District Court Slows Up: Civil Cases Are Principal Ones

District court since our last issue has slowed up considerably, with the Civil Docket taking the forefront again, and the cases so far settled in court are:

Case settled out of Court
Ellis J. Morgan et al vs. Dr. John Thomas Brown; et al; suit for damages; was settled out of court; with the plaintiff settling for $1,750.

Although at the first of the January term, a large number of cases were on docket, no information has been released that indicates how many of these would be settled, or whether they are to be postponed until another term of court.

"IN THE LAND OF THE GOOD WITCH", YES EGGSACTLY

"In the land of the Good Witch" to be more explicit, they have eggs 3 inches long, and one and three-fourths thick, and what's more lots of them, according to A. J. Winslar of King.

Anyway, he has brought us a sample, and he says he has 500 pullets that lay this kind of eggs and gets about seven and one-half dozen of these big beauties every day.

Most of these chickens are 2 years old pullets, and the eggs are smooth shell, and the majority of them only have one yolk, Mr. Winslar says. They also have the largest breast bones he ever saw outside of a Turkey.

$630.00 Decoration Fund For Post Office Is Gotten By Poage

According to a letter received yesterday from Congressman W. R. (Bob) Poage of this district announces the fact that he has received from the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department, reservation of a sum amounting to $630 for the decoration of the Gatesville Post office.

Continuing, Mr. Poage says: "This money is to be spent for the painting of a mural in the lobby and the plan of the Department is to select the work from sketches to be submitted by artists of our region in a competition at Dallas which closes May 2, 1938."

Designs must be submitted to Mr. Richard F. Howard, Dallas Museum of Fine Arts on or before that date. This competition is open to artists from a number of states and is awarded for the Dallas office but as a result of this work artists will be selected to do the work at Gatesville and I have the promise of Mr. E. B. Rowan, Supt. of the Section of Painting and Sculpture that in so far as possible local artists will be selected.

"It, therefore, occurs to me that if any of our people have any Texas artists in mind that they would like to have do this work that they ask them to submit sketches at Dallas. I think it would also be well to have locally interested parties, such as luncheon clubs and various other clubs such as women's club to be giving some thought to the character of the murals desired and I assure you I shall be happy to cooperate to the best of my ability to get something worthwhile and pleasing to the community."

To the voters of Beat 2, Coryell county:

In making the race for Commissioner, first of all, I wish to say that I shall very much appreciate it if those who do not know me will investigate my previous record as a citizen of Coryell County. February 2, Wednesday, is Groundhog Day!

From time immemorial or something to that effect, this more or less mythical animal has been the U. S. Weather Bureau on this date, in fact, he is sworn by more than even the Weather Bureau.

He started his predictions before the weather bureau, evidently and if on this fateful day, February 2, he appears, and sees as much as a faint shadow he'll go back in his hole in the ground and stay, for is it, six weeks, we believe that's right. Then, merchants locally will hold off their Spring selling and let you have Winter clothing for at least the next six weeks.

It'll all happen Wednesday!

REVS. STANFORD, P. E. HERE, AND CHUNN, BALLINGER, GO TO FT. WORTH

Meeting here Friday with pastors and laymen of the Gatesville district, and with some of the presiding elders of the Central Texas conference, Bishop H. A. Boaz of Ft. Worth presiding officier of the conference announced that the Gatesville district is absorbed by the other nine districts, effective Feb 15 at the close of the first quarter.

Changes announced were settled at a meeting held in Fort Worth last Friday of Bishop Blaz and his cabinet. It was stated that the appointments were affected by reason of the death Jan. 12 last of Rev. A. D. Porter, this leaving vacant the Central Methodist pastorate at Fort Worth. Named to succeed him was Rev. M. M. Chunn, pastor at Ballinger, and former pastor of Herring Avenue church Waco. Rev. Frank Turner is shifted from Matthews Memorial church Ft. Worth, to Ballinger.

Rev. E. R. Stanford, outgoing presiding elder of the Gatesville district, is assigned to Matthews Memorial, Fort Worth. Eight ministers of the present 10 districts are affected as a result of the changes made.

The Gatesville district was composed of Coryell, Hamilton, Bosque and part of McLennan county will be included in the Waco district. Bosque and Hamilton counties go to the Cleburn district.

No change was made in presiding elders, save the transfer of Rev. Stanford to Fort Worth. Dr. W. W. Ward remains presiding elder of the Waco district. He was pastor four years of the First Methodist church, Gatesville, then one year at Mexia before being appointed presiding elder.

Changes announced here Friday mean that Rev. Leslie W. Seymour, former pastor of Herring Avenue Methodist church, Waco and assigned last November at the conference sessions to First church Gatesville returns to the Waco district, though remaining at Gatesville.

Due recognition was given lateral roads in the absorption of the Gatesville district by the other nine districts.

