

Grady Dickie "Assistant in Noise" at Weatherford College

We present here, a picture of Grady Dickie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dickie who has been guiding the "yelling" ability of his alma mammy at Weatherford College during the past pigskin antics. We presume he is "Assistant in Noise" or pep at the college. Anyway, it is conclusively that Coryell students can produce cheer, as jeers, and, incidentally, tells a story of Grady's popularity and ability in his chosen school.

We lost our Dec. 1 copy of the Star-Telegram in which this picture appeared and don't know who his "helpers" are.

Here's another selection, this time from John Travis Mohon, newly arrived from Comanche, and a thoroughbred sportsman and ex-footballer; This is Southwestern All-Conference: Ends: Boyd, Baylor, Huesner, Baylor; Tackles: Sprague, SMU; Hale, TCU; Guards: Rout and Jones, A & M; Center: Ki Aldrich, TCU, Quarter: O'Brien, TCU; Half: Todd, A&M; Lain Rice; Full: Wolfe, Texas. Best punter, Patterson, Baylor; Best Passer, O'Brien, TCU; Best Tackler, Wolfe, Texas; Best Runner, Todd A & M.

Sunday's papers, carried TCU's selections, and the peculiar part was the leaving off of the almost unanimously selected Rout of A & M replacing him with Jones of A & M and one other selection. Seems like it is not always the publicized players who are selected by the players, themselves.

Seems like, from the hotly contested tournament at Ireland, we're going to have some real B-Ball in old Coryell County and surrounding counties during the '37-'38' season. The Hornets didn't picture much in the "take" in the tournament, but folks they've just started basket ball, and have just finished football which accounts for their relatively poor showing.

These boys that herd the hard apples at the ducks and other creatures in local bowling alleys, are "catching-on" right smartly and some creditable scores are being chalked up.

It looks like the entire Hornet club, the footballers, have turned out as bowlers, since we see Red-4, Hinsley and a number of others. With them, we also saw non other than that sportsman deluxe, L. B. Brown, getting the knks out of his back.

Next week-end, girl basketers of this section get underway with the "heaves", featuring the Intitation Tourney in the local gym which will be "for women" contestants only, Coach Schwarz and Miss Grantham doing the directing

One local doctor told us, he had his ping-pong set up and in motion and was having his daily rounds in this (you probably think sissy) sport, which beyond a doubt the hand is quicker than the eye. Why not a table tennis tourney. It's a grand game!

While on the subject of grand games, there's one, a little more vigorous, which is a cutter, and could be played in oh so many vacant buildings, with very little equipment, and that's handball. It's in a class by itself for sport, and particularly exercise and no outlay for equipment.

Jonesboro Cops Mug at Ireland Basketball Tournament 4 and 5th

By John F. Post Jr.

The Jonesboro Eagles, led by their star sharp-shooting forward Ralph Walls served warning to other county basketball aspirants by winning the Ireland invitational tournament thru a tough field of opposition. However, the Jonesboro outfit had to battle all the way to come out on top.

In the first game of the tournament the Star hoopers downed the local Hornet aggregation, 24-21. The Hornets with only a few best ball clubs in this section of the state that with a bit more practice they will have one of the best ball clubs in this section of the state. In the next game Jonesboro met a strong Pearl team and at the end of the game the two teams were locked up in a tie. In the play off period the Eagles scored four points to Pearl's none to take the decision. In the other game of the first round Turnersville eliminated the weak McGregor Bulldog outfit 22-17.

In the second round the Jonesboro team edged out a 19 to 16 win over the hustling Star 5, while Ireland easily eliminated Turnersville 34 to 14.

Then in the championship game Ireland and Jonesboro hooked up in the most exciting battle ever played on the fine floor of the new Ireland gym. Back and forth see sawed the score. First one team would be on top and then the other, with neither team ever holding what might be called a comfortable lead. When the last whistle had sounded and the smoke of the battle had cleared away, Jonesboro was ahead by the scant margin of two points 18-16. Those two points were just about the difference in the strength of the two clubs.

Summing up things from the results of the tournament, your writer believes that Jonesboro Gatesville, Ireland and Pearl will be the main contestants for the county championship. Copperas Cove always bobs up with a fine team and if this season proves to be no exception to those of the past they will have to be counted among the championship contenders. Turnersville, Oglesby and Flat form the lower bracket.

