OWEN FORD 'BREAKS TAPE' WITH 1st BALE: "STATE" 2nd MORE DUE

REPORT, PARKS GETS FIRST BALE AT OGLESBY

The "money" crop is on its way. At least, it used to be THE money crop! In other words, Cotton is coming in!

Owen Ford breezed in here late Monday afternoon with the County's First Bale, as far as we know, and with 1525 pounds of seed cotton and got a 519 pound bale, which netted him $77.85, or the 15c a pound price paid by the Gatesville Chamber of Commerce. Gatesville Gin Company, Charles Powell, manager, ginned the bale.

Ford didn't know about the premium paid here, but a neighbor showed him a story in the News, and he brought his bale here, netting him a nice premium.

Gatesville's second bale, was brought in by the State Juvenile Training School, it came in Tuesday.

Oglesby's first bale was brought in by a Mr. Parks, we've been told, but as to what the bale brought is not known.

Mr. Ford's bale was Watson's Pedigreed seed, and Mr. Ford expressed his sincere thanks to Gatesville and the Chamber of Commerce for the nice premium offered on the first bale, and stated he would bring others to the local market.

This "first" is on exhibit on the northeast corner of the square. The ginning, bagging and ties were furnished by the Gatesville Gin Company. As usual, Mr. Ford was placed on the News mailing list for the coming year.

Woman Jurist On Official Visit

Judge Sarah T. Hughes of the Fourteenth District Court, who presides over all juvenile probation cases in Dallas during the last eight months visited the State Training School for Boys here yesterday.

At noon, Judge Hughes, also president of the Texas Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, spoke briefly when the local club had luncheon at a hotel here.

Judge Hughes is one of the very few representatives of the "weaker sex" in the legal profession in Texas and has made an outstanding record in this field.

President of the local club, Mrs. Turk Brown, is also District Director of the area including Waco, Temple, Cameron, Bryan College Station and Gatesville. A convention of this area will be held in Gatesville, October 8.

CORRECTION OF TUESDAY'S CLOVER FARM NOTICE

In the back pages of Tuesday's issue of the News you probably saw a notice from E. Price Bauman's Clover Farm Store stating that this store would be closed Friday afternoon at four o'clock due to the fact that he and his employees were to attend a Clover Farm meeting.

This statement was incorrect, as the story on the front page corrected it, saying the store would be closed Tuesday, August 8, and this story was correct. We wish to make it clear, however, that the Clover Farm Store will not be closed until its regular hour Friday afternoon, and will remain open for business.

D. I. Campbell Jr., is visiting in Canyon and Lubbock.

A Texas cotton crop of 2,577,000 bales, 509,000 less than 1938 production was forecast today by the U. S. department of agriculture.

The report, based on conditions as of August 1, said indicated lint yield was 154 pounds an acre, compared with 168 for last year and 147 for the 10-year average beginning in 1928.

The crop estimate for the entire cotton producing section of the United States, released at the same time was 11,412,000 bales. The "carry over" is only 14,250,000 bales.

MEETING FOR CREATION OF SOIL CONSERVATION DISTRICT UNDER NEW LAW TO BE HERE 23rd

PREVIOUS MEETINGS TO BE HELD IN OTHER COMMUNITIES

Since the state legislature has passed a law authorizing the creation of soil conservation districts, a meeting is to be held at the courthouse in Gatesville, August 23, at 3 o'clock, with Hon. V. C. Marshall, Chairman of the State Soil Conservation Board in charge.

In order to acquaint the land owners with the law, meetings will be held as follows:

Tuesday, August 15, 8 p. m. at Moshier, Pearl, Oglesby and Copperas Cove.

Wednesday, August 16, 8 p. m. Mound, Jonesboro, Flat and Coryell City.

Thursday, August 17, 8 p. m.

Pidcoke, Turnersville, Purnela and Harmon.

Friday, August 18, 8 p. m. at Gatesville and Crawford.