Legion Pushes Hiway Lighting for Traffic Safety

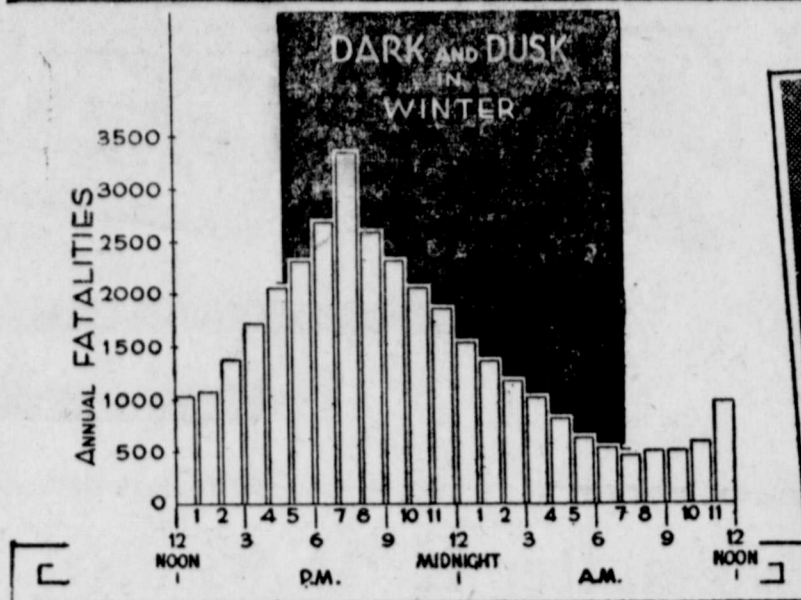

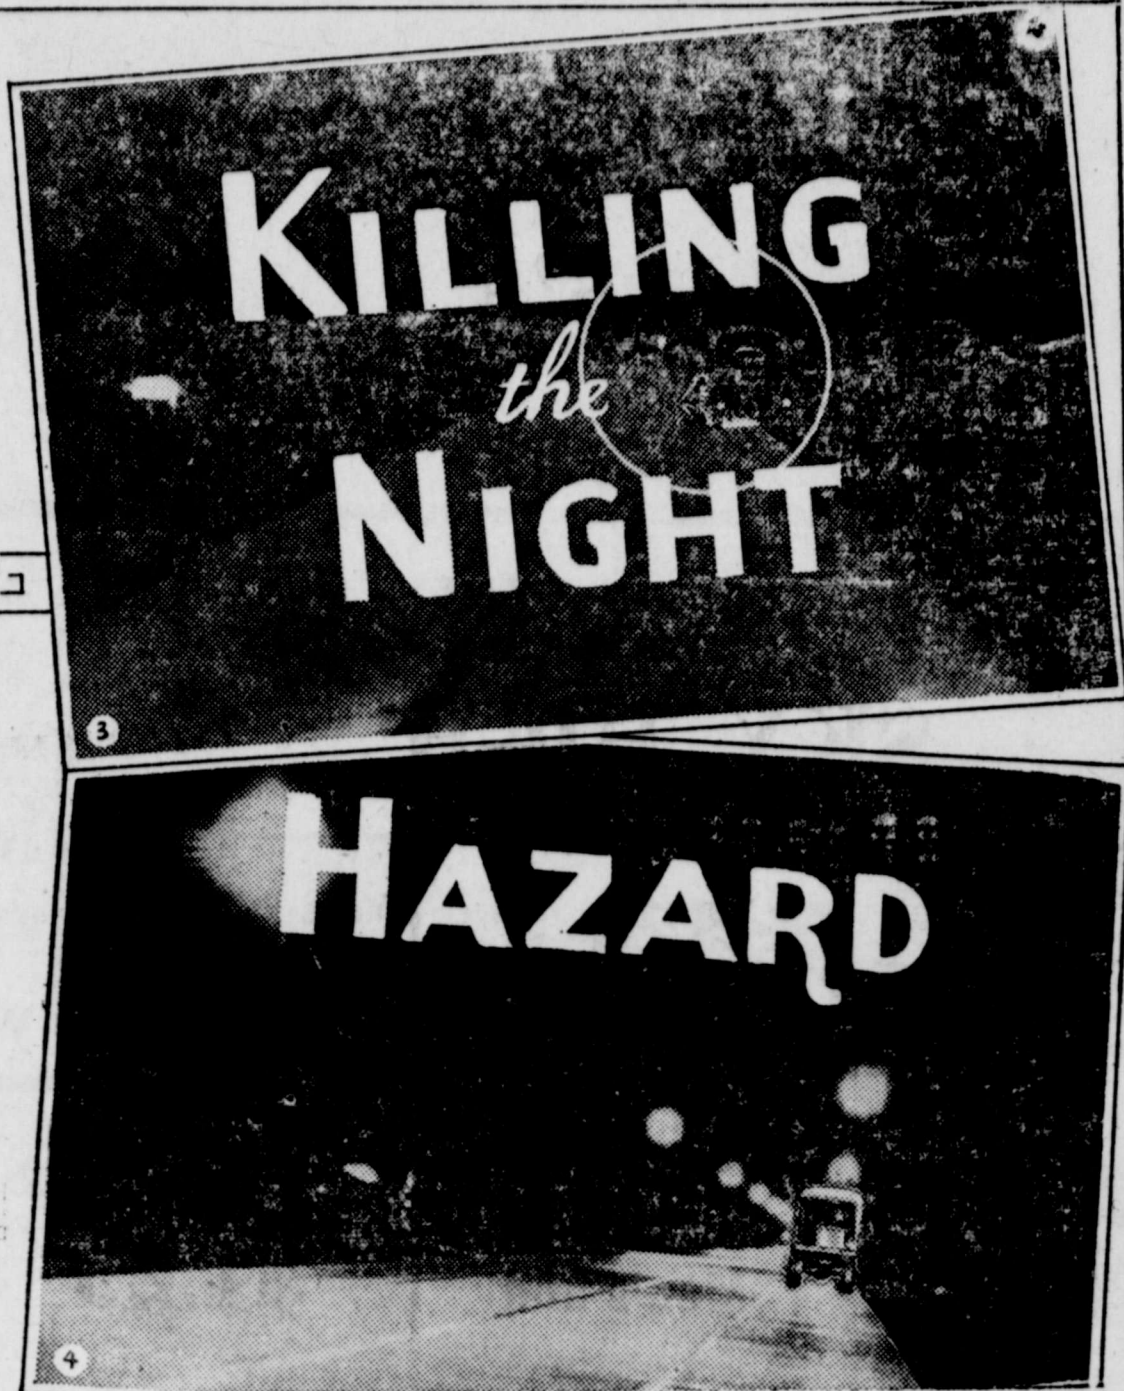

Chart shows low and peak of night traffic fatalities. Note that in the hours of darkness, when only 25 percent of all automobiles are on the road, the death rate is at its highest. Of the 37,800 people killed in traffic accidents in 1936, 23,000 or 60 percent met death after dark. Night driving is six to ten times as dangerous as driving in daylight hours.

Illustrations Nos. 3 and 4

A section of the Skokie Valley Highway, U. S. Route 41, near Northbrook, Illinois, is being tested for night illumination. Top photo shows the highway as it was with old and inefficient lighting system. The man inspecting the tire is barely discernible. Below, the same highway with new lights, showing truck clearly visible, five hundred feet ahead.

THE Department of Illinois of The American Legion has added a fifth point to the four-point highway safety program—that of eliminating the extra hazard of night driving by illuminating the highways. The program is being vigorously pressed by the Department Safety Committee.

Night Deaths to be Halved

Within the first few months of the campaign surveys made by competent traffic engineers indicate that by the adoption of the Legion's proposal the automobile accident record of Illinois, approximating 16,000 each year, will be cut almost in half.

This program is outlined by Matthew J. Murphy, immediate Past

Department Commander of Illinois, under whose administration it was initiated. Past Commander Murphy writes:

"It seems to me that any discussion of street and highway safety leads naturally into the subject of street and highway lighting—a highly effective measure which may be adopted to eliminate the extra hazard of night driving. Lighting the highways will bring about a marked reduction in the number of accidents and fatalities.

Darkness Increases Death

