HERE'S SOMETHING YOU MIGHT NOT KNOW: JULY TERM COST $2926.58

Something we'd never known 'til now—and probably, not even you! The approximate cost of a term of District Court—and this was a very short one.

These figures were furnished thru the courtesy of one of the District Court officers, and are as nearly correct as could be had without an official audit. They are presented in an informational way, and with no thought of saying or intimating the cost should be less, or more. This, is entirely out of our line.

At any rate, added to the other rapidly increasing governmental costs, in a year's time, would show some "figger".

These figures were taken from "stubs" and other records kept in this particular officer's office.

Five were in the car, it is said, and they cut in behind another car too close, struck the car in the rear and turned over. The car was almost demolished. No others were injured, besides bruises and cuts.

JOE HANNA MODERNIZES BY RE-ARRANGEMENT OF STOCK

Following a veritable "tidal wave" of modernizing, during the past two or three weeks, Joe Hanna's has been "shuffled", and is now arrayed in a new modern manner.

A new shoe, ladies-ready-to-wear departments have been concentrated, and more attractive general arrangements have been made doing away with the balcony.

NON-CONFERENCE GAME EXPECTED TO DRAW FULL STAND

Tonight at the still "Blank" stadium, Gatesville Hi Hornets take on the Temple "B"s in a non-conference, but nevertheless, an important game, and one which promises to open up both teams. The "B"s were only closed out by

N-S HWY. TRIP UNFOLDS INFORMATION NOT REPORTED

In addition to what was carried in Tuesdays issue of the News, Chas. Cotton of the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce presented the plea for the N-S Highway before the State Highway Commission, furnishing statistics as to taxes paid by this particular section of the country for the past past several years.

At a pre-hearing caucus, it was voted to concentrate on the bridge at Granbury, but at the hearing, it was intimated by the commission that it would probably be necessary to have something more than just a bridge, and for this reason, Chairman Bobbitt called on County Judge Floyd Zeigler and also H. K. Jackson, for their views on the matter. Both these gentlemen recommended designation on the highway, and suggested points of origin, as well as destination.

Civic club working on this good work, including the Chamber of Commerce are deeply grateful for the fine showing of citizens who took their time and effort to make this trip. It seems that many trips are necessary for work like this, and the process of getting action of this sort is a long drawn out process.

STOCKHOLDERS OF OLD FAIR ASSOCIATION VOTE TO SELL PROPERTY

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Coryell County Fair Association Tuesday in the National Bank of Gatesville, those present voted (share vote) 36 to 75 to sell the property owned by the association, according to Cam McGilvray.

The association owns the property now occupied by the local CCC Camp, and since the fair has not been held in a number of years stockholders have voted to sell.

Originally, the shares were $25, and there were 200 shares. There were originally about 100 people in the association. Only 40 were present at the meeting.

Mrs. Raby Richardson, Mrs. R. J. Nettles, and Mrs. R. E. Panckake were Waco shoppers Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Everett accompanied their daughter, Nannie Sue, to Denton last Thursday. Miss Everett will enter North Texas State Teachers' College there. Mr. and Mrs. Everett returned to their home Tuesday afternoon.

Nelse Alexander was a guest of his aunt Miss Annie Robinson Wednesday afternoon.

Belton 14-6, and even if, according to John Morgan, the Hornets look like the "money" team,—still, you can't bank on that.

Anyway fans, it's the 2nd in this series for the Hornets, and, with added color from the pep squad, this old football game is on the up and up. We'll be look-

WORLD COMMENT

BRACK CURRY

The potentialities for a realignment of political parties in 1940 provides one of the most interesting subjects for discussion among political and journalistic observers. As word come from reliable quarters in Washington that the administration's "purge" of conservative Democrats is to be pursued after the primaries have been completed, the issues upon which the presidential election of 1940 will be fought become distinctly more clarified.

The breach between the new deal and the more conservative element of the Democrat party is widening and each move of the chief executive to expel from the party those members who refuse to support him "100 per cent" lessens the possibility of any "rap-proachment" in 1940.

