Byron Leaird Jr. and Mrs. Fred Smith leave today for Dallas and Fort Worth wholesale markets where they will make purchases for the coming Fall trade, as well as completing "shorts" in summer merchandise stocks.

Merchants of Gatesville are continually "keeping up" with the trade wishes, and stocks to be found in all Gatesville stores are as complete as can be found in many of the larger "trade centers" nearby and prices, as a rule, are cheaper.

O'DANIEL "OUTPOINTS" ALL OPPONENTS IN FIRST "ROUND": ALLEN, BROWN, CULBERSON, POAGE AND ZEIGLER WIN

Election results of the First Primary, brought both tears and joy.

Governor W. Lee O'Daniel kept his election promise, and his song, "There Ain't Goin' to Be Any Run-off" came true as he predicted a week or more before the voters spoke. His majority has already mounted to 59,486 votes ahead of all the candidate. Thompson ran second. Hines, third, Mrs. Ferguson fourth, Sadler, Davis and Condron trailed, in order.

Poage with 24,726, held a commanding lead over Cross who trailed with 14,437. Head and Lovelady are in the run-off for State Senator, and Huddleston and McAnnelly are the run-off candidates in the Representative race, from the unofficial vote.

Brooks is out in front in the Railroad Commissioner's race, being trailed closely by Culberson Hardin was third.

In the Comptroller race, George Sheppard was re-elected, as was Charlie Lockhart, for State Treasurer; L. A. Woods, for State Superintendent; J. E. McDonald, Agricultural Commissioner.

Connally had no trouble with Belcher or Fisher, and neither did Stevenson in the Lieut. Governor's race. Christian appears to have lost the Criminal Appeals Justice job to Beauchamp, and there'll be a run-off in the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court place with Alexander and Lattimore doing the running. Sharp, in the Associate Justice race smothered Watkins.

SURPRISES WERE EVIDENT IN COUNTY RACES: SOME RUN-OFF

In Coryell County Zeigler was re-elected County Judge, Culberson took the Tax Assessor-Collector's race, District Clerk Carl McClendon was re-elected to that office, and the Brown and White race for Sheriff went to Brown.

County run-offs will be A. W. Ellis and W. D. McElvaney for County Clerk, M. C. Braziel and Ivy Edmondson for County Treasurer, J. M. Price and Roy Evetts for Commissioner Beat 2; Harry Commissioner Beat 3, Oad Painter and Dick Payne for Commissioner, Beat 4.

In Beat 1, it's tight like that, and here's the score: Hanes, 110, Hardcastle 205, Arnet 189; Turner 507. This gives Turner an unofficial 507 over the total of 504 of his opponents, and apparently, there will be no run off in this race.

Peabody (Hillsdale) the last Coryell county box to come in had no effect on any of the results.

Here are the reputed results in other counties that effect Coryell county folks:

FARMERS SLIDING TO LOWER STATUS TO BE ASSISTED

Farmers who are faced with slipping into the status of renters or sharecroppers because they are trying to carry a debt load too heavy for them may well be interested in attending a meeting announced today by George C. Moore, Coryell County FSA Supervisor.

"The county farm debt adjustment committee will meet," Mr. Moore said, "to help those farmers who anticipated losing their land, livestock, or equipment by foreclosure." The meeting will be held on Monday, August 5th at the Farm Security Office.

"The farm debt adjustment committee is composed of some of the fairest and most public-spirited men in the county," the supervisor said. "Its purpose is to help debt-distressed farmers to stay on their land and keep possession of their livestock and machinery.

He states that it is often more advantageous for mortgage-holders and other creditors to grant a little leniency so that the Farm Security Administration could help the farmer to work out of his difficulty. The supervisor pointed out that creditors in this way might realize a major portion of a debt on which otherwise they would have a big loss.

Members of the county debt adjustment committee are: C. H. McGilvray, J. Frank Blair, and Geo. J. Fritz.

Spicily rich is this SURPRISE CAKE

Says Dorothy Greig

HERE are really two schools of cake eaters: Those who dote on the actual cake itself; and those who regard cake as just an excuse for a luscious filling and icing.