"It is known that with the coming of darkness, when highway traffic is only twenty-five percent of the total traffic, the accident toll increases. While only forty-eight percent of all motor vehicle accidents occur at night, the total of the night accidents accounts for sixty percent of the deaths.

"Lighting of heavily trafficked arterial highways for their entire length and illumination of secondary roads at critical points where accidents are liable to occur is extremely important. In proof of this statement may be cited the experience of Detroit, which recently announced that $3,000,000 would be expended for improved street lighting to replace obsolete installations. This followed a test installation on three modern street lighting projects. Before the new lights were placed there had been forty night automobile fatalities on these streets within a two and one-half year period. The record for the first four months after the modern lighting system was installed was completely free of night-driving fatalities.

Costs Estimated

"In Illinois engineering experts have estimated the cost of satisfactory highway lighting installation at less than ten percent of the initial construction cost of a four-lane highway. Estimates are cited to show that adequate lighting of public streets and highways is not too expensive to consider from the viewpoint of its value as a definite public improvement, when it is realized that the economic loss attributable to automobile accidents each year in the State of Illinois runs into the millions.

"The Legion's campaign for lighting the highways was carried to the State Legislature last year, when the Safety Committee petitioned that body to give consideration to the subject. The result was the adoption by unanimous vote in both Houses of a resolution introduced by Representative Richard J. Daley of Chicago, approving the project and calling upon the proper highway authorities to give study and attention to the proposed system.