The finish of the primaries will not finish the purge. That is the reliable word from Washington. The President intends to inaugurate a patronage war with the anti-new dealers in an attempt to destroy the machines which such Senators as George of Georgia and Tydings of Maryland have built upon federal patronage.

Hereafter the test of an appointee to a key federal job will not be who is sponsoring him but whether the appointee is a dependable new deal supporter. Henchmen of such personalities as Vice President Garner and Senators Weeler of Nevada, Byrd of Virginia, Harrison of Mississippi, Bailey of North Carolina and other anti-new deal chieftains who are not up for re-nomination this year are slated for the axe.

Word has come to the White House that anti-administration Democrats are using patronage to build up machines to oppose Roosevelt's control of the 1940 convention. Therefore the federal machines of the above named congressmen and many others are to be destroyed, if possible, by depriving them of all federal patronage.

The immediate issue between the two Democratic factions is whether the new dealers or the conservatives are to control the party and dictate the choice of a party nominee in 1940. The occasion for such an issue, which definitely threatens to split the party, is the patent fact that there is an irretrievable gap between the political philosophies of the two divergent factions as personified, roughly, by Garner and Roosevelt respectively.

What Republicans and conservative Democrats fully realize, but hesitate to admit, is that their political philosophy is practically identical. Both groups demand a cessation of the huge federal relief expenditures and a return of the distribution of relief funds to the states and municipalities; a balanced federal budget; a conciliatory attitude toward business; a reduction of the national debt; a return of many powers usurped by the Roosevelt administration to the state, where they rightly belong.

These provisions will constitute, in essence, probably, the main provisions of the 1940 Republican platform. On the other side of the political fence, the conservative Democrats will be battling for the same principles in their convention.

This is an incongruity not difficult to explain. Had President Roosevelt adhered to the 1932 platform upon which he was elected the lines of cleavage between Republicans and Democrats would have been clearly defined, as has been the case in the past. But Roosevelt repudiated the 1932 platform and similarly repudiated the 1936 platform. As the 1932 platforms of the two major parties were similar, the Republicans are merely adhering to the principles upon which they campaigned in 1932 and in 1936 and the conservative Democrats are championing their 1932 and 1932 platforms. Roosevelt, on the other hand, has embarked upon a new course of his own personal choice—a course, by the way, which has never been endorsed by the electorate in a national election.

The possibility of a conservative coalition representing the Republican party and the conservative element of the Democratic party is remote in so far as 1940 is concerned. Republican leaders would welcome the conservative Democrats into their 1940 lineup, but would hesitate to incorporate them into their permanent party. Few observers believe that the anti-new dealers would ever support a G. O. P. presidential candidate. In theory, if not in fact, we have two conservative parties and one or radical party, represented, respectively, by the Republicans, conservative Democrats and Roosevelt new dealers.

This writer believes that Mr. Roosevelt is miscalculating the popular support of many of his more radical policies. Mr. Roosevelt has badly miscalculated in the past, as in the fight over the Supreme Court reform he contended he was blocked by a group of arch-conservatives when in reality the American people revolted against his insidious scheme.

Only when the final decision is reached at the 1940 Democratic national convention will the definite lineup of parties and factions for the next presidential contest be definitely ascertained. If the edition of the Temple Daily Telegram, so on the first page is the starting lineup for the "B"-Belton game, which ended 14-6 for Belton.

McClung, a sub, in the "write-up" of the game, seemed to have done the most damage in a scoring way. Anyway, Hornets, you'll have "Bees" in your bonnets tonight.

Loking over the "exchanges" we see Jonesboro has a 6-M game with Crawford. Also, we believe it was Ireland that had an out-of-county 6-M game scheduled.

You're going to see some fun when these Sixes get together. The schedule starts October 7.

Wednesday the Hornets took it seriously, or Coach Worley did, and he had 'em really hitting—everything in sight.

Evidently, Temple doesn't think much of the Temple "B"s, since in one recent edit of the Telegram we didn't see a scratch about the game, or the team.