I am not telling which one I favor. This Surprise Cake, however, makes both happy. The cake itself is dark and fragrant, spicy with innamon and cloves and nutmeg and sprinkled through with chopped nut meats. The icing is thick, smooth and creamy, delicately quickened with lemon.

Surprise Cake

6 tablespoons shortening
1 cup sugar
1 can condensed tomato soup
1 1/2 cups flour (sifted)
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon cloves
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup nut meats, (chopped)

Sift the flour, then measure, add baking powder, baking soda, cinnamon, cloves, and nutmeg, and sift again.

Cream the shortening thoroughly, add the sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add flour mixture, alternately with the tomato soup, a small amount at a time. Add nutmeats and stir until smooth. Bake in a greased pan (9 x 9 x 2 inches) in a 350° oven for 45 minutes.

Lemon Cream Cheese Icing:

1 package cream cheese
1 1/2 cups sugar (XXXX)
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon salt

Cream the cheese thoroughly. Then stir in the sugar, gradually. Add the lemon juice and salt. Spread on the cake.

In the grand old summer time eat ONE HOT FOOD WITH EVERY MEAL

Dorothy Greig

Purée Mongole Soup is nourishing for warm days

EVEN though the thermometer plays mean tricks by climbing high and higher, we still need hot food—and at every meal.

Cold cuts, cold salads, frozen deserts, chilled drinks are all palate tickling. Somewhere along the line, however it's wise to include a hot dish. Hot food helps the digestion to behave politely. And anyway, a contrast, a balance, of hot with cold gives any meal more zest.

For example, suppose fruit juice or jellied soup comes first. Then make the next course a hot one, maybe meat pie and meat loaf. Or if you serve cold cuts, begin the meal with a light hot soup. At noontime, hot soup can be the main dish, followed by crisp salad and cold dessert.

Soup is one hot dish a woman can prepare without getting all heated up herself. Just open a can, add water or milk as the case may be, and heat. Soup is light, leaves no heavy after feeling. It refreshes and revives, too, and provides quick energy. Here are several that are especially inviting with summer meals:

Purée Mongole

1 can condensed pea soup
1 can condensed tomato soup
1 1/4 cup fresh milk or light cream

Empty pea soup into saucepan and stir until smooth. Add the tomato soup, a little at a time, stirring constantly. Add cold milk or cream to mixture. Then heat, stirring constantly. Do not let boil. Serves 4-6.

Cream of Celery and Chicken Soup

1 can condensed celery soup
1 can condensed chicken soup
1 can milk, using soup can for measure
1 can water, using soup can for measure

Stir the chicken soup into the celery soup. Then add 1 can of milk and 1 can of water. Heat to boiling and serve. Serves 5-7.

Another winner is this meat roll. Not the least of its virtues is that it looks so nice sliced down:

Stuffed Meat Roll

1 1/4 pounds ground beef
1/2 pound ground fresh pork

4 tablespoons onion (cooked is 1)

