Seven Hundred Seventy-six Registered In Local Schools On First Day; More Due

Registration in Gatesville Public Schools for the period of registration, Saturday thru until Monday afternoon was given out late yesterday afternoon as seven hundred seventy-six and authorities on "school hill" stated that there would be more to come yet, the approximate total reaching about 850. Monday noon, it looked like everybody had "knuckled down to business", and that school had been going on for weeks, instead of one day. Superintendent Erzell W.

Books stated yesterday that there were thirty-eight school districts in the county represented in the present enrollment, and that the enrollment was divided as follows: High School, 320, Junior High, 220, and Elementary, 236.

COTTON CENSUS REPORT GIVES 2,490 BALES GINNED TO DATE

W. R. Goodson, Special Agent for the Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce in Coryell county, reports 2,490 bales of cotton ginned in this county from the crop of 1937 prior to September 1, as compared to 606 bales, September 1, 1936.

According to these figures, Coryell county is either getting out the crop in a hurry, or there is going to be a bumper crop in these parts. The date Gatesville Lions visited Oglesby, the report was that day that 100 bales were ginned in Oglesby on that date.

"WHAT, NO COFFEE?.. S' FACT! HI-SCHOOL DON'T SERVE IT!"

Well, I never! At last, we've gone Ripley one better, --, we've found a cafeteria which serves "No Coffee". Coffee hounds around town wouldn't leave many nickles there. The place would seem like a vacant building.

We've gone far enough with this suspense - expense, to us. This "Coffeeless" hashouse, is none other than the highschool cafeteria, and it's something new to us, that a cafeteria doesn't handle coffee, but then, it's young folks who patronize this cafeteria, and not "oid coffee hounds".

Rugby teams of Australia, New Zealand, Japan and Canada will be asked to meet American teams at San Francisco's 1939 World's Fair.

VETERAN OF TWO WARS SPEAKES AT CHURCHES HERE SUNDAY

Maj. Richard W. Mackey, veteran of two wars, who has been through enough adventures for several ordinary men, is a visitor in this city this week.

Sunday morning at the Sunday school hour he spoke to the Men's Bible Class of the First Methodist Church of this city and in the evening spoke at the Church of Christ.

He speaks 10 languages, five of them fluently, and in intelligence department service distinguished himself on his ability to over hear conversations of German and Austrian prisoners. Once when he went over the top as a spy, he was questioned closely in the German lines, but escaped detection by the fluency of his language.

"I am a Major, not a Colonel", he said. "Major is the highest rank that a minister can attain." He is a member of the Methodist Church, Sikeston, Mo.

Sheriff Joe White and his deputy Curtis Ritchie of Gatesville were here the past week on business.—Oglesby Outlook.

Mr. Gordon's family had sat down for dinner, and asked him if he would not "come to dinner", which he declined to do, going instead to his bedroom where the tragedy occurred.

The bullet entered the right side of his head, just back and above the right ear, and coming out the left side of his head, about the same position, and lodged in a pillow on his bed.

Born near Slater, Mr. Gordon was 60 years of age, and was known thruout Central Texas as a druggist and business man. Mr. Gordon was a member of the Shrine, and the local Masonic Lodge, and a member of the First Methodist Church of this city. He was a Director of the Guaranty Bank & Trust Company.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

SCHOOL DAYS ARE HERE

The many school activities offer countless opportunities for snapping pictures that you will enjoy in years to come.

If there was ever a snaphooter's paradise, it's school for those who attend it. It may be a one-room school or it may be a great university. Wherever, whatever it may be, it's crammed with unbeatable picture possibilities.

Yet we might as well face the fact of the matter—few snaphooters make the most of school's snaphooting opportunities.

Perhaps they are dazzled by the very wealth of the material at hand. More likely, they assume that somebody else is going to take the pictures. And that's a fatal mistake. For nobody else can see things as you see them. And it's what you see that means most to you—and to the folks at home, now or years from now.

The question, then, is how to make the most of school's picture possibilities. A little planning will do the trick.

First, about the right camera for school. Any camera will do, providing it is clean and in good order and uses a size of film that is easily available anywhere. If yours has a fast lens and a fast shutter, you'll have an advantage in taking shots at sporting events, but such a camera is not at all essential. With a little care you can make even the simplest box camera turn out entirely satisfactory pictures.