WORLD COMMENT

Joe Burns

What policy is the United States going to pursue in the Pacific?

There is no question more paramount importance to the American people today. While our economic interests in the Pacific are not so great as those of Britain and France, our concern as to what transpires in the region is more immediate due to our proximity. The question of what Britain might do in the Pacific is concerned solely with monetary values; but the same question applied to the United States deals with human lives and the general welfare of the American people, for we are close enough to become embroiled in any conflict that might arise out of the present undeclared Sino-Japanese war.

Since their invasion of Shanghai and North China, the Japanese have demonstrated in no uncertain terms, in both words and already, since the outbreak of no interference with their expansion plans on the Asiatic mainland.

As an indication of what the Japanese might do if interference by Occidental powers, they have already, since the outbreak of hostilities at Shanghai and within that limited area, destroyed foreign owned property, confiscated foreign property wounded citizens of the International Settlement inwas scheduled for that day, refreshments were served.

The next meeting will be held on December 15th at the home of Mrs. Ed Fowler.

cluding the British ambassador to China, and twice insulted the American flag.

Now that Shanghai has fallen, the Nippontse art in full control of the Chinese customs houses which yield over $100,000,000 yearly in taxes as well as the telegraph telephone and wireless services. The next step, foreign diplomats believe will be to restrict importations of foreign goods into China as was done in Manchuria after the Japanese conquest.

The point this writer wishes to emphasize is that the Japanese are now in full control of North China and the area around Shanghai. With the seizure of the Chinese customs the first step in the expulsion of the Western powers from the Orient was accomplished. As Japan consolidates its hold upon China, the grip of the European and American powers will decrease to the point of nullity.

The question at hand is, will the United States make the costly blunder of opposing the fait accompli of Japanese occupation of China in order to protect the interests of European powers?

The United States has little to lose in the Orient as a result of the Japanese conquests both from the standpoint of actual monetary values and likewise in comparison to the losses incurred by the European governments. The sensible and logical policy for this country to pursue is to withdraw as gracefully as possible from China once the Japanese make their policy clear. Above all things, the United States should not permit itself to become embroiled against Japan in order to preserve the investments of Britain, primarily, and to a lesser extent France, in China.

Since Spanish-American war days the British have striven to keep the U. S. interested colonially in the Pacific. Britain prevented an attack upon the American battle fleet of Admiral Dewey in Manila Bay by the Germans shortly before the destruction of the Spanish fleet in 1898. This they did in order to assure American victory in the Orient and lead to the American annexation of the Philippine Islands. Once Uncle Sam was anchored in the Orient, they reasoned, they would have an ally to aid in the maintenance of their possessions in China and to combat the rising new Japanese empire.

As a further evidence of British desire to keep the U. S. in the Pacific Britain openly opposed granting the Philippines commonwealth status and providing for their freedom in a decade. They realized fully that once Uncle Sam withdrew from Manila, they would be left virtually alone to confront Japan; no pleasing prospect with Italy and Germany gnawing at the British lion's vitals in the Mediterranean Sea and North Sea, respectively.

That is why Uncle Sam should use caution in his dealings in the Orient. Britain did not hesitate to draw this country into the last world war by insidious propaganda in order to save her own skin; would she hesitate in order to preserve her Chinese investments? I do not think she would.

As will be shown in a later article, the United States has interests and investments of its own to protect and preserve in this hemisphere where the Facist state of Europe are seeking to inject their hideous principles of government into our neighboring states and at the same time running away with American trade, without venturing 7,000 miles into the Pacific for an affair with the Japanese.

SYNOPSIS

Just before the discovery of oil at Titusville, Pa., in 1859, Sally Watterson comes to the town with her father's medicine show. She meets Peter Cortlandt, a young farmer who is drilling for oil on his property. On their wedding day, Cortlandt's first well comes in as a gusher. The farmers organize to ship the oil to Eastern refineries but a group of capitalists, headed by Walter Brennan, puts obstacles in their path by placing exorbitant freight rates on oil shipments. With such rates, it is impossible for the farmers to ship with a profit and they are stymied. But Cortlandt, by watching a waterspout on a rainy day, conceives the idea of piping the oil to the refineries.

CHAPTER VII

SALLY thought Molly was ready, now, to try for the job with Pop Bowers' circus. Molly was dubious, conscious of her limitations—perhaps she was awed by Sally's superior artistry as a singer—but she was willing to take the chance.

