Sincerely,
J. H. (Jim) BROWN

DISTRICT COURT IS JUST ABOUT OVER HERE'S A LITTLE!

Cases since Friday in District Court are few and far between and it looks like lawyers will be on the "unemployed" list shortly. Anyway, here's the results:

Mabel Hinson vs Joe Hinson, Suit for divorce, granted, and custody of child granted plaintiff.

Paul Hensler vs Percy Witt et ux; suit to try title, settled by agreement.

The City of Gatesville vs W. T. Hix, settled by agreement.

The State of Texas vs. Fern Smith, charged with theft of sheep, found guilty and given three years in the penitentiary.

JACK BRINGS GOOD AMATEUR SHOW: DOLLARS FAIL

Jack (Mike-Rose) Wollard, says he's thru as a promoter!

Jack put on a County-wide amateur show in the stadium Saturday night, and paid it all out in expenses, he says.

Winners of the cash awards for the best performers were Jerry Don Collins, 4 year old crooner of Levita who walked off the stage with 20 rocks.

Jack's ten-spot note went to Stockton Bros., trick fiddling trio from Mosheim.

The "Quid" that third $5.00 prize went to Marshall Payne and his band of Izora.

Jack scattered them out. On the concession, he had a 50-50 agreement, and they made 5c which Jack generously gave the concessionaire. On the main show, the "clear" was 96c, Jack stated.

Peck Tharp and his band of performers, musicians, singers, etc., etc. opened the show. 750 saw the show.

W. D. McELVANEY IS OUT OF COUNTY CLERK'S RACE

Official papers were fixed up by W. D. (Donival) McElvaney and handed to County Chairman C. H. McGilvray, and Mr. McElvaney is officially out of the runoff race for County Clerk.

Mr. McGilvray said there was no reason given, and it is probable Mr. McElvaney may give his own reasons in a later edition of the News, and other newspapers of the county.

WASHINGTON SAYS AAA PAYMENTS TO BE EARLY

The Washington AAA office advised that every effort will be made to start making payments under the 1940 Agricultural Conservation Program at an early date.

However, applications for producers who do not earn their total soil-building allowance cannot be submitted for payment until after the final date for completion of soil-building work, which is November 30.

Farmers who have green manure crops, cane and sudan, to turn under should do so as a good growth has been obtained in order that their farms may be rechecked at an early date and avoid delay in the submission of their applications for payment.

Farmers who intend to earn their soil-building allowance by construction of terraces and earthen tanks are also urged to complete this work at the earliest possible date.

Any soil-building work that has been done since the time of the original compliance check or measurement should be reported to the county AAA office so that the farm may be rechecked and the soil-building practices shown on the application for payment.

CARL McCLENDON HAS THANKS FOR VOTERS

I am very grateful for the splendid vote I received in the election and for every courtesy. Thanks a million.

Respectfully,
EARL HUDDLESTON
(Candidate for Representative, 94th. District.)

RAM AND BILLY SALE OPENS HERE WEDNESDAY: FIFTH ANNUAL SHOW

It's an institution now, this Annual Ram and Billy Sale.

Besides the showing of a few sheep and goats, it has created a wool and mohair conscious public, and assisted materially in creating a better market for these two products, which are now growing by leaps and bounds.

It'll be bigger this year than ever and already over 150 entries have been received from Coryell county, Keerville, Uvalde, Brady, Johnson City, Salado, Meridian, Rock Springs and many other points.

It'll take two days, this year, Wednesday and Thursday, and a great crowd of exhibitors, officials, buyers, sellers, and other people from all walks of life are expected.

This show, folks, is really putting the county on the map as a wool and mohair growing center. Right now, the price of wool is down, and the supply is supposed to be too heavy. However, if compulsory military training comes, which should, then, it seems to us there'll be a much larger demand for both wool and mohair, as these products help materially to keep the forces warm.

The show will be held at the Brown gin shed.

DISTRICT GINNER'S CONVENE HERE WEDNESDAY

Ginners, farmers and oil mill men from all over Coryell and adjoining counties will join here Wednesday for the opening of the Annual Ginner's Meeting of District 21, at the Palace Theatre at 10:30 Wednesday morning.

Problems concerning both the ginners and the farmers will be handled during the meeting.

M. W. MURRAY THANKS VOTERS OF COUNTY

To the Voters of Coryell County:

I wish to express my deepest appreciation for the many favors shown me during my campaign and the nice vote I received in the past election. I shall always remember your kindnesses with the greatest of pleasure.

I hold no ill-will to those who did not support me, but am happy that I am privileged to live in a country in which the majority rules.