At each meeting, men familiar with the new law will explain the law and answer questions. Delegates should be elected at these meetings to represent these local communities at the meeting to be held in Gatesville, August 23.

These meetings have been called by M. Blankenship, Chairman of the Coryell County Soil Conservation Committee, and Robert W. Brown, Chairman of the Soil Conservation Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

The proposed district includes all of Coryell county, and a part of Bosque county, south of Clifton and west of the railroad, and a part of McLennan county, west of the railroad and north of South Bosque.

Main object of creating a soil conservation district at this time is to permit the land owners to assume control of the law in this district affecting their land, and to prevent their land from being included in some other district, under which different conditions might prevail, and in which the land owners in this district would not have control.

In Tuesday's issue of the News, we will carry the full text of the law, which can be clipped and studied, so that those interested may know something about the law at the time the meetings are held in their various communities as well as in the general meeting in Gatesville.

HORSE-COW DUO ATTRACTS

One of the outstanding attractions of the show was Charles Maynard's oddity, a colt being raised and fed by a whitefaced cow. As we heard it, the cow lost its calf, and the colt it's mother, and the change was made satisfactorily to both still living. The colt is just as much at home with the cow as it would be its mother.

Quality and number of animals shown, auctioneer and handled by the second day's private treaty sale were said to be well above the average.

SPORT SCROLL

By POST

Pidcoke and Blackfoot are two clubs to whom the withdrawal of Gatesville from the county circuit meant added strength. The Indians have recruited Boog Jones and Chick McAlister, while the Cokers have added Sonny Hair, Pat Olsen and Tooter Hall to their eligibility lists.

The withdrawal of Gatesville really hurt the national game in this city. It has been hard enough to organize a team here in previous years but it will be much more difficult in the coming years because of the 1939 team's failure. Manager Hazen Ament cannot be blamed for the dropping out of his team. He has spent much time with the club, but for the past three Sunday's, his players failed to report for the scheduled games, and he felt it would be best to drop out entirely.

Gatesville's withdrawal clinches a place in the Saughnessy play-off for the Mound club, who will form the Big Four along with Pidcoke, Pearl and Blackfoot.

The coming city championship tournament promises to be one of the biggest golfing affairs ever fathomed by the Gatesville Golf Club. The course is in the best shape it has been in for the past five years, there is a large number of golfing fanatics straining at the mark ready to compete in the tournament.

This sudden revival of interest in the great Scotch sport is only one part of the general upswing of sports in Gatesville which includes interest and participation in baseball, softball, bowling, boxing, and golf.

The 1939 softball race, which has been as close and exciting as even the most rabid fans could desire, is just about over. Next week's schedule will be the closing nights of regular play, with week after next being scheduled for the play-off.

Four of the clubs are closely matched, and the team that wins this year will find it to be rocky going.

Speaking of stiff tasks, Coach Earle Worley and his Gatesville High Hornets have been garlanded with chaplets of poison ivy by the schedule makers. Prospects are good for an improved team over last year's capable eleven, but however much improved, the Hornets hardly can be expected to get through the 1939 program without taking it on the chin now and then.

After opening with Methodist Home, a club that promises to be as tough as any they will meet, they encounter Valley Mills, Itasca, Mart, West, Clifton, Hamilton, Marlin and finally their arch-foe McGregor. The Hornets will be lucky to be alive on November 25, after that campaign.

Gatesville is one of the pre-season puzzles of the conference. If Hornet mentor Worley can produce three or four good linemen, the Hornets may develop into one of the strongest teams in this sector. With out them the golden-clads are likely to run in the second division of this district.