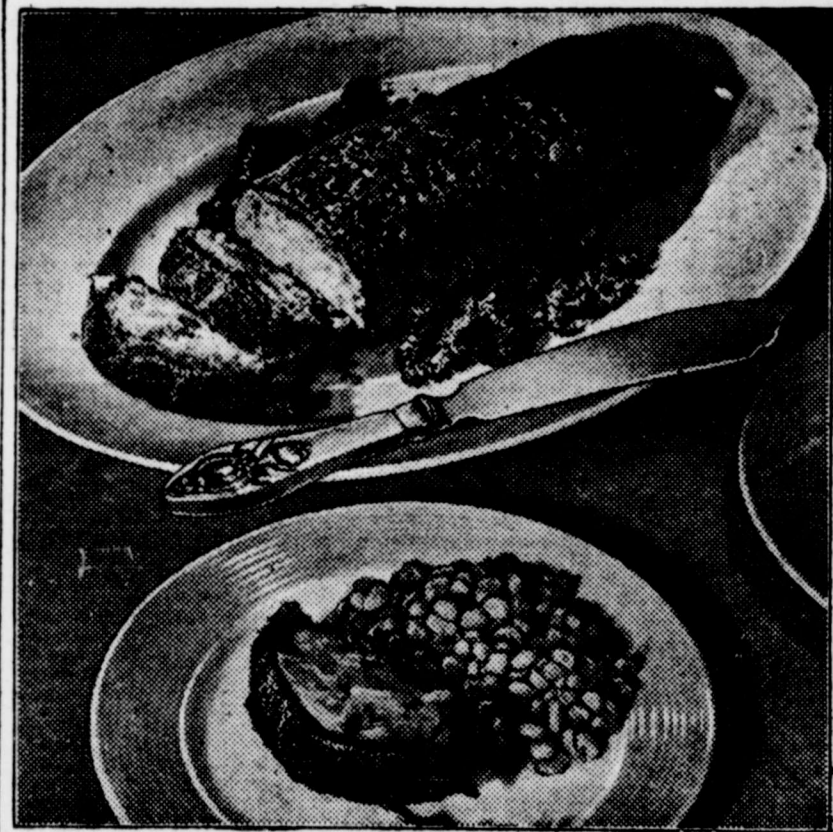

1/4 tablespoon butter
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/2 cup soft bread crumbs
1 egg, beaten

Combine all of the ingredients and mix thoroughly. Put on waxed paper and pat out in a sheet 14 inches long by 10 inches wide.

Potato and Pea Stuffing:

2 cups mashed potatoes
1 can condensed pea soup
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 egg, beaten

Combine all ingredients and mix well. Place on the meat and then roll the meat mixture around the stuffing. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven for one hour to an hour and fifteen minutes. Serves 8.

Meat roll with potato-pea stuffing perks up hot weather appetites.

JAMES CORYELL'S GRAVE LOCATED IN FALLS COUNTY: REMAINS MAY BE MOVED

On the morning of July 18th, before I had eaten breakfast, I heard a call at the front door. I responded and found Joe Cavett there. After greetings, Joe asked if I could spare him a day or two of my time. I asked for what purpose? Joe went on to relate that he had been to Falls County and while there had met Mrs. Roy Levy of Chilton, and Mrs. A. P. Tomlinson of Tomlinson Hill, which is the Old Settlers picnic and reunion ground for that section. The two parties conduct affairs of this holiday and celebration ground, and on it maintain a log cabin where is exhibited any historic heirloom that any one cares to place temporarily in their custody. They also delve into the early history of their county.

While Mr. Cavett was there they furnished him with clues, and traditions, which they thought if properly correlated, might lead to the identification of James Coryell's grave. Let me here state that Joe is an enthusiast when it comes to delving into the early history of Falls and Coryell counties. His desire in this connection is to bring about a plan to have Coryell's remains brought to, and interred on the courthouse lawn in Gatesville.

It was with Joe Cavett's grandmother, Mrs. Andrew Cavett, that James Coryell was making his home at the time he was ambushed and slain by Indians on May 27th, 1837. Now let us trace the life story of James Coryell and bring the narrative down to his connection with the Cavett family and Coryell county, for the story would be incomplete without the memoirs of the Cavetts being added.

James Coryell was born in Tennessee in 1796. He arrived in Texas prior to April 1825, which will be shown later, having come down the Mississippi River to New Orleans where he heard the many glowing accounts of the wonderful richness of the Texas country, then for the most part, a vast unoccupied empire of untold possibilities. From New Orleans he proceeded to San Antonio. In that city of romance he met most colorful characters, where adventure is in the minds of the people. He belonged to the restless class of men who spent their lives pushing the frontiers to newer horizons, and of whom Professor Webb wrote, "they rode like Mexicans; trailed like Indians; shot like Tennesseans; and fought like the devil", which statement will be amply verified by the following historic facts.

At San Antonio he aligned himself with James and Rezin P. Bowie, Cephas Ham, and others of those fearless characters who were making history more to their own notion than to the notion of the constituted authorities. In 1831 he joined James and Rezin P. Bowie in their expedition to search for the San Saba mine, and on that expedition participated in the famous Bowie Indian Fight, where the little company was assailed by more than 160 Waco, Tehuacana and Caddo Indians. After a terrible battle, in which Bowie had several men wounded and the enemy lost almost half their number, the Bowie company with eleven men managed to extricate themselves from their perilous position.

