Hornettes Play Strong Irene Team In Last Home Game

Tonight in the local gym those flashy Hornettes of Gatesville will square off against a competent sextette from Irene in the first contest of a two-game series.

All the Hornettes are in fine shape and ready for the Irene girls. They have not played a game since they were beaten by Beattie two weeks ago, but Coach Schwarz has been putting his proteges thru stiffer paces than at any previous time this season in order to have them ready for the Hill county lassies.

Irene has a strong team, and has lost only a few games this season. All of those defeats have been at the hands of a fine West team.

These games promise to be the best girls games played here this season and an overflow crowd is expected to pack the gym Friday and Saturday.

NEW FEED-SEED LOAN HEAD IS H. C. CONNALLY

H. C. Connally, new Field Supervisor of the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Section of the Farm Credit Administration announces application for emergency crop and feed loans are now being received at the office in the District Clerk's Office.

Loans will be made, as in the past, only to farmers who can't obtain credit from any other source. The money loaned will be limited to the farmer's immediate and actual cash need for growing his 1928 crops or for the purchase of feed for livestock, and the amount which may be loaned to any one farmer in 1928 may not exceed $400.

As in the past, farmers who obtain emergency crop and feed loans will give as security, a first lien on the crop financed, or a first lien on the livestock to be fed if the money borrowed is to be used to produce or purchase feed for livestock.

When loans are made to tenants, the landlords, or others having an interest in crops financed or the livestock to be fed are required to waive their claims in favor of a lien to the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration until the loan is repaid.

THREE HUNDRED ATTEND IMPLEMENT SHOW THURSDAY

Three hundred farmers, land owners and tenants attended the "Farmers Day" show and luncheon held Thursday at the Gatesville Implement Company's home when about seven different motion picture films were presented on various implements manufactured by the International Harvester Company, showing their construction, and what proved most interesting, how the metals used were made.

At noon, a delicious luncheon was served free by the companies for all those who were present.

Among the films were one on combines, tractors, trucks, binders, mowers, and the manufacture of metals for the use in the making of the different machines.

Fred Start, advertising department man was in charge of the show, and "Blockman" John R. Baker representing six or eight counties was present.

Messers Burney and McCorkle stated the meeting was unusually successful.

Beginning Saturday, the Palace of this city will run a series of Katzenjammer Kids Comedies on the screen, and the first episode of "strip" will be entitled "Blue Mondays".

This well known funny paper strip will be shown periodically at the Palace Theatre and it's bound to please the kids, old and young.

There was another vacant building in Gatesville! And, what's more a real giant of an institution, with deposits of over $1,000,000.00, and that's not a boast.

Regardless of all this palaver, The Gatesville National Bank and the First National bank completed their consolidation Tuesday, February 23, and during Washington's Birthday, the day before, they moved all necessary equipment from the "First" to the "Gatesville" building.

According to the financial statement in this issue of the News the total deposit in the new bank amounts to well over a million dollars.

Officers of the new bank as announced are as follows: Dan E. Graves, Chairman of the Board, Leake Ayres, President, J. P. Kendrick, Executive Vice President, Dawson Cooper, Cashier, Cam McGilvray, Assistant Cashier, Minnie Linn Witt, Stenographer, Waldine Wharton, David Franks, and Baily Carry, bookkeepers.

Directors are, as previously announced, R. M. Arnold, Leake, Ayres, M. Blankenship, C. F. Caruth, H. S. Compton, Dawson Cooper, R. B. Curry, Dan E. Graves, J. P. Kendrick, Byron Leaird, R. E. Powell, Morton Scott, and Mrs. Vivian Straw.

Architects now have plans for extensive changes in the old First National Bank Building where the new bank will have its home as soon as construction is completed. Tentative plans call for complete remodeling of the building making it necessary for all offices to be vacated.

Columns will surround the luxurious exterior and a modern convent bank will be the new home including directors rooms officers rooms a beautiful bank lobby and fixtures in keeping with modern city banks.

Definite announcements have not been made so far as to the extent of the improvements but it is safe to say "bank corner" will be looking up with the completion of the new home of The National Bank of Gatesville.

PRE-SPRING CLEAN-UP AT LEAIRD'S, WALKER'S

It's beginning to look like Spring is here especially with the spring cleaning and painting that is being done.

Leairds are painting ceiling walls, columns—in fact everything to bring the sunlight and freshness in.