Sincerely,
M. W. MURRAY

The Methodist meeting at Liberty closed with two additions to the church. The Ohio Baptist meeting has just closed with six new members.

Whether it be true or not we do not know, and we wonder if the woman's Club originated the idea, as we hear rumors that a certain gentlemen in south Hamilton county, who has long been judge of the county election in his locality, might resign his post in favor of a more alert, younger man, who is more of a modern student, and who is better versed on election rules. Youth is bound to conquer.

NEWS BASEBALL CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES STARTS NEXT MONDAY ON STATE DIAMOND

The playoff series to decide the 1940 Champions in the News Baseball cup Race will get underway on the State Training School diamond next Monday afternoon, August 12. Using the double elimination system, two games will be played each day, starting at 3 p. m. until the winning team has been determined.

Jonesboro, Mound, Pidcoke and Blackfoot are the teams participating in the championship series and with no really outstanding club in this four team bracket, it looks as though there will be plenty of fireworks before the champions of the tournament are decided.

By using the double elimination system and playing the games in succession, it will be a tough grind on the teams who have no reserve pitching strength, and apparently no team in the league with the exception of Mound has that. With Wicker, Holcomb, and Whaley to draw from, the Mound crew has a decided advantage over the other teams in the loop who have only one regular moundman each.

In hitting strength the Blackfoot Indians are the tops. At least that's the way the records have stacked up this season. They have a rugged line-up of "willow-wavers" who have had practically no trouble hitting the ball and a slugging team

Hornets Eager For Training To Start

Prospective candidates for the 1940 GHS Hornet Football squad are anxiously awaiting the opening of the football training school which is scheduled to open at the local high school gym on September 1.

Coach Madison Pruitt is expecting a large crew of Hornets to attend these practice sessions which is being made possible by various business concerns and individuals who have donated approximately one hundred and fifty dollars for a school of this kind.

Softball Playoff Starts Monday Night

The four leading teams in the City Softball league are rounding out the rough spots in their style of play and will enter into the playoff for the city championship starting next Monday night.

The teams who have already cinched a spot in the championship series, are the Arnold Electricians, CCC and Coca-Cola and either the Red & White team or the Firemen will make the fourth.

with fair backing can always be counted a threat in any ball game.

Pidcoke, the champions of 1939 have been jinxed practically all season. More than half the games the "Cokers" have lost, were to teams over which they were favored to win. Two of their regulars, Hair and Ward, may not be present for the playoff and their services will be badly needed if the Cokers are to really shine in this tourney. Hair is one of the most outstanding players in the league and Ward is not very far behind.

The Jonesboro Eagles are the "dark-horses" in this race, though they are on top in the percentage column. Only once this season have we witnessed the Eagles in action and that was when they were defeated by the Blackfoot Indians at Blackfoot. Their record alone testifies, however, that they are favored by a large following to capture the trophy.

Baseball fans of the county who have favorite teams in this championship race, and fans who have no particular favorite, but a liking for jam-up baseball, are invited to attend each and every game of this championship series which will open next Monday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock.

A drawing for positions in this playoff series will probably take place within the next few days and an official statement of "who plays who" will be carried in Friday's issue of the News.

PRIMARY AFTERMATH

Aftermath of the first Democratic primary finds little to interest Texas voters during the August campaigning.

Governor O'Daniel rode into office for a second term with a greater majority over his six opponents than he received over the field of 12 in 1938. In his first campaign, O'Daniel won with 573,166 votes or 31,345 more than 12 opponents.

Reports from 251 of the 254 counties in this primary give the chief executive 577,492 or 53.5 percent of the vote and 77,519 more than was received by his six opponents.

From the standpoint of personalities, the gubernatorial race provoked certain definite results. It marked the final denouncement of the Fergusons as factors in Texas politics. Running fourth in the field of six, Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson had only 92,701 votes at this writing. In only one race from 1914 to 1934 in which the Fergusons participated did this famous duo fail to poll 200,000 or more votes. That was in 1924 and Mrs. Ferguson was victorious in the second primary.

But the Ferguson "vest pocket" vote is no more. Time and changing political tides have reaped a fearful harvest among the once stalwart Ferguson ranks. Mrs. Ferguson at 65 and Mr. Ferguson at 69 can now enjoy the peace of their remaining years.

Another result of this race was the probable elimination of two of the most colorful personalities in Texas politics from further consideration for public service.

Ernest O. Thompson suffered his second defeat for governor and it is unlikely that he will make another race. Thompson should have deferred his second try until 1942 when the second term tradition would not have hamstrung him.

In his successful race for Railroad Commissioner two years ago, Jerry Sadler gained the reputation as one of the shrewdest politicians in the State. But Sadler ran last in the Governor's race and the bubble of his personality was destroyed.