From San Antonio, some years later, Coryell, with Andrew Cavett proceeded to the town of Viesca in 1835, which town at that time was the official seat of Sterling C. Robertson's colony on the Brazos River. The town was founded in 1834 and was named Sarahville de Viesca, in honor of Robertson's wife and the then Governor of Texas, Augustine De Viesca. In December 1835 Ben Milam with 300 Texans captured San Antonio from a Mexican Army of 1200 men, however Ben Milam was killed in the hour of victory. From that date all Mexican authority ceased in the town of Viesca and the place was given the name of Fort Milam, and from that date this frontier station was the scene from which Coryell operated with various Ranger companies. Earlier in 1835 Coryell and Andrew Cavett had gone to the Leon River country and established claims on certain tracts of land.

Patent was issued to James Coryell from the state of Coahuila and Texas, June 22, 1835, states that James Coryell was received as a colonist by Robert Lieflich (Leftwich) on the 15th day of April 1825, and Leftwich's colonization rights were transferred to the Nashville Company on the 15th day of October 1829; that James Coryell was a bachelor. It further provided that he should establish permanent land marks at each angle of the land and was bound to settle and cultivate it according to the established requirements. This patent covers 1180 acres of land at intersections of Coryell Creek and Leon River. To be described later in detail. The Cavett land lay adjacent to the Coryell lands in the Leon bottom.

Having received land, Andrew Cavett returned to Bolivar, Tennessee, to bring his wife and seven sons, aged from fourteen years down, to Texas and in Feb. 1836 in company with Newton Duncan's family arrived at Viesca where they joined their friend Coryell. From that time Coryell made his home with the Cavetts.

"Their first thought was bread", to quote Joe Cavett, so they cleared the weeds off a strip of land known as weed prairie and with sharp sticks punched holes in the ground and dropped in seed corn. In the spring of 1836 all Texas colonists were in the greatest stampede before the Mexican Army, known as the "Runaway Scrape". In terror of the Mexicans all colonists begun a pell mell retreat to East Texas or anywhere to escape the Wrath of the victorious Mexican army. Cavett, Coryell and Duncan, assisted in covering the retreat and maintained some semblance of order. On April 21, 1836 Santa Anna was defeated at the

Football Training Camp For GHS Hornets To Open Here Sept. 1

By their donations of approximately one hundred and forty-one dollars, fifty business men and sport fans of this city have practically assured Coach Madison Pruitt of a football training camp where the 1940 edition of the Gatesville High School Hornets may get in shape for the coming football season.

Coach Pruitt will start these training sessions on Sept. 1 and they will be composed of a morning practice session, skull practice in the afternoon and an extended late afternoon practice session on the field. This routine will amount to approximately three weeks of practice at one session a day.

While attending this training camp, these boys will eat at the high school cafeteria and will have their sleeping quarters in the gym. In this way, by close association, the boys will have an excellent opportunity to acquaint themselves with the new coach and his system of play.

Coach Pruitt extends to every boy desiring to play football, a cordial invitation to attend this camp and about forty prospective Hornets are expected to take advantage of the offer.

Field Repairs Delay Softball Games

Several softball games that were supposed to have been played the latter part of last week have been postponed due to repairs being made on the playing field.

Incidentally with the exception of three or four teams the competition has slowed down almost to a walk and the date for the league playoff will probably be set in the near future.

Baseball Playoff Is Due Soon

The Jonesboro Eagles, Blackfoot Indians, Pidcoke Cokers and Mound teams have captured the four highest positions in the Coryell County News Baseball cup race and the playoff is due to come about soon.

The managers of the four teams are asked to cooperate in every way possible to make this playoff one of the best in the history of the county league and competition among the four teams is unusually keen.

The winning team will be awarded a trophy by the News who are sponsoring the league.

Indians Defeat Cokers, 5-0

Otha Martin's Blackfoot Indians added another scalp to their collection Sunday afternoon when they defeated the Pidcoke Cokers by a count of 5-0.

Evidently the Cokers just couldn't get going and allowed the Indians to collect five runs before they finally settled down and decided to make it a ball game.

Schoolboy Rutherford who has seen lots of service on the mound for the Cokers this season started the fireworks for the Pidcoke crew but retired at the end of the fifth inning in favor of Hair who finally managed to check the Indians scoring spree.