Out on Leon, Aubrey Walker is also sprucing up th exterior of his business.

Looking for a big business this summer, Gatesville Ice Co. is doing some spreading out and building. You can hardly find a lumber man now cause they are so busy figurin'. A sure sign of Spring!

SLINGIN' SAM, NEW BUCKING HORSE TO APPEAR AT FT. WORTH RODEO

Fort Worth.—Slingin' Sam is a new bucking horse that will make his appearance in the rodeo at the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show, March 11 to 20 inclusive.

Back of that name lies a reason. He was named for the noted Texas football star, Slingin' Sam Baugh, of Sweetwater. Verne Elliott, rodeo manager, didn't know what to call the new bucking until he saw the bronco take to the air like Sammy does in shooting his bullet like passes on the gridiron.

The horse cautiously leaves the rodeo chutes. Suddenly, he bounds high in the air. Usually two jumps are sufficient to send the rider sailing through the air to be intercepted by the tanbark floor of the rodeo arena.

Cupid Swamps the Postmaster

Cupid's arrows were piled high in the post office at Texas State College for Women in Denton on Valentine's Day. Harrassed Postmaster George Weaver announced later that more than 1,500 packages were delivered to the college girls.

In addition to sending hundreds of heart-shaped boxes of candy, true loves of the 2400 girls also contributed about 4,000 paper Valentines to the U. S. mail service. As he displayed the largest box of all, a six-pound bit of sweets, Mr. Weaver commented that this was the biggest batch of the year.

"PENNE D" SHOTS

By LARIATIN' LOU

"We were stumped at first but now we've reached a solution," said Elland Lovejoy at an early morning press conference Thursday. The amiable manager of city affairs was referring to the herd of Brahma Steers reputedly gathered in Old Mexico for the forthcoming Gatesville rodeo and which are now corralled just across the line in the state of Chihuahua awaiting transportation to the States.

"The tariff duties demanded by Mexican officials reached such a high total that it was deemed impossible for us to bring the steers across. But we have decided now to swim the Brahmas across the river in an illegal entry, thus evading the duty. All we are waiting for now is a suitable dark and stormy night to put our plan into effect."

Here Mr. Lovejoy stopped and let loose one of his famous "belly laughs".

(All who believe Mr. Lovejoy's statement may bring 25c to the News office, either in coin or stamp, and will receive in return a rap on the wrist for not knowing better.)

Believing in color and more color to make a successful show the Rodeo Committee recently completed arrangements with Federal authorities to injure another note of color into their 1938 show.

Chief Red Cloud, a full blooded Sioux Indian, has been given permission from Washington to leave his reservation in the North West for the first time in eight years to appear at the Gatesville Rodeo.

In making this announcement Alderman Bob (Kingfish) Saunders said in part: "Although the Chief is from a reservation he is far from reserved. He is the last of THE Chiefs and in his prime was one of the biggest reasons why the West was called wild."

Wrapping the tails of his imitation bearskin overcoat, which were flapping in the brisk young February zephyr, closer the Kingfish strode away before information could be gained as to whether the Chief would be brought to Gatesville cogged or

GATESVILLE, TEXAS, FRIDAY FEB. 25, 1938

NUMBER 18

WORLD COMMENT

Joe Burns

The naval expansion proposal is still in the throes of heated debate with approval more uncertain than for any armament bill congress has considered in some years. Eventually, however the demands made by administration spokesmen and the heads of our armed forces must prevail in the interest of national defense.

As stated previously in this space, there have been some telling arguments submitted for and against launching America upon a gigantic program of naval expansion. But a few facts have emerged from the welter of testimony given before the house naval affairs committee both for and against the program.

Admiral Leahy stated that it would be difficult for the navy to simultaneously defend both coasts. He added that the proposed increases would not so strengthen the navy that America could launch an aggressive war against any great power.

Secretary Hull, in several public statements, has declared emphatically that this country has no secret treaty or agreement with Great Britain. To his testimony has been added similar statements by Admiral Leahy, chief of naval operations, that there is no understanding for collaboration between the British and American navies in the event of a war in which both or either would participate.

It seems, therefore, that the question currently being discussed devolves down to this: Is the United States to have a navy capable of defending its coastline and possessions?