Worley has very much of a tailor-made backfield awaiting him for fall training. He has four lettermen returning in the secondary and two more squadmen who will make the veterans step lively to hold their first string posts. He has three fast-stepping halfbacks in Jackson and Foster, lettermen, and Whigham, a squadman who performed his chores on the first string most of the spring session. Duncan Kirkpatrick, hard running veteran, will get the first call at the signal-barking post, with the flashy little Fisher Culberson around to handle the relief work. Jan Jones, the fulback, is undoubtedly the best punter in the district. Time after time the latter part of last season he ripped off boots of over forty yards, and this fall he should be greatly improved for Worley has eliminated much of the crudeness which sometimes made Jones slow in getting the ball away and kept him from throwing full leg power into his kicks. Jones is also a chilling blocker and a smashing line-crasher.

Red White is the only veteran in the line, which will be an inexperienced unit. The Methodist Home contest will prove to be the crucial test for that good ole' Hornet forward wall.

ARNOLD'S ELECTRIC TAKES LEAD IN SOFTBALL RACE

Arnold's young Electricians put on a stirring last-ditch rally to defeat the Coca-Cola Bottlers and regain possession of the league leadership Wednesday night 5-4. Huckabee, Arnold's No. 1 hurler worked a nice game, all the Botler runs coming in one inning, and errors were responsible for two of these four tallies.

"Turkey-Neck" Ricketts pitched nice ball for the losers, but wildness in the pinches proved to be his undoing.

The Electricians went into the first half of the closing frame two runs behind. Ricketts momentarily lost control and walked the first two batters to face him. Richards then doubled off the right field fence, scoring one of the runners and making the score 4-3. Rutherford then lofted a high fly into left field, and Wiegand threw wild after the catch, allowing both runners to score and give Arnolds the game.

A revamped Highway took a close 3 to 2 victory from the Red and White ten, to send the latter club tumbling back down into fourth place. Blanton, stouthearted Highway hurler, was the outstanding hero of the battle. Besides pitching brilliant ball, neither one of the Red and White runs were earned, he doubled home the two winning runs in the last of the seventh with a Texas Leaguer into right field.

COUNTY LEAGUE'S THREE CLOSING GAMES SUNDAY

The final league games of the Coryell county baseball league will be played Sunday, with most of the games serving as warm-up battles for the first division teams before they go into the strenuous schedule of the league's annual Saughnessy play-off, which will be run off the two weeks following the league's closing games.

Pearl, a nine that is believed to be one of the strongest teams in the league and is one of the favorites to come through the playoff unscathed, has a tough test as they tangle with the battling Mound team. The Mound club automatically advanced into the play off when Gatesville withdrew from the league, and the game will give the fans a true estimate of the strength of these 2 fine nines.

Pearl will use either Theo or C. B. Whaley on the slab, while Manager B. G. Anderson of the Mound club will start either Scaley Holcomb, who went like a house afire during the earlier part of the season but who slumped badly after his Gatesville defeat, or Foy Wicker, who has been a consistently fair hurler all season on the hill.

There is due to be a large crowd at this game Sunday, for the game will be played at Mound, one of the county's leading baseball towns and the fans will probably be out to back the Mound boys in droves now that they are back in the play-off with a shot at the championship which they so narrowly missed clinching last year.

Pidcoke was scheduled to meet Gatesville, but due to the fact of the latter's withdrawal, will probably schedule a practice game with some other club in order to keep their batting eyes sharp for the play-off.

Topsey, hopelessly mired in the depths of eighth place will meet one of its second division brethren, Jonesboro, at Jonesboro. The Eagles will be striving hard for a win, because a victory will probably send them into fifth place for White Hall, a team that is at present tied for 5th with the Eagles, battles the mighty Blackfoot Indians and are doped to meet defeat.

Turnersville, the league's cellar-bound outfit, has no game matched because of the Moshem club's dropping out, but it is not probable that they will match a game, but will stow away their bats and await the coming of another and better year, for the Buffs have had a most disappointing year, even though they had a team that has a fine hustle and spirit. They did not decide to enter the county circuit until just a short week before the league's schedule inauguration, and never did organize properly.