Jack Barton, veteran right hand hurler of the Indian band, is said to have pitched one of his greatest games of the season holding the Cokers scoreless during the entire nine innings of the game. This is a feat that hasn't been accomplished before to our knowledge and goes to show that Barton really must have been in the best of form.

Blackfoot's victory over the Cokers Sunday will have no effect upon the league playoff as the Cokers have already cinched a position as one of the four leading teams.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

OF course, the more people you get around you to make you feel comfortable, the more trouble you're likely to have. Some guys have got so much dough that they have to have their hat brushed every hour by a regular hat-brusher. If they didn't have the hat-brusher they wouldn't have any way of being sure that they were real rich and kinda superior.

Well, one fellow advertised for a valet, and a big, husky guy came and answered the ad.

"I want a man that knows his onions," says the advertiser. "I gotta have a man that ain't afraid of a clothes brush, and a man that is well-behaved. Behavior counts a lot."

"Well," says the job-hunter, "I don't think you can get a better one than me. I'm a regular behaviorist. Why, I got a record of my good behavior. I got eight months and three days off for good behavior last time, and before that I would've got three months off if I hadn't got roused one day and thrown a shovel at one of the guards."

FARMERS MAY MAKE APPLICATIONS FOR WHEAT INSURANCE FOR 1941 NOW

The County AAA office advises that All-Risk crop insurance on wheat has been made available to wheat farmers on the 1941 crop by the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, and that the regulations for 1941 are practically the same as for 1939 and 1940.

The amount of the premium, which is based on the past production record of the farm, is calculated in bushels of wheat and the price per bushel is based on the Galveston Export market on the day the application for insurance is filed.

Farmers may insure their crops for either 75 or 50 percent of their normal production.

Premiums may be paid in cash at the time the application is filed or the amount of the premium can be deducted from payments which the farmer will have coming under the 1941 Agricultural Conservation Program.

Applications for insurance must be filed prior to the beginning of the seeding of the wheat or not later than August 31st.

Since the amount of the premium paid is affected by the price wheat is selling for on the day the application is filed, some farmers may desire to file applications now, believing that the price of wheat will advance thereby increasing the amount of the premium.

Producers who suffer a loss have an option as to the method of settlement desired. Settlements may be made in cash based on the price wheat is selling for at the time the claim for indemnity is approved, in cash based on the price wheat is selling for on any specified day within 90 days after the claim for indemnity is approved, or the insured may receive a warehouse receipt covering the number of bushels of the loss.

The insurance contract covers losses due to drought, flood, hail, wind, frost, winterkill, lightning, fire, tornado, storm, insect infestation, animal pests, plant diseases, excess or deficient moisture, incursion of animal, and other natural causes.

Farmers desiring additional information or those desiring to file applications for insurance should contact the county AAA office.

THE POWDERED "THIGH BONE OF A HANG'D MAN" WAS PRESCRIBED AS AN INTERNAL MEDICINE IN 1718.

CONTROLS ON THE PLANNING DESK IN A NEW HOLLYWOOD, CALIF. HOME, REGULATE THE TIME AND TEMPERATURE IN THE GAS RANGE OVEN -- SEVERAL FEET AWAY!

The thigh bone from a "hang'd man" was especially recommended by Dr. Boyle in his book of "Medicinal Receipts," published in 1718. Powdered and mixed with a cordial, it was supposed to have a curative effect in dysentery.

Remote control from a planning desk is the latest Hollywood development for a modern kitchen. Not only do controls at the desk regulate baking in the gas range oven, they also set the time and temperature for heating the house, and out-of-doors, turn the lawn sprinkling system on and off automatically, at the desired time.

Battle of San Jacinto and the settlers begun to trek back to their abandoned homes.

It was destined that Andrew Cavett should not return to the settlement. The returning colonist reached Millican where they were held up by high water on the Brazos and Navasota rivers. While waiting here Andrew Cavett sickened and died of fever on July 1, 1836. Coryell, the Duncans and Mrs. Cavett returned to the home and worked out their corn crop which had been planted with sharp sticks and that fall harvested a good corn crop. Mrs. Cavett, the widow, bought land at Wheelock, Oct. 19, 1838 and moved there where she resided until her death Jan. 26, 1882.