Statistics Show Lighting Effective

"Only recently has much data been available on the effect of adequate lighting on the night automobile accident rate. But every recent inquiry has shown that installation of night lighting has reduced tremendously the number of automobile accidents. Arnold H. Vey, traffic engineer of New Jersey, has made a constructive analysis of day and night accidents on a well lighted and heavily traveled section of Route No. 24 and on a lightly traveled, but unlighted, section of Route No. 26. On the first—the lighted route—the accident rate per million vehicle miles was 3.10 by day and 2.61 by night. On the unlighted route the average for three sections was 2.50 by day and 8.00 at night. Another striking example is had in the accident records on the Mt. Vernon Memorial Highway, which indicated a 250 percent increase in night accidents with lights out of service as compared with the rate for an equal period when lights were used.

Human Life Saved

"Human life can be conserved by safe highways, made safe by mass education of motorists and pedestrians, including school children, in the safe manner of using streets and roads; impartial enforcement of traffic laws; uniform traffic regulations, and removal of physical traffic hazards. We in the Department of Illinois think it logical that, in its nation-wide campaign for accident prevention, The American Legion well may consider the elimination of darkness on highways as its fifth front of attack."

SYNOPSIS

In the 1840's, Ramsay McKay, handsome express agent, starts America by establishing an express service from the Atlantic seaboard to St. Louis. While in the Missouri city, he falls in love with Justine Pryor, an aristocratic Southern belle. McKay's company decides to extend its service to California and he is drafted to map out possible trade routes to that point. In company with Hank York, hardy plainsman, and the latter's Indian companion, Pawnee, he sets out on the dangerous mission with Justine promising to wait for him.

CHAPTER V

To Justine Pryor, there were days on end within succeeding years when it seemed the "Forever" that she had promised Ramsay McKay to wait for him was far, far too long.

Occasionally, a letter from Ramsay found its way back to St. Louis, by army courier, or casual overland traveller, from some unheard of spot across the trackless West. Such rare communications Justine read, treasured and re-read, holding their contents and the very papers themselves as her only tangible proof that her lover still lived, and still adored her. Now and then, Henry Wells had word of his employee's whereabouts.

Caught up in the military operations which carried the war with Mexico into California, Ramsay McKay, Hank York and Pawnee had gone with the Kearny column to the shores of the Pacific. They had travelled north to Monterey and Yerba Buena, soon after renamed San Francisco; had turned East to the Continental Divide then South and West again, seeking feasible year-around routes from the Mississippi Basin to California. Repeatedly, Ramsay was on the verge of starting back for St. Louis; then, some new trail, some new possibility, some hazardous enterprise withheld him. The last had been the great rush of migration which followed discovery of gold along the Western foothills of the Sierra Nevadas.

Ramsay was working through the mushroom gold camps of booming California when Justine last heard of him in 1849. He was not hunting for gold, but was prospecting opportunity for Wells and Fargo. Everything was in uproarious turmoil, he reported; life was raw, and rough and ready. But, speedily, it would settle to more normal existence; such economic prosperity as the world never had dreamed could exist would build an empire in the West, and of that empire Ramsay McKay meant to be a part. His place in it, he would find through his association with Wells and Fargo, through the type of business service which that firm—his firm—would render to the commonwealth. All this Ramsay wrote and more; once again, he promised that soon now he would be starting for St. Louis, for Justine, and their wedding.

Ramsay McKay wrote that letter in a camp known as Hangtown, metropolis of the placer diggings of California. And he carried it to San Francisco to mail in the new post-office which he had heard had just been opened there. With it he took scores of other letters, which miners and other residents of Hangtown and adjoining gulches had asked him to mail. He was to inquire at the postoffice for letters addressed to various individuals in the camps, and be paid a "pinch of dust"—worth approximately $1—for each letter he carried, or brought back with him.

At the postoffice, however, Ramsay found matters somewhat complicated. Thousands were in line outside the little building waiting their turns at the counter inside where an harassed postmaster and a few clerks were attempting to sort and distribute a tremendous bulk of mail. Regardless of address, each letter for anyone in California was dumped in the lap of the San Francisco postmaster and he had no means of getting it farther. Ramsay studied the long lines of men.

"How long have you been here?" he asked of one nearby.

"Since yestiddy," was the weary reply. "Figger I'll make the counter tonight, mebber?"

Ramsay McKay had an idea. He left the line, went to the rear of the postoffice building, and entered through an unlocked window. From a clerk he learned the identity of the postmaster, and cornered that individual with a proposition.

"I've a list of several hundred men," Ramsay said, "who have authorized me to get their mail. I'll do the hunting myself and pay you twenty-five cents for every letter I find for one of my customers."

Forty-eight hours later the postmaster was richer in pocket by a hundred dollars and Ramsay McKay was on his way back to the diggings with his knapsack bulging. His welcome at Hangtown was proof positive that Wells Fargo service was needed in California.

