JOE HANNA'S GOLDEN CIRCULARS OUT THIS WEEK

Circulars have been mailed thruout the county this week by Joe Hanna, carrying their "gold hoarding" message to the customers of this trade territory, on goldenrod paper.

Although there are many bargains listed in this circular, Mr. Hanna states, he just jumped a round, and didn't give half of the many values he has in store for the trade of this territory.

A county-wide invitation is extended to all to visit his store during this sale, where the necessities of a hard winter may be had at summer prices. Yes, sir, these prices are HOT!!

JACK WIGGINS TOE WINS FOR HUTCHINSON, KAN. TEAM

In a newspaper clipping handed us by Jack Wiggins' mother, we quote "An opening quarter field goal off the accurate toe of Jack Wiggins, burley tackle accounted for Independence Junior College's 3 to 0 victory over the Dragons here last night". It was dated Nov. 5.

Further, we quote: "Outstanding for Independence were: Beahl, Burns, BAKER (Chas of The Hornets), THE WIGGINS Boys and Witt. Ted Kirby was bottled up during most of the game. Besides the starting lineup Carper, HAIR, S. WILSON Frye, Fox and Knight saw action in the game".

"The victory was the seventh straight of the season for the Pirates and left Independence's goal line uncrossed".

Santa Claus will be here the SECOND OF DECEMBER!

A committee composed of the City Sec. and C. H. Wallace of the light company, will begin the early part of the week putting up

CITY GOIN' "MODERNE" "NEW FRONTS" ALL OVER TOWN

Work has started on the building occupied by the Koen-Foster Drug Co., and the understanding is that it's to have its "face lifted" and a lot of other changes made bringing this firm's front up to 1938 trends.

Architects, and builders are also going into a huddle with J. O. Brown of the City Drug Store who, we understand is going to "put on new war paint" on his mid-town drug store location.

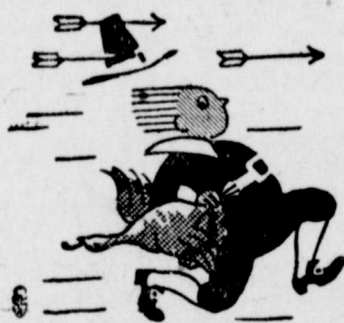

Just completed is the front on the H. P. Sadler building, which is now occupied by the Gatesville Drygoods Company and it is finished in that popular black tile and the interior is repainted, shelved, tabled, and lighted.

The old town is really getting dressed up!

OGLESBY PASTOR IS SPEAKER AT BAPT. CONVENTION

Rev. Carroll Chadwick, pastor of the First Baptist Church spoke to the first night session of the Baptist Pastors' and Laymen's Conference of Texas. This being an auxiliary to the Baptist General convention of Texas. He appeared on the program at 7:00 in the First Baptist Church of El Paso.

We feel that Brother Chadwick is one of the youngest preachers or speakers that will appear on the program in El Paso.

Before coming to Oglesby we understand that Brother Chadwick had spoken in several of the leading Churches of East Texas and Shreveport, La. Since coming to Oglesby we can recall that he has supplied in the First Baptist Church of Tyler and was for a period the camp chaplain of the Y. M. C. A. Camp of San Antonio. He was also called back to San Antonio at the close of the camp to be the guest speaker at an annual banquet. We are of the opinion that in all of the latter trips which the reverend Mr. Chadwick has made he has not failed to give Oglesby some publicity. We believe that every time Brother Chadwick is honored that Oglesby is honored too.

Let us stand by our pastor of our town as he stands for us. —The McGregor Mirror

Irvin and Harry Bornstein of this city spent Sunday in San Saba.

R. E. HAMILTON DIES IN BROWNFIELD

R. E. Hamilton was born in Belton, Texas in 1883. He and his wife and a daughter, Christina moved to Brownfield in 1923. He was in business as a barber there until 1929, when he moved to California. After spending a year there, he returned to Terry County. While in California he worked for the Associated Oil Company. On his return, he engaged in the stock business for two more years, when he entered the employ of the Texas Highway service, and remained with the division under the supervision of B. L. McPherson until his death which occurred at his home on Powell street, Saturday, November 6, at five o'clock.

In his passing we feel that the community has lost a valuable citizen. He was a man who appreciated a good man wherever he found him, and was always ready to lend a helping hand to those less fortunate than himself.

His friends consisted of all who knew him and his best friends were those who knew him best. He was a kind husband, a loving father, and a good neighbor, and the large crowd present at his funeral together with the beautiful floral offering was a mute testimony to the love and esteem felt for the deceased.

Mr. Hamilton left his widow, a daughter and many relatives, some of whom reside in Coryell County.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all of those who have helped us during the illness and death of our darling baby. For your words of comfort and also for the beautiful flowers May God bless you all is our prayer.