In the meantime Coryell had gone back to the ranger service. He joined Sterling C. Robertson's Company at Fort Griffin at three Forks. He also served under Capt. Thomas Barron and did extensive service under Capt. George B. Erath. It is not definitely known that Coryell was a surveyor, at any rate he assisted in locating many settlers on the Sterling Robertson lands. He also was semi officially employed by Mr. Robertson to solicit settlers to come to the colony.

In May 1837, the company was preparing to make another trip west to locate lands and scout for Indians. In the days of waiting to complete organization, Coryell, Ezra Webb, and Michael Castleman, went out about a mile from the fort to cut a bee tree. While eating honey they were assailed by Indians. According to Mr. Cavett, Coryell stood to draw the enemy fire. He fell at the first shot. Webb and Castleman escaped without testing the strength of the enemy. Apparently Coryell did not expire immediately for he was taken to the Cavett home where he lingered for a day or two and died. He was buried about a mile northwest of Fort Milam (Old Viesca) on the date mentioned at the head of the paper.

This is a brief review of the man for whom Coryell County Hills, Coryell Creek and Coryell Church organized in 1854 and still a active Church, are named.

Let us now record a few of the traditions and historic data held by Mr. Cavett and the people of Falls county regarding the burial place of James Coryell.

In the written records of the Cavett and Duncan families, testifying to the death and burial place of Coryell as being near Viesca, and giving the dates as above mentioned, we obtained our information from his grandmother, Mrs. Ann Cavett, mentioned above and also (Continued on Page Two)

Cavett mentioned above and also saw the written records. Churchill Jones came to the Brazos Falls county about 1850 and established extensive plantations. He owned many slaves. A large portion of his lands lay in the immediate neighborhood of the abandoned site of Viesca. On one of these tracts of land, Mr. Jones gave the slaves a burying ground that is there today, with a barbed wire fence around it. It lies about one mile northwest of the Viesca site or old Fort Milam. Our friend A. P. Tomlinson mentioned above, obtained the following story from of Churchill Jones and who died old Tom Broadus, who was a slave a year or two ago at the age of 120 years. He lived thru the entire period of which we write and he relates that when the first Negro was buried on the lot there was a grave just a few feet off the south line of the lot that he had always been taught was the grave where "Mr. Jim Coryell" was buried. After several years the grave caved in and the superstitious Negroes who had been told the story of Coryell, carried stones from Jones' Spring some distance away and filled and covered the grave so the spirit of Coryell would be at ease and would not bother the dead Negroes. Old Uncle Tom Broadus related that the Negroes always had a reverence for the grave. The old frontiersman's body had laid there for more than one hundred years. The wild honey bee stores the honey from the neighboring forests and filedes in hollow trees. The frontiers have moved forward to the blue waters of the Pacific ocean. But for the fear and reverence of dusky slaves hands this grave of James Coryell would have been forever lost. Not only historic tradition and a few stoics carried by Negroes mark the spot. Let us site more evidence. In 1849 Geo. Hodges Sr. came to Ft. Milan as a United States Army scout. He finally settled in Falls (Continued on Page Three)

SYNOPSIS
Baron Charles de Courland, his magnificent yacht and his guests, Linda Stewart, the woman he loves, and Fay Thorne, her companion, arrive off M'Pola, African seaport town. While the ultra-civilized de Courland plans a hunting expedition, or safari, Linda, who has once been in love with an irresponsible aviator, plans to get a proposal from de Courland, possibly forcing a proposal by accepting the attentions of another man. At the moment, no competition to de Courland looms on the horizon.