"The circus is over at Petroleum City," said Sally. "That's not much of a drive. . . . I know Pop'll like you. So don't be scared. Sides, he's a friend o' Pa's and mine."

She did not have time to see Peter before they left. Indeed, she had seen even less of Peter lately than ever before. At the head of the farmers, he had ridden out every day before dawn to return long after midnight. Sally felt almost like a widow.

They were laying the pipe line. Slowly, like an enormous iron snake crawling, the pipe moved forward, reaching toward the refineries. Over in Philadelphia, Brennan and his crowd, after a moment of worry and surprise that even had shaken the smooth, ruthless-ness of Brennan himself, had rallied. Brennan had figured an answer to the pipe line. They would simply block it by buying a strip of land across its right of way. In this they were almost successful, but one section, vital to both sides, they could not buy. This belonged to one Joe Varesi, a gambler who owned the famous Hunky Dory, a honkytonk in Petroleum City. Joe bided his time. So the struggle was dead-locked.

But the farmers, uneasy at first because of Brennan's move, took heart. Peter, Rafe Moulton and Jim Tackpole were delegated to talk to him. If Joe's section were disposed of the way was clear for the pipe line. Peter, Rafe and Jim arrived in Petroleum City just before Sally and Molly. They entered the Hunky Dory just ahead of the girls and closeted themselves in Varesi's office. Sally came to the notorious place because she had heard that Pop Bowers was here. He was at the bar.

Pop, after his first shock at seeing Sally in such a dive, and with an certain look at Molly, finally con- tented to listen to Molly's singing. So Molly tried. It was dismal. A fright assailed the girl, much Sally's chagrin.

"Wait, Pop!" cried Sally. She was desperate. "We'll do it together. All needs is a little confidence." Together they sang. Together they were excellent, because of Sally. The place warmed to them and Molly, thrilled at once more being a performer, the center of attention, and doubly excited after the long months of Peter's seeming neglect of her, responded.

Inside Varesi's office, meanwhile, Peter and his friends were arguing. Peter was aghast. For Joe Varesi had asked, as payment for the strip of land he held, that Peter deed over the hill where he and Sally had planned their house. Joe had somehow learned of the vast treasure of oil beneath it.

"You can't do that to me!" exclaimed Peter. "It means too much. My wife and I planned our house there."

"Too bad," said Joe softly. He shrugged. "Too bad for farmer; too bad for pipe line; too bad you lose all you got."

"He's got us, Peter," said Rafe. "It's that, or nothing."

Peter's face twisted with his emotion. His hill! Her hill! He remembered their dreams for it, their plans, their happy hours there. But he also remembered his ideal, his dream of supplying oil for the world; and he remembered the cour-wild around the country with people gawkin' at you!" He might have noticed that her remorse was turning to anger, but his own anger was too great. "Maybe—" he wanted to hurt her now—"maybe you'd like that better'n bein' a married woman!"

"Maybe I would!" she screamed. "Come to think of it, I was havin' fun! More fun than sittin' home doin' nothin'!" Her voice was shrill. "I'm not good at that, do you hear? I want to be useful to somebody, even if it's only to a lot o' strangers, makin' 'em happy by singin' to 'em!"

"Please, Meesta Cortlandt," Peter turned. Varesi had slipped in the door. He held paper, pen and ink. "You sign contract now, get transfer of deed, everything close up. You just sign letter giving hill to Joe—" "Hill!" Sally leaped to her feet. "Not our hill, Peter! He can't mean our hill!"

Their anger was gone now, their quarrel forgotten. Peter looked at her in misery.

"I got to let it go, Sally," he said huskily. "I got other people to think about."

"No! Oh no! Think o' some- thin' else, Peter, please. We're goin' to live out our lives there. You said so. Oh don't Peter!" Desperate, she grabbed his arm.

"There's no other way, Sally," he said miserably. "I've already given my word." Gently, he disengaged her hand, signed the paper.

She stood silent, stricken with her despair, until she said dully: "The oil wells—the pipe line—you've thrown everything away for 'em." She slumped into a chair. "All right, if it means nothin' to you, it means nothin' to me, then. Nothin' matters! Nothin' in the world!" She could not keep back her tears and Peter, his heart sick, would have gone to her, but Joe Varesi restrained him.