The league-leading Blackfoot clan will probably have its hands full when they tackle the hustling, up-and-coming White Hall nine at White Hall. The White Hallers gave Pidcoke quite a battle last Sunday, and if the Indians are not entirely ready for this game, they are apt to find themselves the victims of a most surprising and embarrassing upset.

Gatesville Drops From League

The Gatesville nine, a team that held fourth place in the Coryell County Baseball League, has officially withdrawn from the league, and forfeits the rest of its scheduled games. Hazen Ament stated that the reason for the club's withdrawal was a loss of interest so acute that not enough players would report for the games thus forcing him to forfeit. When it became apparent that this would be the situation for the rest of the year, he decided to pull his club completely out of the race.

As the usual aftermath of a club's withdrawal, several of the Gatesville players have already been signed by other clubs.

REGAL'S STREAMLINED IN FOYER, LOBBY OR SOMETHING: LOOK

Go down and see the Regal Theatre's lobby!

It's a work of an artist, and this artist, interior decorator is none other than Mrs. Howard Key, and her able assistants, Durwood Taylor, Jim Ed Pruner and Horace Blanton.

There's a new theme, and you might say, it's the "Theme Centre" (apologies to the New York World

STARS AND HISTORY COMBINE TO MAKE 'JUAREZ' GREAT FILM

"Juarez," Warner Bros. brilliant new production starring Paul Muni and Bette Davis, will have its local premiere on Saturday, Sunday, and Monday at the Regal Theatre. Supporting Mr. Muni and Miss Davis are such stellar names as Brian Aherne, John Garfield, Claude Rains, Joseph Calleia, Gale Sondergaard and a host of others.

From an historical standpoint, "Juarez" is extremely important, for it depicts the only widespread efforts on the part of a European government to infringe upon the Monroe Doctrine. Napoleon III of France sets up a puppet empire in Mexico, with Maximilian and Carlota as innocent and hapless pawns, in order to collect the debts owed to France, but cancelled by Juarez, president of the Mexican republic. This turbulent but significant period in the history of America forms the background for "Juarez" a picture which is destined to be one of the great films of all time.

GATESVILLE, TEXAS, FRIDAY, AUGUST 11, 1939

It look at this moment as if Congress would probably adjourn tomorrow night. The Third Deficiency Bill is the only measure of major importance yet remaining that may likely involve enough difference of opinion to cause a delay in adjournment. This bill is a sort of "catch all" in the way of appropriations. As passed by the House it contained no appropriation for the funds that will be necessary if the Commodity Credit Corporation is to continue to make cotton loans and other crop loans. We tried to put such an amendment on to the bill in the House but failed by a few votes. The Senate late this afternoon put such an amendment on and tomorrow we will again try to get the House to accept this change. I feel hopeful that we may be able to keep this item in the bill, but I realize that it is going to involve quite a fight.