CHAPTER II
WHEN Baron Charles de Courland took his guests, Linda Stewart, and Fay Thorne, into Mondehare's Simba Cafe in M'Pola, he had no idea that a party was in progress. However, Jim Logan, the hunter, had returned to M'Pola. He was giving a party in the cafe for his pal, Scotch Jock McPhail, trader, commercially M'Pola's head man. For once, the fat and genial Mondehare had been persuaded by Jim to wash his sheets and use them for tablecloths; to serve trout which were really canned salmon; to furnish "champagne" made of wine, carbonated water and a few shots of brandy and cork it up in an old bottle. And, last but not least, Jim had ordered Mike, Negro retainer of McPhail, to bring Jock's bagpipes to the cafe and play them. It was Mike who started the first clash between Jim and his employer-to-be, the baron. For Mike had been given a reserved table, following his bagpipe serenade. The place was filled up. The baron snapped his fingers at Mike, gave him a bill, and told him to move out so that he and his evening-gowned guests could sit down. Jim Logan watched this tableau, and his anger became apparent to McPhail, who clutched his arm as he started to rise. Jock, in agony at the thought of losing business, pleaded: "Wait, lad—baug goes three hundred pounds—" But Jim went to Mike, put his hand on his shoulder and, after giving the baron a disparaging glance, told the Negro to join him and Jock at their table. As Jim and Mike sat down, Mondehare served the baron, pointing out that his glasses were clean, as the baron had ordered. He added a dice box for his guests' amusement. Dice made from the tusks of an elephant Logan had killed to save Jock McPhail's life. Linda Stewart was first to notice the tall, clean cut young man who sat on the other side of the shabby, smoke-filled and packed cafe. She asked Mondehare about him. "That is Monsieur Jim Logan, the hunter," the fat proprietor told her. "Tell him I want to see him," ordered the baron, snapping his fingers. Jim failed to show any enthusiasm over the summons. In fact, he made no secret of his resentment at being ordered around. "Well, I'm here, if he wants me," he told Mondehare. Jock tried to calm him with: "Noo, lad. For once be civil. It'll do ye no harm to walk over to his table. It's only common politeness.

"Look," Linda said to Logan. "I'll go on this safari to satisfy Charles. You and I will roll the dice... high man wins... to see if you forget about the war and go too."

Jim's lean form stiffened and his lips made a hard, thin line. The blue of his eyes turned to gray. "So do I," he replied. Fay asked Linda in a low voice if she thought Logan could read. She said she wondered if he could see the "No Poaching" signs. Linda told Logan: "You're rather a surprise to me. I expected a bearded giant covered with guns and pelts and things. Instead, you show up in a white tie. And you're American, by your accent. You're a long way from home." "I'm leaving for Europe Monday," Jim Logan answered. "There is going to be a war. I want to be in on it." "I wouldn't be here if there was going to be one," contradicted the baron. Linda fumbled with the dice. "Look," she said to Logan. "I'll go on this safari to satisfy Charles. You and I will roll the dice—high man wins—to see if you forget about the war and go too." "You really mean that?" the baron demanded, happily. "Of course, darling," Linda replied. "I never lose with those dice," Logan warned. "We'll see." Linda told him. "If you're low man, you come along." She turned to Fay. "What would be a fair stake?" she asked.

"Eight," he said. "That'll stand up." "Don't fail me now, lass!" Jock exclaimed weakly. "Ma heart's fair fluttering." Linda rolled, averted her eyes. "What is it?" she asked. "I daren't look?" "Nine!" Jock exclaimed. "The lad's met his match." Jim bowed. "Madame, I misjudged you." "It's safari for you, Jim, lad," Jock said, happily. "And it's a taste of the jungle for you, my lady," he added, looking at Linda. The baron apparently missed the by-play which had been going on. He said, triumphantly: "It is I who win! I have my safari and my hunter. And I have the one woman in the world whom I would want to have with me." Logan told him, quietly: "Very well, baron. We'll load your equipment at dawn. We have several days of travel up the river ahead of us." "Hey, Mike!" McPhail called to the Negro bagpipe artist. "Ye black rascal! Music!" As Mike began to play, McPhail triumphantly passed out slices of the birthday cake which Logan had had Mondehare bake for him. (To be continued)

THE BREAKDOWN OF PARTY LINES

Since 1928 American political thought has undergone profound changes. In that year the Democratic nominee for president, Alfred E. Smith, was unable to carry the "Solid" South which had steadfastly maintained its allegiance to the Democratic Party since the Civil War. Herbert Hoover carried Texas and three other normally Democratic states.

That same year marked the defection of prominent liberal Republicans from the ranks of the Grand Old Party, among them Henry Agard Wallace, lifelong Republican who voted for Mr. Smith.

The profundity of these defections from theretofore accepted party allegiance was not realized by the leaders of the time. Even after the election of 1932, when five million independent voters supported Franklin D. Roosevelt, the breakdown of party lines was not accepted as a permanent state of affairs in American political life.

