1400 SHEEP MOVE TO COUNTY IN 4-DAY WALKATHON

Fourteen hundred sheep, moving to better grass, and of course, in Coryell county, came down the road from Pidoke Sunday, heading for the Stuart Williams Ranch from one of Dr. H. R. Gaddy's Ranches near Killeen Pilot Knob Ranch.

Drivers with the herd, or is it flock, said they would spend the night at the Voss Ranch, and had been three and a half or four days making the trip from Belton, and were moving in here for better grass.

This is the second drive that has been made into this county the first one being larger than this one.

Along with the three or four men was a truck which was used to pick up the stragglers, and youngsters, one or two of which were born enroute.

County Agent Outlines Cotton Loan Payments

Questions are being asked regarding the 9-cent cotton loan and the "12-cent subsidy" payments, according to Guy Powell, County Agent, and the following information comes from that office:

9c Loans

Cotton loans, it is understood, will be handled thru lending agencies who care to handle such matters. Supplies will be furnished at an early date. It is not required that you have a 9 cent loan in order to receive the subsidy payment. However, those who desire to secure the 9 cent loan may also receive the 12c subsidy payment on sale of cotton and application for payment prior to July 1, 1938. It will be necessary for the producer to participate in the 1938 program in order to receive a 9 cent loan.

12 Cent Subsidy Payment

Producer or seller should obtain from the buyer a signed sales receipt of each respective sale, properly dated and signed upon condition of each sale. This receipt is retained by the producer an later presented thru the County Agents office as bona fide evidence of production and sale. All receipts are to be held by the producer until called for, and notices will be issued as soon as sales receipts are received.

Price or subsidy payment, which the producer may expect will be based in the difference between the average of the of the ten spot markets and 12c on the date of sale on 7-8ths inch staple middling basis. The subsidy is not to exceed 3c pure and also not to exceed 65 per cent of the producer's allowed base production. The 12c subsidy payment will be made after proof of compliance of the 1938 program.

Example: Farmer Jones has a 100-acre cotton base with an assigned yield of 100 pounds per acre, which would make a 10,000 pound base production. Farmer Jones would be entitled to receive subsidy payment on 65 per cent of the base production, which would make him entitled to receive the subsidy payment on not to exceed 6500 pounds of the 1937 crop.

Although information is very meager, Horace K. Jackson, Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce said yesterday, there would be a meeting in Austin Monday, 20th, on both Highway 36 and also the proposed Ft. Worth-Dallas to Austin highway which is tentatively proposed to pass thru Coryell county.

Mr. Jackson, our sole informant, stated that the general public was urged to make the trip to Austin, and all who could should be on the West side of the Court house at 7 a.m. Monday morning, with their cars if possible.

The reason for leaving Gatesville so early is due to the fact that the Highway 36 Association, which includes Coryell County, will be No. 6 on the Highway Commission Docket, and the Fort Worth-Austin delegation is billed as No. 3, so is very important for the Gatesville delegation to leave early for Austin.

Besides County Judge Floyd Zeigler who is one of the principal highway workers of the county, the Chamber of Commerce committee includes Louis Thomas and Lewis Holmes.

It is very urgent that interest be taken in these two highways and a large delegation be present to have their weight in the promulgation of these highways. A large body of men impressed the commission and showed them the interest in the community represented.

Mary Won't Drink Milk

By Betty Crocker

THE following remarks may be heard in almost any gathering made up of mothers of young children: "Mary simply won't drink milk," says one; "I cannot persuade Bobby to touch oatmeal," "I have tried and tried, but Susie refuses to eat spinach."

If the child is healthy and well and yet refuses the food he should eat, there is undoubtedly some reason for his refusal. It may be hard to discover the cause, but it will simplify the matter of applying a remedy if you can do so.

Did you ever analyze your own likes and dislikes with a view to finding out why you don't like rhubarb or cabbage or prunes or whatever it is that you particularly dislike? Try it on yourself and then try to discover the reason for Mary's dislike for milk, or why Susie refuses spinach.

Poor cooking is responsible for much of the prevalent dislike of vegetables. If a child is fed soggy cabbage and watery turnips, he naturally acquires a dislike for those vegetables. An adult can add butter and seasonings to improve the taste of a food. The child's only alternative is to refuse them.

My neighbor's little John became very ill from drinking milk which had been slightly tainted. Naturally since that time John has no craving for milk, the one food he needs most. In that case a visit to a lunch room where many men eat may persuade the little chap to change his mind.

He could not fall to be impressed if his attention were called to the number of men drinking milk.

One mother of my acquaintance takes pride in the fact that her son is "different." Donald, who was a healthy little two year old, was not aware of any likes or dislikes until his mother constantly remarked in his presence that "Donald won't eat this" and "Donald won't eat that" until naturally Donald "won't" and "doesn't." Many such apparently trivial things are the causes of likes and dislikes for good food.

To the busy mother, the fact that her child learns to dislike one food may not seem to be of any consequence, but the results of such a prejudice are most important. For instance, if Susie dislikes spinach, and from that acquires a notion that she dislikes all green vegetables—the chances are that Susie will secure very little iron in her diet. Iron is necessary for good red blood, and red blood is very essential for general good health. If Susie is allowed to discard the iron containing foods for some period of time, she will become anemic and have so little resistance that she will be an easy victim to every disease "going the rounds."

Suppose Mary refuses milk. Milk is the only food rich in lime. Lime is an essential building material for strong, hard teeth and bones. The little Marys who do not drink milk often have sprained ankles, and dislocated bones or bad teeth causing much suffering and many dentist's bills as a result of the insufficiency of lime in the diet. Furthermore, children who do not drink milk are usually laggards at school.

EROSION MUST BE STOPPED, LAND RESTORED CONGRESSMAN POAGE DECLARES

(By Bill McIntosh in Temple Telegram)

National Problem

"You not only have to stop the processes which have destroyed your land, but you have got to undertake a long-time program of restoring the land that's left."