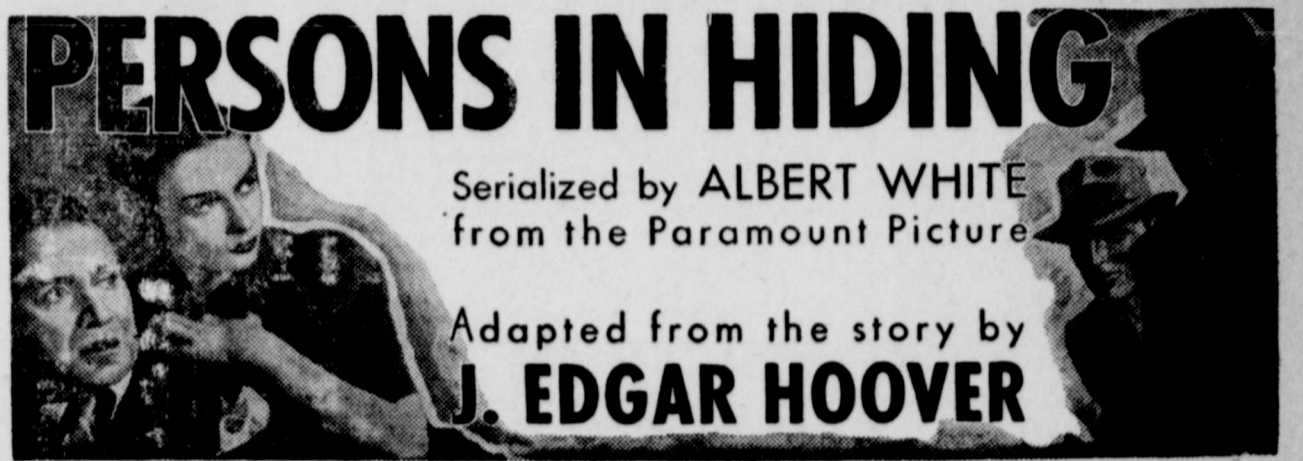

This afternoon, (Friday, August 4th) the House agreed to a conference report on the Social Security Bill, which if accepted by the Senate as it probably will be, will mean that that bill will become law without the Connally Amendment or any other amendments that will give any substantial help to our old folks. It has been evident all along that a majority of the House (most of them being from the rich industrial states) were opposed to any change that would give a larger share of Federal help to the states in caring for the old people. There would, however, have been a lively fight had not the Speaker cut all discussion short by simply declaring that "without objection the conference report will be agreed to." Then, without giving a moment for objection he passed to the next subject and refused to hear any objections. As I see it, this action makes the more necessary the passage of legislation along the line I have offered.

Earlier this week the House defeated two great spending and lending bills which had been previously passed by the Senate. The U. S. Housing bill (the so-called slum clearance program) was defeated by a vote of 191 to 170. This bill involved an immediate expenditure of $800,000,000.00 and created an obligation on the part of the government to pay out subsidies over a period of sixty years some $2,700,000,000.00. This tremendous sum will never be returned to the Government, and the $800,000,000.00 which has been described as only a loan will only be paid out of money that the Federal Government itself advances. It is to my mind a plan well calculated to confuse the people into thinking that the Government would be called on only to loan $800,000,000.00 when as a matter of fact it was actually requiring the Government to give away $2,700,000,000.00. I think that it is well for the Government to aid in improving the home of our people, but I believe that this is being much better done through the FHA and through the Jones-Bankhead program of loaning money to tenant farmers to enable them to become home owners. These loans are being very largely repaid and are, I think, a sound Government program. The so-called "Lending-Spending" bill which was defeated early this week contained a program of Governmental loans of less than $2,000,000,000.00, most of which was devoted to loans to farmers for homes, rural electrification, etc. Another important item in this bill was money for low interest rate loans to carry on the unfinished PWA program. Had this money been made available many of our communities would have been able to go ahead and build the school houses, jails, waterworks, etc. that were projected but not constructed under the PWA program. This item would have also probably enabled us to proceed with the construction of the long needed Brazos Flood Control Program. None of the items in this bill involved any outright gifts of Federal money. It is true that there would have been some losses as there is in all loans but the Government would have gotten most of its money back. I, therefore, voted for this part of the program. We hope to leave Washington just as soon as Congress finally adjourns. We will, therefore, surely be on our way home before this letter is printed. All our friends who have business with our office will please address all correspondence to me at the Federal Building at Waco. I expect to be in Central Texas at least most of the time until Congress convenes again. I am always glad to have my friends come to my office which is on the second floor of the Post Office Building at Waco. Due to the number of unexpected calls that I always receive while at home, requiring me to be in various places, it is impossible for our office to make definite appointments for visits. I shall however try to be in the Waco office as nearly as possible on Wednesdays and Fridays. A little later on I shall announce dates on which I will visit other cities in the district that all of our people may have an opportunity to discuss with me any matter in connection with which they feel I might be of help to them. There will be someone in the Waco office each day (whether I am in town or not) so do not hesitate to write us at that address. As has long been my custom, I shall discontinue my weekly letters until the next session of Congress. I appreciate the kindness of my good newspaper friends who have seen fit to print these articles and I sincerely hope that our people have received some information from them.