The program should be sanctioned. The United States has in excess of 29,000 miles of coast line of its continental island and insular possessions to defend. Not even by studying a map or world globe can the average person realize the enormous areas in the Pacific encompassed in the "triangle" which extends from Alaska to Hawaii to the Panama Canal. But that is the area that the United States navy would be called upon to defend should the Japanese attack us in the Pacific.

The United States is morally bound by friendly interests and for its own self-preservation to help defend any state or states of Central or South America that might be attacked by a foreign power. Therefore in reality, the American navy should be strong enough to defend the entire coastlines of the Western Hemisphere as well as Alaska and Hawaii.

At present, it might well be argued there is a slight likelihood of an attack by any power upon the United States or its possessions.

Japan is busily engaged in what has proven to be the difficult subjugation of China. Should Japan become embroiled with America, Russia would join the American-Chinese combine in an effort to annihilate Japanese power on the Asiatic mainland. This the Japanese know. If there is to be war between Japan and America, it will come when both China and Russia are conquered or humiliated by war.

Germany and Italy, the other

—Portraits by the Dohertys

Denton, Texas.—This year's balloting for "favorites to be honored in the 'Yucca', student annual at the North Texas State Teachers College, has seen the selection of the five prettiest examples of feminine pulchritude in the history of the school, says Harry Black, "Yucca" editor. Black offers the pictures above as proof that the public places beauty high on its list of traits that determine popularity. Traditionally North Texas elects favorites rather than beauties, and hence includes two men among the seven students honored by the "Yucca".

Miss Mary Green, junior from Rosebud was the only blonde among the seven Teachers College popularity aces. Miss Evelyn Hunt, junior from Denton, ranked first among the girls.

two land-hungry state, do not have navies capable of crossing the Atlantic and engaging the American fleet in battle.

Therefore, the task of the American fleet both for the present and for the future lies solely in defending the Americas.

While it is not possible for either Japan, Italy or Germany to attack any American territory at present, it is possible that within a few years the militarist party of Japan may precipitate war between the two countries. Or so the best observers in the Far East write.

If that is the situation, it is indeed wise that we should inaugurate preparations to defend the areas outlined above. It takes years to build a battleship or a cruiser, or an aircraft carrier. If America is to be strong tomorrow—we must begin today our navy expansion program.

This should be made perfectly clear to congress, the executive department and the high command of the navy, both present and future: that the American people will sanction appropriations only for a navy of defense. That new ships will be authorized only to defend the United States and its possessions—not to ferry doughboys to some foreign shore to save the world for British imperialism.

Comparative naval strength of the six world powers as of Jan. 1, 1938, shows the United States to have a total tonnage (not including ships more than 26 years old, these accounted overage) of 1,181,895; Britain, 1,577,588; Japan, 749,417; France, 645,589; Italy, 571,188; Germany, 408,897.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

THE worst story I heard today is about a college boy. In spite of all the squawkin' people do about the younger generation the kids seem to have a good time in their own way after all.

At one of the eastern colleges recently, the students built a big bonfire to celebrate something or other, and were whooping it up all over the place. While the flames licked up the boxes, sofas, fences etc., and everybody was making merry, one of the boys just stood leaning against a tree and looking on. "What's the matter, Jake?" says one of his pals, "Is your bed on there?"

"No," Jake says sadly, "I was just thinkin' what a swell break it would be if I had a store over there."

Tenant Interests Land Owners in Importance of Soil Conservation

Recent request for soil conservation surveys on 4610 acres of land in the Pidcoke community of the Gatesville Camp area may be attributed almost wholly to the efforts of one tenant farmer in advocating and creating interest in soil conservation in his community.

Joe Wilkerson, a tenant on the Howard Compton farm near the Pidcoke community, had realized the importance of soil conservation for a long time. A lack of interest, however, among his neighbors led the local SCS staff to believe that little value could be derived from establishing only demonstration in that community. The proposition was then presented to Mr. Wilkerson that if enough interest became evident in his community to assure the success of a community wide program of several demonstrations, it would be possible to include the farm he was operating in the group.

With this in mind he immediately set to work to make his community erosion conscious. He first succeeded in convincing his landlord, a Gatesville business man, of the importance of soil conservation. His next efforts gained him the support of Alf Lockhart, a land owner in the Pidcoke community. The result of these

WITH THE SHIP OF STATE

WASHINGTON D. C.—Here and there amid the mass of buildings which make up the home of the Government of the United States, a few elderly cynics are chuckling as they watch steady streams of Millions being poured out for a new Navy. They remember 1921 when we so magnanimously scrapped more than a dozen of the biggest and finest ships the world has ever seen. Not all the scrapped ships were built, some were in the process of building.