On his next trip to San Francisco, Ramsay carried several hundred dollars in gold dust for a miner who wished to send funds to his family in the East. With this dust, Ramsay purchased a draft in San Francisco, which he enclosed and mailed in a letter the miner had written. For the service he charged five per cent of the gold's value. Other miners followed with similar commissions and while he had to explain the intricacies of exchange to many, it became generally understood through the camps that Ramsay McKay was trustworthy and any funds entrusted to him would reach their destination.

Ramsay posted a rude sign outside the Hangtown saloon where he made headquarters, announcing that he was agent for the Eastern firm of Wells and Fargo. In San Francisco he transacted business through a banker who, Henry Wells had written, was to be trusted. Wells and Fargo were not officially established in California. Once more the funds to finance a venture had been difficult to obtain; their New York associates were interested in the rising tide of international trade and Henry Wells would not embark on a Pacific Coast enterprise until certain that he would carry it to definite conclusion.

Ramsay's personal express service between San Francisco and the diggings reached a point where he needed help, but Hank York was loath to abandon the wild chance of a rich strike in the "diggin's" until a day when provisions for Pawnee and himself gave out entirely, with no dust in sight, and Ramsay came in from a trip which, he reported, had netted more than $500. On the strength of these circumstances, Hank and Pawnee again threw in with Ramsay who as promptly made plans to return to St. Louis in the following autumn. Hank shrewdly guessed the purpose of the proposed trip with the observation that he'd be proud to welcome Mis' Pryor to Hangtown.

On one of the last round trips he expected to make before starting Eastward, Ramsay was about to leave Hangtown with nearly $4,000 in gold dust to be forwarded for others, when a young miner, Dan Trimball, sought him out to talk over certain personal problems. Trimball was engaged to a girl in the East, had struck it rich, wanted to go East to be married, but feared that his claim would be "jumped" during his absence. Once again, in considering a nother's quandary, Ramsay hit upon an idea.

"Why don't you ship your girl out here?" he asked Trimball.

"How?"

"By Wells Fargo."

Then Ramsay explained that if Trimball wished to send the cost of the girl's trip to the Wells & Fargo offices in St. Louis, which was near the girl's home, they would engage to see that she had comfortable passage down the Mississippi, and to Panama, across the Isthmus and so, by ship to San Francisco—all under the watchful eye of someone known to be trustworthy by Messrs. Wells and Fargo.

"As a matter of fact," Ramsay said, "your girl very probably could travel with Mr. Wells and his associate, John Butterfield. They are coming to California as soon as they have word from me, which I'll be sending on this trip, from San Francisco."

Trimball agreed to the plan enthusiastically, and Ramsay left with his written instructions and gold dust sufficient to pay the charges. The expressman had made up his various gold shipments at the customary table in the rear of the saloon where he made headquarters, and gone past the bar to his waiting horse with no more than ordinary attention to the regular group of hangers-on and customers. Soon after his departure, two men who had been hanging around the camp for several days, paid their score at the bar and left the establishment.

Late that night Ramsay McKay again swung open the saloon door. Gamblers, bartenders, drinkers and bystanders ceased all activity to turn and stare at him as he staggered toward the center of the room and all but collapsed in the arms of Hank York, who jumped to catch him.

In his right hand Ramsay clutched the straps of his mailsack. His left arm hung limp and bleeding. He was plastered from head to foot with mud which around his face and hands was dyed red in ominous fashion.

"Mail's safe," he gasped, "but they got the dust."

"Who?" Hank demanded.

"Don't know. Road agents."

Around the pair gathered a score or more of the curious. Back at the edge of the crowd some case-hardened individual asked, "How much was he carrying?"

"About four thousand," another answered.

Hank York's keen ear caught more than an undertone of suspicion in other remarks around him. A nod to Pawnee, and between them they had Ramsay out of the door and up the gulch into their shack before anyone thought to stop them.

"You go to sleep," Hank ordered, as Ramsay offered half-maudlin explanations. "Tell us about it in the morning."

Once Ramsay had rested, there was little to tell. At a lonely spot in the road below Hangtown he had been held up by two men. When he tried to run for it, his horse had been shot and in falling had carried his rider down a bank at the side of the trail. Hours later Ramsay had recovered consciousness, managed to extricate himself from beneath the dead animal, found his bag of gold-dust gone but the lettersack intact and had made his way back to the saloon.

"You'll have to take this mail to San Francisco," he told Hank, "but I want you to wait until I can write one. I have to send word I will not be coming back this fall, as I had hoped to."

Ramsay was struggling with pencil and paper when Dan Trimball burst in at the door.

"They're coming," he gasped.

"Who?" Ramsay asked.

"The miners. They don't believe you were robbed; they think you pretended that, and stole the money."