SYNOPSIS OF CHAPTER VIII
Acting on a lead furnished by Burt Nost, who has been kidnaped and released after payment of $200,000 ransom, Pete Griswold and Dan Waldron, Federal Bureau of Investigation operatives, locate the house where Burt had been held. Here, Pete is captured by Dot and Freddie Martin and Matt Flagler, the three criminals who had engineered the kidnaping. Dan and his men manage to rescue Pete, killing Flagler in the process. Dot and Freddie make their escape from the officers.

CHAPTER IX

FREDDIE entered the cheap furnished room in which Dot and he were hiding out. He told her what the newspaper headlines were saying: that the foster parents of Dot Bronson would go to jail for long terms because they had hidden Dot and her companion.

Dot's lips narrowed. "I knew it," she said. "That's why I won't do what you asked. I won't go away. I'll not leave Mom on that rock pile. I'm going to get her out!"

"It can't be done," Freddie shook his head. "You can't crack that jail. Dot, you're not fooling with some hicktown sheriff. This is the old man with the whiskers—Uncle Sam."

Dot nodded. She spoke slowly. "I've got an idea. And I think he'll do business."

She started fixing her hair before the mirror. "I'm going for a walk," she said, and picked up the perfume bottle labelled "Tantalizing." While Freddie watched her closely Dot shook the bottle and saw it was almost empty. She let some warm water run into it, shook it well, and sprinkled the slightly perfumed water on her clothes.

Freddie scowled. "Two hundred grand," he growled. "In a bag under the bed, and you have to do that!"

"Forget it." Dot's voice was tender. "Wait'll I come back. Be a good boy until then. I've got a lot on my mind." She looked into his eyes. "I just want to tell you something, Freddie. I love you. Maybe I'm hard and cold, like you say, but no matter what I am, I love you." She kissed him, turned and left the room.

Freddie stared after Dot's vanished figure. He turned and saw the empty perfume bottle on the washbasin, and a look of determination came over his face. He snatched a revolver from under the pillow, stuffed it in his pocket, grabbed a hat and rushed out of the door.

Once on the street, Freddie looked cautiously around. He spied a small sedan just pulling up to the curb, stepped swiftly to it and jumped in. Then he growled at the couple in the front seat. "When the light's clear up ahead, get going around this corner." The tone and the accompanying wave of Freddie's revolver made everything clear. A moment later, the car started.

Two blocks further on, Freddie took advantage of a traffic stop light to tell the man driving, "Hand over your money and nothing'll happen to you." The man, speechless with fright, nodded, and the woman instantly fished his wallet out of his pocket and handed it to Freddie.

Just as he took the money, Freddie was startled almost into dropping his gun by a voice from alongside, saying, "Pull over to the curb, there."

He turned, saw Pete and Dan in an F. B. I. car by his side, both with revolvers levelled directly at him.

"We followed you, Freddie," said Pete, softly.

Freddie downed his first impulse to shoot, and leaped for freedom out of the car in which he was. Pete and Dan, fearing to wound passers-by, withheld their fire, but rushed after him, to see Freddie crash into a pedestrian walking the other way, lose his balance and go through a plate glass show window. In a moment they were on him, and in another he was securely handcuffed to both officers, docilely accompanying them to their car.

Neither Pete nor Chief Kingsley would tell Freddie why they had brought him to their office from his cell just before nine o'clock that night. When the phone rang at nine sharp, Pete, who answered it,

"No, no, Freddie," she begged. "You're not in Alcatraz! Not yet! Now, listen. Why do you think they're letting us talk? Just so they can trace this call and grab me!" Her voice rose to a shrill, insane scream. "Well, this is for you, Mister G-man who's listening in! I'm talking from Woolford 8376. But before you can do anything about it, I'll be gone!"