Saturday, if you're doing nothing, our radio'll be on, and you can hear from some of the "big boys" in football over the Humble hook-up.

About the 7th, prox. there's going to be a midget game with the local Junior hi's doing their half, and Temple Junior hi on the other, and, these local youngsters are going to fool you.

SAFER FOR YOU

Last September at Bonneville, with the hot, abrasive Salt Beds grinding, tearing, scorching his tires, Ab Jenkins drove as fast as 180 miles an hour, establishing 87 new records for safety, speed, mileage and endurance. Building tires capable of such records enables Firestone to provide car owners with tires that are extra safe. For your safety equip your car with Firestone Triple-Safe Tires. They give you—

FIRST WORLD-WIDE WOOL SHOW AT SAN FRANCISCO IN 1939

The first wool show of world-wide scope ever to be held on the American continent will be staged here next year at the Golden Gate International Exposition on Treasure Island in San Francisco Bay.

This was revealed today by Ezra J. Fjeldsted, Chief of the Exposition's Division of Livestock, who issued an advance premium list allotting $2,500 in cash among fleeces falling in 51 distinct classifications of breed and market wools.

First request for entry blanks came from George Lannin & Son of the Lillymure-estate of Lillymure, Victoria, Australia. They also exhibited in the 1915 Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Entries are expected from every section of the globe, blanks being sought by wool growers of Alaska, Tierra del Fuego and from the far off Isle of Capri.

All champion fleeces will go to the University of California at Davis to be placed on permanent display, he said.

The Exposition Livestock Chief

will provide premium lists to those who request them in writing. Fjeldsted's address is at the Golden Gate International Exposition headquarters, 585 Bush Street, San Francisco, Calif.

WORLD COMMENT

BRACK CURRY

What, in essence, determines an individual's political philosophy? Why are you a Democrat or a Republican, a liberal or a conservative, or a radical or a progressive?

Students of government and of political economy list a number of determinants of party affiliation, with which one's political philosophy is interlocked, including such factors as economic status, racial extraction, religious affiliation and social status.

Of all the factors determining your political philosophy which might be listed, the most imperative and impelling is economic status.

Let us consider this factor as it affects American politics today. President Roosevelt's sustaining popularity arises from the fact that he has consistently championed the common man. But the so-called "common man" who so ardently supports the present chief executive voted Republican from 1920 to 1932.

The answer to this seemingly anomaly is that the average American votes for the party or individual who will protect and if possible fill his pocket book.

For ten years, from 1920 to 1930, the Republican party controlled the American Government and assured the American people that prosperity would remain undisturbed in this country as long as they voted the Republican ticket.

The three presidential elections of 1920, 1924 and 1928 proved conclusively that a great majority of the electorate accepted the philosophy that the country's prosperity was irretrievably bound with the continuance of the Republicans in power.

The Republican party, as we now know, was controlled by and was responsive to the great corporate interests which are now the subjects of attack by the President. But the "common man", the laborer, the farmer, the white collar worker; voted for Republican presidential candidates and kept a Republican majority in Congress until 1930.

The illusion of a Republican-created and a G. O. P. maintained prosperity for the United States was rudely shattered in October 1929, and in ensuing months. In the congressional elections of 1930 a Democratic majority was elected to the House of Representatives and John N. Garner became speaker of that body.

Republicanism was repudiated for the first time in a decade and the fortunes of the unhappy, slow-moving, lethargic elephant have never been revived in the eight years following the 1929 debacle.

The economic status of the nation was definitely poor following the stock market crash of 1929.

In 1932 a new messiah, carrying the banner of humanitarianism and of a new deal for the common man, arose under the standard of the Democratic party and sounded the battle cry for a resounding defeat of entrenched wealth as personified by Republicanism.

The story of what has transpired since 1932 is well known to all. What we are now interested in is why President Roosevelt retains his popularity with certain classes and is violently opposed by other classes.

Here is the answer as we see it. Mr. Roosevelt's popularity with the masses increased during his first four years in the presidency because he succeeded in temporarily halting the economic spiral which threatened to destroy American capitalism.