When that idealistic aberration known as the Washington conference of 1921 was over we had scrapped 800,000 tons of ships... ships that had already cost us millions of dollars. Great Britain and Japan scrapped a great many blue prints and a few war battered hulks. The smug cynics point out that to have completed that fleet and kept it in commission all these years would not have been as costly as our program of frantic construction.

And they also point out that there would have been no need for naval limitations treaties and there would have been no power expecting us to wage a war of aggression. And no power would have been able to engage in a building race because any country attempting such a procedure would have bankrupted itself.

The recent testimony of high naval officials before congressional committees has made a favorable impression on the legislators as well as the country at large. Putting the situation before the public this way has served to drown out, temporarily at least, three classes of critics: The advocates of entire dependence on airplanes, the coast defenders and the pacifists.

The severe testing of the effectiveness of planes in China and in Spain has made it apparent that air fighters are still merely an adjunct of the land and sea forces and not really a third and equally important arm of defense or offense.

The figures offered show how much cheaper it is to have an effective and mobil fleet ready to defend the coast than to arm and garrison all possible landing places on the coast.

Whether we have ships or not it is certain that the country does not lack naval strategists, for nearly every member of Congress, most of the Senators and even the page boys of the two houses are willing on occasion to tell any and all listeners exactly how the fleet should be handled and they are completely confident in the great American tradition which William Jennings Bryan so eloquently expounded when he declared "A million men could spring to arms over night".

NOTE TO PUBLIC

In Tuesday's issue of this paper an announcement ran about a Negro Minstrel to be held at White Hall Friday evening. We have been informed that several of the characters in the comedy are ill, and the play will be postponed indefinitely.

Hornets Have Fine Record for Past Season Games

The Gatesville Hornets have just completed a fine cage season, capturing the county championship and taking third in the district meet.

They have played the total of 37 games this season and have lost only five, with four of these defeats coming in the early part of the season when the Hornets had not had sufficient practice to get into top shape.

Star beat them 19-16 in the Ireland tournament and then again in the Star gym. Ireland beat them 18-16 while Jonesboro took them into camp 9-7. The Hornets later beat Star by the wide margin of 17 points and defeated Ireland four times and Jonesboro twice 28 to 19 and 16 to 12; the last game being played for the county championship.

The Hornets met Bynum in their first game of the district and edged them out 37-35 in what all the fans and coaches agreed upon as the best game of the tournament. However the Hornets were badly off form in their semi-final game with the strong Rosebud team and were nosed out 19-16. The locals missed several crisp shots and with the Hornets one point behind and fifty seconds to go, Gatesville had two free throws and missed both of them.

Impartial observers who saw every game of the tournament stated that Gatesville had they played the basketball they were capable of should have taken the district with a walk.

However all is said and done, the Hornets have had a very successful season. They won the county title in a county where it really takes a top notch club to capture the championship. They have beaten some fine clubs and have played some really sensational basketball.

The crowds this year have been disappointing, and the fans have really missed something when they failed to see this colorful Gold and Black aggregation in action.

IRELAND HAS GIRLS INVITATION TOURNEY

The Ireland schools will have a girls invitational basketball tournament Friday and Saturday in their own gym, with play starting Friday evening at six o'clock with games following at 7, 8, and 9. Play in both championship and consolation flights will continue thru Saturday evening, with the consolation and tournament championship games to be played Saturday night.

Beautiful trophies will be awarded consolation and tournament winners.