Her voice took on its earlier pleading tone. "Don't say anything more, Freddie! Don't tell 'em where the money is! And don't tell 'em anything about me—not anything!"

"Just sit tight, that's all, and keep your mouth shut so's I'll have a chance to get away!"

"Dot!" Freddie screamed. "Don't leave me, Dot! Dot, listen!" Kingsley slowly hung up the ex-glanced at a letter he held in his hand and spoke in a voice low enough to guarantee that Freddie couldn't hear. "Detroit?" he said. "That's the password, all right. You're the person who said you can hand him over to us? If we let your mother go? Hold on a minute, Detroit. Someone wants to talk to you." Pete handed the receiver to Freddie, while Kingsley picked up an extension on his desk.

Freddie, wondering, took the phone. "Hello," he said, and his eyes widened as he recognized Dot's voice saying, "Hello. I gave you the password once, Detroit."

Freddie screamed his surprise and fear. "Dot! They got me, Dot!"

Dot recognized Freddie. All her bravado vanished in a flash. "Don't tell them where I am, Freddie," she begged in abject fear.

Freddie's voice was gentle and pleading, like a little boy who doesn't understand something he knows he should. "I won't tell them, Dot. You know why I went out. It was for you, Dot. You wanted a bottle of perfume, and I thought..."

"You never did think," Dot screamed, in a sudden frenzy. "You small-time sneak thief! I tried to pound something into that thick skull of yours! I tried to make you a big-shot!"

"Yes," bellowed Freddie, stung to sudden, furious anger by her exhortation, "and all you get me is a lifetime in Alcatraz!"

Dot instantly became contrite.

tension phone. "She hung up on you, Freddie," he said.

Freddie let Pete take the receiver from his hands. His dazed look faded to suspicion and wrath. "What's she calling here for?" he demanded. "What does 'Detroit' mean?" He jumped to his feet.

"Take it easy, Freddie," Pete advised. "Tell us where we can find her."

"Tell you where you can find her?" asked Freddie, incredulously. "She's my wife. She's everything I've got! I'll take it on the chin for her—anything, anytime! What kind of a rat do you think I am?"

Pete handed him a letter. "Read this, and then tell us what kind of a rat you think she is," he said deliberately.

Freddie took the letter. His eyes narrowed. "It's her writing," he muttered. He started reading, and slowly drifted into an audible murmur. "... I guarantee to hand over Gunner Martin. I mean business. I will phone you tonight at nine o'clock for your answer. I'll say 'Detroit,' so you'll know it's me. Signed—Dot Bronson. P. S. My thumbprint." Freddie shook his head and slowly murmured, "Only a little while ago she said, 'Freddie, I love you.' He crumpled the letter savagely. "You want me to hand her up, eh? Okay. I'll tell you where to find her. I'll tell you where to find the two hundred grand, too! I'll tell you anything you want to know!"

AND that's just the beer tax revenue this state itself collects . . . to lift the burden of direct taxation from your shoulders. Nationwide, beer contributes over a million dollars a day to the cost of government. Think what that means in paying for relief, in public works, in old age assistance right in your own community.

Then think of the million new jobs that beer made. And then add to that a 100 million dollar market for farmers' crops!

How can we keep these benefits . . . for you and for us? Brewers of America realize this depends on keeping beer retailing as wholesome as beer itself. They want to help public officials in every possible way. They cannot enforce laws. But they can—and will—cooperate!

MOOREHEAD REUNION

As has been the custom for the past three years an outing was held in connection in Raby Park at Gatesville the first Sunday in August in honor of the three surviving Moorehead sisters, Mrs. Inie Donaldson, Flat; Mrs. Celestia Robinson, The Grove; and Mrs. Austin Millstead, Gatesville.

At the noon hour a bountiful and delicious feast was spread in the beautiful shade. The afternoon was spent in conversation and having a good time in general, in spite of the fact that one sister, Mrs. Inie Donaldson for some unknown reason, was not present.