The capitalists supported him in part at least, in the early days of his first administration because they saw their power and wealth slipping from them. The middle classes which refused to be bound by party affiliation and vote for whomsoever they choose, regardless of his party label, supported Roosevelt because he rescued the insurance companies, the banks and the corporations in which they had put their savings and by saving the corporations saved the jobs and homes. The "lower third" of the populace backed the President because he gave them, first, relief, and then government jobs.

Today, we find that Mr. Roosevelt is actively opposed by two of these groups—the capitalists and the middle class. The capitalists oppose him because he has attacked them and destroyed many of their former privileges. The middle class, champion of democracy, of order and of prosperity, fears the dictatorial tendencies of the new deal administration and the effect upon the national economy of many of the new deal measures and proposals.

It may be accurately said that the most ardent support of the Roosevelt regime comes from the "lower third" upon which Mr. Roosevelt has spent billions in the form of relief, loans, subsidies and the like.

Jesse Jones of the RFE spoke the whole personal philosophy of all new dealers the other day when a reporter asked him to reconcile his demand for more lending by banks with the fact that his own banks have shown a decrease in such loans. Mr. Jones replied, "I don't want people to do as I do but to do as I tell them".

"Texas and the President's Purge" is the subject of this timely editorial from the Dallas Times Herald.

"As our Texas primaries have already been held, we, in this state, can only look on as bystanders while President Roosevelt continues his move to purge congress of Democrats that he does not like.

"If we knew with reasonable exactitude what the president has in mind, we would be in better position to take sides in the primaries where he is participating.

"But, as matters stand, it appears that the chief executive is simply trying to weed out public office all Democrats who will not accept, unquestioned, his personal leadership.

"It is nothing for the Democrat party to be divided over one issue or another. Many of its past conventions have been exceedingly stormy and bitter. But the president insists upon unanimity.

"A party always has certain dominant leaders who fight for control, but it is supposed to be an organization of rank and file voters who have enough in common to arrive at a compromise on a party program. It is not supposed to be an organization completely dominated by one man and serving as his personal instrument.

"Even the most ardent and loyal supporters of the president must admit that it is not traditional in this country for a leader to regard the party to which he belongs as strictly and solely his own affair. Has it come to the point in this country that a political party is to be nothing more than the personal following of a popular hero? If it has, revolutionary change has come over our political system."

NATIONAL "POOCH" WEEK

This is National Dog Week—and who doesn't love a dog.

In a recent paragrapher's column, we read something like this: "If you don't want your child run over by a car, cover him with a hairy covering and train him to cross the street on all-fours like a dog".

We quote this, just to show the love of people for dogs.

Dogs, to people, are their BEST friends, whether an ordinary soup hound (which we believe are the best) to the more sophisticated "blooded" dogs who make the rotogravure sections, the National Dog Shows and other "highateries"

From the savage, the poor, the middle, the upper and even to royalty, dogs are the supreme "pal and friend".

If you don't believe it try one!

IT'S ALSO NATIONAL FURNITURE WEEK

Page Mr. Scott and Mr. Leaird, also, Messrs. Hensler-Hord and Parks.

Its National Furniture Week!

We know, they've something to tell you about furniture, the periods, the modes, the antique, he ultramodern.

Selection of this week, is ideal for National Furniture Week, because, well, isn't Fall here, and aren't you doing Fall house cleaning, getting rid of summer's dust; well, anyway, 1001 things to do in getting ready for the Winter ahead. There's stoves, covers, curtains, shades, beds—all manner of changes so necessary to get ready. And, may be, there'll be "trade ins", since you want to "do the house over" since Johnny and Mary are grown, in school or college, and they should have a nice place to meet their friends.

Now these weeks are primarily for a purpose: Sales. Anybody will admit that, but even at that, it calls your attention to things you have been intending to do for so long—a mental reservation you had, or a dream.

Look around, it might be made into a reality, and actually come true.

And, at what better time is there to do the job as you've long wanted, than right now, when prices are so low.

Again we say, SHOP GATESVILLE, FIRST!