Harry Hines would have made a splendid addition to the Railroad Commission of Texas and his chances of being elected would have been immeasurably better.

There were 1,259,878 poll taxes paid this year, an increase over 1938 of 11.12 percent. With exemptions added, Texas has a voting potential around 1,447,000.

Two years ago there were 1,114,885 votes cast for Governor in the first primary, with 1,113,704 poll taxes having been paid, making a potential of 1,303,749 when exemptions were added.

Votes accounted for in this primary already have exceeded the 1936 first primary total of 10,053,177 and will soon pass the high mark attained in the first primary of 1938. The primary Saturday marked the third time that the Texas vote has exceeded the 1,000,000 mark.

Olin Culberson of Hillsboro and Pierce Brooks of Dallas will contend in the runoff for Railroad Commissioner, the post left vacant by the retirement of Lon A. Smith.

Latest returns give Culberson a lead of 340 votes over Brooks, the totals being 188,025 and 187,885. Ross Hardin ran third in this race, Clyde Smith fourth and W. H. McDonald fifth.

Walton D. Hood, Bailey Sheppard and John D. Copeland, three other defeated candidates in the first race, have endorsed Culberson. Others among the defeated candidates will probably endorse either Culberson or Brooks.

Senator Tom Connally of Marlin, one of the ablest members of the United States Senate, was re-elected to a third term with a tremendous majority over his opponents. All of the members of the Texas delegation in the House of Representatives who stood for re-election were returned except Congressman Clyde Garrett of Fastland, who faces a runoff contest.

Three veterans of Texas politics, Comptroller George H. Sheppard of Sweetwater, Treasurer Charley Lockhard of Austin and Commissioner of Agriculture J. E. McDonald were given big majorities for an additional two years in the public service.

Three Texas states senators were defeated in the primary and six forced into runoff races. Senators Wilborne B. Collie of Eastland, Albert Stone of Brenham and Doss Hardin of Waco were defeated.

The Hardin Legislative twins went down in defeat together, Representative Ross Hardin of Prairie Hill losing in the Railroad Commissioner race.

Senators Houghton Brownlee of Austin, Will Pace of Tyler, Gordon

Burns of Huntsville, Manley Head of Stephenville, Vernon Lemons of Waxahachie and Morris Roberts of Pettus each has been sent into a runoff campaign.

In the House races, ten of the famous 56 Representatives who defeated the submission of SJR 12 with its sales tax provision were re-elected, thirteen defeated, 23 were not running and some of the others were in doubtful races.

Of the ninety-four who voted for submission, thirty-seven were reelected, nine were defeated, fifteen are in a runoff and several are in doubt about their races.

Part of every Texas oil dollar finds its way

EVERY merchant in our State—every business and professional man—every worker, shares in Texas oil's huge expenditures.

Many Texas cities with all their varied businesses and employment exist and prosper today because of oil.

Last year petroleum created a direct buying power in our state of 550 million dollars.

Of this, Texas retail merchants received 324 million dollars, landlords 44 million, utilities 38 million and professional men 22 million, while 83 million more went for insurance and savings.

This huge sum is distributed and redistributed in an endless chain of income for our State and its people.

Texas oil payrolls are over 60 per cent of all the wages paid to all Texas workers.

Directly or indirectly, you get a part of your income from oil.

If you're a Texan, you're in the oil business.

SYNOPSIS

Linda Stewart, when she sees an opportunity to win a proposal from the wealthy European big game hunter, Baron Charles de Courland, accepts his invitation to steam on his yacht with him to Africa. But she won't consent to go on safari with him until she meets handsome Jim Logan, guide. Linda is tired of uncertainty and worry, wants comfort and security. At sight of Logan, she agrees to go, believing that she can pit the two men against each other and win a proposal from de Courland. Now, the three are headed up river on a small steamer for big game hunting.

CHAPTER IV

AFTER supper the first night, Linda, de Courland, Logan and his friend, Jock McPhail, jungle trader, settled down for small talk. McPhail chuckled comfortably, told de Courland and Linda:

"Mon dear, but this is cozy. I'm grateful to ye both that I've got Jim here for cribbage the night." Then, to Jim: "Come, laddie—is this no better than goin' north t' hunt a war?"

Linda shot him a puzzled look.

"War? There's no war—"

"There will be," Jim told her, solemnly. "The world can't be kept sitting on a hot stove without something boiling over."

"But, even if there were," Linda persisted, "you'd have no call to go. You're an American."