Our hearts were also saddened by remembering that since our last meeting one of our members, Bethel Duncan, has gone on and left a place vacant in our hearts that can never be filled.

Those present at the noon hour were Messrs. and Mesdames Emmett Anderson and son, Jack, Fairy; Buel Graham, Gatesville; Vera Slater, Gatesville; Austin Millstead, Gatesville; Mr. Bill Slater, Crane; Mrs. Exa Turner, Gatesville; Mrs. Celestia Robinson,

Mr. Grannil Graham, and Mrs. Bethel Duncan, The Grove; and Mr. Jimmie Slater Crane and Miss Kathryn Slater, Fairy.

At 5 p. m. all left for home expecting to meet again next year the first Sunday in August.

THE SOCIAL SEASONS
By SARAH-ELIZABETH RODGER
(From August Cosmopolitan)

THIS is the story of the leisure class, that heterogeneous group of dowagers and debutantes, smart young-marrieds, social climbers and perennial playboys, who live in such desperate fear of being bored. They rush from snug Park Avenue apartments to Florida villas and back to Long Island or down to the Carolinas as the seasons change. They can never settle down in one house and live in it. That would be so frightfully dull and obscure. They live in the limelight and each other's company. This is their story and it's the story of a couple of other people—people like Peggy Barnett and Walter Nicholls, called Nicky for short.

It was Peggy Barnett who won Mr. Preston Peabody's tennis tournament. She had been fighting her way up since she was just a tennis novice, under the expert tutelage of her mother, who had been a ranking player in her day. Now she was on top and in love with Neale Peabody, and Neale was in love with her and that made it hard, because Peggy realized she didn't belong to the leisure class and she realized that nothing is harder than to stay on the top. Mrs. Barnett was worried, too. She said, "You meet rich people, honey, and they tell you what a wonderful game of tennis you play. Sometimes they ask you to their parties and you think they've grown fond of you."

It was Mr. Preston Peabody who really gave Peggy the courage to enter the social circles. He told her about his wife who had been an actress and certainly an outsider and how she had won all Easthampton to her before she died.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

COST: 3 CENTS

SOME of the critics of advertising—and in this world there are those who criticize every good thing—level their lances at what they think is a weak spot: its cost.

They read of the million-dollar advertising appropriations, they brood on the cost of a full page of advertising in a metropolitan newspaper or a national magazine—and then they lose their sharpest barbs against the waste which they say is involved in this costly process.

Charles Roth

Their only trouble is that they judge without having all the facts. For the truth is that advertising is the least expensive cost of doing business. Everything else costs a good deal more in proportion than the advertising.

The wise and capable business man bases the amount of money he spends for advertising upon the volume of business he either is doing or expects to do. This money set aside to advertise is called the appropriation.

It seldom runs, take the country over, more than 3 per cent, which means that for every dollar of sales made the advertising cost will be just three pennies. That is all—three pennies.

The large advertising appropriations come when a business, through the help of intelligent advertising, becomes so great that its annual volume runs into many millions of dollars a year. But whether an advertiser spends $10,000 a year or $10,000,000, his percentage remains the same—an average of 3 per cent.

The amount of money spent in advertising well-known products is so small as to be ridiculous, when you really know the facts.

Take oranges. How much do you suppose the growers spend to advertise their product? A third of a cent per dozen is all.

A national cracker baker reveals that he sets aside only one-tenth of a cent to advertise a package of crackers, while the manufacturer of a soft drink spends 1,576/100,000 of a cent in advertising a five-cent glass of his product.

The manufacturer of a medium-priced automobile spends less than 3 per cent for advertising—he spends only $12 in making a $1,000 sale.

And even this small amount, this three cents on the dollar, isn't an expense, an added premium on the business. By spending three cents out of every dollar for advertising, the manufacturer or merchant can sell for less and give you more for your money.