With this statement Cong. W. R. (Bob) Poage of Waco sounded the keynote of Monday's permanent organization meeting of the Texas Agricultural association.

"Six Inches Of Topsoil"

"We are prone to talk of great natural resources of oil and gas and sulphur. Those are but transitory resources. Our greatest wealth in natural resources is in the six inches of top soil and the water which flows underground beneath that topsoil."

"Until great dust storms came and reached into the cities until the Ohio river flooded its great valley, until the Mississippi washed over its levees, people failed to realize the futility of the policies we have been pursuing, or rather, the lack of policy."

"Soil conservation is not a problem of the individual or of a few counties or the State of Texas. It is a national problem. Your state and federal government have got to help. In Congress we only ask that the individual and localities bear their share."

"This problem only can be delt with efficiently by a united force."

Other speakers on the program, E. R. Alexander, head of the vocational education department at A. and M. college, H. G. Lucas of Brownwood, president of the new association, and Edward Clark, Texas secretary of State, joined in Congressman Poage's plea for erosion control rebuilding of the land.

Interest At Temple

"We don't need to see gullies to see that our land is going," Poage said. "Sheet erosion, more insidious than the mere spectacular wind and water erosion, is evident around farm house, after farm house. Notice on house supports how the level of the land has fallen. Our so called 'level land', not needing control measures is a joke."

"We must do something like what is being done in Temple. There is greater interest in Temple in Soil conservation than in any other urban territory I know of in the United States"

Mr. Alexander said "this meeting is one of the most significant events in the history of agriculture in Texas."

"Erosion Of People"

"Two things have impressed me most today. One was a talk, cut in the Elm creek watershed, with a farmer who has been reclaiming just as his land has been. I saw proof of the saying that 'Man goes down with the soil.' Erosion of the soil means erosion of the people."

"The other is the fact that a group of farmers have come together, and have been joined by agriculturalists from over the state, to reach a decision, by the farmers, on what ought to be done."

"Something Is Wrong"

Mr. Lucas, comparing Texas average production per acre of 150 pounds as compared with 250 in other Southern States, said "there is no longer any question but that something is wrong."

"Now that the attention of all agricultural groups has been centered on the question of soil conservation, it is now up to us, as farmers, to do our share."

Mr. Marshall called attention to the wide representation at the meeting as evidence of the state wide interest in the problems of the Soil Conservation association is attracting, and asked for consideration for future generations.

State health departments in several states now designate suitable areas as being free of pollen that causes hay fever.

Portable generating units are now available for carrying temporary loads in electrical systems.

The stings of bees, if sufficiently numerous often are fatal.

IS IT THE ALPS? HOG CALLING, OR TARZEN

Late Wednesday evening, or afternoon (it was close to six) we heard one of the carryingist voices in these parts.

From a position in South Gatesville; we heard this party, probably calling old Betsy for some good milk but it reminded us of a yodel we would have heard in the Alps, if we'd ever been there. Tarzen, or a Kansas hog calling contest.

Anyway, whoever owned that pair of lungs has no business in Sanitorium, Texas or Denver, Colorado. He had em!

"WALLIS BLUE"—NEW FASHION SENSATION

Eyes That Changed Fate Of a Monarch Strike Keynote For Gowns And Makeup

ANOTHER pair of eyes sways the destiny of a nation and thousands of women the world over wear a new color—"Wallis blue!" The new blue is an unusual, clear shade, exactly the color of Mrs. Warfield Simpson's famous eyes. Fashion authorities say it is excitingly different from other blues, and the House of Mainbocher, which created her trousseau, admit dyeing the crepe four times for her wedding gown before they could match the shade.

In selecting a trousseau which is notable for its exquisite simplicity and chic, Mrs. Simpson chose blue as the keynote for the whole collection. In this respect she has followed the tradition of beautiful women through the centuries. Eyes are the most distinguished feature of all lovely women, since they are their one true personality color. Naturally, it follows that colors keyed to their eyes are those which enhance their beauty and charm.

A going away suit which is tailor-made with long skirt in light royal blue and blue and white printed blouse to match; flower-printed evening dresses with tailored jackets—some in the new short length; a tea-gown of lamé and a striking coat of silk and satins are notable frocks in the wardrobe of the new Duchess. However, the wedding gown is the only garment in "Wallis blue."

that she be married in a gown which exactly matched the eyes that fascinated him. His American bride, with equal sentiment, wished to wear this specially created color for the first time on her wedding day.

The color choice of the future Duchess of Windsor has placed an accolade on a trend being followed more and more enthusiastically by smart French designers; namely, to emphasize a woman's natural coloring by keying her wardrobe to her eye-color.

Many American women prefer more color variety in their costumes. They will do well, however, to follow this bit of high-fashion wisdom in their makeup, since makeup is so fundamental a problem that, if it is right, a woman can wear any shade, no matter how subtle.

Eye types fall into four major groups—brown, blue, gray and hazel. By choosing makeup keyed to her eye-color a brown-eyed woman an is assured of the warm tones that will prove most flattering to her type—a blue-eyed woman of the soft, cool pastel shades that are her true personality colors.

So, though this intriguing new "Wallis blue" is the special prerogative this summer of blue-eyed women, even those of us who are brown-eyed, if we are skillful enough in choosing our makeup, may accent our summer wardrobes with a dress or two in the color that matches the eyes of the most glamorous of modern women: the Duchess of Windsor!

Oil Industry Celebrates An Anniversary

The world's first oil well comes in with the first gusher! That dramatic moment in history is re-enacted in this scene from the thrilling motion picture, "High, Wide and Handsome." The derrick shown above is an exact replica of the original. (Inset) Irene Dunne and Randolph Scott, the stars of the Paramount saga of the discovery of oil and the building of the first pipe-line.

By LATTIMER SHAW

THE oil industry—the industry that introduced the Machine Age and changed the course of civilization—was born 78 years ago at a small farm in Titusville, Pa.