Then, how can snaphooting be planned? All of it, of course, cannot be planned, but many of the most important shots can be. Why not work out a scenario, Hollywood fashion?

First of all, whether school's just around the corner or a thousand miles away, you'll want a few good shots of home. Then a view or two taken on the way to school. Maybe those views seem commonplace now, but wait a few years.

At school, of course, there are the obvious shots of the buildings, the grounds, new classmates, teachers, old friends, sports, picnics, class ceremonies, and so on. It's a good idea to take them so as to form a kind of continued story. Then, when they are mounted in your album, the pictorial story will flow along evenly.

A really good collection of school pictures is hard to find, as any school year-book editor will tell you. Yet there's nothing much easier to take; and few snaphoots increase in value, year after year, as surely as those taken at school.

WORLD COMMENT

Joe Burns

Nineteenth century military expansion on the part of the great powers closely followed the peaceful penetration of business and financial interests in the backward areas of the world. Britain, France and Germany followed their merchants and bankers into Africa and Asia in order to protect their investments against revolutions and greedy native rulers.

A study of the investments of foreign powers in China reveals the fact that the luckless yellow men can expect no aid from the western states in their fight against the Japanese.

Since 1931 and the conquest of Manchuria Chinese leaders have fervently hoped for a conflict between Japan and Russia or some other great power that would permit them to regain possession of their lost territories.

History of Sino-Japanese relations reveals that the Japanese always strike their weaker neighbor at a time when the nations of the Occident are involved in problems of their own. And this year Japan is practically assured of a free hand in China, short of some untoward incident which might provoke the Russians into war.

The current issue of Business Week lists the investments of Japan in China at more than $1,000,000,000 (billion). This investment represents 90 per cent of Japan's outside financial investment. Britain has investments totaling about $1,000,000,000 (billion) or 6 per cent of her outside world investments. The investments of the United States in China is only $200,000,000 according to this periodical, or less than 2 per cent of her foreign investments.

The interest of Japan in China is apparent. But the Japanese foreign policy of the last 37 years has alienated the good will of the Chinese people.

Particularly since the 1931-33 war has Japanese trade suffered in China. In addition to resenting their lack of affluence in one of the world's greatest markets for manufactured products, the Japanese have watched with growing apprehension the rise of nationalism among the generally lethargic Chinese people under the regime of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and his American educated wife.

Particularly since 1931 has China been armistice. The Nanking government has steadily increased its influence among the border provinces which once were under the subjection of local war lords and military governors. China's aim has been the expulsion of the Japanese from Manchuria and the Key points which it holds in North China.

Thus the present attack by the Japanese military was necessitated by the renaissance spirit among the Chinese people, and in order to consolidate and maintain the gains of 1931. With North China under the political domination of the army, with a market of fully 100,000,000 people under the sole control of the merchants and bankers of Tokyo and Osaka, with the billion dollar investment in China rendered secure against attack, the Japanese feel that the present campaign will be worth the cost. Of course the interest of the Japanese peasant and laborer is more in procuring the necessities of life than in protecting their Nation's investment in China. So the present war is more the work of the army and navy, backed by the bankers and exporters and manufacturers, than of the Japanese layman.

If Britain were free of the spectre of Fascism in Europe, of revolt in India, it might assume a firm attitude against Japan in the present crisis. But the British are well aware that their losses in trade and investments would far exceed the billion dollars investments in China if they become involved in war with the Japanese.

The Navy is needed in the Mediterranean to protect British shipping from interference by the Spanish rebels and to maintain the shipping route to the East through the Suez Canal and the Red Sea. Whitehall knows only too well, also, that the minute Britain becomes involved in some distant part of the world, the Fascist dictators will go on the warpath in Europe and attempt to topple over the balance of power which British foreign secretaries so assiduously strive to maintain.

Aside from the fact that Americans are in no mood to go to battle for the merchants princes for which they fought in 1917, the small investment of $200,000,000 or two per cent of our foreign investments is too inconsequential to risk even an "incident" with the belligerent Japanese.