From down the trail came the ominous sounds that bore out Trimball's warning. Hank York picked up his Navy-Colts and started for the door. Pawnee a step behind. But, Ramsay was ahead of them.

"No shooting," he ordered. "I'll handle this."

Unarmed, Ramsay McKay stepped through the cabin door to the open, to face that worst of all mobs, the famed and feared and leaderless gang that was wont to term itself a miners' court in the early days of California. All of the men in front of him were heavily armed; some carried their weapons in their hands; two in the front rank swung ropes in menacing fashion.

WORLD COMMENT

Joe Burns

Last week this column quoted some rather startling figures relating to the expenditure of tax money by the Federal Government. It was noted that the Federal budget has not been balanced since June 30, 1930, that since that time the public debt has increased by about $21,000,000,000 and that the Federal Government is spending at the rate of about $8,000,000,000 a year.

Further delving into this maze of figures which tells the true story of government finance, we find that the simplest way to look at the Federal budget is to give it in fractions of a dollar. Editorial Research Reports puts it thus, and only in this way can we find just where the government gets the tax money which it is now spending in such tremendous amounts, and also where those taxes go:

Where The Dollar Goes

"A strong navy is the surest guaranty of peace and the cheapest insurance against war that Uncle Sam can possibly pay." So said President Theodore Roosevelt thirty years ago when asking Congress for more battleships.

President Roosevelt of 1937 like his predecessor, is now asking for more battleships to insure peace. "To keep the peace" he said not long ago, is our fundamental policy. I believe it consistent with our continuing readiness to limit armaments to maintain a defence at sea sufficient to insure the preservation of our democratic ideals.

This fiscal year this country is launching a naval building program which when completed will remove all doubts as to the ability of our navy to protect American shores and possessions.

A recent survey by the United Press shows that the government has under construction or contract 75 new ships: 2 super-dreadnaughts, 2 aircraft carriers a heavy cruiser, 17 submarines 9 light cruisers and 45 destroyers.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Navy Swanson want Congress to authorize the immediate construction of 2 additional superdreadnaughts and 20 smaller craft.

Regardless of the impressiveness of the new program which Congress will probably launch this session toward strengthening naval defenses, the British are in the midst of a rearmament program for their navy which dwarfs that of the U. S.

Speaking at Geneva on Sept. 20, Mr. Anthony Eden the British Foreign Secretary, said: "At present the aggregate tonnage of the principal types of warships actually building for the Royal Navy exceeds 450,000. I take no account in this figure of the ships already launched this year nor of a further 55,000 tons which Parliament has sanctioned and which will shortly be put in hand. The last three naval programs partly completed or in actual execution in the United Kingdom at the present time represent a total expenditure of $650,000,000. Naval personnel is being extended at a rate without precedent in our country in time of peace."

Impressive as these figures are they do not adequately reveal the magnitude of the effort which Britain is now making to restore and consolidate her sea power. Tables published in the Navy Estimates for 1937 show the following combatant and auxiliary units as under construction during the current fiscal year: 5 battleships, 21 cruisers 5 aircraft carriers, 49 destroyers, 19 submarines, 3 depot ships 24 escort, mine sweeping and patrol vessels, 3 gunboats, 17 motor torpedo boats and 2 surveying ships; a total of 148 vessels.

Nor is this the whole story. A new program is to be introduced to Parliament next March and while its details are not yet officially revealed, well informed observers predict three to five battleships, seven cruisers and a generous quota of destroyers, submarines, and other light tonnage. The personnel of the navy, which has jumped from 98,000 to 122,000 in the last few years will be further increased to an approximate total of 125,000 officers and men.

By 1940, when both the American, and British naval rearmament programs will be nearing completion, the combined navies of the world's three great democracies; America, Britain and France; will be capable of maintaining undisputed control of the seas, including the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Mediterranean, without a serious challenge from the navies of Italy, Japan and Germany. When that time comes if war is averted in the meantime, the peace of the world will be safer than at any time since 1918.

PLAINVIEW 4-H CLUB

The Plainview 4-H Club met January 20, 1938 at 3:00 at their regular meeting time. They met at the Plainview school house with their sponsor, Mrs. A. E. Whisenant. After the business session Miss Gibson the County Home Demonstration Agent gave a demonstration on how to make pillow protectors and mattress pads. She also gave a demonstration on when, where, how and what kind of berries and grape vines to plant.

The club girls are very anxious to start their vine and bush fruit plants. Nine girls in the club have finished tuffing their pillows. Sixteen have sufficient amount of slats. The girls are eager to finish their goals so they will be eligible for encampment in June.

Forty-foot elephants, fashioned by sculptors, will look down from the massive Portals of the Pacific, the main entrance, you visitors to the golden Gate International Exposition.