It was August 29, 1859. Colonel E. L. Drake, a railroad conductor who held the title of "colonel" only by courtesy, stood gazing at the shaky pyramid of timbers he had built on the banks of Oil Creek. The derisive hoots of his neighbors were ringing in his ears.

Suddenly from the shadow of this primitive derrick, a bearded giant burst forth. He was Uncle Billy Smith, blacksmith and welder, who had cast his lot with the visionary Drake.

Uncle Billy, trembling with excitement, grabbed Drake and led him to the mouth of the pipe shaft. The pump began working. Then . . . liquid, dark and thick, gushed from the earth.

"There, Colonel," cried Uncle Billy, "is your fortune."

The true source of petroleum had been found. A new epoch in history had begun. The fantastic boom that followed soon led to a violent conflict between oil-drilling farmers in Western Pennsylvania and powerful transportation interests seeking to wrest control of the industry from them.

The farmers fought back. With their enemies battling them viciously at every turn, they built the world's first oil pipe-line to carry the oil from the rich Pennsylvania fields across the mountains to tide water at Bayonne, N. J. These pioneers were the founders of Tide Water Associated Oil Company and their historic pipe-line laid in 1878 is still carrying the world's costliest crude, the crude that is used to make Veedol motor oil and Tydol gasolines.

The discovery of oil at Titusville and the exciting struggle over the building of the pipe-line is depicted in dramatic fashion in Paramount's new thrilling motion picture, "High, Wide and Handsome" which scored a smashing hit as one of the most stirring screen plays in years on its recent opening at the Astor Theatre, New York.

Written by Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein II and filmed with a cast of several thousand, "High, Wide and Handsome" will be shown throughout the country in the next 11 months.

Randolph Scott, playing opposite lovely Irene Dunne, is cast as a Pennsylvania farmer experimenting with the first oil well which was reconstructed by Paramount in exact detail. Scott leads the oil-drilling farmers in their battle with the railroads—a conflict packed with rousing action scenes highlighted by hand-to-hand pitched battles between hired ruffians and the Tide Water pipe line workers struggling to bring the world's finest oil to the refinery at the lowest cost.

Critics have been unanimous in praise of the new picture soon to begin its tour around the world.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

IT'S FAIR TIME

It's Fair time! Take your camera with you.

SEPTEMBER is fair time and I'll wager that mighty few of you have given any thought to this angle of snapshooting. Right? Honestly, the county or state fair offers more possibilities for snapshooting than space will permit telling about. There's the side-show band with its battered instruments letting forth loud blasts of discordant music. And there are the not so clean-looking vendors of dolls, trick gadgets, balloons and various other things of questionable value. Everywhere you turn is a subject for good human interest pictures.

But let's look toward the more serious side of the fair—the exhibits, for instance. By making intelligent use of your camera you can snap record pictures that may later prove invaluable. Then there is the judging of cattle, sheep, horses and hogs. If the judging is done in an open-air ring you can get the picture of the winner of the blue ribbon with any camera—box type or folding.

In taking such pictures, or any picture, as far as that is concerned, don't just look in the finder and snap the first thing you see. If the animal being judged has any unusual markings, manage to get to a place near the ring where these markings show at the best in rear backgrounds such as telephone poles, wires or sheds.

Among the innumerable picture possibilities at the fair you will surely want to take some action pictures and a fair isn't complete without the thrill of horse racing whether they feature the veteran driver proudly seated in his sulky or the young, dare-devil jockey.

Snap a picture of the start of the race as the drivers or jockeys maneuver their horses to the barrier or starting post and by all means take your position at the turn of the track as the horses dash perilously around the curve and into the "home stretch."

Remember this, however. If you do not have a camera with a very fast shutter, say one that will operate at 1/500 of a second or faster, don't try to snap a rapidly moving object as it whizzes directly across the lens of the camera or direct line of vision. Your chance of getting a good, sharp picture is much greater if you catch your subject at an angle of about 45 degrees. It's always better to play safe than to take a chance and perhaps get a blurred picture. Load your camera and take along plenty of extra film on that essential day when you are "off to the fair."

Picnics Can Be Different!

By Mary Talbot

"LET'S have a picnic!" There's a suggestion to capture the imagination of everyone from six to sixty! There are few of us who are not alive to the adventure of the open road, and fewer still who won't admit that food never tastes so good as it does right outdoors.

Objections always arise, nevertheless. Mother thinks of the trouble it is to make sandwiches. Dad complains that sandwiches don't make any kind of a meal for menfolks. So why not plan a surprise for the family, a real camper's picnic without a sandwich in the basket!

Pack up a gay assortment of paper plates, cups and spoons. Put in plenty of your favorite fruit for dessert. Don't forget little envelopes of salt, pepper and sugar, either, because seasoning's the sort of thing that's always forgotten at the last moment. You'll need a stew-pan, a big spoon and some sort of utensil for mixing (a large paper cup will do). Next, put a can of a vegetable-beef soup in your basket (we're planning for four people) and an envelope containing one cup of ready-prepared biscuit flour. You're going to need either milk or water, so why not take enough milk for everyone. What better beverage is there to quench an open-air thirst?

When you are ready to prepare supper, ask the men in the party to build a fire. Pour the soup into the saucepan and heat for a few minutes. While the soup is warming, mix the biscuit flour with six tablespoonfuls of either milk or water. Then drop the flour mixture on the soup in spoonfuls. Cover the pan and cook for fifteen or twenty minutes—just time for a chat by the camp-fire.

There you are with a real honest-to-goodness picnic surprise—an old-fashioned stew!

And now here's a hint I left to the last on purpose....don't forget the can-opener!

New Idea for Mid-Meal Snack

Simple Treat, Kept in Car, Saves Wear and Tear on Grown-ups

"MOM, I wanta drink".... "How about a soda, Mom?".... "Mom, I'm hungry!" If you've a couple of youngsters under nine, those words won't be strangers to your ears; especially if you like to entertain them with motoring on summer afternoons.