Where will China turn for help? To Russia? Russia's investment in China is negligible. Soviet investments in Manchuria, potent under the Czarist regime, were liquidated when the Japanese moved in the province. Russia, too, has more vital interests in the West to watch. While the Soviets would naturally fight to keep Siberia from the Japanese, they are more interested in the preservation of the western European provinces against possible encroachments by Hitler or Poland.

Where should China turn for succor? There is but one answer: to China. If the Chinese do not fight to the last gun, to the last city, to the last trench, to the last man, they are doomed to be engulfed in the oblivion of Japanese conquest and consequent domination. Under the able leadership of Chiang Kai-Shek, China made slow but steady progress in the last decade. This progress will be retarded by the war with Japan. If Japan wins decisively, and seizes North China, the work of unifying China will receive a deadly setback. If China can prolong the present conflict, it stands the chance of bankrupting Japan and protecting the integrity of its soil against foreign invasion.

IN MEMORY OF DONNA NECESSARY

On Tuesday morning, Sept 7 1937, just as God was casting his warm friendly light o'er the dark stillness at the end of another night that had been spent in peaceful sleep, Dona Necessary passed from this world of care and trial into a better world above, where no suffering nor sorrow is known, but all is peace and happiness.

Dona suffered an attack of intestinal flu some short time back; had recovered from a few days' illness, but regained strength very slowly, due to a weak heart. On retiring Monday night she was very cheerful and without a complaint, as was her sweet nature. She was apparently well and talked with her family until bedtime.

On arising Tuesday morning her husband found a still form instead of the sweet, affectionate smile she greeted him with each morning. The call for her to arise and take up the duties in her earthly home for the day, failed to awaken, for God only a few minutes before had called her to come to her heavenly home to live with Him and the angels in High.

Dona was born in Tennessee, October 12, 1895, coming to Coryell County when a small girl, where she resided the rest of her life. She was married January 3rd, 1920 to Oliver Necessary of this County. To this union three children were born; the first child having died in infancy. Two are surviving, Garnett age 12, Chess age 10. Through her short stay in this life she made many friends, who join deeply in sympathy with the family in their sad hour, for those who knew her best loved her most.

There is left to mourn the loss of this dear friend, besides her husband and two sons, her father, John Martin of this county, but was visiting at Uvalde, Texas, at the time of her death. Four sisters and one brother, Mrs. Allie Dossey, Mrs. Madge Armstrong, and Ben Martin, all of Uvalde, and Ms. Ella Davis of Gatesville and a number of other relatives and friends. Funeral services were held in the Stanley Chapel Church of Christ, at 2 p. m. Wednesday Sept. 8, the Rev. Mr. Watkins of Lubbock officiating. The body was laid to rest in the Hemeline Cemetery beneath a bed of beautiful flowers and in the presence of a large number of friends.

She was a kind, loving friend, a devoted companion, and a tender, patient mother. She was a loyal, faithful Christian, having been a member of the Church of Christ since 1922.

Weep not dear loved ones for Dona is not dead, she only sleeps in heavenly peace, to await the joys of a reunited family, for as fair as the morning, as pure as the dew, Dona is in heaven calling for you.

One precious to our hearts is gone; a friend we loved so dear. No more will she meet us at her door, to bid us Welcome in, for God has called her spirit home, to dwell on High with Him.

(Written by a friend, Mrs. Virgil Deavers.)

SPORTS AS SEEN

By John Frank Post, Jr.

The Golden Bears of Baylor are entertaining no championship aspirations this year. For the past two years they have finished in third place, considerably higher than most scribes predicted, but this year they seem destined to hit rock bottom. Captain Loyd Russell, the Bear's main offensive threat for the past three seasons, has gone the way of all good seniors. He was a threat all the time he was on the field, and a great player in the conference.

Two stalwarts of the line have also traveled the graduation route, Ox Parry and John D Reynolds. Parry was a steady defensive man, always in the thick of every play, while Reynolds also was a star on defense, backing up the line with ferocious deadliness.