New York—The stem is all a twitter since the Braddock-Farr bout with the realization that "the old folks" may still have something on the ball. To hear the sports writers and the man on the street, poor old Jimmy Braddock was due to be wheeled into the Garden in a wheel chair. P. S. He's thirty-two, but age does tell on athletes, on chorus cuties, and the Dionne quintuplets whose publicity will continue to drop until they talk well enough to qualify for the "cute Sayings" columns. But age when it brings experience, can boost you to the heights, for instance those nice old gentlemen Gorge M. Cohan four-starring in 'I'd Rather Be Right' and Al Shean in 'Father Malachy's Miracle', and the not so young John Barrymore who has clicked with the fans and even the critical Broadway climbers since he started to do character roles instead of juvenile leads. Saddest cases are those who starred too young as Rosamond Pinchoy who had the Theatregoers salaaming with her role of the nun in 'The Miracle' when she was nineteen and then because she never learned to be an actress, ended it all by the gas-filled garage way at thirty three. The top card of '38, Sonja Henie packing Madison Square Garden at one end of fiftieth street with her ice carnival and packing the Roxey

Well the list reads Garbo and Henie and you can't tie that; and just when the socialites flee to Palm Beach the folks of make believe flock to Gotham and we saw here and there, Jack LaRue who confided he liked the bit role of the priest in 'Captains Courageous' better than many of his gangster parts; Charles Bickford ready to open his new play and defy the jinx hovering over Hollywooders this season; Akim Tamiroff who dropped into town for six short hours and spent them all in a Russian restaurant. TYPEWRITER 70 YEARS OLD Seventy years ago this autumn, the first practical typewriter was made by Christopher Latham Sholes, though no patent was taken out until the following spring.

Sholes was not the first man to attempt the invention of a writing machine. However, his effort was notable, since it was the only one to write faster than long-hand—its commercial advantage.

In 1873 a contract was made with G. Remington and Sons, the famous gunmakers. The Remingtons were interested in the manufacture of sewing machines, and the typewriter was assimilated as part of this branch of their business.

Speaking of his invention, Sholes said, "I feel that I have done something for the women who have always had to work so hard. This will enable them more easily to earn a living." Today a number of leading business schools turn out 100,000 women typists yearly!

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE
Bill Jordan, a young clerk working in a strange city, is lonesome on his twenty-first birthday. He asks a strange girl to help him celebrate his anniversary. They go to a cheap night club where another man tries to take the girl away from Bill. She refuses to go and the man calls her a foul name. Bill goes to her defense and demands that the stranger apologize. They get into a fight and the man reaches for his hip pocket. Thinking the man has a gun, Bill grabs a water can and hits him on the head. The man dies and Bill is arrested. District Attorney Mathews sympathizes with the boy's plight. It is, he says, an unfortunate circumstance that might happen to anyone. Instead of trying Jordan for second degree murder, Mathews allows the boy to plead guilty to manslaughter. Bill is sentenced to ten years in the state penitentiary. . . . Six years later we find Bill a hardened, embittered prisoner. He has been working in the prison jute mill since his incarceration and the dirt and dust of the mill is breaking him down. His lungs are affected and he is close to nervous collapse. One of his cellmates says he might be able to wrangle a transfer from the new warden. When Bill learns that the new warden is the same Tom Mathews who sent him up he laughs bitterly. His cellmate discloses that the convicts are preparing a surprise welcome for the warden when he arrives the following day.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
Chapter Two

"I think you'll find this an nice office, Tom," Commissioner McNulty of the State Prison Board was showing the new warden

"Tell the boys to pipe down."
(Posed by Walter Connolly and players.)

around the prison. Tom Mathews turned at the door.

"Come in and inspect your daddy's new office," he said. He stepped aside to allow his daughter, Elizabeth—slim, wide-eyed and attractive—to come in followed by her aunt, Kattie Mathews, who was to be her brother's housekeeper at the prison and chaperone for her niece.

Elizabeth walked to the desk, inspected it and then strolled over to the window that looked out on the prison yard. The men were having their recreation period but, instead of the usual hubbub and activity of these daily periods, the yash was strangely quiet. The men were standing quietly, all eyes turned up to the warden's windows.

A Warm Reception

As Elizabeth appeared in the window a low murmur rose from the men. She shrank back involuntarily. "How—how many prisoners are there, Daddy?" she asked.

Mathews looked inquiringly at Grady, captain of the prison guards, who was standing beside the desk. "Twenty-five hundred and fifty-two, sir," Grady said.

"Yeah," Mathews grinned. "And I'll bet I convicted more than a thousand of those fellows myself." He walked over and joined his daughter at the window. With one voice the men in the yard sent up a full-throated, derisive "YAH!" as soon as they saw Mathews.

Mathews turned, bewildered, to Grady. "What is it?" he asked.

"They call it 'yammering,' sir," Grady explained. "They do it when they're sore at something or somebody. This is probably their idea of welcoming you. I'd better go down and shut them up."