The best way we know to meet the emergency of hungry little stomachs between meals is to stock up a private snack-shelf in the dashboard compartment of your car. Here's a practical suggestion for a treat that will take up the very minimum of space: a big box of toasted whole wheat flakes like wheaties. They're wholesome, satisfy a whim for something to nibble on, yet don't spoil dinner appetites. Better yet, they satisfy that deep-down instinct we all have to reach into a box and pull out something good to eat.

You might keep a small shaker of sugar for someone with a sweet tooth to sprinkle on the flakes and a package of mints to top off the afternoon snack. The children will be delighted and you won't have to keep a weather eye peeled for popcorn stands and ice-cream wagons!

"EVER SINCE EVE" IS BOOKED FOR REGAL

Two stars of immense popularity, and of well deserved top rank among comedy players, come to the Regal Theatre next Saturday night at 10:30 also Sun & Mon. in "Ever Since Eve" the cosmopolitan production which has its local premiere there.

They are Marion Davies, the lovely blonde comedienne, and Robert Montgomery, the deonair youth who has been leading man in so many gay movies.

Miss Davies and Montgomery are co-starred in what is described as the liveliest, fastest-moving farce either has played in for a long time.

Miss Davies plays the part of a stenographer who has been so harassed by employers because of her golden-haired beauty that she disguises herself with a dark wig and glasses and goes looking for another job.

Montgomery is a novelist who is crazy about blondes, but is forced to accept this seeming brunette forced upon him by his hard-boiled woman publisher who wants him to keep his mind on his work.

He is therefore strictly business during working hours, with Marion there, but it chances that he meets her socially, one evening, when she's not disguised.

Besides the two stars, "Ever Since Eve", has a cast including such experts as Patsy Kelly, Frank McHugh, Louise Fazenda, Allen Jenkins, and Carl Hughes.

Fifteen Speed Boats Expected in Great International Gold Cup Race On Labor Day

By LATTIMER SHAW

THE United States will be invaded this summer and the invasion will sound like a regular battle, machine guns and all.

It will be a sports invasion. The noise of it will come from the roar of high speed engines, totalling 7,000 horsepower or more, in $250,000 worth of 90-mile-an-hour racing motor boats participating in America's oldest and most glamorous marine speed contest, the Gold Cup race. This year the 90-mile blue ribbon motor boat event will take place at Detroit on Labor Day, September 6. Thrown open for the first time in 33 years to foreign boats and drivers it will be the most spectacular international motor boat race ever held, with two from Italy, three from France, one from England and one from Canada competing against a possible ten of the finest American speed craft driven by George Reis, Horace Dodge, Victor Kliesrath, Bill Horn, Frithiof Ericson and other veteran Yankee pilots.

The foreign invasion will be led by the young and personable Count Theo Rossi of Italy. An officer in the Italian Army, Count Rossi is not only the leading motor boat sportsman of Europe, having created and raced 22 high power speed boats during the past ten years, several of them to world's records, but he is also one of the most successful industrial figures in his country, as Europe's vermouth king, being head of the great Martini and Rossi vermouth company, known all over the world. Count Rossi's other boat will be driven by Guido Cattaneo, engineering officer of the famous Isotta-Fraschini Motor Company, and world record holder in the 12-liter Gold Cup class at 85.51 miles an hour.

Three new French speed creations will be brought over by Maurice Vasseur, Emile Piquerez and J. Dintilhac, all wealthy and experienced devotees of marine speed. The boat from Canada will be Miss Canada II, the new craft of E. A. Wilson, of Ingersoll, Ont., with a new 12 cylinder, 450 hp. supercharged Miller motor. The British boat will be Delphine IX, with a supercharged Miller motor, owned and driven by Horace Dodge, whose other boat, Impshi, present holder of the Gold Cup, will be driven by the veteran Commodore Ericson.

A crowd of more than 500,000 people is expected to witness this thrilling international speed contest which will undoubtedly be the high spot of our greatest marine racing season.

Glenn Martin Made "Better Kites" When He Was Only Six

GLENN MARTIN MADE BETTER "KITE" WHEN HE WAS SIX

Glenn Martin, last of the aviation pioneers still active in flying, builder of the famous Pacific Clippers and a super-Clipper for projected Atlantic service, began his career at the age of six by building and selling better kites than had ever before been seen around his home town of Liberal, Kansas.

In fact, it might be said that Martin began at a much more tender age. In the current Saturday Evening Post, Forrest Davis tells how Glenn, at three, rigged up a sail on his little red express wagon and rattled up and down Liberal's sun-baked dirt streets. Only a year or two afterward he made his own ice skates and, with an improvised sail, skimmed over the ice of a nearby pond. He also provided his safety bicycle, with a sale. The airplane builder himself says: I cannot remember when I was not fascinated by sailing surfaces.

Mother's Dream "Sign" of His Future

Even before he saw the light of day, Martin was destined to find his life-work in the air. Two days before his birth in 1886, when the possibility of human flight was a speculation fit only for mockery, Martin's mother awoke suddenly from a dream. She had imagined herself flying effortlessly, buoyed up by shiny wings, looking down on the open-mouthed faces of relatives and neighbors.

As Mr. Davis puts it, "Mrs. Martin is too hard-headed a Presbyterian for apocalyptic high jinks". However, it was natural that she should regard that dream as a "sign" affecting her unborn child. In the years that followed it exerted a considerable influence on both mother and son. While Glenn was still a child it was his mother who read him magazine articles about the aviation theories of Samuel P. Langley of the Smithsonian Institution. Later, when he built his first airplane, his mother held a kerosene lamp for hours at a time in her son's workshop as he labored over some particularly delicate operation. "Mother", he declares, "had a big hand in building the plane".

Martin Spurred By Wrights' Success

There were more to Martin's apprenticeship in airplane building than making kites. The Post writer relates that when the Martin family moved from Liberal to Salina, the nine year old boy became interested in farm machinery and electricity. He was enthusiastic about hunting ducks and prairie chickens and learned much about flying from watching birds.