Jock shuffled his cards. "America's a long way from China, too, mom. But he found his way into—"

Linda sent a swift glance at Jim as de Courland demanded:

"But, why?"

"I wanted to," Jim smiled.

Linda's mind flashed back to Bill Jeffrey, her first love, who had crashed flying in Spain.

"Bugle call fever?" she asked, grimly.

De Courland looked from Linda to Jim and back again.

"Let's go on deck, Linda," he said. "I'll show you how magnificent an African night can be."

"Aye," Jock agreed, "you'll enjoy that fine."

"Aye," retorted Linda, looking at the cards he shuffled, "and you'll enjoy being left to your cribbage game."

Linda rose and the baron escorted her outside, leaving Logan and McPhail to their game. Outside, Linda looked up at the velvet night. "There's a new moon, Charles," she said, softly.

De Courland led her to the rail. "It will be a full moon when we reach the high plateau—for us to share."

The tenderness in his voice was drowned out by a blast from McPhail. The trader shouted into the stillness:

"Fifteen-two, fifteen-four, and a run o' three!"

De Courland pointed out into the night, told Linda:

"If you could see through that darkness now, darling, there would be red sand—and beyond that the barrier of the mangroves. It—"

Again Jock's shrill cribbage count shattered the night. The baron walked swiftly to the window, snapped: "Is it necessary to shout your way through that game?"

The players quieted. But a new menace broke into the baron's idyll.

He was saying, "— and when we reach the high plateau, you will always remember the lightning flashing, the pound of the tom toms. You and I—" when the mosquito got him. He slapped the back of his neck.

"You scared me!" Linda exclaimed, startled. He apologized. Then he continued with "— once we leave the river, we will climb—" and broke off to bring down another stinging insect. "It's a bit difficult to speak of love," he admitted, grinning ruefully, "with a mosquito on one's neck."

At this point Logan arrived with a spray gun.

"Mosquitos bothering you?" he asked, pleasantly. "This may help."

never know which mosquito's loaded."

"Loaded?"

"With fever."

Linda felt her face and decided it was a bit hot. Logan saw the gesture.

"It's just the exertion of trying to tuck yourself in, and your embarrassment at having me in here," he said, in an offhand manner. "Anything else I can do?" He stood back as he finished.

"Nothing, thanks."

He turned, started for the door. Almost as he reached it, her voice stopped him.

"Jim!"

He turned. "Yes?"

"Not that it's any of my business

"Not that it is any of my business," Linda said, "but what were you doing in China?"

He sent a filmy mist around the baron, who turned on him furiously.

"Will you please—" he began.

Linda's laughter interrupted.

"It's no use, Charles. The mosquitos are too much—even for you. Oh!" She slapped the back of her own neck.

"These hot nights bring them out," Logan said.

"And drive me in," added Linda. "I'm going to bed."

"I'll see you to your cabin," said the nettled de Courland.

Later, Logan finished his game with Jock and was on his way to his own cabin when he heard the sounds of struggle coming from Linda's quarters. He entered to find her trying to get the mosquito netting tucked in around her mattress.

"You seem to be having a little trouble," he said. "I'll tuck it in so they won't bite."

Linda pulled a sheet around her. "I can handle it all right."

"It's a little difficult until you get the hang of it," he said, paying no attention to her. He expertly tucked the netting under the end of the mattress and then started fixing it on the side.

"Do you do this for everybody?" Linda asked, her eyes wide with wonder.

"At first," he answered. "You

—but what were you doing in China?"

"Well—it seemed like a good idea at the time," Jim shrugged his shoulders. "Susie and I just blew in—"

"Susie?"

"You'll meet her when we reach camp. Susie's my plane."

"Oh—you're a fier?" Linda's eyes widened as she thought of Bill Jeffrey. Logan saw the expression on her face and was puzzled.

"After a fashion. I use the plane to spot game."

Linda sat up in her berth and asked, in a hard voice:

"And wars?"

"Sometimes." Jim paused after the admission. "Well, if you hear any strange noises in the night, don't worry. They can't come aboard."

"They?" asked Linda, fearfully.

"The strange noises," said Jim. "Good night."

"Good night." She paused a moment. "Thanks for tucking me in."

Logan left her then. She stared after him, stared at the door which closed behind him for quite a while. Unmindful of the medley of weird sounds which came in through the window from the jungles, she thought for a long time about wars, and airplanes—and men.

REVIVAL AT PEARL

Pearl Nazarene Rivival is to begin on Thursday night, August 8, before the second Sunday and continue to August 17 with the Rev. J. C. Henson of Bethany, Oklahoma as evangelist.

For many years back the meeting started on Friday night before the first Sunday. The change of date was to avoid conflict with other meetings.