CORYELL COUNTY NEWS

One never knows how much he depends on his friends until their help is withdrawn for some reason. I have known that I have one of the best Secretaries in Washington in the person of Hon. Clarence M. Elwell of Eddy. He is ill this week with a painful throat infection, and it has added tremendously to the work I have had to do. So if some of you don't receive a prompt reply to your communications as you feel you should you will know that it is because our office is shorthanded, and along with that, it has been a very busy week.

The National Rivers and Harbors Congress has been meeting in Washington and I have been interested in securing an endorsement of our Brazos River project, with a view if speeding up flood control work to protect especially Waco and the Little River and Brazos bottoms from overflow.

In addition, we had a meeting of the Texas Delegation today, and as Secretary of the Delegation, I always have to make all the arrangements. Yesterday I attended a conference along with Hon. Dick Kleberg and Luther Johnson of our delegation, and Hon. Burris Jackson of Hillsboro with the head of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, in an effort to work out a practical plan of starting some much needed research in the field of new uses for cotton and cotton products. We are still hopeful of getting some constructive work along this line, and to me it holds out great promise. If we can find new uses for cotton, we shall have rendered a much greater service than if we simply reduced the production of cotton. I am, however, still very fearful of the result of the Conference Committee's work on the Agricultural bill. It is now reported that the bill will be brought in with a provision that will restrict production to 10,600,000 bales, with no increase in the Government payments. If this is done we will have to get 14c per pound next year to get as much money as we got for this year's crop. I cannot believe that under such a program we will get 14c per pound and even if it could, we all realize that the present industrial prices the South can not get along on the 1937 income.

The conferees on the Housing Bill have reached an agreement, and we will undoubtedly finally pass that measure next week. The passage of this bill should materially help in putting men to work in the building trade and should tend to increase business. On Tuesday, the House passed the Treasury and Post Office Department bill, and just this afternoon it passed the great Naval Appropriation bill of more than a half billion dollars and it is expected that the President will send a special message asking for additional Naval funds in a few days. I voted for the appropriation believing that if we are to make sure that this country shall not fall victim to aggression, we must maintain a Navy equal to the best, and incidentally, all of the money spent will go to American workmen, and for American products.

On last Tuesday night I attended the President's annual Congressional reception. It was, as always a brilliant affair with Cabinet members and Department heads present as well as Senators and Congressmen. Every one was supposed to wear

"long tails" and white ties, but I learned my lesson last year when I had to ride all over town to get my tie tied. This year I wore a ready-tied one, and a Tux, and think I was sufficiently "dressed up". In fact I found that some of the most important people there did likewise.

New York N. Y. And if you think an American New Year's party is something, you ought to try a Russian one! Your reporter did the Tsarist spots from Maisonette Russe at Vincent Astor's swank hotel St. Regis down to the Russian Bear on second avenue and the idea seems to be to make the party last till next year comes around; all very glamorous with ex-dukes breaking out in the uniforms of long zone guards and cassock regiments and the ex-duchesses in Russian court costumes and the foo and drink, colored and flavored to match. Seen here and there, one time movie infant Jackle Cooper all grown up at the Cotton Club; George Ratt making a bewildered round of his former haunts; Ed Margo sketching new ideas for his imitable 'Aunt Effie' comic strip on the table cloth at Noneni's to the delight of fellow diners and the dismay of Julo, the head waiter. P. S. Someone bought the cloth for a five spot. Sidney Blakmer ducking out into the darkness of Forty-sixth street after midnight rehearsal of his new play; Fredrick March in the Broadway sunshine for the first time since his illness; his new play opens and rates tops. The Hollywood and the Yacht Club join the dear dead French Casino, and all promise to reopen. President's Birthday Ball to benefit infantile paralysis victims will reach an all time high this year when the Beaux arts and such like shindigs have failed to appear. Most prominent supporters; the beauty industry; and the National Beauty Council under the chairmanship of Joan Clair, of Clairol, has lured such glamorous sponsors as Myrna Loy, Sonja Henie, Loretta Young, Bettie Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Carole Lombard, Sylvia Sydney, Madeleine Carroll, Joan Bennet, Kay Francis, Joan Crawford and artist McClellan Barclay, Neysa McMein, Howard Chandler Christy, James Montgomery Flagg and a group of the Four Hundred including 'best dressed' Mrs. Harrison Williams. New York cinema critics feuding over the merits of Muni in Zola and Spencer Tracy in Captains Courageous have passed the 'dirty look' and 'wont speak' stage and now won't review new movies on the same day! And 'hen there's the story that the Lindbergh-Haupmann reward money was split up among one hundred and ten people to make the whole case look silly. And the old times do say the Bowery breadlines of 08 were twice as long as those today; after the panic of 27 and least we forget the heart throb of that season in "The Warrens of Virginia" was Mary Pickford, and will Mrs.