Glenn had a job in a bicycle shop during high school vacations. He became an automobile mechanic when his employer, Dave Methven brought the first car to Salina in 1903. The same year the Wrights, unheralded and unnoticed by the newspapers rose from the dunes at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina. Word of the Wrights' achievement did not reach the world until early in 1905, more than a year later.

The momentous news, Mr. Davis says, sent Glenn scurrying home. "I'm going to fly, too," he declared in a manner his mother recalls as having been entirely self assured. He was nineteen. "Of course you will", replied his wise parent. A few days later Glenn saw pictures of the Wright biplane. "It's like one of my kites with an engine in it, he confided to Mrs. Martin. She agreed.

In another year the Martins were settled in Santa Anna, California. Martin now had a successful garage with the agency for Ford and Maxwell cars. He had no time for courting girls or for sports and some of the local bloods made comments to the effect that Martin was a sissy. In reality Glenn had time for nothing but his passion to fly. He was building and flying gliders because he had decided he must glide before he could fly. His father fumed and the townfolk dubbed his "Darius".

The Dream Came True

But Martin built his first airplane in 1908 when he was twenty-two. He rented the idle Southern Church near his garage and made his own plans adapting principles in a book on bridge construction. His raw materials were fine spruce, bamboo and muslin. He made his own propeller and installed a four cylinder, twelve horsepower Ford Model N engine. The finished plane cost $3,000 and took thirteen months to build—the most enjoyable months of his life, according to Mr. Martin.

On August 1, 1909, he flew. He had moved his plane from the church building to the testing ground in the dead night before to avoid the annoyance of scaffolds and the curious. His ship had gone a few feet in the from a flat take-off. The Wright planes were launched from starting towers until the same year. Today Martin is still pioneering. With the conquest of the Pacific behind him, he will soon be taking the Atlantic in stride.

MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE ERECTS NEW BUILDING

New Moody Bible Institute Administration Building now being erected in Chicago.

CHICAGO—The "West Point of Christian Service," the name by which The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago is known throughout the world, is to have a new twelve-story administration building, according to an announcement by Dr. Will H. Houghton, President. He said, "The new Administration Building will make possible the bringing together of the administrative activities of the Institute, now widely scattered among our thirty-eight buildings, thus making for efficiency and economy of operation. It is fitting in this year of international commemoration of the birth of Dwight L. Moody, founder of the Institute, that such a building should be erected from which the world wide activities of the Institute will be directed."

The building is to be located on LaSalle Street, just north of Chicago Avenue. Construction has already begun. To make way for the new building, the nine old three-story buildings that occupied the site have been torn down.

The building, designed by Thelbar and Fugard, Architects, will be brick, trimmed with Bedford stone, and will be architecturally attractive, though simplicity of design and maximum use of available floor space will make for economy both in the cost of erecting and maintaining.

Plans for the building provide for modern lecture halls, a spacious library, offices for the business staff and faculty, and reception halls. A completely equipped printing plant will occupy part of the basement area, another section of which will be devoted to additional dining room space. Radio Station W-M-B-I will occupy the top three floors for its studios, control room, and visitors gallery.

The building will cost approximately $600,000, and is being made possible through gifts of Christian friends throughout the world.

Through fifty years the Moody Bible Institute, founded by D. L. Moody to meet the need for Bible trained workers, has steadfastly adhered to the purposes for which it was begun. Today it stands out conspicuously among the thousands of educational and training institutions of the world.

During the past school year, there were 1,200 enrollments in the Day School, more than 1,500 in the Evening School, and 10,000 in the Correspondence School and Radio School. More than 2,000 Institute students have gone out as missionaries to some 70 countries under 72 different missionary boards and societies. Twelve have died as martyrs to the cause of Christian missions, among whom were John and Betty Stam, slain by Chinese Communists in December, 1934.

WORLD COMMENT

Joe Burns

The political prestige of many potent figures went crashing into oblivion from the storm of battle at the last session of Congress. Supreme Court wages, and hours, government reorganization, and sugar control legislation took their toll among legislators and among executives of the new deal. Echoing the general disapproval of the legislature program of Mr. Roosevelt's first session of his second administration, most of the political casualties came from among the chief executive's followers on Capitol Hill.

That the political stature of those figures who locked much of the new deal program in Congress was increased in not a political phenomenon. Instead, it is an old characteristic for American legislators and statesmen in general to become famous by fusturating the wild schemes of idealistic executives. Witness William E. Barah, the late Henry Cabot Lodge, the late Ebb La Follette, the Senior, who were or are known not because of their party loyalty but because they sought for issues and often stepped outside the party ranks in order to carry on their legislative battles.

As Major Clark Howell in the Atlantic Constitution points out the Southern and Western members of Congress who were responsible for the defeat of much of the President's program at the last session find themselves ostracized by the administration and threatened with expulsion from the party standing for issues which the Democratic party has supported for 150 years, namely, states rights, the protection of minorities, upholding the Constitution even at the cost of abandonment of party pledges.

No Statesman in Washington more firmly believes in adherence to the traditional Democratic doctrines of the past and to the Democratic platforms of 1932 and 1936 than does John Nance Garner, Vice-President of the United States.

Like many more of us, the Vice-President supported many Roosevelt measures from 1932 to 1936 with his tongue in his cheek, believing that radical measures were needed to cope with the economic and social crisis of that period. But the Vice-President consented to run again last year and to support the re-election of the national Democratic ticket with understanding and assurance of administration chieftains that the country would be given a breathing spell from such legislation and policies as characterized the first Roosevelt administration. The relief rolls were to be reduced and the relief burden placed upon the states municipalities; government expenses were to be cut in all fields except national defense, and the budget was to be balanced; the national debt was to be reduced so that public funds could again be released when and if economic chaos rocked the nation; business and finance were to be permitted to enjoy the fruits of the incoming wave of prosperity and surplus profits' tax was to be repealed so that business could build up a reserve for the next depression.