Chapter One

Things were unwontedly living in the Chief Inspector's office at headquarters. A visitor had arrived from Paris — a guest no less distinguished than the Commissioner of Police.

Commissioner Janvier, a big-jawed, burly man whose force of personality and speech matched his vigorous body, was holding forth in emphatic terms to the local constabulary.

"I'm not interested in hearing excuses about local conditions. Here's a criminal whose exploits have made him notorious throughout Europe, who escaped from France with a fortune in jewels — and for two years he's been living here in Algiers within a stone's throw of your headquarters!"

"In Paris," continued the Commissioner, "we handle more difficult cases every day. Is Pepe le Moko a magician? Can he disappear when you go in search of him?"

The assembled detectives smiled politely.

"You've just arrived from Paris, sir," expostulated Chief Inspector Louvain. "You don't know the Casbah. That's where Pepe le Moko lives."

"Well, why not go in and take him out of it?"

"Because you can't arrest a King in his own palace. Pepe is well guarded. Let me show you..."

He pointed to a large map of Algiers that almost covered one of the walls.

"Here is the Casbah — this shaded portion. When you go into the Casbah, you go into another continent, another world! A melting pot for all the sins of the earth! Terraces and steps and narrow streets, twisted and dark. No one knows what mysteries are hidden behind those walls...no one knows what wonders and crimes and hopes are buried in dim rooms and secret courtyards. People swarm through that labyrinth, bringing the strange customs of a dozen strange countries — Kabyles, Chinese, Gypsies, Aivados, Maltese, Sicilians...and women — women with veils across their eyes, slave girls and dancing girls...women from a thousand lands, caught in the net of the Casbah!"

"You mean to say you don't go into this quarter?" demanded Janvier.

"It's easier to go in than to come out," replied Janvier significantly.

"This pearl," mused Pepe, "belongs on a very special kind of ear."

In a small, dimly-lit room in one of the typical Casbah houses Grandpere, the jewel fence, sat before a table, critically examining through his magnifying lens a small heap of jewels that lay before him. Expansively, philosophically, Grandpere discoursed on the beauty of the jewels while his client, Pepe le Moko, stood before him and Pepe's bodyguards lounged by the heavy door.

Pepe le Moko, the master jewel thief, virtuoso among accomplished crooks and eluders of the police, delicately balanced a small pearl in the palm of his hand. An admirably built man, broad of shoulder, extremely handsome of face, with finely chiseled lips and sensitive nostrils, one might have taken him for an art critic or a man-about-the-Boulevards.

"This pearl," mused Pepe, "belongs on a very special kind of ear, like a pink shell...with a little curl of gold hair about it..."

While Pepe and Grandpere continued to toss off epigrams about the beauty of fine jewels, and huge, stupid Carlos continued to grumble about their failure to get down to prices, the life of the Casbah swarmed in its accustomed way in the crooked streets and narrow alleys outside. Suddenly a native youth ran into the street, elbowing his way among the robed natives, veiled women, ragged children and drunken sailors, and shouted the familiar alarm.

"Police! Police! Police!"

In a moment the swarming humanity had scattered into the narrow doorways and shops. It was one of the periodic raids that they knew so well, and that invariably failed of their objective. This particular one was a little more determined than usual, for Commissioner Louvain, irked by the failure of the local Algiers constabulary to find Pepe le Moko, had come over to lead the hunt personally.

A column of detectives and uniformed officers invaded the narrow street. They seized a few imperceptible natives who sat at tables hard by the doorways, playing cards. From each one the familiar question, "Where's Pepe le Moko," brought the familiar answer — an expressive shrug of the shoulders and a torrent of unintelligible language.

But one of those whom they seized answered in English. This was Regis, a hanger-on at the fringes of Pepe le Moko's gang, and in reality a police informer.

"I don't know where Pepe is," he babbled. But at the same time he slipped a crumpled piece of paper into one of the detectives' hands.

"Grandpere's," read Inspector Louvain, head of the local police, reading the note after they had released Regis. "Come on!"