First, choose the all-amudicans for this Class B. High School Conference.

Then if you care, take the Southwestern Conference.

BE A GOOD NEIGHBOR

Join The American Red Cross!

Annual Red Cross Roll Call Here Directed By Mrs. Turk Brown

America's Annual Red Cross Roll Call started Armistice Day and continues thru Thanksgiving

Day. Gatesville, under the local direction of Mrs. Turk Brown, is expecting to make its quota along with the other "good neighborly" communities of the United States.

Gatesville and Coryell county responded remarkably well, some $800.00 being sent for the immediate relief of these flood sufferers. The response was remarkable.

Now, the call of the American Red Cross is before "the Ox in the ditch", and should receive 100 percent co-operation, because, no one knows what community will be visited by a similar tragedy, or when.

REPLICA OF ALAMO

Both Washington and Oregon are arranging wild life exhibits of their states in areas adjacent to the Hall of Western States at the San Francisco Exposition.

Texas has under consideration a plan to build a replica of its historic Alamo on Treasurer Island for its exhibit.

Commissioners in the field report activity all along the line in state participation plans and are concentrating on the Exposition's state goal—to have every state in the Union represented at the Exposition.

Germany expects to produce nearly 50,000 tons of synthetic resins this year.

SYNOPSIS

Just before the discovery of oil at Titusville, Pa., in 1859 Sally Watterson comes to the town with her father's medicine show. When the medicine wagon catches fire and burns to the ground, she is rescued by Peter Cortlandt, a young farmer. Cortlandt, who is drilling for oil on his property, invites the Wattersons to stay at his house until they can outfit a new wagon. It is a case of love at first sight with Sally and Peter.

CHAPTER III

THE dance was gay. Everyone in the vicinity of Titusville who was anyone at all was there and even those who weren't anyone at all—a few of them—were there. Red Scanlon was one of these.

It was in the Lippincott barn. At one end a band, composed of fiddles, accordions, banjos, played a sprightly tune, while one of the fiddlers called the turns. And happily, Sally Go choose the one that you love best. . . ."

Red pulled Sally to him, kissed her. Peter started in anger.

"It's just a game, Peter!" cried Grandma. "Just a game!"

Then there were gasps as Red Scanlon held Sally, struggling, and kissed her violently.

Peter tore him from her, lashed out with his fist. The blow knocked Scanlon down, but he was up in an instant, rushing at Peter. They locked, fists flailing, as the crowd milled around in frightened excitement. Sally, frightened for Peter, screamed:

"Pull 'em apart! Oh please pull 'em apart!"

But nobody moved. Scanlon had Peter's throat now in an arm lock. Viciously, he applied his pressure, beating at Peter's face with his almost strangled him. He felt awkward, afraid, as he looked at her. "Maybe, after a couple o' years."

His head was bowed. Timidly, she reached out her hand, almost touched it. Then, because she knew she would weep, she rose suddenly and fled towards the house. . . .

She did not sleep well that night. She dreaded the morning. For once, she hated the sun. When it rose, she dressed wearily and looked out at where her father and Mac stood beside the wagon. It was ready. The horse was hitched. They were waiting for her with Grandma.

Slowly, she took her grips and descended the stairs. Peter was waiting there. Silently he took the grips.

"I didn't mean what I said last night," he said huskily. "About forgettin' you. . . . I don't think—I'll never forget you Sally."

But as they dragged him out, Scanlon snarled: "This ain't over, Cortlandt! I don't leave no fights unfinished!"

danced in Peter's arms. Happily, he held her, as if never he wanted to let her go.

At the side, Grandma and Doc Watterson looked on happily. Then Grandma frowned as Caleb Stark, a tall, gaunt man with a fanatical face, approached.

"Sorry," said Stark nasally, "to see the tone o' this soctable ain't as high as we'd like it, Miz Cortlandt."

Grandma's eyes narrowed dangerously. "You mean Red Scanlon, Mr. Stark? Well, long's he behaves himself—" She looked to where the teamster swung his partner crudely.

"I mean that medicine show woman!" snarled Stark.

Grandma's eyes flamed. "You do! Well, now, Mr. Stark, how's that brother o' yours in the penitentiary? His term for horse-stealin's about up by now, I'd think."

Stark glared, but retired discomfited. But Grandma was troubled. There were others of the narrow, self-righteous element who would think the same. Her lips tightened. But just let 'em dare! Let 'em dare try to start something! She looked around belligerently. . . .

The master of ceremonies called for the kissing game. Eagerly Peter started for Sally, but Scanlon beat him to her. The teamster caught her as the fiddler called:

"Go choose your east, go choose your west,

other hand, Grandma, beside herself, shouted:

"The flyin' mare! Like Grandpa taught you, Peter!"