"Better come across da street an' attend to transfer. . . . She'll feel better when we come back. Joe know women."

Peter hesitated, then followed the Italian.

Left alone, Sally sobbed her grief out in the strange room. But she stiffened as she heard, outside, the blaring of a band, and, looking out the window, saw, coming down the street, a colorful caravan with flags waving, Pop Bowers' circus. It was moving on to another town.

And something broke within her. She did not understand the oil fight, the issues, the forces involved; she only understood that she was lonely and neglected and now Peter had sold her hill. And he had left her alone in her misery! Actually left her!

So nothing mattered to him. At least she didn't. He had sacrificed everything he loved—or professed to love—to his accursed oil.

The band was gay. Involuntarily, Sally smiled, her eyes brightening. With sudden decision, she opened the window, slipped to the ground. In a moment, she was running after the circus. She swung on to one of the wagons as it rounded a corner at the end of Petroleum City's main street.

Together they sang. The place warmed to them and Sally, thrilled at once more being a performer and doubly excited after the long months of seeming neglect of her, responded.

age of the farmers who were with him in this fight. He closed his eyes. "All right, Joe," he said horsely. "You get it."

"Ah," said Varesi softly. "You sensible. You wait here now. Joe go get papers." He left the office.

Peter stood there, eyes closed, thinking of Sally, of their hill. Then his eyes flew open as he listened intently. Through the door, faintly, came the sound of Sally's voice.

Eyes wide with disbelief, he rushed to the door, flung it open and his face froze with shock at what he saw.

Sally was there, dancing on a table, surrounded by the habitués of the saloon. They laughed and jested coarsely, but she seemed not to hear. Although she knew instinctively that Molly would not get the job, she was making the most of this moment. It was her first real excitement since her marriage.

Then she saw Peter. Grimly, he hurried to her, lifted her from the table, pulled her, frightened, inside Varesi's office.

"Peter!" she cried. Even though she had enjoyed herself, she was frightened at his face, frightened because he had caught her, remorseful that he had seen her there. "Pop Bowers was here," she went on quickly. "I was tryin' to get Molly a job! Really Peter. That's all. Please believe me, Peter."

But his eyes blazed. "Dancin' on a table in a cheap barroom! You can't do things like that! But maybe you'd like to be back runnin'

IN MEMORY OF J. C. GRAHAM

J. C. Graham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Graham, died October 31, 1937, at Arlington Texas; and was laid to rest in the Graham Cemetary under a mass of beautiful flowers; these flowers alone would speak the life of this fine young man; his life was as the beautiful flower to-day in full bloom of youth and tomorrow gone.

He leaves a wife, Mrs. Lovie Graham of Arlington, a father and mother, one brother and a host of friends to mourn his departure.

He was a noble young man and had a fine personality, a dutiful son and a kind and loving husband.

He gently sleeps under the sod, awaiting to go home to live with God.

Now his troubles are over; Jesus has called him home.

No more suffering and sorrow, never more this old world will roam,

Weep not dear loved ones for him.

His troubles here are over;

he has gone to live with Jesus on that bright and happy shore. It is hard to part with our loved ones.

It fills our hearts with pain. But we have this consolation, Our loss is Heaven's gain.

TURKEY GROWERS REPORT IMPROVEMENT IN TEXAS TURKEY INDUSTRY

AUSTIN, DEC. 3—Turkey raising in Texas, although frequently carried on as a side line by farmers for many years, is also now regarded as an important source of revenue in those sections of the state particularly adapted to the commercial production of the turkeys it was pointed out in a recent survey of the industry by Mrs. Clara H. Lewis, editorial assistant in the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research.

"The principal producing region of the State include the Brady-Frownwood area and the Cuero-Yrakum area where climate conditions are favorable to the raising of turkeys, where abundant feedstuffs and suitable range are available, and where large primary markets have been established conveniently accessible to the producing sections", Mrs. Lewis said.

"To the efforts of Farm Demonstrators and turkey growers associations is due the credit for much of the improvement in the quality of Turkeys raised on Texas farms during recent years; and the educational work of these organizations has been an important factor in making the turkey industry more profitable to Texas farmers. Dressed turkey shows and other types of turkey exhibits are held every year at several points in the state for the purpose of demonstrating to producers the most desirable varieties and qualities of birds necessary to command the highest market prices. Annual training schools are also conducted each fall for each fall for those wishing to quality as licensed graders, who are necessary at shipping points to insure uniform grading and maintain Government standards. Both live and dressed birds are graded as prime, choice or commercial, according to the quality of Turkeys offered for sale; and these grades are used when the turkeys are sold to the consumer, so that the same grade standards are applied as a basis of quality for both producer and consumer.