What happened? You know as well as I. When Pat Harrison and Jim Byrnes tried to place 25 and 40 per cent of the relief load on the states, they were defeated by the administration. The budget was not balanced for the fiscal year beginning last July 1 and by present trends will not be balanced next year. Government expenses were not cut; instead, over nine billions of dollars were appropriated at this session of Congress. If the administration forces could defeat the Harrison bill putting a just share of relief burden on the states and could elect the administration candidate for floor leader of the Senate, they could have cut appropriations. The interest on the national debt of over thirty seven billions of dollars was also appropriated at dollars is now one billion dollars annually and the administration is making no effort to cut the debt. The surplus profits' tax was not repealed in spite of warnings to the administration by economists that business can not stand another depression without reserves which kept many corporations out of bankruptcy in the last economic fiasco which ended in 1935.

Further betraying solemn promises made in the campaign period, the country was deluged with legislation designed to alter the entire structure of the social, governmental and economic systems. Radical legislation hidden under the cloak of innocence was projected upon a weary and browbeaten Congress for the opinion and reaction of the people.

John N. Garner was charged beyond imagination. And the list which shared his opinions among representatives in the halls of Congress, among the Nation's judiciary and barristers, among the country's economic and business leaders, among the Nation's leading educators could not be listed in the entire edition of this newspaper. The number of the people among the farmers and laborers and shopkeepers and merchants and small town bankers and newspapermen who felt John Garner's amazement at the greatest double-cross in history numbers far more than the 17,000,000 Americans who cast their ballots for Alfred M. Landon, November a year ago.

Today we find one of Texas' outstanding editors, Peter Molyneaux of The Texas Weekly, and one of the great newspapers of the South, Major Clark Howell of the venerable Atlanta Constitution, a publication read in the trenches by the Confederates, to name only two who make it their business to know what is happening in Washington and in the country at large, asking the South what is going to do about political conditions of the present.

Editor Molyneaux, whom you may hear on the Texas Quality Network each Sunday afternoon at 2:45, warns the South that it can no longer vote blindly for the Democratic ticket. The party which the South controlled from the Civil War to 1932 is now under the domination of labor and industry of the East and of agriculture of the West and is no longer responsive to the South. When the Democratic National Convention of 1936 repealed the rule requiring a two-thirds vote for nomination of a presidential candidate, the South lost control of the Democratic Party, Mr. Molyneaux states.

And now, with only a majority necessary for the nomination of a candidate, the populous states of the East can with the help of one other state of the Pacific Coast or the West or the Mississippi Valley dominate the convention and leave the South without a voice in the choice of a candidate. This says Editor Molyneaux, leaves the South out on a political limb from whence it must climb back to a safe haven under some party roof.

Publisher Howell's alarm and viewpoint parallels those of the viewpoint parallels those Major Howell wants the South to wage a political battle for control of the party, to battle the new deal for choice of the candidate in 1940. If, says the Georgian, the South does not do this, it will lose control of the Democratic Party to such elements as the C. I. O., which will pervert it to their own purposes, namely, the domination of all phases of American life, both economic and political.

Echoing this sentiment which is spreading like wildfire in the South and also in the West, which has no sympathy for the C. I. O. and the measures spoken of above which carry the label of approval of the administration, Senator Edward R. Burke of Nebraska last week bespoke his support of our Jack Garner for President in 1940. The gist of Senator Burke's statement was that the Nation needed a humanitarian from 1932 to 1936 but that now it needs a business man in the White House, and that the Texan is the man for the job. Prompt espousal of Garner's cause came from the two Texas senators, Connally and Sheppard.

A gentleman in Austin who deems himself a statesman promptly challenged the right of Burke and the Texas representatives to speak for Mr. Garner because Mr. Roosevelt has three more years in the White House. This gentleman failed to note that Pennsylvania's rabid new deal governor, George Earle had his secretary, who is traveling aboard, speak of the governor as the next nominee of the Democratic Party for President, and that another new dealer, Indiana's Senator Sherman Minton, endorsed Philippine High Commissioner and former Governor of Indiana Paul V. McNutt for the nomination.

Little importance need be attached to the Garner endorsement by Senators Burke, Connally, and others, although they were undoubtedly sincere in their statements and would like nothing better than for the Vice-President to be escorted in the chief executive's chair even now, for the simple reason that the Texas executive will be far above the age of the average candidate for President. Garner will be 71 in 1941, when the new President will take office, and nearly 80 when that executive will leave the White House, probably eight years later, barring defeat for a second term.

The Country listens when Edward R. Burke speaks. It knows the principles for which he stands and for which Mr. Garner stands. The country is now listening to those who do not endorse the new deal program in its entirety but who, as true statesmen, support its good features and battle with all their prestige and strength and oratory against its bad features.

GREATEST CIRCUS IS COMING SOON

The world's mightiest amusement enterprise on tour—the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey combined circus, with its 1937 seven-ring-and stage program, star studded and liberally interspersed with new thrillers from Europe and Asia, featuring among its array of new wonders the most gorgeous introductory spectacle in its brilliant history, India, is definitely scheduled to exhibit in Waco Thursday September, 30.

India is not just another circus spectacle. It is not merely a glittering parade to open the Big Show performances. It is the result of a year's planning, a really staggering expenditure and much research on the part of Sam W. Gumpertz, general manager of The Greatest Show on Earth. Costly fabrics were purchased in car load lots. Color schemes blend in a lovely perspective. Every one of the two thousand people and animals taking part wears a small fortune on his or its back. All have towering headdresses of exquisite beauty. One group of 170 horses, with girl riders, is like nothing ever before offered, for the horses, wearing medieval bejeweled blankets of velvet, carry gorgeous canopies over the girls' heads. India is a torrent of color and flashing jewels flowing over the hippodrome track and the seven track and the seven stages and rings. It is the last word in pageantry.