Mathews smiled down at his daughter. "I'm sorta popular with the boys, eh?"

"Don't let that worry you, sir," Grady said. "We'll shut them up." He started for the door.

"Wait a minute, Grady," Mathews ordered. "You stay here. I'll go down there myself."

"You'd better not, Tom," McNulty interposed. "It may mean trouble."

Mathews took a cigar from his mouth and turned belligerently.

"Yeah?" he asked, "And if I don't go down—then what? They'll think I'm afraid of them. Listen: I've been taking taxpayers' money for a long time now. When I was district attorney it was my job to get convictions—and I got 'em. Well, now I'm warden. It's my job to boss this prison. An' that's just what I'm going to do! Isn't that right, sweetheart?" he turned and gave Elizabeth a quick hug. Then he strode from the office.

The men were still yammering when the door to the administration building opened and Tom Mathews stepped out alone. Mathews watched them curiously for a moment. Then he relighted his cigar, tossed the match away and walked down among the men in the yard.

As he approached they opened a lane for him and he was quickly in the midst of the mob. Well toward the center of the yard he made out the tall, menacing figure a Tex, a lifer he had sent up for murder. Mathews guessed rightly that Tex was one of the leaders of the convicts. He walked directly toward Tex.

"Hello, Tex," he said affably. "Haven't seen you since we were in court together."

Tex, unable to hide his admiration for the new warden's nerve, smiled briefly. "H'ya, Mr. Mathews," he said.

"Tell the boys to shut up," Mathews commanded. Tex studied the warden for a moment then he turned to the men close behind. "Pass the word along to pipe down," he ordered.

When the yard was stilled Mathews spoke again. "I've sent up a lot of the boys here in my time, Tex," he said. "You were one of 'em. That was my job an' I did it. Now I'm the warden here. It's my job to boss this prison an' I'm going to do it. But I'll do it fair an' square. Every man in here will be treated according to how he behaves. If any of them want to be tough, that's okay with me. I can be tough, too."

If they play on the level with me I'll treat them the same way. Tell that to the boys, Tex."

Mathews turned and strode through the silent prisoners back to his office.

The New Chauffeur

With the passing weeks Bill Jordan found the jute mill increasingly unbearable. One day he collapsed and was taken to the prison hospital. The doctor examined him. He studied his record, noted the boy's youth and then he went to the warden. On the doctor's recommendation Mathews sent for Jordan.

When Jordan was brought to the warden's office Mathews looked at the card on his desk. "Your name is William Jordan," he said. "Mind if I call you 'Bill'?"

There was a hint of bitterness in Jordan's voice when he replied. "You asked me that once before," he said.

Mathews studied him more closely. "Yeah," he said. "Now I remember. The Parker case. Lemme see, that was six years ago."

At that moment the door opened and Elizabeth came into the office. She stopped just inside the door and looked at Bill curiously. When Bill saw her his drooping shoulders straightened instinctively. He looked down at his dirty, grimy clothes and then tried to hide his gnarled hands behind his back.

"We're having tea, Father," Elizabeth said.

Mathews looked up at her. "What's that?" he asked. "Tea? All right. Run along. I'll be there in a minute." Bill watched her as she left and Mathews, turning back to his desk, noted the change in the boy's face. He studied the card before him.

"Change of occupation and environment recommended," he muttered to himself. He looked up at Jordan.

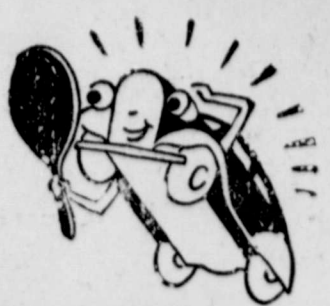

"Can you drive a car, son?" he asked.

"Yes, sir," Bill replied.

"Then you've got a new job. Starting tomorrow you're my chauffeur."

I trust that you will pardon another brief letter. As most of you know, I was in Texas most of last week. I left Washington Wednesday night at 11:00 p. m. (after voting for the Farm Bill that afternoon) and flew to Texas arriving at Fort Worth at 7:00 a. m. Thursday morning.