"The establishment of turkey-dressing plants in most of the marketing centers of the State makes it profitable for by far the greater number of Turkeys to be shipped as dressed turkeys.

"Reports received by the Bureau of Business Research indicated that 1,157 carloads of dressed turkeys and 64 cars of live turkeys were shipped from Texas stations to interstate points during the 1936 season from Wichita Falls, Brady, Plainview, Sherman, Brownwood, Fort Worth, San Angelo, Eastland, San Antonio, Gonzales, Cuero, and other cities in the State. These figures represent rail shipments only and do not account for the movement of turkeys by truck which are sold largely for local consumption, but for which no data are available.

"Government reports, based on returns from more than 7 thousand producers, estimate that the turkey crop will be approximately 10 per cent less than that of 1936 for the country as a whole; however, by the same authority, the estimated number of Turkeys produced in Texas is only 2 per cent below that of last year. The average weight of Texas turkeys this year is expected to be 14.7 pounds, which is two-tenths of a pound below the average estimated for the country as a whole.

"The improvement in grade of Texas turkeys is illustrated by the fact that in 1934 only 42 per cent of the total production marketed were of first quality, 53 per cent graded first in 1935 and 67 per cent in 1936. The work of improving the quality of turkeys is continuing, and it is predicted that the percentage of prime grade turkeys shipped from Texas this year will be higher than for any year in the past.

"Turkey eggs sell for 13 or 14 cents per egg, and one marketing association reports that 239,779 eggs sold from Texas to Northern hatcheries this year yielded $33,747.50.

"The value of Turkeys in Texas in 1929 was $8,645,685 or about one third that of chickens. The turkey raising industry in this State has profited by such favorable publicity at the "Turkey Trot" which attracts thousands of visitors to Cuero every two years, special exhibits of live and dressed turkeys, and other forms of advertising. Of the 676,114 farms reporting production of turkeys in 1935 in the United States, 114,004 were in Texas, and although Texas produces more turkeys than any other state, it is probable that a still greater percentage of the nation's supply of turkeys will come from Texas in the future."

this legend: "Why not buy our lamps; they are the cheapest in Carthage?" The price, one drachm, was also cut into the clay. Can the fellow who thinks advertising is a new and costly "fad" want any better evidence that it is as old as the hills? And can't he find a lesson in the fact that if advertising was good in the early days of the world when it was difficult to get an ad before the public that it ought to be better now that millions read them? It's worth thinking over, anyhow, and we pass it on for the consideration of our non-advertising friends with the hope that they will decide to show as much enterprise as the old merchants of Carthage—that they will make the balance of 1937 and all of 1938 the best months in their history—a thing that can be done through printers ink.

WITH THE SHIP OF STATE

Washington, D. C. If you want a definite idea of what will go on in these United States during the next six months you needn't wade thru the pages of the Congressional Record. Consult, instead, the passenger list of the White House yacht Potomac on its recent fishing trip.

Harold Ickes, secretary of the Interior and boss of the PWA is there. He is there because business which a few short months ago was crying for the end of federal spending has now reversed its attitude and is pleading for a new 'priming' of government money. The presence of Mr. Ickes argues that plan for this new priming is under way.

Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator is there because it has now become certain that the relief rolls will continue to rise sharply. The question must be decided of whether this increase will be taken care of entirely by home relief or whether WPA must be re-expanded to share the burden.

On the Potomac, too, is Robert H. Jackson, assistant attorney general in charge of the work of curbing trusts and reputed the ablest man in his department.

Jackson's superior, Attorney General Cummings, is rumored to be opposed to the trust busting plan. More, he is rumored to be unsympathetic to many other administration policies and projects. And F. D. R., it is whispered, wouldn't mind if Mr. Cummings took his hat and went away.

But Jackson's presence on the Potomac does more than indicate he is the President's main stay in the attorney general's department. Mr. Roosevelt, it must be remembered, has asked the federal Trade Commission to study the sharp increase in living costs and to determine whether these soaring prices are the result of monopolistic manipulation.

