldemar, who was innocently returning to his seat. "I've got some plans for you. In the meantime, keep that trap of yours shut."

Palmer started walking forward toward Jack, waving the latter into the cockpit. He apparently had no fear of the cowering passengers.

"Hello, beautiful," he grinned at Felice. Then, as she ignored him he added: "Don't get on your high horse sister. Plenty of swell dames have gone for me."

"Can you take off?" he demanded of Jack.

"I'm not sure." The latter was playing for time.

"Come on—can the funny stuff. It's hard and smooth and downhill. If you can't take off, maybe I can . . ."

"You'll break your fool neck and everybody else's."

"Listen—if you think you've got me over a barrel because you're the only one that can fly this plane, you're crazy—I will if I have to."

"Where'd you learn?" Jack demanded after a second's hesitation.

"Mexico."

"All right—I'll fly you on one condition. These people go along."

"Okay—I'll be a sucker but get this—you'll fly and I'll ride the co-pilot's seat and if you try any funny business—I'll fly the rest of the way myself. Now start 'em up and let's get going."

As Jack started into the cockpit, Palmer's eyes suddenly lighted on the empty fire extinguisher rack.

"Wait a minute!" he snarled. "Stand still! Who's got that extinguisher?"

"It's in the washroom, mister," piped up Waldemar innocently.

"So you were preparing to squirt me out like a bonfire," Palmer sneered at Jack. "If I didn't need you . . ." He whirled on the other passengers. "The rest of you get out of this plane and get out quickly."

"You'll be arrested for this!" cried Miss Harkins dramatically as she gathered her skirts about her.

"All right, sister, go call a cop—call a couple of cops."

"You can't," protested Stephani. "We'll all freeze to death."

"I'd as soon kill you as look at you," snarled the gunman.

"What about me?" inquired Waldemar. "You said . . ."

Palmer turned and stared at him indecisively as if he couldn't quite make up his mind what to do. Deliberately Waldemar raised his hand to his nose and wiggled the fingers slowly. Then, as his enemy tensed for a spring he fired his old standby, the water-pistol, from the hip.

The jet hit Palmer squarely in the face. The effect was astounding. He yelled, gasped and clawed at his eyes, then fired his guns wildly.

Jack got the idea at once. Waldemar had charged his pistol with extinguisher fluid. He leaped forward and crashed into his foe. Palmer went down, one of the automatics flying from his hand. Felice dived for it but the gangster, recovering somewhat, plunged forward and was on the verge of grabbing it when Waldemar tripped him neatly.

"Grab that gun, quick!" shouted Jack.

Palmer went down, one of the guns flying from his hand. "Grab that gun, quick!" shouted Jack.

Stephani complied, but instead of using it, tossed the weapon through the window and sat back to enjoy the fight.

By this time pandemonium reigned in the cabin. Palmer and Gordon were in a tight clinch and the former was gleefully gouging the pilot's eye and trying to tear his other gun free.

"How do you like it, huh?" He gouged again and Jack groaned. Then the latter twisted loose and walloped his foe beside the jaw. The other gun crashed against the side of the cabin and fell to the floor while the two men engaged in a slugging contest. A mule-kick wallop to the chin knocked Palmer to the floor but as he fell his hand grasped the lost gun. He took quick aim just as Waldemar crept out from under a seat and let him have another jet from the water pistol. The stuff would have choked an elephant, but Palmer merely staggered back, dropping the gun once more.

And once more Stephani reached for the weapon. This time, however, Ann's high-heeled slipper pinned his fingers to the floor while she picked up the automatic and crept forward to inflict the deciding blow.

Palmer, again recovering from the fluid, was fighting like a madman. He had Jack jammed against the cockpit wall and was pounding him into a pulp. But his attention kept being diverted by Waldemar, who was dodging in and out, trying for another shot. The pilot managed to pinion his opponent's arms for a second. Yelling with delight Waldemar leaped in, jammed his pistol under Palmer's very nose and pulled the trigger.

The gangster couldn't take it this time. Choking, sobbing and gasping for breath, he clawed at his eyes while Jack deliberately measured him and swung a haymaker from the floor. His enemy's head snapped back and he went down for the count.

"Waldemar," wailed Miss Harkins. "I knew you'd hurt someone with . . ."

"He's moving," screamed the boy as his fallen foe stirred dazedly. "Somebody kick him quick."

"He's out, Waldo," Jack laughed shakily. "Thanks to you."

"Boy, did we fix him 'n boy, did you sock him," chortled the child.

"This trip is more darn fun," groaned the pilot. "Tie him up somebody." Then he turned to Felice. "Come on. We've got to hurry."

difficulty in matching his ties and socks must be in a terrible predicament now for the color is one of the most important points in men's clothes today. This winter stylists predict even greater warmth and life in masculine wear. To guard against those color clashes which make any woman heartsore, we advise all doubtful males to ask the salesmen for good combinations.

However, just because one is a little uncertain whether red flecks in the suit should be matched by tie or shoestring, he should not give up the idea of bursting forth in color. All women like for men to dress in the latest popular accepted mode at times, and surely the black and blue solid suits must get a little tiresome even to their most ardent champions.

The main difficulty, in the opinion of these T. S. C. W. students, is that most men lack "Clothes Courage". The stores and magazines are offering gay new styles and ideas, and any man who neglects this opportunity to shine is wasting his possibilities.

A disgruntled professional ball player must be nearly as hard to handle as a disgruntled woman.

GROWING UP

Denton, Aug. 9.—The Lone Star State's wide open spaces are closing up. Although Texas still ranks low on the amount of population per square mile, it shows a greater per cent of increase since 1920 than all but five of the forty-eight states. According to the 1930 census and the number of people had grown to 24.9 per cent of the 1920 tabulation, a figure topped only by the states of California, Arizona, Michigan, Florida and New Jersey. The total population by this last census was 5,824,715, which placed Texas as the fifth largest state in the United States.

Lets Talk about Clothes

TEXAS STATE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN (CIA)

DENTON, August 9 — Men usually get suggestions from the family circle on "what to wear when," but perhaps they would like to know what women in general have to say on the subject.

The first opinion voiced by the girls at Texas State College for Women is that above all a man should seem perfectly comfortable in his clothes. No matter whether he is relaxed in tennis slacks or suffering in a full dress suit if he can just look as though he feels at ease the battle's won. The man who formerly had