Peter heard her. With all his strength he arched his back, lifted a hand, caught Scanlon's neck, flung him over his back. Scanlon crashed to the floor, but would have risen again had not men caught him and held him. Others were holding Peter.

"Take Red in the house," said Lippincott, "until Peter goes."

But as they dragged him out, Scanlon snarled: "This ain't over Cortlandt! I don't leave no fights unfinished!"

Peter left too—but Sally went with him. They walked along a path by a little stream that shone like silver in the moonlight.

"I was afraid for you Peter," she said softly.

He looked at her tenderly. "Thanks," he said and it was all he could think of to say.

They sat down by the stream. They forgot the fight. They forgot everything except each other's presence and the fact that next day Sally would leave, would go out of his life.

"Peter," she said. It was almost a whisper. "Think you'll forget me—us?"

"Maybe," he said. His emotions

She leaned towards him. He dropped the bags suddenly and caught her to him. They kissed with all the yearning that had been in their hearts, a desperate kiss that told them all they had not been able to tell in words.

But her father was calling. They hurried out. There were the usual thanks, the usual goodbyes, all the usual meaningless things people say—then she was gone.

He stood looking after the wagon miserably.

"I wanted to tell her," he said. "I should 'a' told her!"

"Why didn't you?" said Grandma. "My God! Why don't you!"

Peter looked at his grandmother; then, face set, he ran for the barn. Presently, he appeared astride a galloping horse, made off down the road. When he caught up with the wagon, Doc Watterson and Mac stared in amazement, but Sally seemed as if she had been waiting for him.

"Sally!" he cried. "Sally!"

He reached out, pulled her from the wagon seat, sat her in front of him on the bare back of the horse.

"Sally!" he cried again. He could say no more, but she seemed to know what he meant.

"Yes, Peter!" she said. She kissed him passionately. "Oh Peter! I'll marry you. I will! I will!"

WORLD COMMENT

Joe Burns

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE AND THE SPECIAL SESSION

Monday the Congress heard the reading of the President's special message dealing with legislative session between now and the regular session beginning in January.

To those leaders of industry members of Congress and small-town businessmen who hoped for a specific program of action to be outlined by the President designed to alleviate the prevailing depression tendency in business, the metaphysical character of the speech was distinctly disappointing.

The President in his address, outlined four basic problems that in his opinion, are deserving of action by the special session. They are: (1) Farm relief; (2) labor; (3) regional planning for public works; and (4) government reorganization.

Aside from a casual mention of conferences with the leading economist and business men on the downward trend of business, the President prescribed no specific action for the congress to follow in dealing with what is rapidly assuming the proportions of another business crisis.

As one of the ostensible reasons for the calling of the special session was to deal with problems of an imperative nature, it is difficult to understand why the chief executive included regional planning and government reorganization in his legislative program for the special session. Neither of these two problems is of an urgent nature and should have been left until the regular session for discussion.

As to the specific recommendations included in the address, only those dealing with agriculture and farm relief were in any sense encouraging to those who disapproved the trend of administration-sponsored legislation at the regular session and even these were not too encouraging.

The President wants farm legislation enacted which will prevent the collapse of farm commodity prices in the face of steadily increasing surpluses of farm products. If the administration sponsors farm legislation based upon Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's recommendation—and the President did not declare himself on this point—the farm legislation will include these provisions:

- 1) Ever-normal granary legislation.
- 2) Continuation of payments for soil conservation.
- 3) Price-stabilizing commodity loans.
- 4) More flexible adjustment of production, year by year, in line with domestic and world market conditions.
- 5) Price adjusting payments, or subsidies, financed by a moderate processing tax, for cotton.
- 6) Retirement of submarginal land crop insurance for the wheat areas.

7) Government purchase of surpluses, which would then be distributed to the needy.

8) Marketing programs providing facilities for adjustment the volume of shipments and eliminating low quality products from commercial movement.

Congress last year refused to enact legislation including the ever-normal granary idea sponsored at that time by the Agriculture Secretary. Whether, relieved of the stress attending certain controversial proposals of the administration submitted at the last session, legislation embodying all or most of these principles will be enacted entirely upon the temper of Congress. If press reports from Washington can be believed, the returning representatives are more concerned with the business slump than with any other problem confronting them. There is little likelihood however, that the representatives from the farm belt will allow farm relief legislation to be stultified by either the special or the regular session.

As regards the South and has yet to devise legislation to deal effectively with the problem of depressed prices for cotton and large surpluses of the same commodity.

If the representatives from the south do not completely reverse the stand taken by them last session, the administration wages and hours bill to be presented to the special session will encounter hostile action from those below Mason and Dixon's line.

The President's message recommended wages and hours legislation which will abolish the wage differential in different sections of the country. Likewise he declared against labor practices and conditions which are causing industry to migrate from one section to another.