Many of the policies of the first Roosevelt administration were predicted upon the theory that the independent and liberal Republican votes would return to the old guard G.O.P. if the new deal did not take definite steps to hold them. The new deal group failed to realize that these voters had voted in 1932 on the basis of principle and that they would continue to vote that way. To them, party lines and party names meant exactly nothing.

Came 1936 and 17,000,000 Americans voted for Alfred M. Landon for the presidency. This bloc of votes was promptly dubbed by our politicians and political writers as the "rock-bottom Republican vote", meaning that the Grand Old Party could always depend upon 17,000,000 votes, as a defeat more disastrous or complete than that of 1936 was incomprehensible for a major party.

But that conception of the 1936 division of votes was false. Seventeen million Americans voted for Mr. Landon because they did not want the new deal to continue, not because he was the Republican nominee. And 27,000,000 voted for Mr. Roosevelt, not because he was a Democrat but because they wanted him to continue in office.

Three presidential elections have proved that the sanctity of party allegiance has been destroyed in this country. And that is one of the greatest boons that could come to this democracy, particularly during this period of world history.

Voting for a candidate because he is a Democrat or a Republican or because one's father or grandfather voted the straight Democratic ticket or the Republican ticket is not democracy. Voting for a candidate because one sincerely and conscientiously believes that he is honest and qualified is democracy. And that is the way the people of our forty-eight states, generally speaking, are going to vote in the presidential election of 1940.

Party lines will mean less than they ever have in the history of modern American politics. And there are reasons for this, aside from the trend manifest since 1928, aside from the recognition among a great majority of the people that principles, personalities and issues are far more important than party allegiances.

Those who vote for Wendell L. Willkie will do so because they favor the principles for which he stands, and not because he is the Republican nominee. Those Americans who vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt will do so because they favor his principles and not because he is the democrat nominee.

Aside from the historical precedents of 1928, 1932 and 1936, the composition of the two major party tickets precludes strict party loyalty in this election.

Mr. Willkie, the Republican candidate, was a registered Democrat until 1938, although he voted for Mr. Landon in 1936.

Mr. Roosevelt publicly boasted in an address at Harvard at the beginning of the second term "you'd be surprised how often I've voted the Republican ticket". His running mate, Henry A. Wallace, was a Republican until 1932, when he became Secretary of Agriculture in the Roosevelt cabinet. Mr. Wallace's father was Secretary of Agriculture in the Republican administration of President Harding.

How are simon-pure party traditionalist going to reconcile this situation? Patently, it is impossible in this election for Democrats to vote a "straight" Democratic ticket with a hybrid Democrat as the candidate for president and an erstwhile Republican as the candidate for vice-president.

It is equally impossible to vote a straight Republican ticket with an ex-Democrat as the G.O.P. presidential candidate and a liberal Republican who fought the Republican Old Guard since 1926 as the vice presidential candidate.

Frankly this column is delighted at this turn of events. I have contended for nine years that party labels should be only incidental factors in the choice of public official because he has voted a straight ticket all his life. His value as a public servant rests upon his experience, education, honesty, integrity and sanity. And I'd like someone to prove differently.

JAMES CORYELL—

County. He was told the story of Coryell and was pointed out the grave where he was buried. The story has come down in the Hodges family to this day. Chas W. Hodges a grandson, who traveled the length and breadth of Texas doing historical research work in connection with old Indian Trails, Smugglers Trails, Cow Trails and all other historic trails, was asked while on the ground if he could confirm our findings relating to the lonely grave in the deep woods, as being that of James Coryell. He unqualifiedly indorsed our findings.

We were also told that a year or two ago that the citizens of Marlin started a move to have the remains of Coryell moved to that city in order to give them proper burial and recognition. However, nothing came of this movement.

A stone monument on a public square can add nothing to his illustrious name but in reverence to the memory of this man who gave his life for Texas, and for whom Coryell county is named, his remains should be removed to the courthouse lawn and entombed in concrete and surmounted with a granite shaft with proper inscriptions. Any people who cease to reverence their heroes, cease to produce heroes. Let us hope that the people of Coryell will be spond to the movement started by Joe Cavett and see to it that this work is carried out in an appropriate manner. From the impressions we received from those fine people of Falls County, we believe we would receive hearty co-operation in this project.