Buddy Rogers excuse the reminder, please. New York and London are snooting each others players; their hit 'Wise Tomorrow' folded in one week here and they started staying away from our 'You Can't Take It With You' in less than ten days. A bow to John Steinbeck who did the best prose of '37 in 'Mice and Men' and has two shows running on Broadway and too much sense to come here and see them. Rosalind Russel is building up a Garbo tradition for herself by staying single. 'Man Proof', apt title, will lift her to the top dozen screen stars. Review of 'In Old Chicago' as Missus O'Leary who milked the cow, Alice Brady's a four star wow!!! The Broadway parade.

LEVITA SCHOOL NEWS

We are all working hard on mid-terms which will be Tuesday and Wednesday.

There will be a Schchl program here Friday night, if the weather is permittable.

The Junior boys played Ireland Thursday afternoon. They beat us by seven points. As one of our best players was absent we couldn't play them a very interesting game. We hope that Wednesday afternoon we will get to take Gatesville juniors down a "notch".

Tonite's the night in the gym to see the local lassies in action, and Coach Schwarz has a number, we understand, 3 games scheduled, any one of which will be an eyefull for the fans, both in action and pulchritude.

In the alleys this week, the bowlies who are the 'tops' are: 'Happy Lee', in the 5-pin, with a 265. Bonds takes the cake in V-5 with a 167, and 10-pin honors go to Jack Morse with 196.

Celluloiditis has struck the village and over on the west side of the square in the new 'palatial home' of the Anchor Club the sound of celluloid against veneer and lumber may be heard nearly every night. C. L. Kirby is a new find in this new game, replacing, we are told, Harry Bornstein and Byron Laird McClellan.

FINAL RITES HELD FOR MRS. A. C. BATES

Mrs. A. C. Bates Sr. died at 7:45 Friday morning at the home of her son, A. C. Bates on Bridge Street. Funeral services were held at the residence Saturday afternoon at 3:00 and were conducted by Rev. G. J. Bryan and Rev. R. L. Seymour Scott Funeral Directors in charge of the interment in the City Cemetery.

Mrs. Bates 78 has been an invalid for about 23 years but until the last was courageous, cheerful and patient. She had been seriously ill for the past several weeks, and her case was pronounced hopeless Wednesday morning.

She was born in California, and came to this city from New Orleans. At the age of fifteen she became a member of the Methodist church and while able took active part in church affairs and always truly christian life. She is the grand daughter of the late Rev. James Peeler of Cameron.

Surviving Mrs. Bates is her son A. C. Bates, a daughter, Mrs. J. M. Washam of Austin and six grandchildren.

Out of town guests to pay their final tribute to this lovable woman were: Mr. and Mrs. Dwight McAnelly, Douglas Pulliam of Brownwood Doren Pulliam of Ft. Worth, A. C. Bates Jr. of Weatherford, Hyams Washam of Sherman Mrs. J. M. Washam of Austin, Clyde Pulliam Batte, Mrs. Lee Batte Miss Mary Belle Batte Patricia Batte and Earnest Batte all of Cameron; all returning to their respective homes Sunday.

Lets Talk About Clothes

TEXAS STATE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN (CIA)

DENTON, January 31.—No one likes to be called a softie, but nobody wants to wear anything else in the way of shoes, according to advance reports on shoe-buying for spring. Spaffies lead in sports, walking and general town versions.

Calfskin, suede and bucko are the materials for coming shoes, with patents and gabardines holding their own lead but not leading. Pumps are gaining fast headway over ties and other styles, and are making a bid for the reign of favor.

Color which made such a fast start in shoes last year, is now getting its second wind. Paris blue, bright orange, strong copper tones, purples, odd blues, pastel and natural colors and will all play their part in the parade.

Much of the color idea will be brought in through applique work and pipings. A popular pattern with girls at Texas State College for Women will be tan pigskin or suede combined with lizard, and all-over lizard will also do the fashion front.

No more bare feet, this season, say the stylists. Performances, indeed, yes! But not all-over cut outs. The new models will be just as cool, due to the perforations and will fit better than the open ones of last year.

KNOW TEXAS

A long Fight
DENTON, Jan 31.—Gamblers have evidently had a hard time ever since the beginnings of government in this state. An early law states that anyone connected with or employed by a gambling house shall be fined between $100 and $2,000. If the culprit should be permitting gambling in his or her house, the fine was from $500 to $1,000.

Well Protected Communication
Public Enemy No. 3 or 4 back in the days of the Texas Republic seems to have been a wire puller. If the penalty for tearing down telegraph wires is any indication. Hard labor in the penitentiary from two to ten years, or a fine of less than $2,000 faced any villain contemplating this step.

Expensive Brands
Thirty-nine lashes per illegal brand, that was another law of the Republic. Section 27 provides that every person who marked or branded an unmarked horse, mare or colt, etc. should pay a fine not exceeding $50, or should receive any number of lashes on the bare back, not exceeding 39.

Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Hammock of Dallas arrived Saturday to spend several days as guests of his mother, Mrs. W. W. Hammock.