This language was clearly and unmistakably directed against the South. The powerful financial and industrial leaders of the North and East are directing a campaign of propaganda against the natural advantages of the South, which advantages have caused textile and other industries to move to the South and Southwest in large numbers since 1865.

It is true that wages are lower in the South than in the more industrial sections of the North and East. But nature has been kinder to the inhabitants of the South and requires less expenditure for such necessities as fuel, housing and clothing than is required in the colder regions north of Mason and Dixon.

If Federal legislation makes compulsory the raising of Southern wages to an equality with those of other sections of the Country, many industries of the South will close down and others will suffer a weakened financial position.

Industries of the North and East are located nearer the centers of concentrated populations than are those of the South. Thus the manufacturers of the South have increased transportation costs to pay to the big markets. They have overcome this disadvantage and others by availing themselves of the cheaper wages scales prevailing in this section.

The administration need but look into labor conditions in the South to find one compelling argument to refute the need for a uniform wage throughout the nation. All of the big labor strikes occurred this year in the North and East—not one big disturbance being marked down against Southern industry.

The C. I. O. has made all of its big gains in areas outside the South—and counts few members among Southern industrial workers. Also, union has never made as much headway in the South as in other sections. If Capital is exploiting Southern labor, why have not the radical unions found favor among Southern workers?

Certainly, in view of the willy-nilly way in which federal expenditures for public works have been made since 1932, there is need for both coordination and planning in the allotment of future outlays for public works. The President wants seven regional planning authorities to make recommendations to the Government as to needed public works. Such a plan is both logical and consistent with the worthy aim of effective spending of public funds and should be enacted with certain significant modifications. But just why the matter is of immediate concern is more than this writer can figure out.

Neither is the problem of government reorganization in imperative need of action. From the standpoint of economies, on which basis the President made his recommendation for action by the session, it was stated at the last session, that not more than $75,000,000 (millions) could be saved if the federal executive structure were renovated from top to bottom.

Neither is the problem of government reorganization one to be dealt with speedily. The President submitted to the Congress at the last session a far-reaching program for the reorganization of the executive department which was unacceptable almost in its entirety to a majority of the representatives.

One of the chief objections lay in the unwillingness to extend to the executive control over many of the independent and semi-judicial agencies such as the Federal Trade Commission, Interstate Commerce Commission, the Civil Service Commission, and the Maritime Commission.

Another objection arose from the proposal to abolish the office of comptroller general and substitute it a system of post-auditing.

If the President is sincerely desirous of legislation which will abolish much of the graft, inefficiency, politics, and duplication now existent in the government departments, he may expect equally sincere cooperation from the representatives of the people. But if he insists upon including in any government reorganization measure provisions which will reallocate many of the functions of independent administrators, agencies, and commissions to department heads under his general supervision, he is certain to meet with determined opposition and he should.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

NEIGHBORS in the suburbs still fight about their chickens and dogs and kids once in a while. One fellow came rushing out on his porch and yelled at his neighbor: "Say, I'd like to know what you were burying in that hole in your back yard last night! You didn't think you'd get caught, did you? But a friend of mine saw you. Now, tell me, if you dare, what were you burying in that hole in your yard?" The other fellow wasn't so much excited.

"Why," he says, "I was burying one of my chickens, and a half of a ham and some of my buttermilk, and such things." "So! I reckon you're crazy, ain't you? You sound foolish. And I reckon it was my dog that you were planting. Something has happened to Gyp, and I'll dig up that yard of yours till I find out if he's there." "Well, he's there, all right. All my stuff that I told you about was inside of the dog."

Plan School Lunches Carefully

Children's Appetites Will Lag If Packing of School Lunches Permitted to Become Routine Affair

THE packing of school lunches may become a routine task because of its frequency. If the packing of the lunch is allowed to slip into a rut, the appetites at the consuming end are very apt to do the same, with the result that soon the growing children are going without many essential foods they need to carry on their school work and build strong healthy bodies.

There will always be favorites in sandwiches that seem to be the backbone of the lunch box, but faithful as they are, there is also need for variety and newness to keep the appetites from lagging. This ever present need for change may be accomplished in many different ways. Besides many tasty sandwich fillings, there are several different types of bread that lend themselves well to sandwiches.

Milk is such an important item in the daily diet it must not be overlooked in the school lunch. If not supplied at the school, it may be carried in vacuum bottles and can take several different forms for the sake of variety. Cream soups of all kinds incorporate milk to an advantage and may be carried well in a vacuum bottle. Chocolate milk and cocoa both make ideal milk beverages for a lunch box.

Following are some suggestions that may serve as a guide for lunch box menu planning. If planned in advance, the chances for better balanced menus are greater, and at the same time less effort at the last minute is required.