Bill Patterson, a soph sensation of last year, is slated to fill Russell's big boots. This flashy, pass slinging halfback should be approaching top form in this his senior year. Bubba Gernand, who pulled last year's Rice game out of the fire, and Carl Brazell, blocking fullback has clinched two of the starting backfield posts. About the best prospect among the new faces to show up is Durham Bivins, a transfer from the Kemper Military Institute. Bivins, a Longview boy, comes to Baylor with a fine backfield record at that institution.

Coach Jennings frankly admits that his weakest position is at center, vacated by All conference John D. Reynolds. Reynolds' old post will be considerable weaker, but W. J. Wimpee, Gerald McCarver, Virgil Cloyd, and Sherrill Bailey, will battle it out for that position. None of these lads, however, have had any exper-

Pictures of the Farr-Louis fight that were shown at the Palace last week-end merely proved that what the experts had already agreed upon. Farr had plenty of courtage but could not hit hard enough to break a window pane, while Louis, with those deadly rapier-like left jabs of his, had the Welshman coal miner's countenance badly butchered.

New Fall, Winter Washable Styles
Deceive Experts With Their Beauty

WEAR washable clothes all Fall and Winter!
That is the word from the style dictators, but it does not mean that the new fashions resemble the typical wash garments of summertime. Only the expert eye of the most clever shopper can detect that any of these new garments are washable. Cotton, for example, appears in forms from corduroy and twill to luxurious nubby fabrics, with French crepes, alpacas and even tweed effects and surprising reproductions of wools. But although they look like styles that cost many times the price of these, the new dresses can be kept fresh and spic-and-span by a quick trip to the household washing machine and a few moments of finishing on the family ironer.

The youthful, smart flowered crepe and the lovely spun rayon shown here, the latter with its cleverly contrasted stripes, horizontal in the blouse and vertical in the skirt, were exhibited at a recent style show that introduced the new fashions to store representatives from throughout the country. Both costumes, the spectators were told, can go into the household washer as successfully as the most unpretentious kitchen apron.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS
THE professor that was visiting with some of his friends, in San Francisco, was kinda proud of himself, so when the little girl asked him what kind of work he did, he said, "Why, I'm a geologist."
"That's funny," she says, "because I'd like to know what a geologist does for a living."
"Oh, I just carry a little hammer around with me and use it to crack open rocks."
"Now I know," says the kid. "I got an uncle that's a geologist. He got that way for killing a man. He'll be out in five years."

KNOW TEXAS

Tons of Honey

DENTON, Sept. 13. First in size and second in sweetness—that's Texas' place, since it ranks second in the United States in the production of honey. In the section around Uvalde from one to two million pounds of honey are brought to market annually. One reason for the successful production of honey in this state is that the climate, with a long summer season, is particularly well adapted. Another factor is the abundance of cotton blossoms, which are better than any other flowers in making honey.

Good Brain—Good Bite

"Most active and intelligent flea in the world" is the title belonging to the West Texas sand flea. Trainers in circuses and side shows in the northern states send messengers all the way down here to get this particular kind of flea, because they say it takes a shorter time to teach them tricks and they are longer lived. Those who have come in contact with the insect may wish to give it another title—the hardest biter.

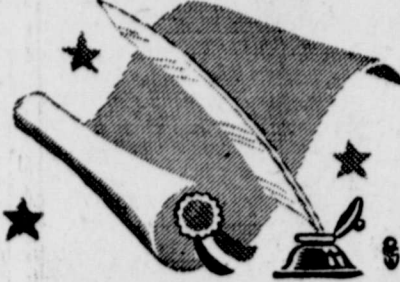

Common Clay

Texas clays are used in everything from pottery-making to road-building. Commercial refractory clays are sold for the manufacture of fibre brick terra cotta, floor tiles and art pottery. Coarser clays yield the common red-pressed brick, drain tile and earthenware. Two products are kaolin, utilized in the making of fine pottery, and earth for the deodorizing of oils. Many of the ordinary clays are used extensively for road-building.

Constitution DAY

Friday, September 17, is CONSTITUTION DAY! Beginning Sunday, September 12, is CONSTITUTION WEEK!

Lets Talk about Clothes

DENTON, Sept. 16. "Sunday-go-to-meeting" dresses this fall rival formal evening gowns in the number of smart touches and flattering new lines they employ. A much sleeker silhouette is favored than the fullness of last year would allow but skirts are still full enough for easy walking.