Mr. Jackson may be expected to recommend some very drastic legislation designed to curb, in future, such excessive profit taking as in the past year which finally resulted in the collapse of the pocketbook of the buying public and the present check in the tide of recovery.

No matter what plans are made either by the President and his advisors or by Congress it is certain that there will be no balanced budget this year. Federal expenditure will increase.

It has been pointed out, however, that if these increased expenditures bring about a result similar to that of the last four years, it will be money well spent.

On June 30, 1933 the national debt was just under twenty billion as against a national income of just under forty billion.

On June 30, 1937 the national debt was just over twenty seven billion as against a national income of sixty five billion.

In '33 the debt was fifty per cent; in '37 it was forty two.

Either figure is a long way

PURMELA EX-STUDENTS CLUB

The Purmela ex-students club held its regular meeting Wednesday night December first. It was decided to meet next Monday night, Dec. 6th, to organize an orchestra under the supervision of Mrs. Will Lewis who will be our orchestra director.

The following program was presented: a piano duet by A. R. Printer Jr. and Mrs. Will Lewis, jokes were read by George Bertrand, Crystal gazing by Ometra Thetford, and violin and guitar music by Billie Laxson and Eustace Cox.

The next club meeting will be December fifteenth.

Austin, Tex. —The computed farm cash income for Texas during October, representing about 90 percent of the actual cash income, was $71,178,000, according to Dr. F. A. Buechel, assistant director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research. This compared with $101,957,000 for September and $80,783,000 for October last year.

Since the computed average cash income during the base period, 1928-1932, is approximately $101,000,000, the October index, or the percentage of this year's October income to the average October income during the five years 1928-32, is 70.2. This compares with 88.4 for September and 79.7 for October last year. Thus the decline in farm cash income from October, 1936 is about 12 percent. Total farm cash income for the first ten months of this year, $439,724,000 is still 33 per cent above the $329,016,000 during the corresponding period last year.

Miss Wana Key of Van Alstyne sister of Mrs. Fred G. Schwarz is a guest in the Schwarz home.

INTERSCHOLASTIC LEAGUE

For a number of years more than 30 schools out of the 46 have been active participating members of the Interscholastic League in Coryell county. Last year several schools desired to take part in this work but let the date of enrollment pass before Application was filed. We hope that every principal in the County will make it a business to know whether the school under his care desires to do interscholastic league work this year and he will begin work at once. The training for the contest is where the average school and its pupils receive their greatest benefit. Comparison with others after training is a good test and sharpens the wits of bright boys and girls who have been no real reason for putting forth their best in study.

The closing date for paying fees is January 15th. No school that desires to receive full value for its pupils should wait until the last hour to enroll. The Rules and Leaguer are needed now. These are sent as soon as the fee is sent in.

A list of officers and Directors for the Interscholastic League off Coryell County will be published next week. Watch the papers for further information of the League work.

MINNESOTA WAGING DRASTIC WAR ON HIGHWAY DEATHS

MINNEAPOLIS—One of the most far-reaching and intensive highway safety campaigns in the history of the automobile is now being launched by the state of Minnesota. Highway officials, armed with wide powers granted by the state legislature, are moving boldly to put into effect one of the most ambitious state-wide traffic control schemes ever attempted on such a large scale.

The biggest job to be done is the zoning of Minnesota's 11,500 miles of highway—a task of enormous proportions because every mile of road has to be checked to determine its speed classification—30, 45 or 60 miles an hour. The maximum speed for cities and towns will be 30 miles an hour; 45 for good secondary roads; 60 for modern super-highways during daylight hours.

As the first step in putting the new system in effect throughout Minnesota, N. W. Ellisberg, state highway commissioner, is setting up a "laboratory" on the one-hundred-and-fifty-mile stretch of road from Elk River to Grand Rapids. In this "test-tube" zone are being posted according to road and traffic conditions. The arrangement and design of signs indicating the zone—a factor vital to efficient functioning of the plan—are also being studied.

Minnesota's first test of the zoning system is being watched with intense interest by highway and safety authorities in other states, particularly by those officials who believe that zoning in conjunction with a new mechanical speed control for automobiles offers the most effective means for checking death-dealing speed.