 Directed by KING VIDOR

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:
 Stephen Dallas, son of a once wealthy but now impoverished family, finds a job in a mill and marries Stella, a crude but comely girl, when he learns that his fiancée in New York has married another in his absence. A lovely baby girl, Laura, is born to them, but not long afterward Stephen, repelled by Stella's vulgar ways and her fondness of the company of Ed Munn, a race-track habitue, leaves her for a job in New York. After a dozen years there he meets Helen Morrison, his former sweetheart, now the widowed mother of three handsome boys. Meanwhile Stella, on an innocent excursion with Ed Munn, is seen making a silly spectacle of herself in a train by Miss Phillibrown, Laurel's teacher. The word is spread, and on the day of Laura's birthday party, regrets begin arriving from her little playmates who were invited.

Chapter Four

One by one they came — the little notes and telephone messages expressing vast regret that the children, for one reason or another, would not be able to attend Laurel's birthday party. At first Stella made light of it. But as disappointment crowded upon disappointment, re-buff upon re-buff, it was harder for both Stella and her child to keep tip their brave pretense. Not even the loving note and charming presents from Laurel's father could more than momentarily stem her grief.

Then came the final blow — a note from Miss Phillibrown, Laurel's teacher, brought in by Gladys, the maid.

"Dear Mrs. Dallas: I am extremely sorry to be forced to ask you to withdraw Laurel from our school. This action is as unpleasant to me as it will be for you, but under the circumstances I have no alternative. Sincerely, Margaret Phillibrown."

White with chagrin, Stella tore the note into tiny fragments. But she recovered herself sufficiently to tell Laurel casually, in reply to her question, "It's from Miss Phillibrown — she can't come."

Realizing that no one at all was coming to the party, the mother and daughter sat down bravely to go through with their own little party. With chairs pulled close together, they thrilled over the presents, played with the favors, even tried to get down some of the dainties served by Gladys. But when Laurel's birthday cake came in, it was too much. About to blow out the candles, the little girl's breath caught; her body was racked with sobs; she threw herself on the breast of her mother, down whose cheeks the tears were already streaming. And thus they remained for a long time — two against a bitter world, yet consoled by their love for each other.

The months had sped away, and Laurel, a little more grownup, a little more poised, a little more lovely, was visiting her father in New York. He took her to the home of the Morrisons, where he was a frequent guest.

Helen Morrison was drawn to the girl at once, and did everything she could in her gracious way to make her feel at home. Helen was shown to her luxurious guest room, where she immediately sat down to write her beloved mother about the beautiful home at which she was visiting, and the charming lady who was her hostess. At dinner, and during the games and dancing afterward, even those avowed woman-haters, Helen's young sons, could not conceal their growing admiration for their pretty little guest. As for Laurel, she was thrilled by it all — the beauty of the surroundings, the charm and warm friendliness of her father's friends, the pervading air of cultured ease and good humor. And when it came time to leave, she impulsively threw her arms around Helen's neck and kissed her goodbye.

"Oh!" breathed Laurel, as Stephen drove her to her train. "I think she is the loveliest lady I ever knew!"

"Do you, Laurel?" he said happily. "Do you really?"

Laurel caught herself and remembered. "I mean," she added, gravely, "next to my mother — of course."

He nodded understandingly, a little sadly, and they finished the ride in silence.

And soon Laurel, home again, was nestling happily in her mother's arms, telling her of the grand place she had visited, the lovely people with whom she had been. But the wise mother instinct in Stella could detect a change, however slight, however fleeting. Laurel spoke rapturously of Mrs. Morrison — her loveliness and poise, and the things she wore — all so different, Stella gathered, from her own ways.

Another Christmas Eve had arrived, and the Dallas house was merry with its Christmas tree, presents, and air of loving good cheer between mother and daughter.

Their quiet celebration was somewhat dampened by the arrival of Ed Munn, considerably the worse for liquid cheer. He was lugging under his arm a Christmas turkey, which he boisterously insisted that Stella roast forthwith for their Christmas dinner. Stella, mildly exasperated and a little amused by his antics, was trying to quiet him in the kitchen and keep him from annoying Laurel, when the door-bell rang. Laurel ran to the door and greeted, with amused happiness, her father.

"I couldn't go any longer without seeing you, Laurel!"

"Oh, father! I never dreamed of anything so wonderful!"

She ran to the kitchen to tell her mother of their unexpected good fortune. Stella, desperate, managed to bundle the besotted Munn out through the back door, and locked him out. Then she came in to greet her estranged husband.

Stephen told Stella of his plan; he wished to take Laurel away to spend the holiday with him. They would catch the next train back to New York — if both Stella and Laurel were willing, of course. Stella reluctantly agreed.

While Laurel went to prepare for the trip, Stella, alone with Stephen, started to broach something that had been in her mind for a long time.

"Stephen," she stammered embarrassedly — "I've wanted to tell you how sorry I've been for lotsa things —"

"Please," said Stephen. "Please, Stella. We both tried. That's all over."

"The only thing Stephen — it'd be a load offa my chest if only on accounta o' Lottie — though it ain't all on her account — if you could — some day —"

Stephen, moved to pity for her, put his hand over hers for a moment. Then, knowing how much it would mean to her, he suggested that he and Laurel spend a few hours more with Stella, and go to New York by a later train. He was telephoning the station to inquire about trains when Ed Munn burst into the house through the front door, roaring and laughing triumphantly.

"Ha ha ha ha ha! Fooled ya! Wherezh all zish company I been kicked out for, huh?"

Stella, apologizing to Stephen, got rid of him quickly — but the spell had been broken. And he told her the result of his call — the only other train back to New York would be far too late in the night.

Laurel burst into the room, her face aglow with her anticipated holiday. "I'm all ready Father — was I very long?"

With a heavy heart, Stella Dallas kissed her daughter goodbye.