Typical of the dresses which will be worn for dates, picture shows, informal parties and the like is a little black silk crepe with the skirt fitting like a snake skin save for a bit of shirred fullness in front. Long, clinging sleeves are tucked slightly at the shoulder, and the simple vee-neckline is fashionably low.

Although Lady Style has turned her most approving smile upon black as high color this season, girls at Texas State College for Women with experimental ideas find that varied colors and materials can still be used advantageously. For instance, heliotrop-blue crepe forms a smart-looking draped number with the shapely new corset-fitting look around the waist.

Powdery blue velveteen is used for another dress in the modern mode, with a shirred ring extending from the waist to the hipline, thus holding the fullness of the skirt into straight lines.

Daring color combinations carry on the fight with conservatism that they started several years ago, and one sees rust and lavender, rust and turquoise, blue and fuchsia, blue and brown and gray and beige. Pink, so long in disfavor, is being reclaimed and put with certain tones of browns and grays.

As for materials, luxurious is the word. Those leading so far in Paris and other style centers are velveteen, satin-back crepe, sheer wool, moire and the easily-drapable jersey.

Mrs. R. Thomas and son Bobbie were Dallas visitors last week.

atives shall choose their speaker and other officers; and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

They're off! Champion homers starting in last May's derby from San Diego, Calif., to Toledo, Ohio, the longest race in the history of the sport. Percy Benbough (right), Mayor of San Diego, and Eddie Davis, President of the San Diego Club acted as starters. 100,000 persons are now racing pigeons according to the Saturday Evening Post.

PIGEON RACING COMES INTO ITS OWN WITH 100,000 ENTHUSIASTS IN U.S. A.

A not so new type of racing, seldom reported in the newspapers, is growing swiftly into a national sport of considerable proportions. It's one of America's most democratic games with one hundred thousand followers, each as partisan and as outspoken as any golf-addict who ever lived.

You don't read, about them but just the same the sport has its own Derbies, Futurities, and Pearknasses, not to mention races every Saturday from spring to fall with plenty of prize money and betting.

The racers ride the wind at 40 to 60 miles and cur over a course anywhere from one to hundred miles; brave a thousand and perils of hunters, winged and human, with all the never-say-die courage of a Man of War. Yes, they're homing pigeons and their story is told in "One Hundred Thousand Racing Stables," appearing in this week's Saturday Evening Post. Think of one race with 8,000 entries! That is one for Ripley, but not so strange to those who race homers. Last fall, 8,000 pigeons wheeled out of Charlottesville, Virginia, streaking it for lofts in New York City and vicinity. There's the Grand National Convention Race of the great Pittsburgh Center. Thousands of birds are released at Bellfontaine, Ohio, to speed to all points of the compass.

As the Post writer describes it, "The country is divided into sections and every bird races against time. Each bird is clocked on arrival in his home loft and his time is recorded in yards per second from Bellfontaine to the loft. There is a grand prize for the best bird, sectional prizes for those in fixed areas. This is the race for young birds, corresponding to the best two-year-old stakes for horses.

There are other classics, however, such as the Chattanooga Derby for full grown veterans. Pigeon racers have their own organizations, too. The American Racing Pigeon Union, which has passed out $115,000 in prize money since 1910, the American Homing Pigeon Fanciers and other regulate the racing. More than 1,200,000 birds raced in Union events in 1935.

A blue-blood aristocrat of pigeon racing has brought a price as high as $6,000 but the average pedigreed racer sells for from twenty to fifty dollars a head. Nevertheless, it's anything but a rich man's pastime. Any number of tenement lofts in New York City are thick with lofts. A pullman porter's Red Checker hen was a big money winner this season. On the other hand a millionaire of Chestnut Hill, a Philadelphia suburb is reported to have spent $75,000 on his loft. However, the Italian Shoe-shine boy with his chicken wire coop on the east side would do the same if he could.

Pigeon racing is not complicated. After the birds have hatched they are registered at the nearest racing club. An aluminum identification band is issued and slipped onto the leg of the pigeon which thus becomes a registered racer. The claw grow so that in a few weeks the band cannot be removed except by force. Later the birds are taken about a mile from the home loft and are released. These training flights continue for weeks, each time over a longer distance.