Thursday I made five speeches Friday I made four speeches, and on Saturday I only spoke at one meeting. I tried in the three days available to give the farmers of our district some idea of the provisions of the Farm Bill without requiring them to wait until the Department got its regulations published. I hope I was of some help. While home I also sought to be of what help I could to those communities in our district that want to carry out "slum clearance" projects with the help of the United States Housing Authority. I had two of the high officials of the Washington office down and am happy to report that Temple is well on the way toward the construction of a $200,000.00 project which will give work to many local carpenters, bricklayers, etc. as well as increase business for local material dealers and provide desirable homes for many needy citizens. I feel that there is a considerable interest in the project in Waco, but no group of people there have undertaken the job of doing the necessary organization as they have in Temple. I want our people everywhere in the District to know that I shall be happy to be of all help I can at any time they want to put over a "slum clearance" or any other community project.

I have just secured the approval of the Post Office Department for a contract post office for East Waco. This will provide a service long needed by a large group of our people.

Of course, I enjoyed my visit home and while there I made good on my statement that if and when I married, it would be a Texas girl. At 11:00 A. M. on February 14th (which was my grandparents 72nd wedding anniversary) Miss Frances L. Cotton and I were married at a private ceremony at her mother's home in Eastland, Texas. No one was present except members of our immediate families. The ceremony was performed by Dr. J. W. Railey, an old Milam County boy with whom I had gone to school, but who is now the President of Oklahoma Baptist University of Shawnee. Mrs. Poage has worked in the office of the State Comptroller for several years but has claimed Temple as her home town and pays her poll tax in Bell county. However her mother now lives in Eastland. Of course, we shall make our home in Waco as soon as Congress adjourns.

We didn't get back to Washington in time for me to vote on the quarter of a billion dollar addition to the relief funds which was passed on Wednesday, but I did get in touch with Mr. Rayburn, the Majority leader, by wire and had him pair me "fir" the bill. In this way I killed a vote against the bill just as if I had been there. I felt the additional money was necessary in view of the widespread unemployment.

Lets Talk about Clothes
TEXAS STATE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN (CIA)

Denton: Like it or not women will have to take it under the chin this season to keep in style on hats. Those who proclaimed that they would never wear those silly bows will have to do a little back-tracking or spend their time chasing chapeaux.

Bonnets positively demand chin bows, and even the most rampant of the non-conformists will have to admit that there is nothing more attractive than one of these 'pokes', which give such a nice frame to one's face. Not to mention the utilities of such a style, which stays on in the worst March wind and keeps the glare away as successful as Grandma's old sunshade.

Flat Sailors, which girls at Texas State College for Women have been sporting with their tailored suits, are changed this season mainly in the veiling. Now veils are either tied snugly across the entire hat and face, draped over the hat down to nose-length, or used as a bow to tie the sailor under the chin again.

Drama is present in this season's hats in the broad-brimmed styles. Filled with striking crown and brim contrasts, these flattering fashions should go far in the present revival of feminine beauty.

In the small hats the variety defies classification. There is the kind formed of a single huge flower with a bit of brim by way of foundation. Then there are such things as the rippled beret with a perky bow on top, the little straw turban with a stand-up Valentine veil in front or the modified bonnet with clusters of flowers under the top rim.

All representing whimsy at its best, for once these hats are constructed with flattery rather than novelty in mind.

REV. W. VINSANT TO PREACH AT BROWNS CREEK SUNDAY

Subject at 11 a. m.: Strong Womanhood.

Subject at 7 p. m.: The Preacher who sought to be Saved Danger!

A man answers that all is well with him because he has enough to eat and to wear. Because he is in health and his business is prosperous, and yet in that very moment he may be in great danger. Because sin has invaded his soul. The need of that home is a Christian father, a Christian son. Then, and only then, would all be well; God is calling to the fatherhood of this country to come into the ark. The storm of death is coming God was kind in providing an ark of safety in Christ. The Lord said unto Noah "Come thou and all thy house into the ark." Do you think the sons and wives would have gone in had Noah stayed out? No, father if you stand the storm we can. We will have company; fathers come in; your loved ones can follow.

Need

The needs of this country are many. The farmers need help. The poor need help, but the greatest need of all is a spiritual revival, in which the manhood of this country shall be saved. The Lord is calling the Christians to the help of the Lord against the mighty.

Make your arrangement to attend the revival meeting which will be held on the Gatesville circuit commencing Wednesday night, before the regular preaching day in March and continuing through Sunday. Preaching only at night except on Sunday. All are invited to attend.