The zone-o-trol, as the device is called, has a dashboard switch with points corresponding to the Minnesota speed zones. In other words, Mr. X, driving in a 45 mile-an-hour zone, turns the switch to forty-five and his car won't go any faster. There's no interference with the motor or pick-up and he can take a hill as usual—up to 45. At the same time, blue lights on front and rear of his car indicate to police, insurance inspectors and other motorists that Mr. X is complying with the law. Green lights indicate that the car is limited to sixty miles an hour and red lights show that the control is set at 30. Though the device has no official standing in Minnesota's zoning law, officials say privately that zone-o-trol would render an inestimable service in making zoning work.

Other features of Minnesota's new Highway Traffic Regulation Act which have attracted wide attention provide heavy penalties for hitch-hiking and for failure to dim headlights within 500 feet of an approaching vehicle. The law also goes after the "road hog" by requiring the driver of an overtaking vehicle to give way immediately upon sound of the passing car's horn, and he may not increase his speed until the overtaking car has completely passed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—A second week of the Session has gone by and the Agricultural Committees of both Houses have brought in farm bills but I don't believe that anyone fully understands either bill. The Senate Bill is 97 pages long and the House Bill is 86. I have tried to read and understand them. I have read them both and I make no claim that I understand either bill. The Senate bill is so confusing and involved that I have given up so far as it is concerned. I am still working with the house bill. This morning I met with a group of other members of the Department of Agriculture. We spent two hours trying to agree among ourselves what the bill meant. It undoubtedly has some good features but it is so involved that one member of the Committee, that brought it out, said that it should carry an appropriation to buy a black board, five pound of chalk, a calendar, a logarithm table and a sliderule for every farmer, and I am inclined to agree with him.

We should have a simple bill—one that everyone can understand. Last Monday I introduced a bill of eleven pages which I believe covers the cotton problem and which I believe anyone can understand. My bill would guarantee the farmer 20 cents per pound on his share of the domestically consumed part of the crop—about one-half of an average year's production. It would limit the protected market to ten bales per family unit engaged in production and would thereby require the large operator to either place tenants on his farms or take the world price for his cotton. It would wipe out the present cotton bases and make the farmer's future base dependent on the size and productivity of his whole farm and not simply on the amount of cotton he has produced in the past.

I hope that there may be some turn of events so that we may compromise on this or some similar plan. There are many groups in Congress who don't want any farm bill. There are other groups, as the dairy and poultry interests who want to require us to leave idle any acres aken out of cotton. They fear that these acres will be used to compete with them. From their standpoint they can hardly be blamed but I feel that it would be nothing short of tragedy to require our people to leave land unused. Idle acres means idle people. More idle people means increased relief and lower wages. Neither the government nor labor can afford this. The farmer must have a greater income if industry is to have a market. Industry must have a market if labor is to get employment. Labor must get employment if the government is to reduce the relief burden. Everyone's welfare is tied up with the problem of increasing the farmer's income.

However, all legislation is a result of compromise and I still hope to get a fair compromise but I want our people to realize that it is very unlikely that we will be able to get any bill that will not be very disappointing. While, as I have said before it will be hard to write a farm bill that I will not vote for, if it has any good in it, I can not but feel that any farm bill should as a minimum, do three things: First, change the base on which benefits are paid so that the small Farmer who diversified in the past will not be penalized; Second, make some provision for larger returns to the landlord who uses farm families than the operator who displaces his tenants and third, if at all possible, guarantee a fair price for a fair share of the total crop. Personally, I believe this share should be one half of the total crop normally consumed in the United States, but if some other method of arriving at the share on which the guarantee should be paid can be devised, I expect to support it.