Eventually the best birds are shipped, say to Wilmington, Delaware, for their first real test. There is an entry charge of $1.25 for each bird. A quarter goes for shipping expenses and to the officials who liberate the racers, and the dollar goes into the pot for prize money. Before each race the owners have their clocks set and sealed at various clubs. As each bird finishes, a rubber band from one of its legs is dropped into a machine which stamps the time of arrival.

The heroism of pigeons used by American forces in the World War, has been told in stories about such famous homers as Old Mocker, President Wilson, Cher Ami and others. The same quality of high courage is demonstrated in almost every race.

The Pullman porter's Red Checker hen is an example. She was due in her loft on the afternoon of a big 300-mile race. Slower birds had come in, but not the red Checker hen which should have won. Hours later, she appeared limping in the air, her breast full of shot. Her owner, heartbroken, had to end her suffering. But she had finished her race!

Even in pigeon racing, as in other sports, the result is often decided by the "Old College try". One fancier, according to the Post, takes the mother bird out of the coop on the day before an important race. The male proudly takes over the responsibility of caring for the youngsters. When shipping time comes he is crated, presumably leaving his offspring orphaned.

JUST HUMANS

By GENE CARR

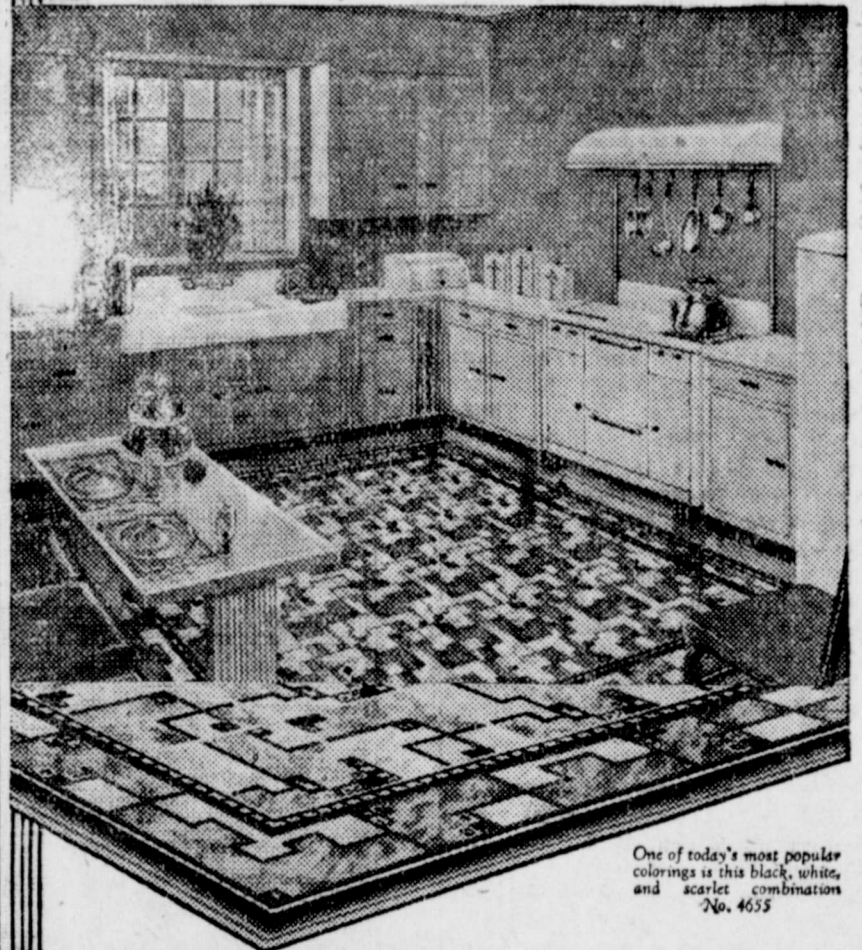

"Is It Nice to Smoke?"
"Is It Nice T'speak T'strange Men?"

Of course, the mother is replaced after his departure. The result is just what you might expect. The racer, when released at the start of the race, calls upon all his reserves to light out for home and kiddies as quickly as his wings can carry him.