Scientific Family Gains Boy Recruit

Dr. Charles W. Brabbee, former professor of heating and air conditioning at the University of Berlin-Charlottenburg, with the Thermal Boy which he designed to show that you cool to heat for the new showrooms of 14 companies of American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation.

COMPLETING a family of scientific models, the world-famous Dresden man and the Glass Woman have now been supplemented by the Thermal Boy who has just been installed in the world's largest showroom of building equipment recently opened at 40 West 40th Street in New York City by 14 companies of the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation.

Designed by Dr. Charles W. Brabbee, former professor of heating and air conditioning at the University of Berlin-Charlottenburg, the boy, a life-size model, demonstrates the little known fact that it is impossible to supply heat externally to the human body.

Through flashing lights, rushing air currents, and changes in the appearance of the boy himself, the elaborate heat mechanism of the human body upon which life itself depends is demonstrated.

Operated by the spectator, the boy travels through a complete cycle showing how heat is supplied to the body only internally through the combustion of food and demonstrating how to get rid of this heat on the hottest days.

Even when the seasons change and the coldest winter approaches, the body must lose heat, and artificial heating merely keeps it from losing too much heat to the air and surrounding objects. He warns that heat can be lost in more than one way and even the most exact regulation of air temperature alone will not keep a person comfortable.

A human being, the boy shows, loses heat to cooler air and is uncomfortable because he cannot lose it to warmer air, but at the same time, a mysterious action is going on where heat is lost by radiation or other waves, similar to the ether waves of radio, and science is just beginning to discover the importance of this second action.

A minimum of 400 heat units must be lost every hour to maintain the body temperature of 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit, and when the first two methods fail, science utilizes a safety valve in the form of perspiration which draws heat from the body as it evaporates, in the same way that water takes heat from a stove to boil, it is explained.

The new science of conditioning, it is demonstrated, provides for a heat balance both winter and summer by controlling the temperature of surrounding air, the capacity of that air to absorb evaporated moisture, and the amount of heat that the radiations can carry through the ether to surrounding objects, supplying counter radiations when the loss becomes too great.

By Hazen Ament

FOOTBALL HIGHLIGHTS

Right now, and for the remaining two or three months all eyes are going to be turned to one of the greatest sports of all, "Football".

Just a matter of a few days now and the machines of football will be blasting away. Smashing and plunging across the turf, testing whether their team, or the opposing team can long endure.

Right now, let us forget all the other teams and their schedules, and talk about our own Hornets.

The daily practices and work-outs of the Hornets are well under way. This writer made several visits this week, to the "Old River Grid-Iron" and watched the boys go thru several strenuous work-outs. Not too strenuous of course, but just strenuous enough to suit Coach Worley's taste.

They look good, they've got speed, they're trying hard. They have eight letter men back. (Mark has three) In our opinion, football fans in and around Gatesville are going to see one of the best clicking little teams G. H. S. has had, since the days of such stars as; Boren Hunter, Pope Wolfe, Blankenship and the rest of the gang that put Football on the map of Gatesville in those three years.

Don't get us wrong now. We're not saying that they were the greatest stars that G. H. S. ever had, but one of the best clicking teams. Of course we can never forget such stars as Gough, Blanton, Bradford, Johnson, Franks and others to numerous to mention.

We understand that Coach Worley is inviting all the local fans, to come out next Tuesday, nite (under the lights) and watch the boys go thru their regular practice. Lets all go over to the stadium and give them a big boost.

The Hornets Club is in full action again this season. We believe that Gatesville has need ed a club of this type for a long time. It is proving to be one of the best and most efficient out-side organizations, with reference to sports in our schools, we have ever had. If you have failed to see David Franks or Bill Ament this week, and you are interested in this organization, SEE THEM they will be more than glad to explain it to you.

DOVE SEASON IS HERE

They gave them a shotgun—they went away in search of fowl. This space doesn't allow enough room to name all those, who took to the ponds, creeks and old dead trees this week. We do know tho, that Dr. Ray, Dawson Cooper, Frank Farquor, Dr. Hamilton, Pete Patterson and numerous others went the first day.

We have been unable to hear just how close they came to the limit, but from the looks of things around the wooded sections of the county; They didn't have to go far to get their limit. However, they are plenty wild this season.

The sports program of the Golden Gate International Exposition in 1939 ranges from ed a club of this type for a longhorseshoe pitching to air races.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

COUNTRY newspapers often get poetry sent to them to print. Some of the people that send in poetry don't always write it themselves. They just copy a piece they like real well, and send that in. Of course they sign their own name to it, because they don't know how much trouble that might get them into, and besides, they think it's worth the risk, just to get into print under such good poetry.

Well, the country editors are on the lookout for that kind of stuff, and some of them are pretty well up on the big writers anyhow. One day a guy came in and introduced himself to the editor and handed him a poem with his name signed to it.

"This is mighty good verse," the editor says.

"Thanks. I kinda thought you'd like it."

"Did you write it?"

"Every word of it, all by myself."

"Shake hands again," says the editor. "I never knewed I'd have the good luck to shake hands with Willie Shakespeare himself, right here in my office."

In spite of two fireside chats on the issue, in spite of millions of pamphlets released by the Democratic National Committee, in spite of public addresses and radio talks, in spite of threats of political reprisals to senators who can swing a state this way are that, in spite of all these, the country refused to rally to the administration's side of the court issue. And, in lesser degree, the same was true in the instances of government reorganization, wages and hours, and other new deal sponsored measures.

vention of 1940. Democratic voters and Democratic legislators shall in the future have to make their choices.

With this state of affairs existing in the councils of their foes, is not a golden opportunity bespread for the Republicans to reap a harvest in 1938 and in 1940 in the congressional elections? What explains the silence of the G. O. P. leaders and of the Republican National Committee in the face of the turmoil and threatening signs of disintegration among the forces which carried the new deal to victory in 1932 and 1936? In another article the conflict between the old guard, the Landonites and the Hooverites for control of the Good Old Party will be discussed in detail. Watch for it.