There are a lot of talk in the House on every subject under the sun but no action of any importance, except that on farm legislation and I have been so intensely interested in this problem that I have had time for little else. I was, however, one of six who organized a Peace Forum for members of Congress—a forum where we could discuss the maintenance of Peace. We held our last meeting last Tuesday night and heard an address by Secretary of State Hull, who after his speech answered questions in a most interesting and instructive manner. We are now inviting the Chinese and the Japanese Ambassadors (on separate night) and we hope to provide interesting and instructive programs with the aim of keeping this country out of war.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—There's cash money waiting for a new idea in nightclubs—But new!—They've tried them every where from Subway level up to the top of Rockefeller centre—From the East side slums to the middle of Central park—in extables and in ex-Churches—they've run the Gamut of Decor for the dizzy Zebra Strappings of El Morro through Ship's innards and South Sea reaches to haymows and horseshoes—now they want something different—and if you didn't know it—most any of the cafe's will lend you a waitress if you refuse to lug your own tray. While some of the swank hotels and night clubs have glorified cafeterias—no counters but food set out on tables—for the gobbiers who have an after luncheon date or want to be in for the first act—latest night club nutness—community singing for them that ain't spry enough for community dancing—like the big table—so maybe the great new idea will be a club with community eating—one big table like the old time boarding house down by the tacks—Noticed how Marlene Dietrich did the mighty Macintosh at La Conga with that Princeton undergrad who just barged up and asked her—But she's doing the rounds with dapper dancer Clifton Webb—The Ranees of Sarawak whose daughter just welded with that Raslin feller in London—just to keep you straight the Ranees could be plain Mrs. Brooke—her husband's granduncle was an Englishman who promoted himself to Raja high on to a 100 years ago—Jen Hall of 'Hurricane' getting the Oh and the Ah from debutantes with a Tarzen yen—Loretta Young who is going to the top the Cinema ladies of 37' and who has learned how to act besides—Twelve Broadway hits are playing to standing room only—But seven of them will never be seen in films—including 'Julius Caesar' and wouldn't W. Shakespeare turn over twice if he knew what his royalties would be if he were around to collect—A boost to the Piccadilly bar's new lectric indicator that gets back to your seat on time after the admission—and places worth while—the new lounging bar of the Astor—and Frances Farmer will probably get the order of the Dragon or whatever the Chinese Legion of honor is—she refuses to wear Jap silk stockings—uses dixie cotton ones instead and says so in the program of 'Golden Boy'—and in case you were worried about it one enlisted man in the whole U. S. was born in Japan—just to make a lucky or unlucky—thirteen the opera too played to standing room at its annual opening—society's top-hat and Tiara promenade—But don't think for one minute that all the seats were filled—the ultra ultra's parade the halls and the foyer and the bar—its only the gallery goes to hear the singing.

GAS INCREASE IN WELL AFTER SHOT

The T. K. O'Neal Doyle No 1 well near Ireland was given a shot of 130 quarts of nitroglycerine Tuesday afternoon, according to reports received at the News office. The shot was placed to cover several stratas above the bottom of the hole, which is 3,300 feet. Gas pressure increased after the shot.

The hole did not bridge and the bailer was sent to within 80 feet of the bottom following the shot. It will be necessary to clean the hole before determining whether or not the oil showing has increased.

"Dad" Joiner, who is now interested in the project, was present at the time of the shooting—Hamilton County News.

THE STANDARD

STANDARD FORD V-8 . . . 112" wheelbase; 85 or 60 horse-power engine; Improved Easy-Action Safety Brakes; Center-Poise Ride; All-steel body; Broadcloth or Mohair upholstery, Mohair extra in "60"; Mahogany-finished trim; One tail light, sun visor; Twin horns; 3 body types; 3 colors.

FORD offers two new cars for 1938—the Standard Ford V-8 and the De Luxe Ford V-8. They are different in appearance—but built to the same high standard of mechanical excellence—on the same chassis.
Because people liked our 1937 car so well, they bought more than of any other make. They liked its looks, its smooth performance, and the way it handled. We have improved on that car in the newly styled Standard Ford V-8.
But some folks wanted still more size and style, with the same Ford advantages. For them, we designed a new De Luxe line.
The De Luxe Ford V-8 Sedans are longer with more room, larger luggage space, and finer appointments all around.

De Luxe cars are equipped with the 85-horsepower engine only.
The Standard is even lower priced than the De Luxe. It has graceful new lines and well-tailored interiors—with a choice of engine sizes—85 or 60 horsepower.
Before Ford made V-type 8-cylinder engines available to every one, they were used only in expensive cars. Since then, four million Ford owners have learned the genuine enjoyment of driving an eight-cylinder car with all-around economy. The thrifty "60" engine, especially, makes possible in Standard models a very low first cost and equally low operating cost. With two distinct designs, two engine sizes and two price ranges, you'll find a 1938 Ford car to fit your needs exactly.

PRICES FOR CARS DELIVERED IN DETROIT—TAXES EXTRA
Standard Ford V-8 (60 hp.)—Coupe, $599; Tudor, $644; Fordor, $689. Standard Ford V-8 (85 hp.)—Coupe, $629; Tudor, $669; Fordor, $714.