The owner has even put a strange cock in the coop just before shipping time. That makes a feathered triangle that brings the bird whistling home with blood in his eye—and in racing a pigeon that may mean a winner.

SAMUEL GOLDWYN presents
Stella Dallas

 Directed by KING VIDOR

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:
 Stephen Dallas met Stella, after he discovered that the girl he had left behind, Helen Dane, had married in his absence. Dallas was the son of a wealthy family, but his father committed suicide after sudden reserves. Stephen, after many futile efforts, found success. Stella was the daughter of a millworker, lovely in appearance, but with a hard streak of selfishness, little capacity for self-improvement. Laurel is born to Stephen and Stella after a year of marriage. Stephen argues with Stella over the attentions of Ed Munn, a racing tipster. When she protests, he leaves her to take a job in New York. He returns on one of his many trips to see the baby to discover Stella carousing with her brother and Ed Munn. Stephen threatens to take the child away, but finds himself unable to withstand the fury of her protest.

Chapter Three
 Stephen prospered rapidly as he found his place in the business world, but the breach between him and Stella never healed. They remained married, but he saw her seldom, and then only because she insisted on keeping Laurel. For years he was utterly lonely. Then occurred the meeting which changed the course of things for him. He had been buying a present for can run me into town. I have to get some favors and things for the party."

 His car wasn't, Ed admitted, but he would take her in on the train. He promised to meet her downstairs after he had retired to the corner for refreshments.
 On the train, Stella discovered that Ed had brought a bottle of "refreshments". He surreptitiously poured some into her paper cup. He was in a more than usually jovial mood. Peering at a newspaper over the shoulder of the man ahead of him, he suddenly uttered a whoop. "My horse has come in! I've won a hundred and fifty thousand!" he shouted, and started to cavort in the aisles.
 Stella watched his antics with a quizzical eye. He insisted on shaking hands with everybody in the car. Then he returned to their seat still feigning joy, but quickly revealing to her a box with the label, "itching powder" printed on the cover. When she saw the other occupants of the car scratching their hands furtively at first, then with vigor, she could hardly repress her laughter.
 "Don't laugh," he whispered, hardly able to contain his own merriment. "They'll kill me!"
 With a handkerchief over her mouth to stifle her laughter, she got up and weaved her way with the train's motion to the next car. There she gave way to her impulses with gales of shrieking, uncontrolled laughter. Ed joined her. "How could you keep such a straight face?" she gasped.

"How could you keep such a straight face!" she gasped.

Laurel's birthday. "Thank you, Mr. Dallas," the clerk said briskly.
 "Stephen!" he heard someone speak his name in amazement. He turned and saw Helen. "Stephen, what are you doing here?" she said, her joy at the meeting apparent in her face. Three handsome, serious little boys, ranging from about six to twelve, watched her with discreet curiosity.
 There was a swift, excited exchange of news between Stephen and Helen. He thought her lovelier than ever as she introduced her three little sons. Stephen gravely accepted the invitation of the eldest, Cornelius, named after his father, now dead, to join them at lunch. Cornelius had been saving for this treat, but he confided to Stephen that he was worried about not having saved enough. Stephen won his eternal friendship by whispering, "If you run short, I can lend you a couple of dollars."
 Miles away, Stella, with mind and heart focussed on the same birthday, was feverishly completing a dress for Laurel, her present. When she heard Laurel entering, she hurriedly hid it.
 Laurel, now a big girl in her teens, with grave, lovely eyes, was bubbling over with news. Her teacher, Miss Phillibrown, had come home with her. She had a request to make of Stella.
 Miss Phillibrown's request was simple. She confided to Stella that she too adored Laurel. Would her mother give her permission to spend a week-end in Boston with Miss Phillibrown? Stella consented and Laurel threw her arms about her teacher's neck in sheer delight.
 Miss Phillibrown had hardly left when Ed Munn came blustering in. Laurel had found the dress, had tried it on, and Ed caught her partially disrobed.
 He treated it as a huge joke, but her mother could see that she was horribly embarrassed. "Your car downstairs?" she asked him. "You

He laughed with her. He poured her a drink from the bottle. Everybody in the car turned to watch their joviality, but they were oblivious. Stella did not see the startled gaze in the face of Miss Phillibrown, seated across the aisle. She never even saw Miss Phillibrown.
 "Laurel is such a lovely child, I — I don't know what to think," the teacher finally said to her companion.
 The other woman's lips closed in a grim line. "Do you know my Mary Ann has been asked to Laurel's party?" Then after a moment's pause she gathered the whole of her contempt in one glance at the merrymakers. "Such women," she said firmly, "don't deserve to have children."
 The table glistened with freshly polished silver; cake and favors and bonbons made it a riot of luscious color.
 "Do I look all right?" Stella asked Gladys, their colored cook. "It's the first time any of her friends have seen me, and she's tellin' them how beautiful I am."
 Gladys was quick with assurance, Laurel entered the room and paused, rapt with amazement. "Mother," she pealed, "How did you ever do it!..."
 Mother and daughter chattered happily over the wonderland of the table. The bell rang, Laurel started for the door, but Stella checked her. They heard voices in the hallway, then Gladys shuffled back to extend a package to Laura.
 "A present," her mother said, "Don't open it," but the child had already opened the note accompanying it.
 Stella was quick to see the dismay in her face. "It's from Mrs. Brewster," she said. "Doris and Virginia can't come."

Will Rogers' Humorous Story
 By WILL ROGERS
 EVERYBODY in Maryland knows his Havre de Grace. Most all the natives bet on horses and everybody is interested in races. A young fellow down there that kind of made a living following the horses decided to have his mother come down and see the town and take her to the races, so he wrote her. At the finish of the letter he said, "Bring something to put on the horses." Well, the Mother came and they went out to the races and he noticed she had a parcel she was carrying, and he asked her what it was. She said, "Well, it's an old eiderdown blanket we had there. It's the only thing I could find to put on the horses. I hope it's not too shabby and you won't be ashamed of it."

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

ANIMAL AND PET PICTURES

The very fact that animals and pets don't pose makes them ideal photographic subjects.

FROM household pets to giants of the jungles—animals are ideal subjects for snapshooters. They don't pose; they don't act. You can snap them in natural, undirected action and that is just the reason their pictures create so much interest.

To get good pictures of any animal the first essential is patience. It is quite possible that the family dog will stand up obligingly for you on command, but in picturing all other animals you'll find it necessary to wait for the picture you want.

And this brings us to the question—what do you want in an animal picture?

You may prefer to snap a kitten as it plays with a string or a dog wrestling with a stick.

Domestic animals, of course, offer few real camera difficulties, for you can get them to come where the light is right. A shade, on a bright day, will be found best. As for shutter speed (if your camera has variable speeds) you'll need 1/25th of a second or faster, to catch fleeting poses and expressions. Unless the light is exceptional, better work with the lens wide open.

To snap less controllable animals—squirrels, birds, and such—you'll need greater patience and cunning. Much depends on background and on your distance from a subject. At more than ten feet, for example, a squirrel becomes almost invisible UNLESS it is sharply revealed on a branch, with the sky for background. Obviously, you'll need to use a fast shutter; squirrels move too swiftly for slow snaps.

The zoo can be a happy hunting ground, too. In many cases, you'll be able to shoot through or over the bars of cages, obtaining clear, unobstructed snaps.

Use a modern, color sensitive film. You'll need all the detail you can get and the utmost in color value rendering.

Uncle Jim Says

Title: "Plowing under crops like hairy vetch, clovers, and cowpeas is like having a fertilizer factory on your farm."

Legend: The farmer who plants legumes establishes a fertilizer factory on his farm. Legumes take nitrogen from the air and make it available in the soil for the use of subsequent crops. By turning under legumes as green manure, the farmer adds valuable humus in addition to the stored nitrogen.

Texas farmers have not been slow to take advantage of the terms of the Agricultural Conservation Program, which provides for payments to farmers for planting soil building crops. The past year saw 1,777,668 acres of legumes planted in the State, while 3,819,329 acres were devoted to other soil conserving crops and practices.

Blizzards are caused by the sudden appearance of cold air from a region of high barometric pressure in one of low pressure and warm air.

Stately lines of palm trees will be a decorative note at the 1939 World's Fair on San Francisco Bay.
